

This text, known in Tibetan as an aspiration and homage centered on the Three Je

Toh 811 · Derge Kangyur

This text, known in Tibetan as an aspiration and homage centered on the Three Jewels, is a short devotional and dedicatory verse composition rather than a discourse or treatise; it opens with prostration to the Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha and unfolds as a heartfelt aspiration to generate the awakening mind (bodhicitta) for the sake of liberating all sentient beings from suffering, the lower realms, and afflictive emotions, culminating in a dedication of accumulated virtue toward the twin accumulations of merit and wisdom. No specific Sanskrit title is preserved or clearly reconstructible for this piece, and its Tibetan title is likewise not given in the excerpt, reflecting its character as a liturgical or aspirational verse text rather than a formally titled scripture. Such compositions typically serve ritual and contemplative purposes, guiding practitioners in cultivating compassion, refuge, and the resolve to work for the benefit of all beings. This work is catalogued as Toh 811 in the Kangyur, situating it among the canon's shorter devotional and aspirational prayers rather than among the major sutras or extensive philosophical treatises.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

In order to thoroughly pacify the suffering of the boundless realm of sentient beings, to deliver them from the lower realms, and to liberate them from the afflictions, whatever manifold sufferings there are when existence is fearful and uneasy, in order to protect them completely from all this,
I generate the mind of awakening.

Of all destitute sentient beings may I myself always be the refuge.
May I be a protector for those without protector, a support for those without support, may I become a refuge for those without refuge, and turn suffering into happiness.
May I be the one who pacifies the afflictions of all sentient beings.

Whatever virtuous actions, gathered in this life and in others, may they become the two accumulations called merit and wisdom.

Through the gateway of the six perfections, whatever diligence I undertake, may that too benefit all sentient beings without exception.

Whether it be making the span of life limitless, or whatever small thing I may do, in short, for the sake of pacifying all the afflictions of all sentient beings, and in order to liberate them, I strive,
and joyfully exert myself toward awakening.

Then I generate throughout the mind of perfect awakening, according to the rite.

Toward all sentient beings
I shall make compassion and loving-kindness ever present.

In order to properly train the mind, through various methods, the six recollections, with an inwardly pacified nature,
I shall meditate with a single-pointed intention.

Just as the sons of the Victors of the past made their aspirational prayers, I too, with a virtuous mind, likewise offer aspirational prayers.

Having settled in equipoise upon the manifold enjoyments of the Dharma, I rejoice.
May all sentient beings have happiness, be at peace, and be free from illness.

May I be capable of every activity and endowed also with good qualities—possessed of wealth, able to give, endowed with wisdom, possessed of patience, foremost in virtue—and in all the lifetimes of sentient beings may I remember my births and be filled with tender affection.

The Great Tantra of Bringing About Glorious Excellent Accomplishment...

Translator's Notes

- The final line appears to be the opening of a text title ("The Great Tantra of..."), cut off mid-sentence in the source; it has been rendered as a fragment rather than completed, since the remainder is not present in the passage given. The term "six recollections" (rjes dran drug) refers to the traditional set of recollections of the Buddha, Dharma, Saṅgha, generosity, moral discipline, and the deities, though the pass

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.