Toh 930 · Derge Kangyur

This short dhāraṇī text has no title given in its opening lines, so its English, Sanskrit, and Tibetan names cannot be stated with confidence here. It begins with homage to the Three Jewels, to the Buddha Amitābha, and to the great compassionate bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara. It then presents a mantra of victory and purification, which calls on the blessing of all buddhas to cleanse the senses, the mind, and consciousness, and to awaken understanding of all phenomena. A brief ritual instruction follows, promising that a single recitation exhausts the karmic obscurations of a thousand eons and brings roots of virtue and other benefits. The work is Toh 930 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the collection of dhāraṇīs, the class of short incantatory texts recited for protection, purification, and spiritual merit.

Homage to the Three Jewels!
Homage to the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly complete Buddha Amitābha!
Homage to the bodhisattva, the great being endowed with great compassion, the noble Avalokiteśvara!

tadyathā oṃ jaye jaye mahājaye jayabāhini jayottari kala kala mala mala cala cala cala cala kṣiṇ kṣiṇ sarba karma ābaraṇāni me sarbā jñā jñāna adhiṣṭhite svāhā namo bhagabati sahasrabarte sarba buddha abalokiti cakṣuḥ śrotra ghraṇa jihvā kāya mano bijñāna biśodhani svāhā phuru phuru suru suru phurā phurā praphurā praphurā sarba buddha adhiṣṭhite svāhā dharmadhatu garbhe svāhā abhāba svāhā sarba dharma ababodhani svāhā

This is the rite for this dhāraṇī. By reciting it even once, all the karmic obscurations accumulated over a thousand eons will be exhausted. One will obtain the roots of virtue accumulated by a thousand buddhas. For a thousand eons one will turn one's back on saṃsāra. After passing from this life, one will obtain the kingdom of a universal monarch. At the time of death one will see a thousand buddhas. One will be born in pure buddha fields. If one recites it twenty-one times in each of the three periods of the day and the three periods of the night, one will see in dreams whatever one wishes. One will also obtain the golden-colored body of a tathāgata. And one will come to have unshakable faith in the domains of the buddhas and bodhisattvas. These and other limitless benefits will arise.

The dhāraṇī called The Thousandfold is complete.

Translator's Notes

• The final syllable of the colophon is written □□□, evidently a slip for the closing particle □□ ("is complete"); it is translated accordingly.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
