Toh 582 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Daśapāramitāpāripūrakā, or "Dhāraṇī for Attaining the Ten Perfections," with a corresponding Tibetan title that can be rendered as Pha rol tu phyin pa bcu thob par 'gyur ba'i gzungs. It belongs to the broad class of dhāraṇī and mantra literature found within the Kangyur, presenting a series of short sacred formulas, each to be recited once in order to attain a specific spiritual quality. The text moves systematically through virtues such as loving-kindness, compassion, and joy, linking each to an invocation of all the tathāgatas, reflecting the Mahāyāna ideal of the ten perfections that a bodhisattva cultivates on the path to awakening. Though brief, it exemplifies the practical and devotional character of dhāraṇī collections, in which the recitation of consecrated syllables is understood to produce direct spiritual benefits for the practitioner.

One will attain the ten perfections. The dhāraṇī for attaining the ten perfections is complete.

Oṃ namaḥ sarvatathāgatānāṃ daśapāramitāpāripūrakāṇāṃ hīḥ.

By reciting this once, one will attain loving-kindness (maitrī). Namaḥ sarvatathāgatānāṃ curu curu muru muru kāruṇe kāruṇyacittamutpādaya bhagavati sarvabhayaṃ me nāśaya svāhā.

By reciting this once, one will attain compassion (karuṇā). Namaḥ sarvatathāgatānāṃ namo bhagavati sarvasatvapriye hūṃ muditi svāhā.

By reciting this once, one will attain joy (muditā). Namaḥ sarvatathāgatānāṃ acintyaveśānī oṃ turu turu

Translator's Notes

• The passage is a dhāraṇī compilation text, structured as a series of short mantra-units each paired with a promised result. The Sanskrit mantras are rendered in standard transliteration as they appear phonetically in the Tibetan; no normalization has been applied beyond conventional scholarly transliteration. The text breaks off mid-mantra at "oṃ turu turu," indicating the passage given is incomplete. The sequence of results — loving-kindness, compassion, and joy — corresponds to the first three of the four immeasurables (Skt. brahmavihāra), with equanimity presumably to follow in the missing continuation.
