The Root Tantra of Accomplishment through Worship and Praise of the World

Lokastotrabūjatantra nāma Nopikasantakaṃ · Toh 844 · Derge Kangyur
འཇིག་རྟེན་མཆོད་བསྟོད་སྒྲུབ་པ་ར་ཕྱིན་རྒྱུད།

The Root Tantra of Accomplishment through Worship and Praise of the World, known in Tibetan as Jikten Chötö Drubpa Tsawé Gyü and given a Sanskrit title that the Tibetan transmits in an irregular form beginning Lokastotrapūja Tantra, is Toh 844 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the collection of Ancient, or Nyingma, Tantras. It is a tantra spoken by the Blessed One Vajradhara, the great secret embodying the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, who in the palace of Akaniṣṭha tames the haughty and powerful chieftains of the world, such as the māras, yamas, nāgas, yakṣas, king spirits and tsen, and binds them to protect the teaching. Across eleven chapters it sets out how these worldly spirits are empowered, entrusted with their duties, and propitiated through offerings and praise, describing the signs of successful practice in experience and dreams, the substances and supports proper to each class, and the rites they are charged to carry out. It closes by reminding its audience that these beings are not truly separate from awakened mind, and that the practice culminates in the dharmakāya beyond all dualistic grasping.

In the Indian language: lokastotrabūjatantra nāma nopikasantakaṃ
In the Tibetan language: The Root Tantra of the Practice of Worldly Offering and Praise

Homage to the Blessed One Vajradhara.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One Vajradhara was dwelling in the palace of the king of the gods in the abode of Akaniṣṭha. He is the great secret, the embodiment of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas. He perfectly accomplishes every last enlightened activity of the body, speech, and mind of each and every buddha of the three times. He strikes terror through his might, strength, fearlessness, mastery, and form, and he swiftly tames the ferocious, the violent, the arrogant, the powerful, and those who are hard to withstand. He was drawn forth from suchness, the heart essence of the mind of all the sugatas. He is the chief bodhisattva great being, who has fully entered the great ground of final culmination; the great lord of the mighty families of gods belonging to the desire realm and the form realm; and the great leader of the yakṣas of the abode of Aḍakavatī and the abode of Mount

Meru.

Various light rays, the magical display of the body, speech, and mind of the buddhas who abide throughout the three times, were sent forth, and he was exhorted with these words:

O Lord of Secrets, Vajradhara!
You were empowered by all the buddhas
To guard the sacred teaching
As lord of might and strength.
Look to that great pledge (samaya),
And from the secret of body, speech, and mind,
With the supreme form that terrifies the terrifying,
Together with fierce speech,
Unleash your force with a ferocious mind;
And, to tame all who are hard to tame, without exception,
Through emanations, magical displays, and enlightened activities,
Please enact the play of your former vow!

As soon as he had been exhorted in this way, the Blessed One knew that the time had come to perform the activity of the buddhas. Although his own body, speech, and mind did not stir from the peaceful nature of reality just as it is, he looked upon the violent ones who were the objects of his taming, and throughout every world system of the ten directions, reaching as far as the limits of space, there appeared inconceivable magical displays of his body, the form of a great wrathful one, as follows.

His body is dark blue, and he has nine faces. The faces on the right are dark brown, baring their fangs; the faces on the left are dark maroon, their features drawn tight; the central faces are dark blue, wrathful and fearsome. With the blazing vajra in his right hand he stirs the skull cup of blood in his left, and drinks. In his eight lower right hands he holds the severed heads of the great gods he has liberated, and in his eight lower left hands he holds the heads of the eight great nāgas; these too are complete with their flayed hides, the bases of fortune. His nine right eyes are rolled upward, his nine left eyes gaze sideways, and his nine central eyes glare downward in anger. Fierce wrathful furrows are gathered on his brow. From his nostrils the fierce wind of existence storms forth; from his mouths blazes the fire of the eon's end. His red fangs are bared up into the realm of space. His mustache and beard gather like clouds. The dark brown locks of his hair blaze and coil up to the peak of existence. From his ears comes a great and vicious roar. His limbs are wound about with clusters of snakes. He wears as his garments the liberated māras and rudras and the hide of an elephant, and a tiger skin is wrapped around his lower body. He is adorned with dots and streaks of blood and grease, and his body is smeared with charnel ash. He is adorned with garlands of skulls, dry and fresh, dripping with flesh and blood. With his eight feet he tramples Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Maheśvara (Śiva), and Śakra (Indra), together with their consorts. He is in union with a great consort, supremely ferocious and terrifying, whose form matches his own.

Countless and beyond all telling, tens of millions of these came to be, like a full sesame pod, and all of them uttered the fierce sound of speech oṃ vajra caṇḍa sarva duṣṭāntaka hana daha paca hūṃ phaṭ. From each one of them, too, he caused inconceivable emanations, and emanations of those emanations, to appear.

The arrogant ones of the world systems, namely the hosts of gods, the māras, yamas, rākṣasas, yakṣas, planetary māras, nāgas, king spirits, ging spirits, the great mātṛkās, the hosts of ḍākinīs, the rudras, the tīrthikas, the lords of life, the lords of wealth, the lords of longevity, the lords of mantra, and the lords of existence; and furthermore the arrogant ones of the world who dwell in all the world systems, in the great charnel grounds, in the great lands, in the borderlands of Jambudvīpa, on the kings of mountains and on the small hills, in the oceans and the streams, in the pārijāta trees, in the great forests, and in inconceivably many minor places, abiding in male and female forms, chiefs and retinues and especially those who roam, together with their hosts of servants and attendants, came forth from their own abodes in haste, alarmed, with minds full of fear and dread, and with minds subdued. Like tufts of cotton tossed by the force of a fierce wind, they arrived helplessly before the Blessed One.

The arrogant ones dwelling throughout all the world systems of the ten directions, and in particular in the Sahā world system, in the four continents, in the great ocean together with the nāga abodes of the pleasure waters, on great Mount Meru, among the hosts of yakṣas of the seven mountains, in the abodes of the gods in the desire realm, together with the form realm and the formless realm, in the hells, among the hungry ghosts, in the birthplaces of animals, and on the lands of Jambudvīpa, each saw, wherever he was, a great fierce form of immeasurable splendor, which others could not approach, present before him. All of them, each separately, went for refuge to their own great chieftains. The great chieftains, together with their retinues, went for refuge to that Lord of Secrets in his form of great terror. All of them displayed, without exception, their own forms, wealth, retinues, ornaments, mounts, abodes, comforts, and particular activities, and, bringing forth the heart essences of their names, they spoke:

"mahādeva ejaḥ umadeva ejaḥ dhudra maduphrag jaḥ dunti madu jaḥ." With these words the great lord of the world, Maheśvara (Śiva), with his consort, together with the male and female māras, each offered his own name.

Then the leader of the yamas, together with his own host, offered each his name together with his life, saying: "hrīḥ ṣṭi kriṣṇa yama preta jaḥ mama yamuntri bhitri jaḥ."

Then the chieftain of the rākṣasas offered the heart essence of the names of himself and his retinue: "rakṣa raśaramati rakṣa maśuti jaḥ."

Then the chieftain of the yakṣas offered the heart essence of the names and lives of himself and his retinue: "yakṣa kuberakṣa tame yakṣi maśa jaḥ."

Then the chieftain of the worldly yakṣa gods, the Lord of the Snowy Mountains (Himavat), offered his own name: "gaṃ bhabhatra dheva taruti jaḥ."

Then the leader of the minor kings of the world, the lord of the thirteen divine the'u spirits, offered his name: "gaṃ tapaśali bartri saṃkaraśa jaḥ."

Then the chieftain of the general māras, together with his own retinue, spoke the heart essence of their names, offering: "du spraśaṃ ja akaru kaṃ ca jaḥ."

Then the mistress of the hosts accomplished from wisdom and from karma and of the samaya-bound, She Who Gathers Existence under Her Power, together with Ekajaṭī and all the hosts of ḍākinīs, offered each the heart essence of her name: "mama trag mutra raca ekajvaṭi ruru ro tiṣṭa bhatto retu mati kha muntra paca lameśa jaḥ."

Then the mighty gods of the world and the great leaders of the rudra class offered each the heart essence of his name: "deva abhiśutri rutra niji haṃ śaṃ tri jaḥ."

Then the king of the obstructors of the world, the tīrthikas, and the hosts of māras and mu spirits offered each the heart essence of his name: "vināyaka tirthi taka du mun mun paḥ jaḥ."

Then the great chieftains of the hosts of the lord of life of the world, of Vajrin, lord of the yakṣas and nāgas, of the great king of the vital soul, and of

Mahākāla, lord among the gods, offered each the heart essence of his name: "giṅkara tri pale rāja bajra buru lu ja bajra la rutri ja mahākāla yakṣi jaḥ."

Then the great chieftains of the nāgas and of the planets and stars of the world brought forth the life essence of their names and offered: "nāga cita huya nāga me kṣetra hula ghuhe paśa mike hūṃ jaḥ."

Moreover, the haughty and savage lords of the world realms, together with their retinues, offered each their bodies together with their lives: "e anri jaḥ samaya srog breng breng jaḥ jaḥ."

Then the Blessed One revived those haughty ones and their retinues, granted them fearlessness, and spoke these words:

"Alas, you hosts of the world's renowned ones,
Do not be afraid of me.
I am the lord of the enlightened activity
Of the body, speech, and mind of all the buddhas.
Through the compassion and the wisdom
Of the great peace that is the nature of reality,
The three times, the conditioned and the unconditioned,
Are vividly manifest in a single instant.
For the sake of beings yet to come,
I display the secret of various bodies.
You chieftains of the haughty ones as well,
From beginningless time until now,
Have fallen under the power of affliction and delusion;
Through the habitual tendencies of your negative states,
You act unvirtuously with body, speech, and mind.
The suffering of saṃsāra flows on unbroken,
And, having fallen into the great hells,
You may never find a time of liberation.
Therefore, at this supreme present time,
As I and all the buddhas
Bring body, speech, and mind, qualities,
And the activities of our deeds to full fruition,
Listen to the words of our command.
Make your karma and your existence meaningful,
And cast off your unvirtuous habitual tendencies.
Take up the foundations of the training, give rise to the mind of awakening,

And with your might, power, ability, and ferocity,
Act in accordance with the Buddha's teaching.
Protect, as the vidyādharas command.
You who, as kings and lords,
Or bound in body in the manner of servants and attendants,
Are asked for accomplishments: carry out the activities.
If you do not act in this way,
And transgress the secret word,
The continuum of your body, mind, and life
Will be destroyed this very moment."

Having declared this, he bound them by a sacred oath and established them in it.

This is the first chapter, the introduction, on fully taming the hosts of worldly chieftains.

Then the gathered retinue of haughty ones, Maheśvara, the great lord of the gods of the desire realm, with his consort, and the others, addressed the Blessed One, the great Lord of the Secrets of body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, with these words:

"Alas, Blessed One, Lord of Secrets,
Wrathful one who abides in the world,
When anyone, through attachment, aversion, craving, and grasping,
Makes offerings to us and relies upon us,
We are glad, pleased, and delighted.
In accordance with your command,
For those who hold the yogic disciplines,
So that we may be their companions in carrying out activities,
Our respective places and times,
Our own classes, retinues, servants, and armies,
The rites and enjoyments that suit us,
Our attire, our lineages, and our dispositions,
Our elements and our ways of acting,
And the particulars of joining us to samaya,
For the sake of ourselves and of the future
Holders of the way of awareness,
Please explain in full, leaving nothing out."

When they had requested this, the Blessed One, to Maheśvara and the other principal haughty ones of the world, by way of their individual rites, concealing them as one and applying them separately, the definite and the indefinite, the ordered and the mixed, the outer and the inner, the secret and the hidden, the gathered and the scattered, the concordant substances, the heart essences, the marriage bonds, the entrusting, the urging, the dispatching, the repelling, the annihilating, the tormenting, the raising, and various activities, brought forth from the great vajra samaya of body, speech, and mind, the secret of the great play, and declared:

"Listen, you haughty hosts of the world!
In later times, in the age of degeneration,
This teaching of the Great Śramaṇa
Will appear to ordinary beings.
The ways of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas,
The bodies of the vajra holders,
And the tantras are clear in perfecting the grounds and paths.
The unelaborated dharmakāya, without meeting or parting,
Is accomplished by training in samādhi.
Through aspirations made in former lives,
You appear as the lords of each of the six classes.
Through the arrogance of karma, you
Are terrifying and make others terrified;
Fierce, and braver even than the brave,
You can be tamed by forceful means,
And will not be tamed by peaceful ones.
The person who holds awareness
Tames all the powerful haughty hosts
And wields power over the three realms as a whole.
Through union nondual with me,
The tasks of the activities are spontaneously complete.
In a solitary place blessed
By a great and most terrifying charnel ground,
By purifying obscurations and gathering merit,
Strive in the rites of repelling hindrances and māras.
On ground of concordant substances, erect a palace;
Smear it with the substances of fierce samaya.
Whether it is furnished with a skull fortress and storehouse shelves,

Or combined with a number of e triangles and notched tallies,
As supports for the body, speech, and mind of the haughty ones,
Arrange them in accordance with the way I teach.
Outside, the gates and so forth bear terrifying ornaments,
And a great charnel ground is first laid out.
Tsara, buffalo, and water ox,
Lion, elephant, and black horse,
Bird, dog, black sheep, and camel,
Tiger, vulture, dog, and black pig,
Māra bird, makara, fish, and turtle,
White vulture, black vulture, white horse and red,
So bird, mule, and cattle:
Banners, together with flesh, blood, and hearts,
Are laid out in the places that suit each one.
Fine grain, food offerings, and samaya substances,
Amṛta mixed with flesh, blood, and hearts,
Strung together with the essence of precious things,
Are set out in equal number, or in the four directions.
Parasols, banners, and canopies,
Pendant tassels, lattices, and fringes
Are auspicious and fitting for this.
From tiger, leopard, black bear, brown bear, and wolf,
Kaṅka bird, charnel bird, and speckled vulture,
Human, horse, ox, and kele,
They are made of flesh, sinew, hide, and heads.
With bows and arrows, spears and khaṭvāṅgas,
Swords, water knives, and razors,
Tridents, ritual daggers, and many-pronged weapons,
Fierce weapons, it is ringed about and filled.
Beautiful and ugly, pleasant and unpleasant sounds,
Foul and rank odors,
Sweet, hot, sour, and rough tastes,
Hot and cold, smooth and rough, warm and cool:
With forms, sounds, smells, tastes, and touches,
Give to them just as they desire.
Then that vajra holder,
With outer, inner, and secret protection,

Annihilates whatever harms and injures,
Purifies his own continuum with the accumulation of merit,
Accomplishes with the mind of awakening that benefits others,
And meditates on phenomena as they abide.
Giving rise to compassion for those who have not seen,
Meditate on the essence, the generating cause, as hūṃ.
From it, the five bases of harm
Are imagined as the five elements of wisdom.
Above them, upon precious Mount Meru,
In the center, is a charnel ground immeasurable palace,
A skull fortress with thirty e traṃ;
Generate the samādhi like a reflection.
In its center, upon sun, moon, and lotus,
And upon four crossed corpses,
Imagine the body, speech, and mind of Vajradhara,
Myself, appearing to all.
The great consort, Tamer of the Three Realms as a whole,
From her nondual union with the principal,
From the light rays of method and wisdom,
Comes forth in the form of nine e syllables;
Emanating and gathering, the curved knife and khaṭvāṅga appear clearly.
Through training the continuum in that very clarity,
It becomes the great principal, the lord of the desire realm,
Together with the goddess, his consort.
Their feet press down a lion and an elephant.
With one face and two arms, dark blue and fearsome,
He wears a dark green garment and a draped cloak.
The great principal holds a curved knife and a heart;
The consort holds a khaṭvāṅga and a skull cup of blood.
From the heart of the nondual father and mother,
From yama dunti rakṣa yakṣa,
In the four directions, the chieftains of the māras, yamas,
Rākṣasas, and yakṣas,
Together with their consorts, are vividly emanated.
From grahe nāga,
Above and below, the chieftains of the māras, nāgas, and planets,
Fathers and mothers, are emanated and generated.

From deva trija dutri,
The god Gangzang and Namgyal
And the chieftain of the general māras are generated in the east.
From mamaṃ jati dhaki,
The Great Mother, Queen of Existence,
Ekajaṭī, and the Swift One,
The chieftains of the female hosts, are in the south.
From rutra abhi haṃ śaṃ,
The chieftains of Lhajin, the red tsen, and the ril tsen
Are generated in the western direction.
From bitra tithi rmudu,
The chieftains of the obstructors, tīrthikas, and mu māras
Are generated in the northern direction.
From triyaṃ ratri satri natri,
The lord of life of existence,
The yakṣa, kinsman of the nāgas, king of the māras,
The body god, Secret Vajrasādhu,
And Mahākāla, lord of the Dharma protectors,
Are generated at the four gates, east, south, west, and north.
In the outer courtyard, the haughty ones
And their many servants and retinues
Are generated as those who obey commands and await orders.
Each is to be indicated by his own mantra.
They are clear in the manner of sovereigns,
And from the abodes of each of the worldly ones themselves
They are invited by light
And swiftly summoned with the secret essence.
Like the manner of the samādhi,
Dissolve them into the bodies of their own images,
And the actual beings and the images merge.
oṃ āḥ hūṃ oṃ vajra caṇḍa sarva duṣṭāka hana daha paca hūṃ phaṭ
Bless them as endowed with body, speech, and mind,
And let Vajradhara empower them.
From the four gates of the charnel ground,
The eight classes, who obey commands and do the work,
Pay homage with respectful body and speech.
The hosts of outer, inner, and secret sense pleasures,

Together with those of harmful and malicious intent,
Both corporeal and incorporeal,
Are offered to the haughty hosts to delight them.
Praise them with words that accord with the meanings and symbols
Of the attire of each one's body.
Recounting the qualities of body, speech, and mind,
And their activities, urge their heart commitments.
As the body, speech, and mind of Vajradhara,
Endowed with the full measure of clarity and stability,
Pervading all reaches of space to their very limits,
Clearly visualize your own three places.
Beside each chieftain of the haughty ones
Dwell taming remedies as numerous as atoms.
Beside the abode of each ordinary one,
Imagine a great chieftain likewise.
Obeying commands and awaiting orders, they cannot stir;
They do not act to transgress in the slightest,
And dare not follow their own wishes;
Visualize them accomplishing the aim in a single instant.
Through this, when the great principal's
Approach and accomplishment, endowed with measures and signs,
Have been brought to full completion,
Clearly visualize the individual images
Of the hosts of haughty chieftains,
And recite the essence of each one's name,
Increased with the syllables of cutting and seizing.
By time, measure, number, and signs,
Having kept the measure and accomplished it without error,
Bring it down upon the signs and apply it to the rites.
Since I myself carry out the subsequent accomplishment,
The haughty ones are swiftly brought under control."

Thus he declared.

This is the second chapter, on entrusting the root activities for accomplishing the hosts of worldly leaders.

Then, what is to be fully explained:
For all these great chieftains I have explained,

Inviting them from their own abodes, seating them, pleasing them,
Praising them, and urging their heart commitments
Are to be set forth with these words of recitation:

"From the maṇḍala of the expanse of pure compassion,
Though never moving from the expanse of emptiness, the dharmakāya,
In order to tame the haughty hosts of the world
You display a greatly wrathful, heroic, fierce, and terrifying body.
Delighted, your heart commitment urged, together with your secret consort,
Please come, to tame by force those who have not realized.
Lord of the haughty, chief of the gods of the world,
Goddess of desire, source of great bliss,
Master of the retinue hosts, of fierce might, power, and armies,
Glorious one, wielding fierce, savage, and malicious prowess,
Who follow and carry out the command of Vajradhara,
Remembering the samaya, please come to this place.
bajra sarba duṣṭanta atanaya eja bhyo a gaccha samaya hriṅ hriṅ

In this maṇḍala of the charnel ground, the supreme secret,
Upon a seat of the Great God (Śiva), sun, moon, and lotus,
Blessed One, wrathful king, with majestic, blazing body,
Father and mother, sporting in delight, please be seated.
Leader and chief of all the haughty ones of appearance and existence,
Lord of the desire realm, together with the consort who delights,
Great chief of the hosts of gods and rākṣasas, with your retinue,
Please be seated on seats that suit your activities.
bajra sarba duṣṭan atanaya eja bhyo samaya stita bajra hūṃ jaḥ

Supreme heart essence of the buddhas of the three times,
Emanating from the dharmakāya the form body for the benefit of beings,
Great and mighty without rival, lord of the wrathful ones,
Together with the consort who brings under control, to you I bow and offer praise.
All the victors of the ten directions with their heirs,
Protectors of the world, who by your vows guard the ways of the teaching,
Fierce in activity, who liberate the ten fields,
To the hosts of the thirty chieftains I bow.
bajra sarba duṣṭan atanaya eja bhyo nama ārali hoḥ

To the great glorious one, tamer of all the haughty, father and mother,
These offerings that please body, speech, and mind are offered:
Parasols, victory banners, banners, and canopies,
Garlands, powders, pendant tassels, and fringes,
Incense, flowers, lamps, and cool water,
Beautiful forms, pleasant sounds, sweet smells, delicious tastes,
And smooth touches, all the sense pleasures there are:
Please accept these hosts of offerings shared by the noble ones.
In particular, the secret offerings offered are these:
Flesh, bones, and blood purified as the abode of the three times,
Samaya substances in which the five poisons are accomplished as medicine,
And the actual offering of bali, of supreme power and potency:
Please accept them in a manner in keeping with your compassion.

Following and carrying out the command of the great glorious father and mother,
Maheśvara, father and mother, sovereign lord,
Who, though beyond the world, take on the guise of saṃsāra,
To the thirty chieftains who guard the teaching by command,
These sense pleasures are offered and given:
Colors, white, red, yellow, green, and the rest,
Shapes, round, square, and the rest,
Sizes, large and small, thick and thin, long and short,
The beautiful and the ugly, the lovely and the unlovely,
The sounds of the elements, of interdependence, and of music,
Song lyrics, melodies of praise, and pleasant words,
Scents of incense, medicine, nectar, and flowers,
Smells of burnt offerings and of rot, odors and stenches,
Sweet, hot, sour, and astringent,
Salty, spiced, and bitter,
Smooth, rough, cool, light, hot, and savory,
Together with the hosts of the qualities of each,
I offer them as all you could desire: please accept them.
The five nectars and the five meats,
The five vital organs and the five elements,
The five sense faculties and the five objects,
The five aggregates and the five entrails,
Those who harm, kill, and obstruct,

Who think maliciously and hold wrong views,
Together with the five adverse factions,
I offer each of them: please accept them.
bajra sarba duṣṭan atanaya eca ja bhyo mahā balinta amṛta sukata māṃsa rakta bibata bāsuta lamata idaṃ gṛhṇantu samadu kha kha khāhi khāhi

Blessed One, great glorious tamer of all the haughty,
And great consort, Tamer of the Three Realms as a whole, with your retinue:
Your body's color is unchanging, like a reflection in a mirror,
Clear and nonconceptual, appearance unceasing;
Grant the accomplishment of the spontaneously present, complete five bodies.
Your supreme speech is unceasing, like an echo,
Pleasant and unpleasant, sound and emptiness, the voice of Brahmā;
Your melodious speech pervades space to its limits: grant that accomplishment.
Your supreme mind is free of elaboration, beyond thought, the expanse of phenomena,
Nonconceptual great bliss, method and wisdom,
Effortless and unmoving: grant the supreme accomplishment.
Your qualities, beyond all telling, are manifold;
The mundane and the supramundane, the supreme and the common,
The eight accomplishments and the ultimate: grant these accomplishments.
Pacifying the eight fears and the rest, increasing wealth,
Bringing those of wrong views under control by way of devotion,
And fierce rites that tame enemies and obstructors: grant these accomplishments.
bajra sarba duṣṭan atanaya eja kāya siddhi baka siddhi citta siddhi guṇa siddhi karmma siddhi hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ

The Blessed One, great glorious tamer of all the haughty,
Has nine heads and eighteen arms.
His body is dark blue, wrathful and fearsome.
His three right faces are dark maroon, mouths gaping;
His three left faces are dark brown, fangs bared.
His locks of hair blaze as a mass of fire.
His nine eyes, angry, roll and stare.
From his nostrils the black wind of existence scatters;
From his ears the thunder of the trichiliocosm roars.

His beard and whiskers blaze like fire.
His bared fangs cut the root of the three existences.
With the first of his nine right and nine left hands
He stirs with a vajra the blood in a skull, and drinks it.
In his lower eight right hands
He holds the fortune bases, with their heads,
Of the eight haughty gods whom he has liberated.
In his lower eight left hands,
In skull cups made from the eight great nāgas,
He fills the heart blood of the haughty ones and drinks it.
The eight charnel garments of the hero are complete on his body.
With his eight legs in stances stretched, bent, and dancing,
He presses down the four classes of the lords of the three realms.
The great consort, Tamer of the Three Realms as a whole,
Has one face and two arms and a dark blue body.
She brandishes a vajra and holds up a skull of blood.
Through the activity of your nondual mind,
The haughty ones of the world are pressed into service as slaves,
The eight classes of gods and rākṣasas are dispatched to their tasks,
And malicious enemies and obstructors are cut off at the root.
To the wrathful king, the principal, I bow and offer praise.

Acting in accordance with the Glorious One's command,
The great god Maheśvara
Has one face and two arms, and his body is blue.
His right hand holds a curved knife, his left a heart.
The goddess Umādevī,
Her body dark blue, bows to the principal.
Her right hand holds a trident, her left a skull of blood.
They are seated upon a lion and an elephant.
Principal of all the haughty chieftains,
Father and mother, to your bodies I bow and offer praise.

The chieftain of the kings of the māras
Holds a notched tally stick in his right hand and a battle axe in his left.
He is seated on a throne of a black māra horse.
His consort, the māra woman Remati,
Holds a tally book in her right hand and a sack of diseases in her left.

They are seated upon a reddish donkey.
The great chieftain of the yamas
Holds a club in his right hand and a skull staff in his left.
His consort, the yama woman Devouress,
Turns the wheel of existence with her two hands.
Father and mother press down a buffalo and a water ox.
The chieftain of the rākṣasas, He with the Garland of Lightning,
With his two hands rolls up and hurls lightning and hail.
The rākṣasī, frog-headed and blood-eyed,
Holds a ritual dagger in her right hand and a bowl of blood in her left.
Father and mother press down a dragon and a camel.
The chieftain of the yakṣas, Fire Blade,
Holds a jewel in his right hand and a sword in his left.
His consort, the Black Yakṣiṇī,
Holds a razor in her right hand and a she-wolf in her left.
Their feet press down a tiger, a lion, and a sow.
The great leader of the planetary māras
Holds bow and arrow in his right hand and a snake noose in his left.
His lower body is a coiled serpent, and he presses down a great dragon.
His consort, she of the thunderstorm,
Sends down lightning and hail with her right and left hands.
The great leader of the nāga kings
Holds a snake noose in his right hand and a sack of diseases in his left.
His consort, the Black Nāginī,
Is snake-headed, her hand emblems like her consort's.
Father and mother press down a makara and a turtle.
These leaders of the haughty ones,
Who dwell in the four directions, above and below,
All have bodies dark blue in color,
With wrathful attire and terrifying manner,
Adorned with the garb of the charnel ground and the fortune bases.
Gathering their own hosts, they carry out activities.
Fathers and mothers together, to you I bow and offer praise.

The king of the yakṣa gods
Holds a crystal knife and a white banner,
And his feet press down a white, fine-horned wild yak.
The leader, the Great Sky King,

Holds a white pennant in his right hand and a crystal knife in his left,
And his feet press down a white horse with a red mane.
The king of the general māras, Gurumtsé,
Holds a banner in his right hand and a crystal knife in his left,
And his two feet press down a pale, stone-colored horse.
Three great white leaders,
Who dwell in the eastern direction, to you I bow and offer praise.

The female leader, the mātṛkā of existence,
Holds a wheel in her right hand and a mirror in her left,
And her two feet press down a nine-headed female dragon.
The great Protectress of Mantra
Holds a heart in her right hand and a she-wolf in her left,
And her feet press down a black ghost horse.
The black ḍākinī, the Swift One,
Holds a noose of entrails in her right hand and a bundle of weapons in her left,
And her feet press down a black so bird.
Three black female leaders, the mātṛkās,
Who dwell in the southern direction, to you I bow and offer praise.

The black Vajra Tamer of Māras
Hurls the substances of blood with his right and left hands.
The red rock tsen, Life Eater,
Shoots bow and arrow and brandishes red silk.
The great and mighty Gong King
Holds a shanglang and a noose.
Three red leaders, the kings,
All press down red horses with their feet.
Guardians of the west, to you I bow and offer praise.

Vināyaka, king of the obstructors,
Holds a khaṭvāṅga in his right hand and a skull of blood in his left.
The chief of the tīrthikas, who guards the outsiders,
Holds a trident in his right hand and a skull of blood in his left.
The great mu māra Trakmé
Holds bow and arrow and a shanglang.
Three leaders of the black hosts
Press down black māra horses with their feet.
You who dwell in the northern direction, to you I bow and offer praise.

The king Brahmā, lord of life,
Holds a razor in his right hand and a noose of the sun in his left,
And his feet press down a white lion.
The king of the māras, lord of wealth,
Holds a māra noose in his right hand and a razor in his left,
And his feet press down a long-nosed ox.
The king of the body gods, lord of the land,
Holds a vajra in his right hand and a banner in his left,
And his feet press down a white goat with sky horns.
Mahākāla, lord of the hosts,
Holds a club in his right hand and a skull of blood in his left,
And his feet press down a swift black horse.
Four great chieftains of the directions,
Beautiful in body colors white, yellow, red, and black,
Who dwell at the four gates, to you I bow and offer praise.

These haughty chieftains
Bear a wrathful and fierce manner,
Their garments the fortune bases, their garb terrifying,
Endowed with various beautiful ornaments,
And surrounded by the hosts of their own retinues and servants.
The miracles of their emanations are beyond conception.
"When we accomplish you with great offerings and praises, Carry out the activities of taming your respective hosts!"
Saying this, endowed with samādhi,
One makes offerings to the leaders of the haughty ones and praises them.
The yogin who practices in this way
Accomplishes the principal lords of the world according to the scripture,
And is nondual with Vajradhara.

Thus he declared.

This is the third chapter, on the offerings and praises of the vajra samaya for accomplishing the leaders of the world.

Then, what is to be fully explained:
To bring the haughty ones of the world under control
And to set them to the rites of annihilation,
I explain the empowerment that establishes the blessing.
In secret and solitary places,

Lay out the palace of activity explained before.
The special, excellent implements and substances
Are all to be gathered, leaving none out.
The vajra master, together with his followers,
Endowed with the proper characteristics, should be brought face to face.
With the count of sessions and the signs of the marks,
Strive diligently according to the scripture of approach.
The images, the master, and the students
Should perform the special preparation for establishing.
The images of the chieftains, painted, carved, and so on,
Are laid out with ritual daggers equal in number.
In addition, the vase, the offering torma,
The poison torma, the thun torma, the thun substances,
Flesh, blood, food offerings, beer, food and drink, and so on,
Victory banners, banners, arrows, and bows,
The garb of heroes, and the sound of music
Are laid out, well arranged and beautiful.
The vajra holder makes the samādhi clear,
And the king of activity makes offerings and praises.
With substances and splendor, fulfill their heart commitments;
Perform confession, rending, enclosing, purifying, and bringing down.
With devotion, enthusiasm, and faith,
Go for refuge to the principal, the tamer of māras.
Generating the resolve to protect the teaching:

"To the guru, the Buddha, Vajradhara,
Nondual with Heruka:
Seeking the scripture of great might and power
That is able to tame the malevolent and those of wrong views,
Consider us with a loving mind,
And please admit us into the sacred maṇḍala."

"Listen, fortunate child of noble family!
To protect the teaching in which abide
The body, speech, and mind of the buddhas of the three times,
Since you enter with enthusiasm,
Through the sacred discipline of the fierce rites,
Come and abide on the ground of the great samaya!"

"Protector Heruka, glorious lord,
Together with your retinue hosts for taming,
In the palace of fierce conduct
I offer you beautiful flowers.
Accept this vajra samaya,
And grant the accomplishment that is able to tame the haughty."
prati gṛhṇa puṣpa hūṃ

"You, child of noble family,
Follower of glorious Vajradhara,
From beginningless time until now
Have been fortunate to protect the teaching.
Into this maṇḍala of the mighty chieftains
Look with a mind that delights in the teaching."
bajraya samaya madhala cagśu brabeśaya phaṭ

"This is the vajra amṛta, the water of samaya:
Do not transgress it in the three times.
The fruits of accomplishment are twofold:
Do not transgress it as is proper; swear the oath!"
mahā samaya idante nāra kān ṣā bami laṃ

"Vajradhara, of great kindness,
So that you may always bless us with compassion,
From now until perfect buddhahood,
Please grant might, power, and accomplishments."
bajra samaya citta sidhi siddhi hūṃ

"I am one who follows and accomplishes
The primordial Buddha together with his heirs.
Gods and haughty ones of great might and power,
Both beyond the world and not beyond it,
Principals together with your retinues,
Remember the samaya of body, speech, and mind!
Bestowing empowerment and accomplishments
On the vajra student, the vidyādhara,
Please show the signs and marks of your great potency."

Glorious Vajradhara,
Seated upon a great throne,
Places the worthy student before him,

And, with the vase that abides in the maṇḍala,
Confers empowerment into body, speech, and mind.
The principal who is the remedy and the objects to be tamed,
The great haughty ones, fathers and mothers, with their retinues,
In beautiful bodily images: this is the empowerment of body.
Their respective words of praise and heart essences,
Together with the aspirations: this is that of speech.
Through the meaning and symbols of purifying one's own continuum,
Empowering into the dharmakāya: this is that of mind.
Trained in awareness, it is naturally clear in its power.
The ritual dagger, the fierce: this is the empowerment of substances.
Offering tormas and food portions
Please body, speech, and mind without exception,
And so increase the wealth of the gathered implements.
Victory banners and banners, together with their sounds,
Expand dominion at all times.
Flesh, blood, poison tormas, and thun substances
Bring the leaders of the haughty under control
And urge the messengers to their activities:
This is the empowerment of the fierce rites that annihilate the malicious.
These too, the images and the sounds,
Are empowered through recognizing their meaning.
The general nature of all phenomena, and the prowess
Of the samaya of each of the haughty chieftains,
Which, through compassion and realization,
Liberate by the meaning of the intrinsic nature:
Immeasurable great meaning is gathered here,
And it does not abide as separate: it is one.
Through the nature of grasped and grasper,
Outer and inner, with their retinues, appear separately.
In order to bring all without exception under control and to overpower them,
Dissolve the heart essence of each in due measure.
With steady pride, they arise before you.
Eat their vital organs, flesh, bones, blood, and the rest.
Annihilate the three poisons and draw them forth from the expanse.
Dissolve the images and make them perfectly clear.
To bring them under control, entrust them with activities, and tame them,

Press them beneath your feet and command them like servants.
Nourish them with offerings of samaya substances as before.
Bring down the samaya, and praise, urge, and entrust them.

"You gods and rākṣasas of the world too,
To whom I and all the buddhas
Have granted the supreme sight of our faces and prophecy,
Because of subtle seeds of existence
Still engage in worldly activities,
And with your coarse natures bring help and harm.
Now hold to the samaya of the command.
In future times, together with those to be accomplished
And those who accomplish them,
Exercise power over all equally,
Perfect the king of awareness of the nature of reality,
And reveal the supreme vehicle, unmixed, in whatever way.
In order to swiftly complete everything without exception,
Abiding with the regent placed upon your crown,
You will attain Samantabhadra himself."

Thus he declared.

This is the fourth chapter, on empowerment into the maṇḍala of the great vajra samaya for accomplishing the great chieftains of the world.

Then, what is to be fully explained:
In order to please the haughty retinue hosts,
The fulfillment with images made of concordant substances is this:
At mountain peaks, at the confluences of rivers,
At places where the lords of the world gather,
In the lands of the unfortunate, the place of offerings and gifts,
Build a skull fortress of nine squares and so on,
Or else the four continents and Mount Meru.
Offer grain, flesh, and blood of various kinds,
Jewels, incense, medicines, and flowers.
The images of each of the haughty lords,
Together with their own retinues,
Complete in body color and hand emblems,
Are mounted on their own thrones, seats, and mounts.

At the very top of the Mount Meru skull fortress
Sits the Great God (Śiva), father and mother, with retinue.
In the first three squares of the tiers,
The chieftains of the māras, yamas, rākṣasas,
Yakṣas, planets, and nāgas,
Fathers and mothers with retinues, are arranged.
In the second, the white,
The black, the red, and the black.

Twelve chieftains are set in their places.
On the four sides of the third are the four gatekeepers,
Arranged with their retinues in their own places.
On the last, the third or the fourth,
For the outer, inner, secret, and hidden,
The secret treasure and the wrathful mantra,
The workers, the attached ones, the gods and demons:
Arrange the images of the eight classes in their places.
The congenial substances for the thirty great lords
Are figures of living creatures, their own seats or mounts,
Five or ten,
A hundred or a thousand, or as many as can be made:
Men, women, elephants, horses,
Oxen, goats, sheep, birds, and watchdogs.
The substances of wealth and fulfillment are as before.
For all the ordinary members of the eight classes,
Humans endowed with knowledge and animals,
Birds, beasts of prey, and wild game,
Those that dwell on land and in water, and the hosts of animals,
The figures of all that is seen, heard, and remembered:
Surround them with as great a number as one can.
The articles for fulfilling these,
What is offered as ransom for beings,
Are a precious ngarmi effigy adorned with ornaments,
A sky thread-cross, the image of the mind,
A gyangbu frame endowed with body, speech, and mind,
A wooden ransom representing the land and castle,
The attire of men and women,

Victory banners, pennants, and standards,
Matching the body color of each haughty one,
Equal in number, arranged in their places.
Offering tormas, food portions, butter lamps,
And small continent models likewise.
For the substances of the ritual weapon, to repel, to kill, and for wrath,
At the place of giving, in a ritual-weapon bowl
Made evenly triangular, with poison and blood,
The various substances of the rite bestowed,
Stakes of venomous wood,
And a skull bowl, with poisonous substances and tormas:
Four, eight, sixteen, or thirty-two,
Combine them as appropriate and arrange them beautifully.
Above, with a human hide or a flayed skin,
Pitch a canopy of black silk and colored threads,
And finally drape it with a curtain of fine cloth.
Then the vajra holder
Generates and completes the great chief,
And having pleased the haughty ones with offerings and praise,
To dedicate the images and congenial substances,
The yogin heightens the pride of samādhi.
Raise the amṛta offering libation and the rakta,
Offer the fragrance of great flesh and incense,
Sound great drums, flutes, and music with a mighty sound,
And wave the great arrow with its black pennant.
hūṃ I am the great glorious Heruka.
I tame all who are hard to tame without exception.
I eat the haughty ones of the world as food.
The three realms and the three existences are in my power.
Appearance and existence, saṃsāra and nirvāṇa, are my servants.
According to my command, gather here!
You who are haughty through the power of affliction,
Gods, māras, yamas, rākṣasas,
Yakṣas, planets, nāgas, king spirits,
Ging spirits, mātṛkās, and god-tsen spirits,
Together with your own hosts and servants,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!

Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
From the very summit of great Mount Meru,
Great God, Maheśvara (Śiva), arise!
Queen Umādevī, arise!
You wear a great cloak of black silk,
And ride a lion and an elephant as your mounts.
As for the display of your magical power:
On the right, the male lineage is sent forth as messengers;
On the left, the male lineage is set to work.
You are surrounded by a retinue of the world's haughty ones.
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
The lion, king of prowess,
The elephant, king of strength,
The knowledgeable human, the intelligent horse,
The ox of great burden, the wish-fulfilling cow,
The precious sheep and the clean one,
The keen-eared dog, and the garuḍa bird:
These we offer as wealth for you to accept.
The precious ngarmi effigy adorned with ornaments,
The sky thread-cross, the image of the mind,
The gyangbu frame endowed with body, speech, and mind,
The wooden tablets representing the land and castle,
The male ransom with the arrow, the female ransom with the spindle,
Victory banners, pennants, and many emblems,
Matching your own body color,
We offer as ransom for the yogins.
Offering tormas mixed with sacred substances,
Food portions endowed with congenial substances,
Butter lamps radiant with clear light,
Beautiful continent models adorned with ornaments,
Beautiful forms and pleasing sounds,
Sweet scents and delicious tastes,
We offer to fulfill your heart commitments.
Great God, father and mother, with your retinue,
Recall your former samaya,
And accept these thread-crosses, ransoms, congenial substances, and the wealth you desire,

This varied assemblage!
Protect the teaching of the Buddha!
Raise high the stature of the Three Jewels!
Liberate the personal enemies of the yogins!
The kinds of obstructors, eighty thousand,
That interrupt the practitioner,
The four hundred and four diseases,
The eighty-one sudden harms,
The host of three hundred and sixty sudden terrors,
The eight kinds of untimely death,
The fifteen malignant fatalities,
Enemies with form and formless obstructors,
Bad dreams and evil omens:
Pacify them, dispel them, and repel them,
Tame them and cut them off: perform these deeds!
From the east of great Mount Meru,
King of existence, Köjé,
Chieftain of all the māras, arise!
You wear a great cloak of dark blue,
Your black hair gathers like darkness,
Your eyes are like the swirling sun and moon,
Your sharp, glorious fangs are bared like the crescent moon,
Your dark brown beard blazes to the peak of existence,
And you ride a black māra horse.
As for the display of your magical power:
The māra hosts bearing tally sticks sport on the right,
The reckoners bearing their accounts are sent forth on the left,
And the male māras of appearance and existence are your retinue.
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
The powerful black horse and the rest
We offer as wealth for you to accept.
The precious ngarmi effigy and the rest
We offer as ransom for the yogins.
Offering tormas of sacred substances and the rest
We offer to fulfill your heart commitments.
Lord of the māras of existence, with your retinue,

Recall your former samaya,
And perform the deeds as they have been entrusted!
Great māra woman, Remati,
Chieftain of all the mother māras, arise!
Glorious Black Lady of terrifying form,
Black Lady who turns back flesh, mother of the māras,
You wear a great cloak of dark blue on your body,
And ride a donkey with a red blaze.
As for the display of your magical power:
A hundred thousand mother māras are sent forth as messengers,
Thousands of black women are set to work,
And the māra women of appearance and existence are your retinue.
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the intelligent donkey and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Māra woman of existence, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the south of great Mount Meru,
Yama, Yamarāja,
Chieftain of the hosts of yamas, arise!
Black in body color, with matted hair,
Adorned with a headband of venomous snakes and a flayed skin,
Wrapped in the hides of vicious beasts of prey,
With the severed heads of piśācas bound as a crown,
Mouth gaping and fangs fully bared,
You ride a black buffalo.
As for the display of your magical power:
Male and female yamas are sent forth as messengers.
The consort of Yama, lord of death,
Taking the form of a murderous Mön woman,

Chieftain of the yama women, arise!
You are adorned with the devouring attire of the charnel ground,
You wear a black flayed skin on your body,
And you ride a black water buffalo.
As for the display of your magical power:
Male and female pretas are set to work,

And the yamas of appearance and existence are your retinue.
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the buffalo, the water buffalo, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Male and female yamas, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the west of great Mount Meru,
Black rākṣasa, He with the Garland of Lightning,
Chieftain of the hosts of rākṣasas, arise!
Your body is a blazing dark blue,
Adorned with garlands of lightning and light,
And you ride a great roaring dragon.
As for the display of your magical power:
A hundred thousand rākṣasas are sent forth as messengers,
Murderous rākṣasīs are set to work,
Vicious beasts of prey sport behind,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of the rākṣasas of appearance and existence.
Rākṣasī Frog-Head, the Blood-Eyed One,
Chieftain of the rākṣasīs, arise!
Your body is a terrifying dark red,
You wear a black cloak of blood on your body,
You have a topknot of white tortoise,
And you ride a six-faced she-camel.
As for the display of your magical power:
Fire-mouthed rākṣasīs are sent forth as messengers,
Black demonesses with faces are set to work,
Together with the rākṣasīs of appearance and existence.
Life-severing rākṣasas, father and mother, with retinue,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the blue dragon, the she-camel, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Surrounded by a retinue of male and female rākṣasas,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the north of great Mount Meru,
Yakṣa, Yakṣa Fire Blade,
Chieftain of all the yakṣas, arise!

Your body is a blazing deep blue,
You wear a swirling mass of fire as your garment,
And you ride a fierce tiger and lion.
As for the display of your magical power:
On the right, glorious fire blazes;
On the left, smoke billows and swirls.
Thousands of yakṣas are sent forth as messengers,
Armored hosts of a hundred thousand are set to work,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of the world's yakṣas.
Great yakṣiṇī Lomönma,
Vicious yakṣa maiden,
Black Lady Vajra Iron-Beak,
Your earrings are adorned with a jewel mongoose,
You wear a black robe on your body,
And you ride an iron sow.
As for the display of your magical power:
The wealth-holding women are sent forth as messengers,
The black Lomön women are set to work,
And yakṣiṇīs surround you in hosts of a hundred thousand.
Butcher yakṣas, father and mother, with retinue,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the tiger, the lion, the sow, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Male and female yakṣas, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
In the direction above great Mount Meru,
Great and unbearable planetary māra,
Rokti, Viṣṇu, Rāhula,
Great chieftain of the planetary māras, arise!
With nine heads, your lower body a snake, your body with many heads,
You ride a great dragon flashing with lightning.
As for the display of your magical power:
Thunder rumbles through the three thousand worlds,
Lightning flashes and flickers across the sky,
The planets' servants, the lunar mansions, are sent forth as messengers,
Lightning and hail rain down fiercely,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of a thousand planetary māras.

Sky goddess, Lady of the Lightning Blizzard,
Chieftain of the faced goddesses, arise!
Your body is a beautiful pale red,
You wear a beautiful cloak as your garment,
And you ride on thunder and the light of lightning.
As for the display of your magical power:
The great planets, the sun and moon, circle above your head,
The hosts of the lunar mansions shine upon your face,
A hundred thousand goddesses are sent forth as messengers,
Weapon-faced mātṛkās are set to work,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of weapon-faced rākṣasīs.
Planet-faced sky goddesses, father and mother, with retinue,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the great roaring dragon and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Planetary māras and faced goddesses, together with the sky goddesses,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the direction below great Mount Meru,
The black nine-headed nāga-māra
Is chieftain of all the nāgas.
Your upper body is smoke-black,
Swarming with insects of heat;
Your lower body is a black venomous snake,
Mottled with the frogs and tadpoles of cold;
And you ride a nine-headed makara.
As for the display of your magical power:
A thousand nāga kings are sent forth as messengers,
A hundred thousand nāga servants are set to work,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of vicious nāga-māras.
Nāginī, Black Yakṣiṇī,
Chieftain of the nāga-māra mātṛkās, arise!
Your body is smoke-colored and terrifying.
From your hair, braided with black snakes,
The fevers of leprosy and ulcers radiate.
You wear a snakeskin cloak as your garment,
Frogs, snakes, and lizards scatter about,
And you ride a black tortoise.

As for the display of your magical power:
Emanations of the five classes of nāgas are sent forth,
And vicious lords of the earth are dispatched as messengers,
Together with a retinue of the nāginīs of appearance and existence.
Vicious nāga-māras, father and mother, with retinue,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the makara, the tortoise, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Male and female nāga-māras, father and mother, with retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
On the east of the second tier
Of beautiful great Mount Meru,
Yakṣa king Pūrṇabhadra,
Chieftain of the gods of existence, arise!
White in color, you wear a blazing robe,
And you ride a white celestial steed.
As for the display of your magical power:
A thousand yakṣas are sent forth as messengers,
Armies of a hundred thousand are set to work,
Pennant bearers sport on the right,
Bearers of armor and weapons sport on the left,
Together with a retinue of yakṣa gods.
Great being, the Great Sky King,
Chieftain of all the minor kings, arise!
You wear a great cloak of silk brocade,
And you ride a white horse with a red mane.
As for the display of your magical power:
Thousands of king-spirit servants are sent forth as messengers,
Subtle village wanderers are set to work,
Together with a retinue of subtle the'u spirits and king spirits.
King of the general māras, Gurumtsé,
Chieftain of humans, mātṛkās, and gods, arise!
On your upper body you wear a broad fur coat,
On your lower body a skirt of countless folds,
On your head you wear a white crystal helmet,
And you ride a dun stone horse.
As for the display of your magical power:

The great garuḍa of existence soars above your head,
Tigers and lions all sport behind,
The five chieftain brothers are sent forth as messengers,
The nine Masang brothers are set to work,
Together with a retinue of gods and demons.
You three classes of white beings, too,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the celestial steed, the white horse, and the dun mount,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Three white classes, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the south of the second tier,
The Great Mother, Queen of Existence,
Chieftain of the mātṛkās of appearance and existence, arise!
You wear a cloak of black silk as your garment,
And you ride a she-dragon swift as thought.

As for the display of your magical power:
The mistresses of the hosts are sent forth as messengers,
The fifty-eight menmo goddesses are your retinue,
And you are surrounded by the hosts of mātṛkās of appearance and existence.
Ekajaṭī, the Single-Braided One,
Chieftain of the guardian goddesses of the Word,
You wear a dark blue garment on your body,
And you ride a black mule.
As for the display of your magical power:
Black rākṣasīs are sent forth as messengers,
Black Nepalese women are set to work,
Black mātṛkās emanate in various forms,
Together with a retinue of a hundred thousand dark brown ones.
Glorious Black Lady, the Swift One,
Chieftain of the hosts of ḍākinīs, arise!
You wear a cloak of dark blue as your garment,
And you ride a black raven.
As for the display of your magical power:
The ḍākinīs of the families are sent forth as messengers,
Various ḍākinīs are set to work,

And you are surrounded by a retinue of the ḍākinīs of appearance and existence.
You three classes of glorious black ladies, too,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the dragon, the mule, the raven, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Three classes of black ladies, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the west of the second tier,
The great being, Vajra Māra-Tamer,
Chieftain of the yakṣa rudras, arise!
You wear a great cloak of dark blue,
Your black hair gathers like darkness,
And you ride a black mule.
Those clad in human hides are sent forth as messengers,
Those dressed in tatters are set to work,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of the rudras of appearance and existence.
Tsen king, Red Life Eater,
Chieftain of the tsen spirits of existence, arise!
You wear white silk and red cloth on your body,
And you ride a red horse swift as lightning.
As for the display of your magical power:
You wear a red leather helmet on your head,
The tsen of the four quarters are sent forth as messengers,
The swift eight classes are set to work,
And you are surrounded by the haughty tsen of appearance and existence.
The great being, Yamshü the Red,
Chieftain of the tsen and gong spirits, arise!
You wear a great cloak of red brocade on your body,
And you ride a red horse swift as thought.
As for the display of your magical power:
On the right, dancers stamp, chi li li;
On the left, songs ring out, kyu ru ru;
A thousand horsemen follow behind,
Together with a retinue of the tsen and gong spirits of existence.
You three classes of red supreme beings,

By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the black mule, the red horse, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Three red classes, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
From the north of the fourth tier,
Vināyaka, king of obstructors,
Chieftain of all the vināyakas, arise!
You wear a great cloak of dark blue,
And you ride a swift black horse.
As for the display of your magical power:
The Four Great Kings are sent forth as messengers,
The hosts of the guardians of the directions are set to work,
And you are surrounded by the hosts of obstructors of appearance and existence.
Īśvara, Black Gulang,
Chieftain of the hosts of tīrthikas, arise!
You wear a great cloak of dark blue,
And you ride a tiger, a lion, and a buffalo.
As for the display of your magical power:
The whole earth is filled with armies,
The air is filled with weapons and silk banners,
The sky is filled with lightning and light,
Beasts of prey run and birds soar,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of black tīrthikas.
Mu-māra, Black Lusterless One,
Chieftain of the hosts of mu māras, arise!
You wear a great cloak of dark blue,
And you ride a black mu horse.
As for the display of your magical power:
A hundred thousand mu māras are sent forth as messengers,
Thousands of mu servants are set to work,
And you are surrounded by a retinue of the mu spirits of appearance and existence.
You three classes of black supreme beings, too,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
With the tiger, the lion, the buffalo, the horse, and the rest,

Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Together with the black hosts of the outsiders,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
On the east of the third tier
Of beautiful great Mount Meru,
White Brahmā, lord of life,
Great god, chieftain of the ging spirits, arise!
Swift throughout the three existences,
You wear a cloak of vulture feathers on your body,
And you ride a white lion.
As for the display of your magical power:
The eighteen great ging spirits are sent forth as messengers,
Male and female ging-māras are sent forth to work.
With humans, horses, goats, sheep, birds, and dogs,
Tigers, vultures, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
On the south of the third tier,
Yakṣa king, lord of wealth,
You wear a bearskin coat on your body,
And you ride a long-snouted ox.
As for the display of your magical power:
A hundred men and a hundred women,
A thousand śrāvakas and a thousand mantra practitioners,
Masked lion dancers and Mön youths beyond imagining.
With tigers, lions, elephants, apes, and monkeys,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
On the west of the third tier,
The one called Vajra Beauty
Is chieftain of the gods of the world.
You wear a garment of crystal,
And all of you wear garments of crystal.
You ride a white goat and a celestial steed.
As for the display of your magical power:
Forty seizing ging spirits are sent forth as messengers,
And your own hosts of retinue are set to work.
With tsara, birds, dogs, and the rest,
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!

On the north of the third tier,
The Great God, Mahākāla,
Chieftain of the guardians of the teaching, arise!
You wear a dark green garment and a black cloak,
And you ride a dark bay māra horse.
As for the display of your magical power:
You give breath to the armies of the gods,
And utterly repel the battle front of the asuras.
The guardians of the directions and the glorious protectors are set to work.
With humans, horses, goats, sheep, birds, and dogs,
Let the heart commitments of the black hosts be fulfilled!
Four gatekeepers, attendants of the haughty ones,
Together with a retinue of your own attendants,
By the power of the samaya, be seated in this place!
Let your heart commitments be fulfilled with congenial substances!
Four mighty classes, with your retinue,
Perform the activity as it has been entrusted!
On the four sides of the last tier,
The outer eight classes of gods and rākṣasas,
The inner eight classes of gods and rākṣasas,
The hidden eight classes of gods and rākṣasas,
The secret eight classes of gods and rākṣasas,
The gods and rākṣasas of the most secret treasures,
The gods and rākṣasas of wrathful mantra,
The swift working gods and rākṣasas,
The gods and rākṣasas who examine and attach,
To the eight classes together with your retinue:
To fulfill your heart commitments,
The knowledgeable human and the intelligent horse,
The ox of great burden and the wish-fulfilling cow,
The precious sheep and the clean goat,
The keen-eared dog and the garuḍa bird,
These we offer as wealth for you to accept.
The precious ngarmi effigy adorned with ornaments,
The ngarmi effigy bearing the form of the mind,
The gyangbu frame endowed with body, speech, and mind,
The wooden ransom representing the land and castle,

The male ransom with the arrow, the female ransom with the spindle,
Victory banners, pennants, and music,
Matching your own body color,

We offer as ransom for the yogins.
Offering tormas mixed with sacred substances,
Food portions endowed with congenial substances,
Butter lamps radiant with clear light,
Beautiful continent models adorned with ornaments,
Beautiful forms and pleasing sounds,
Sweet scents and delicious tastes,
We offer to fulfill your heart commitments.
Haughty ones of the world, with your retinues,
Recall your former samaya,
And accept these thread-crosses, ransoms, congenial substances, and the wealth you accept,
This varied assemblage!
Protect the teaching of the Buddha!
Raise high the stature of the Three Jewels!
Liberate the personal enemies of the yogins!
The kinds of obstructors, eighty thousand,
That interrupt the practitioner,
The four hundred and four diseases,
The eighty-one sudden harms,
The host of three hundred and sixty sudden terrors,
The eight kinds of untimely death,
The eighty-one malignant fatalities,
Enemies with form and formless obstructors,
Bad dreams and evil omens:
Pacify them, dispel them, and repel them,
Tame them and cut them off: perform these deeds!
Saying this, present to each its own congenial substances.
Fulfillment, repelling, killing, restoring, and the rest:
Entrust them with whatever activity you wish,
And whatever you aim at will be accomplished accordingly.
Thus it was declared.
This was the fifth chapter, on approaching the accomplishment of the chieftains of the world's haughty ones, together with their retinues, through vast offering and praise.

Next I shall explain this thoroughly.
All these hosts of the haughty ones and their retinues
Are in essence the self-aware mind of awakening,
Never stirring from the unborn expanse.
Because they engage in accord with the ways of the world
And are pleased by offering and praise,
This is called worldly offering and praise.
It is divided into outer, inner, and secret.
All the maṇḍalas of appearance and existence
Together with the Lord of Secrets himself:
Offering and praise in the relative situation is the outer.
The assembly of one's own appearances gathered together,
Arisen from pure samādhi,
The enjoyments that are objects of the senses,
The substances that purify concepts of clean and unclean,
The four of passion and the elixir of grain essence,
Which make the other side appear as nondual,
Giving pleasure in their own state,
And the definitive display of the marks and signs of each:
This is the inner.
The assembly of mind and what is displayed to mind
Is all, from the very beginning, the great maṇḍala,
An unfabricated nature, spontaneously present.
As all the scriptures without exception teach,
There is no other dharma: the object itself
And the self of appearance that grasps it as object
Are realized and understood as nondual.
This is the utterly secret offering and praise.
Emanating and accomplishing from the body is the body;
The wheel of the sound of the ten syllables is the speech;
The self-liberated, unfabricated essence is the mind.
Gods, nāgas, yakṣas, tsen spirits, and māras,
Rākṣasas, planets, and the female classes,
Haughty and vicious, wrathful and fierce,
Swift, dull, and obscure,

Each of the classes of haughty ones and of the expanse:
With Mount Meru, pure food offerings and ornaments,
Grain sheep, heart-tip, and tsaru-shaped tormas,
White and red, rich in essence, make offerings by visualizing them.
As a father, a king, a friend, or a god,
As a mother, a lord, a servant, or a slave:
Such is the way of relying on them.
Greatness, might, and the accomplishment of power,
Increase of wealth, and being sent on errands;
Being gentle in nature, a great refuge, and obedient,
Having fierce prowess and never turning back,
And being very close: these are the good qualities.
Being harsh and harmful to oneself,
Wealth not accruing and things not agreeing,
Being tormented by sudden illness,
Their turning back and auspiciousness declining,
Not heeding instructions and being of no use,
One's own mind becoming harsh and conceited,
One's lineage not ripening and being despised by all,
Aims not being accomplished and authority declining:
These are the faults of not knowing the hidden meaning of the tantra.
The gods are like a lord of the law:
Bind them with the key points and accomplish them.
The māras are like a mighty father,
The tsen spirits like an unequaled friend,
The yakṣas like a chief of the law,
The rākṣasas an executioner who assails life,
The wild planets like a reckless youth,
The nāgas like a poisonous snake in a tree,
And the female lineages mighty lady chiefs:
Accomplish them with the remedy that matches each.
If they are not brought into the fold, they do not heed instructions.
Without the key point of compulsion, they turn into māras.
If the dagger of essence does not strike, they turn back.
If one's own skill is not sharpened, they grow lax.
If their bellies are not churned, their actions are not swift.
Without subduing their perversity, they assert themselves.

If they are not brought under control, they do not heed instructions.
By means of the eight key point instructions,
Accomplish offering and praise and entrust them with activities.
Thus it was declared.
This was the sixth chapter, on the key points of the profound offering and praise of the great chieftains of the world.

Next I shall explain something further.
To apply the chieftains of the world's haughty ones
To wrathful actions:
In charnel grounds and the haunts of vicious beings,
Having first completed the root approach,
Having refreshed the congenial substances of each,
Lay out the house of wrathful action
With thirty triangular shapes.
Outer, inner, and secret; body, speech, and mind;
Blessing the place, fulfillment, and offering,
General and individual praises:
Visualize them with the wish that they be utterly blissful.
Through the power of form, sound, and thought,
With the body and the magical device of the body,
With life and the remedy of life,
From the mind and the essence of mind,
Praise them throughout, outer and inner.
With radiating and gathering light, draw them in and summon them,
And dissolve them into the target of self and other.
When flesh, body, blood, and the rest have been eaten without remainder,
The body, speech, and mind of the chieftains of the haughty ones
Are all pleased by this.
Whatever is targeted is liberated to the full measure.
Through the discipline of samādhi,
Slowness or swiftness depends on the strength of the mind.
Have no doubt about this:
It is the secret word of the great Vajradhara.
If one performs a fierce rite with fire
And wishes to bring about a swift transference,
Build a shaped hearth with kindling of vicious wood,

Sharp, pointed, hot, rough, and foul-smelling.
Kindle it with fire from the house
Of an outcaste, a low-caste butcher, or a lowborn woman without companions,
And to the sweet poison and blood
Of which the image fully partakes,
Visualize again and offer the remainder.
With wrathful words that clearly distinguish the chief and the retinue,
Count them off thoroughly.
With the praises of each lord of the haughty ones,
Together with their key points,
Present and give to them in order,
And urge the sage to complete the activity.
Great ash and wrathful substances,
The three kinds of tainted blood and the three killers,
The wealth of the three jewels free of weapons,
And self-arisen substances that turn back good fortune:
Apply these to the inward gathering and outward radiating,
And with sound, words, and samādhi,
Cast them down and hurl them with the wheel of great power,
Visualizing the haughty ones and their retinues as carrying out the act.
Furthermore, make the offering substances into images
And dissolve them with the visualization as fully taught.
Places of movement, earth and water caves,
Battles of dry and wet, the sites of ruins,
The middle of the ocean and great highways,
Being struck by weapons and carried off by wind,
Falling heedlessly and being destroyed by fire and water:
These are the connections that arise from the effigy.
With a steadfast mind, strike with the seizing dagger,
And hand over the harm doers and their retinues as food.
Until saṃsāra is emptied,
The karmic ging will not be freed.
Those who have not realized a mind of love and compassion,
Followers with wrong views
Who have turned to fierce hatred of the teaching,
Are cut off, liberated, and tamed
By practicing fierce rites in this way.

Thus it was declared.
This was the seventh chapter, on applying the activity of the great chieftains of the world to wrathful actions.

Next, a further explanation:
The key points of the world's haughty ones themselves,
The secret essence, the wrathful dhāraṇī,
Is condensed in all, and suppresses them with the bell and with powder.
vajra sarva duṣṭān eka para asta naya mahe śvara deva devi du phrag dun tiṅ maya preta vikṛ stana rakṣa rakṣo yakṣa kṣita piṣṭi patra ase la ja nāga guliṅ śa jaḥ cadutri cara cala madutri mama rulu mantra rāja dumati makāla rutra tīkṣṇa tirthika tha abhi śutri paśali haṃ śaṃ tri jaḥ rāja giṅka ra sadutri nātha kāla āgaccha hriṅ hriṅ jaḥ
This is the mantra of invocation.
vajra sarva duṣṭān eka para sarva pañca amṛta agaccha balinta grihṇa imaṃ ta gṛhṇa imaṃ ta gṛhṇantu mahā gaṇa pūja kha kha khāhi khāhi
By applying these, the offering is made.
sarva ayu mitra siddhi putra barta ni siddhi putra bahu bhadra vāsu dhara ratna ratna buṣṭiṃ siddhi mahā jñāna sarva dharma garbha kāya vākcitta siddhi siddhi phala siddhi mahā siddhi abeśaya a ha ha hi hoḥ
By applying this thoroughly, take the siddhis.
sarva śatruṃ yakṣa rbad rbad bhyo bhyo
With this, one should fully unleash them.
nṛ hura thuṃs jaḥ jaḥ śatruṃ citta māraya rbad rūpaya kanda rbud rbud phaṭ phaṭ māra māra thuṃs thuṃs hana hana daha daha paca paca tiṣṭha tiṣṭha thun rbad thun rbad
With this, the target is utterly slain.
ma māraya phri pretaka hriṅ hriṅ triśa phali rūpaya bindha bindha hulu hulu rbad nān laṃ nān oṃ nān hūṃ nān staṃbhaya staṃbhaya nān
With this, one should suppress.
sarva māra taka raṃ raṃ jvala raṃ jvala raṃ sphoṭaya sphoṭaya hohaya hohaya raṃ caya raṃ kuya
With this, one should burn everything without remainder.
māra śatruṃ thun bhyo thum ril bhyo nahe thun ābeśaya bhyo
With this visualization one should hurl.
vajra ucchaṭaya phaṭ agri sarva bhyo Repel! samaya rbad samyags Repel!

With this, the power of the adversary is repelled.
mahā bhariśaya abheśaye pracaya becaya becaya
This is the peaceful rite: casting out the effigy and bringing down water.
nāga grahe bicaya phroṃ phroṃ hril hril śar śar raṃ na cag ne phroṃ hril śar śar phob phob
This repels and presents with wrath.
mahā śāntiṃ buṣṭeṃ vaśyaṃ kuru māraya jaya karma mali amuki siddhi su siddhi kara svasti svāhā
To accomplish all activities fully,
With congenial substances and samādhi,
Distinguish each of the particular kinds of action.
Transformation of the abode and the culmination of accomplishment:
Urged on by compassion and love,
Make all-pervading offerings and gifts.
Pacifying, enriching, and bringing under control,
Liberating with wrath and cutting off:
Practice all these actions for the benefit of self and others.
Abiding in the world, life and heart,
The letters clearly, the self-arisen abode,
Moving manifestly: this is the heart center.
Long and short, male and female, blood and time,
Attachment and aversion, heart and life, compassion and torment,
Vajra and lotus, wind and abode,
Method and wisdom, the bearer of qualities
And its true nature, action and result:
With the hidden and revealed key points, the coarse and the straight,
And with companions, apply them to action.
Thus it was declared.
This was the eighth chapter, on the key points of the root essence of the various actions of the great chieftains of the world.

Then, what is now to be truly explained:
When the great chiefs of the haughty ones of the world
Are thoroughly practiced in the proper way,
The signs of accomplishment and of its nearness
Are experiences, outright signs and dream signs;
These will each arise in their own way.

One is joyful and radiant, gains strength,
Bliss and realization, and enthusiasm is born;
The mind gains confidence in what will manifest,
Free of fear, anxiety and doubt,
Potent, realizing activities brought to completion:
These and others arise in sequence.
The body is supple, not troubled by the breath,
Light and stable and especially joyful;
Illness and grahas cannot overwhelm it,
The forces of the elements do not shake it,
It has a fine complexion, lovely and beautiful:
Such things as these arise in the body.
Whatever one commands, others take up;
What oneself and the buddhas have spoken
They do not discard, but follow in harmony;
Whatever one utters, pleasant or unpleasant,
Comes forth like the voice of Brahmā;
Merely hearing its sound brings others under one's power.
A graceful manner of engaging: these are the signs of speech.
Whatever one undertakes is accomplished;
Undaunted, not wavering, not giving up,
One is powerful and unshaken
And fully obtains secret might.
The signs that arise in the domain of the mind
Come before, after and immediately.
Dreams that do not come from habitual tendencies:
Kings, abbots and masters,
The great and mighty, the nobly born, the adorned,
Beasts of prey, birds and animals,
Men, women, children and the like
Coming to one's own dwelling
Is a sign of approaching accomplishment.
Taking on the manner of servants and subjects sent on errands
Is the sign that they heed commands and do the work.
Singing songs from a distant place
And gazing from afar is the sign of their slackness.
Undertaking acts of punishment against oneself

And pursuing retribution is the sign of being repelled.
Wanting food and drink and pressing for union
Is the sign that one has not made amends through confession and fulfillment.
Gathering together and lamenting with sobs
Is the sign of impurity and impaired bodily appearance.
Not heeding one's command
And wishing in turn to make one their servant
Is the sign that they have not been brought under control by the remedy.
Striking with weapons, though in proper measure,
Yet powerless, the deed not accomplished,
Is the sign that the power of the mantra has not been achieved.
Others wanting what one does not have,
And not wanting what one does have,
Is the sign that the offerings, fulfillment rites and substances are incomplete.
When one enjoys flesh, bone, blood and the like,
And one's face is lifted high in exaltation,
It is the sign that the act performed is accomplished.
The enemy host not appearing,
And oneself entering a house without doors,
Is the sign that others have turned it back with evil mantras.
In particular, for each of the eight classes:
Humans, animals, birds and the like,
A black host of males is the sign of māras.
A host of females with fine ornaments is the mātṛkās.
The great and mighty, masks and lions, temples,
Children and monkeys are the sign of king spirits.
Men, horses, hawks, wolves and wild game
Are the sign of rock tsen and mountain tsen.
Animals of watery places are the sign of nāgas.
Buffalo, goats, sheep, the many-eyed,
Darkness and blizzards are the sign of planets.
Well-dressed and wealthy men
Dwelling on mountains and lakes are the sign of yakṣas.
Fishermen, butchers, fowlers,
And the armor and weapons of war are the sign of rākṣasas.
Combine these with the good and bad explained before,
And they become the signs of the particular practice.

Thus it was declared.
This was the ninth chapter, on the signs of practicing the great chieftains of the world.

Then, further, it is thoroughly explained:
The special substances of the haughty ones:
A beautiful image is the support of body,
Calling by name the support of speech,
The sacred hand emblem the support of mind.
Sheep, white yak, frog, snake and fish,
Ox, blue horse and jewels,
Battle array, swift slaying, birds of prey,
Rnelbu, black crystal and black birds,
Horse, sheep, dog and black vulture,
Goat, pig, bird and white dog,
Barbarian, goat, raven, bear and black dog,
Black snake, vulture and billy goat,
Horse, horn, bird and red dog:
Their heart blood, heads and banners
Are, for gods, nāgas, yakṣas, rākṣasas,
Mātṛkās, māras, king spirits, ging spirits,
Yamas, planets and tsen spirits,
In that order, the substances on which each relies.
This is utterly secret.
Skull cups, weapons and ritual daggers
Of the ill-omened, the vicious and the heirless,
Poison, blood, jewels and wrathful grains,
All gathered together, are the substances for killing.
A vessel that held a nāga, together with flesh and blood,
Fine horn, water of no lineage swiftly flowing,
Various sprouts and fragrant substances,
Torrent water, waves and smoke are the substances for subjugation.
A stupa and Mount Meru with thread crosses,
Polluting substances, three heads of the low-born,
And the lotus, the substance that descends upon the target,
Are the substances for turning back.
Vicious disease, pellets of rotting corpse, heads and feet

Are the substances for pressing down.
Poison, blood, gatherings and evil signs
Are the substances to hurl at the support of the target.
A support house on evil ground,
Vicious and fiercely burning wood,
Black grains mixed with poison and blood are substances as well.
Furthermore, for the retinue of the mighty haughty ones,
With their respective families and classes,
All the substances praised for them,
Agreeable and disagreeable, clean and polluted, will become known.
In a future time, Vajradhara's own
Vidyādharas, bodhisattvas
Who keep the yogic discipline, through their accomplishment,
Will fully and completely realize, without exception,
The central and borderland countries,
The world systems of the buddha fields,
And everywhere the chieftains with their servants,
Those with bodies of mind and of matter,
Their elements, families and intentions,
Their births, supports, abodes and requisites,
And will teach them to those who have knowledge and eyes to see.
At that time, you great chiefs of the haughty ones,
Now I give you this instruction:
Do not transgress the true meaning!
You too, at some time,
Having abandoned the negative tendencies of karma,
Will swiftly go to the ground of awakening.
Therefore, accept the oath of my command,
And accomplish just as it is intended!
The way of my teaching, the great secret,
So that it will not be impaired or harmed
By outsiders and the like,
You must spread and teach it!
Thus it was declared.
This was the tenth chapter, on charging the great chieftains of the world with their supports, substances and activities.

Then the Blessed One, the very identity of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, gathered those great displays of the body of the great secret into his own body, and with a delighted voice declared these words:

Oh! You assembled retinue,
You great and powerful chiefs of the world,
Māras, yamas and the rest:
Even after the ultimate passing into nirvana,
In order to fulfill the pledge to the teaching
Of all the buddhas of the three times,
And to be companions on the path of yoga,
You display wrathful body, speech and mind,
And various qualities and enlightened activities.
In a later time, the vidyādharas,
Those diligent persons,
Should not grasp at duality either.
All objects that appear, outer and inner, without exception,
Are to be accomplished as the king of self-aware mind.
It is unfabricated, not separate from its objects,
Not cut off, not fallen, without an owner,
Nondual, equality, spontaneously present,
Certain, free of the striving mind that rejects and adopts.
It is the life force of the heart, the root of all without exception.
Know this very thing and take it up completely,
And the king of empowerment will dawn.
If one holds that I and the haughty ones
Each possess a separate continuum of our own,
Stifling realization with the dualistic mind,
And meditates entirely in terms of signs,
It is like wishing to cross the three realms without legs,
Or like looking upon the great trichiliocosm without eyes;
It gives joy to the four māras.
Therefore, you of the supreme family,
Know that the Lord of Secrets (Guhyapati) is I myself.

So he declared, and he dissolved the great maṇḍala of his own body, speech and mind into the expanse of the nature of reality, suchness, free of elaboration.

This was the eleventh chapter, on the instruction to the great chieftains of the world and their retinues to accomplish the dharmakāya ultimately.

The Root Tantra of Accomplishment through Worship and Praise of the World, on the chieftains of the haughty ones, is complete.
maṅgalaṃ
Here is the Collection of Dhāraṇīs, volume E.

Translator's Notes

• In the eight lower right hands, lha chen po is taken as "the great gods" in the plural, parallel to the eight great nāgas held in the left hands, rather than as the Great God Śiva alone. In the exhortation, the obscure snga 'phrul is rendered as "magical displays." The "flayed hides, the bases of fortune" render g.yang gzhi, the whole skin used in rites for summoning prosperity. King spirits (rgyal po) and ging spirits (ging) are classes of spirits from Tibetan tradition with no secure Sanskrit equivalent.
• The deity □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ could not be identified with a Sanskrit name and is translated literally as "She Who Gathers Existence under Her Power." Likewise □□ (the'u spirits) and □□□ (mu spirits) are Tibetan spirit classes kept in phonetics, and □□□□□□□□□□□□ is rendered "king of the vital soul" (bla); the Lord of the Snowy Mountains is taken as Himavat. In the last mantra, srog and breng breng are Tibetan words embedded in the formula (srog, "life"), kept as written. The technical list of rite types at the end (mag pa "marriage bonds," spogs pa "raising") follows the plain sense; these are terms of protector ritual whose exact technical meaning is uncertain.
• Several items are Tibetan names or terms not securely identifiable: □□□ (tsara, an animal), □□□□□ (so bird), □□□□□ (kele, an animal), and the goddess □□□□□□□□□□□□□, rendered literally as "the Swift One." Tibetan deities and spirit classes are given in phonetics or plain translation: Gangzang, Namgyal, Lhajin, the red tsen and ril tsen, and the Great Mother, Queen of Existence (Sipé Gyalmo). The phrase □□□□□ ("kinsman of the nāgas") is uncertain. □□□□□□□ in "comes forth in the form of nine e syllables" is read as □□□□□□□□ ("manner of coming"), an evident copyist's slip. "Three places" are the forehead, throat, and heart.
• A few readings are uncertain: □□□□□□□ is taken as □□□□□□□, "entrails"; □□□□ in the line on thunder is read as □□□□, "roars"; the tastes □□□□ and □□□□□□□□ are rendered loosely as "spiced" and "bitter"; and □□□□□□□□□□□□□ is rendered "holds up a skull of blood." The "fortune bases" (gyang gzhi) are the flayed hides used as supports of fortune in protector rites. Remati is the Tibetan form of the goddess's name (Skt. Revatī).
• Several mounts, implements, and names are uncertain: □□□□□□□□□□□□□ (rendered "reddish donkey"), □□□□□□□ ("white pennant"), □□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("pale, stone-colored horse"), □□□□□□□□□ ("bundle of weapons"), and □□□□□, an implement left untranslated as "shanglang." Tibetan names of protectors are given in phonetics or plain translation (Gurumtsé, Trakmé, the Gong King, Life Eater, Fire Blade, the Great Sky King); the Protectress of Mantra (sngags kyi srung ma) is presumably Ekajaṭī, but the text does not name her here.
• The line □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ lists technical steps of the rite whose exact senses are uncertain; they are rendered "confession, rending, enclosing, purifying, and bringing down." □□□□□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□□□□, "swear the oath," the usual phrase at the giving of samaya water. The dialogue between student and master is marked only by its content; the speakers are not named in the text.
• In the description of Maheśvara's retinue the Tibetan reads "male lineage" on both the right and the left; a contrast with a female lineage on the left may have been intended, but the text is translated as it stands. Several ritual items are Tibetan in origin and are kept as such: the ngarmi effigy, the sky thread-cross (namkha), and the gyangbu frame. The animal called "the clean one" and the items held by the reckoners ("accounts") are uncertain and rendered literally. Köjé, "king of existence," is a native Tibetan māra deity, and Remati's epithet "who turns back flesh" is a literal rendering of a name not securely identified. "The vajra holder" here refers to the officiating master who generates the chief deity.

• Several names here are native Tibetan deity names rather than renderings of Indian ones and are given in translation or simple phonetics: Frog-Head the Blood-Eyed One, Lomönma, Black Lady Vajra Iron-Beak, Rokti, Lady of the Lightning Blizzard, Gurumtsé, and the nine Masang brothers. "Great yakṣiṇī" reads the evident chen mo for written chan mo. The six-faced mount is here a she-camel, not Kārttikeya. The black garment worn by Iron-Beak (ba ti), the army called bha dmag, and the class "humans, mātṛkās, and gods" (mi ma lha) are uncertain and rendered by their most likely sense.
• Several deities here bear native Tibetan names, given in phonetics or translation: Vajra Māra-Tamer, Red Life Eater, Yamshü the Red, Black Gulang, the Black Lusterless One, and Vajra Beauty. The text places Vināyaka at the north of the "fourth" tier, though the sequence suggests the second; it is translated as written. The line rendered "You wear a garment of crystal" opens with the unclear words ma thar, and the animal tsara is unidentified and left untranslated.
• "Sudden illness" reads the evident glo bur for written blom bur. Several technical phrases in the sixth chapter are obscure and rendered by their most probable sense: "the four of passion" (possibly four kinds of sacred substance), "the haughty ones and of the expanse," the torma shapes "heart-tip" and "tsaru," and the key point se long, taken here as compulsion. In the list of fatalities this passage reads eighty-one where the parallel list earlier read fifteen; each is translated as written.
• This passage spans the end of the seventh chapter and the whole of the eighth. Several technical expressions in the fierce rite are obscure and are rendered by their most probable sense: the "three kinds of tainted blood" (rme khrag), "the wealth of the three jewels free of weapons," "battles of dry and wet," and in the closing verses of the eighth chapter "compassion and torment" (gtser) and "the coarse and the straight" (bong dang drang). "The sage" who is urged on may refer to a planetary deity such as Rāhu, who bears that epithet. The closing verses of the eighth chapter list the key points of life-force practice in a compressed, allusive way, and the translation follows the Tibetan words closely without supplying a commentary.
• Several lines in the lists of signs and substances are obscure and rendered tentatively: "pressing for union" (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□), "masks and lions" (□□□□□□□□), "ill-omened" (□□□□□□□), "fine horn" (□□□□□□□□), and "pellets of rotting corpse" (□□□□□□□, read as bam ril). □□□□□□□□ could not be identified and is left as a transliteration. The substances listed as □□□□□□□□□□□□ are taken as substances for subjugation (making bow down).
• "Stifling realization" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, reading □□□ as "kill, suppress"; it could also mean "nurturing the conceptions of the dualistic mind". "You of the supreme family" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, whose exact sense (possibly feminine, or addressing noble sons and daughters) is uncertain. The last line is a volume marker of the Collected Dhāraṇīs section in this edition.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.