

Verses of Auspiciousness

Svastyayanagāthā · Toh 818 · Derge Kangyur

བད་ལེགས་ཀྱི་བྱིས་ས་བྱུང་པ་

This short work, known in Sanskrit as the Svastyayanagāthā and in Tibetan as the Bde legs kyi tshigs su bcad pa, is a brief verse composition of auspicious blessing, offering words of good fortune and truth-based benediction in the manner traditional to Buddhist verses of svasti (well-being). Catalogued as Toh 818 in the Kangyur, it belongs to the general class of auspicious verses (maṅgala-gāthā) recited to invoke blessings and protection, often appended or used alongside other canonical texts for ceremonial purposes. Though brief, it exemplifies the genre of dedicatory and benedictory verse found throughout the Kangyur, affirming truth as the basis for excellent outcomes and closing with an aspiration for supreme well-being. Its concluding lines mark it explicitly as a completed set of verses of good fortune, underscoring its function as a ritual coda rather than a doctrinal treatise.

It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
