The Dhāraṇī for Seeing Dreams

Svapnadarśanadhāraṇī · Toh 952 · Derge Kangyur
རྨི་ལམ་མཐོང་བའི་གཟུངས།

The Dhāraṇī for Seeing Dreams is a very brief ritual text whose Sanskrit and Tibetan titles are not given in its opening lines, though its closing line names it simply as the dhāraṇī called Seeing Dreams. It opens with homage to the Three Jewels and to Vajrapāṇi, the fierce great general of the yakṣas, and then gives a short mantra. Its rite is simple: the practitioner recites the mantra over a palmful of water, drinks it, and lies down to sleep with a wish held in mind, and Vajrapāṇi will then reveal a dream in response. The work is catalogued as Toh 952 in the Kangyur, where it belongs among the dhāraṇī texts, the short collections of protective and ritual incantations within the canon.

Homage to the Three Jewels.
Homage to the great yakṣa general, the fierce Vajrapāṇi.

oṃ mucini svāhā mukhese svāhā mohani svāhā dantiri svāhā

The rite is this: recite the mantra over a palmful of water and then drink it. If one then lies down to sleep with one's wish held in mind, Vajrapāṇi will reveal a dream.

The dhāraṇī called Seeing Dreams is complete.

Translator's Notes

• The phrase rendered "with one's wish held in mind" could also mean "as one wishes" or "thinking of it." In either reading, the practitioner goes to sleep keeping the intention in mind.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.