

This folio preserves the close of one dhāraṇī text and the opening of another, b

Toh 795 · Derge Kangyur

This folio preserves the close of one dhāraṇī text and the opening of another, both belonging to the same genre of short protective incantations found within the Kangyur. The text beginning here is the Dhāraṇī Called Pacifying Poison, known in Sanskrit as the Viṣaṇāśanī or similarly titled poison-pacifying dhāraṇī, and in Tibetan as the Dug zhi bar byed pa'i gzungs. It is dedicated to Vasudhārā, goddess of ambrosial medicine, and consists of a mantra formula together with a declaration invoking the truth and splendor of the Buddha to neutralize various forms of poison—from venomous bites of nāgas and snakes to compounded and infused toxins. As Toh 795 in the Kangyur, it belongs to the class of dhāraṇī or protective spell literature, texts recited for practical ritual purposes such as healing and warding off harm.

...it will be accomplished. Having praised leaves, flowers, or fruit, and given them to someone, that person will become joyful. This completes the Dhāraṇī for Accomplishing Deeds.

The Dhāranī Called Pacifying Poison

Homage to Vasudhārā, goddess of ambrosial medicine.

Tadyathā: om suru suru ka varavarake viri hiri śuddhe viśuddhe svāhā.

By the truth of the Buddha, the Blessed One, and by his splendor, the poison of nāgas, the poison of snakes, compounded poison, poison of infusion, root poison, and the poison of the fangs of predatory beasts are defeated. One should proclaim: "The poison is certainly defeated."

This completes the Dhāranī for Pacifying All Poisons.

Translator's Notes

- The term rendered "poison of infusion" (ལྷུ་ལྷུ་ལྷུ་ལྷུ་) is uncertain; it may instead denote poison arising from soaking, steeping, or dampness, but no fully secure equivalent could be established from context alone. The deity name ལུ་ལྷུ་ལྷུ་ལྷུ་ was rendered as Vasudhārā ("Stream of Wealth"), the standard Sanskrit deity whose name this Tibetan phrase translates, though she is not further identified in the text itself.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.