

Vajra Wrathful Cuts Through Anger (Sanskrit title not determinable with certainty)

Toh 841 · Derge Kangyur

Vajra Wrathful Cuts Through Anger (Sanskrit title not determinable with certainty; Tibetan: Dorje Tröpé Zhedang Chö) is a short tantric ritual and meditation text belonging to the Vajrayana literature of the Kangyur, catalogued as Toh 841. It presents a visualization practice centered on a wrathful vajra deity whose blazing blue weapon is said to cut through the affliction of anger, with instructions on generating drops of light from the midst of space and focusing meditation at the vital points of the life-force and the heart. As a sadhana-style text, it belongs to the broader class of tantric meditation manuals concerned with transforming specific mental afflictions through deity visualization and energetic focus. The colophon notes that the translation was rendered by the translator Jnanakumara, situating the work within the historical corpus of texts transmitted and translated as part of the Tibetan tantric tradition.

It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
