

This short text, known as the Dhāraṇī for Healing Wounds (in Tibetan, the Rma 'b

Toh 798 · Derge Kangyur

This short text, known as the Dhāraṇī for Healing Wounds (in Tibetan, the Rma 'byor bar byed pa'i gzungs sngags), is a protective and healing incantation offered in homage to the noble Mañjuśrī. Consisting of a mantra to be recited three times over saliva applied to an injury, it belongs to the genre of dhāraṇī literature concerned with practical remedies, promising the healing of wounds from stones or weapons, severed tendons, and even fractured skulls. It appears alongside another related spell, the Dhāraṇī for Frightening Māras, reflecting the common pairing of protective and curative incantations in this class of literature. This text is catalogued as Toh 798 in the Kangyur, situating it among the collection of dhāraṇī and mantra texts preserved in that section of the canon.

Fainted. The dhāraṇī for Frightening Māras is complete.

The dhāraṇī mantra called Healing Wounds.

Homage to the noble Mañjuśrī.

Oṃ ubhāsa ubhāsa. Sum sum. Sarva nan bade svāhā. Hūṃ phaṭ. Śama śāntiṃ kuru svāhā.

Having recited this three times, if one smears saliva on a wound, it heals injuries from stones, wounds from weapons, severed tendons, and fractured skulls.

The dhāraṇī for Healing Wounds.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables are given as approximate transliterations of the Tibetan phonetic rendering of Sanskrit; the exact Sanskrit reconstruction is uncertain in places (e.g., "sarva nan bade" may reflect a corrupted or regionally altered mantra string), so these are left as transliterated sounds rather than translated or fully reconstructed, per standard practice for dhāraṇī mantras.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.