This text is Toh 808 in the Kangyur, a tantric work whose Sanskrit title is rendered as Dhyānottarapaṭalakrama and whose Tibetan title, Bsam gtan gyi phyi ma rim par phyee ba, translates as "The Sequence of the Later Stages of Meditation." Opening with homage to the glorious Vajra Tīkṣṇa (Rdo rje rnon po), the work belongs to the class of esoteric instructional literature associated with secret mantra (guhyamantra) tantric cycles, addressing the stages and sequence of meditative practice that follow upon prior tantric instruction. The verses at the outset reflect on the tension between reticence and the need to articulate teachings for those whose minds are not naturally inclined toward the tantric approach, suggesting a text concerned with justifying and systematizing advanced contemplative methods. As a short but technical treatise, it likely serves practitioners already versed in tantric ritual and meditation who seek guidance on refining and structuring their practice in later phases of realization.

It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
