The Noble Great Queen of Vidyā-Mantras, She of the White Parasol Who Arose from the Uṣṇīṣa of All the Tathāgatas, Invincible by Others, She Who Turns Back, known in Sanskrit as the Ārya Sarvatathāgatoṣṇīṣasitātapatrā Aparājitā Pratyaṅgirā Mahāvidyārājñī, is a scripture centered on the protective goddess Sitātapatrā, the White Parasol. In Tibetan it is known as a text on the great queen of vidyā-mantras, the white parasol that arose from the crown protuberance of all the tathāgatas. The discourse opens in the Heaven of the Thirty-Three, in the gods' assembly hall Sudharmā. There the Buddha, surrounded by monks, bodhisattvas, and Śakra, lord of the gods, enters a meditative absorption called Gazing upon the Uṣṇīṣa, from which this powerful mantra and its protective goddess emerge to repel harm and turn back hostile forces. The work is Toh 985 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the collection of dhāraṇī texts, the incantations prized throughout the Tibetan tradition for protection and blessing.

In the language of India: āryasarbatathāgatoṣṇīṣasitātabatrānāma aparājitābratyaṃgira mahābidyārājñī

In the language of Tibet: The Noble Great Queen of Vidyā-Mantras, She of the White Parasol Who Arose from the Uṣṇīṣa of All the Tathāgatas, Invincible by Others, She Who Turns Back.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

Homage to all the buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One was dwelling in the realm of the gods, in the abode of the Heaven of the Thirty-Three, at Sudharmā, the assembly hall of the gods. With him were a great saṅgha of monks, a great saṅgha of bodhisattvas, and Śakra (Indra), lord of the gods. Then the Blessed One, seated on the seat that had been prepared, entered into the meditative absorption called Gazing upon the Uṣṇīṣa. As soon as the Blessed One had entered into absorption, these foundations of secret mantra emerged from within the uṣṇīṣa:

namo bhagavate uṣṇīṣāya śuddhe biraje bimale svāhā

Homage to the Blessed One, the unobstructed uṣṇīṣa.

Homage to the Buddha.

Homage to the Dharma.

Homage to the Saṅgha.

Homage to the seventy million perfectly complete buddhas.

Homage to the buddhas beginning with Maitreya, and to the bodhisattvas together with the saṅgha of śrāvakas.

Homage to the arhats in the world.

Having paid homage to them, one should proclaim this queen of vidyā-mantras called She of the White Parasol, who arose from the uṣṇīṣa of all the blessed tathāgatas, invincible by others, she who turns back.

She completely crushes all strife, battles, disputes, and quarrels. She turns back all bhūtas and grahas. She cuts off all the vidyā-mantras of others. She fully protects from untimely death. She frees all sentient beings who are bound. She destroys all hostility and all bad dreams. She utterly annihilates all the grahas of yakṣas and rākṣasas. She destroys the eighty-four thousand grahas. She wins the favor of the twenty-eight lunar mansions. She turns back all enemies. She utterly annihilates the eight great planets. She destroys hostility, violence, and bad dreams. She protects from poison, weapons, fire, and water. She delivers from all the terrors of the lower realms. She fully protects against all eight kinds of untimely death.

Invincible by others, of great ferocity,
of great strength, she of great splendor,
great fierce one, great white one,
great radiant one, great powerful one,
great blazing one, great garland,
great one clad in white,
noble Tārā, Bhṛkuṭī,
Vajra Garland, she who stretches forth,
Lotus Light, she of vajra marks,
invincible one who bears a garland,
destroyer holding a vajra,
worshiped by the peaceful gods,
of peaceful form, the great white one,
the blazing one, the one clad in white,
noble Tārā of great strength,
deathless Vajra Chain, Vajra Maiden, holder of the family,
the vajra of Vajrapāṇi,
she of the vidyā-mantra with a golden garland, Safflower and Precious One,
light of the family of Vairocana, Uṣṇīṣa of the Tathāgata family,
the garland of she who stretches forth,
vajra eyes like golden light, Vajra Voice and the White One,
glorious Lotus Eye, Buddha Eye,
likewise Vajra Moonlight,
likewise Vajra Holder, Vajra Garland, goddess of great magic,
and she of golden light,
she of beautiful eyes, the White One,
she who has eyes of lotus,
the thoroughly tamed and peaceful mind,
Moonlight, who knows my qualities:
all of you, these hosts of mudrās,
together with the hosts of mātṛkās, please protect me with my retinue, and all sentient beings.

Whoever writes this great queen of vidyā-mantras called She of the White Parasol, arisen from the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas, the Invincible, the Repeller, on birch bark, on cloth, or on tree bark, should wear it on the body or at the neck, keep it, and read it. For as long as they live, such people cannot be harmed by poison, cannot be harmed by weapons, cannot be harmed by fever, cannot be harmed by disease, cannot be harmed by burning heat, cannot be harmed by fire or water, cannot be harmed by any rites of transformation, cannot be harmed by mineral poison, cannot be harmed by compounded poison, and cannot be harmed by sorcery. They will not meet the time of an untimely death. They will become pleasing and delightful to all grahas, obstructors and vināyakas. For eighty-four thousand koṭis of eons they will remember their former lives, birth after birth. The vidyā-mantra deities of the vajra family, eighty-four hundred thousand koṭis of trillions of them, will also constantly and without interruption abide in meditative equipoise and always guard, protect and shelter them. The eighty-four vajra messenger women and attendants will also always protect them, and they will be pleasing and delightful to them. Never will they become yakṣas, rākṣasas, bhūtas, pretas, piśācas, pūtanas, or kaṭapūtanas, nor will they become poor people. They will come to possess a heap of merit equal to that of countless, immeasurable buddhas, blessed ones, as numerous as the sands of the river Ganges.

If one holds this great queen of vidyā-mantras called She of the White Parasol, arisen from the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas, the Invincible, the Repeller, even one who does not live the life of celibacy will come to live the life of celibacy. Even one who has not kept the vows will come to be one who has kept them. Even one who is impure will be made pure. Even one who has not kept the poṣadha fast will become one who has kept the poṣadha. Even those who have committed the five acts of immediate retribution will be purged of their wrongdoing without remainder. The obscurations of former karma will also be exhausted without remainder.

If any woman holds this great queen of vidyā-mantras called She of the White Parasol, arisen from the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas, the Invincible, the Great Repeller, and wishes for a son, she will obtain a son, and she will be fully endowed with long life, merit and strength. After she passes from this life she will be born in the world Sukhāvatī, and she will be free of attachment, aversion, delusion, pride and all arrogance.

When famine, cattle disease, livestock disease, epidemics, harm, contagious disease, all disturbances, and enemy armies come, someone should fasten this Great Repeller of the Blessed One, the perfectly complete Buddha, the Undefeated, called She of the White Parasol, arisen from the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas, the Invincible, to the top of a victory banner, show it great honor and make great offerings to it, and then plant it at the gates of all the cities, or in a temple, a village, a city, a region, a town, a charnel ground, on a mountain, or in a hermitage. Merely by planting this invincible Great Repeller, queen of vidyā-mantras, with great honor, battles will be pacified. Epidemics, harm, contagious diseases, all disturbances and enemy armies will be thoroughly pacified.

The nāga king Ananta, the nāga king Śaṅkhapāla, the nāga king Mahākāla, the nāga king Nanda, Upananda, and these and all the other nāga kings as well send down rain in due season. In due season they bring forth lightning. In due season they make thunder roar. All illness and harm will be completely pacified.

Through the yoga of the Buddha, one should recite it three times over every calamity.

When the Blessed One had spoken thus, all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, and the world with its gods, humans, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras and gandharvas, rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had said.

This completes the noble great queen of vidyā-mantras called She of the White Parasol, who arose from the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas, the Invincible, the Repeller.

Translator's Notes

• Two buddha names could not be identified with confidence and are translated by meaning: "Vajradhara, Conqueror of the Ocean" and "King of the Crest of the Fragrance of Blooming Lotuses and Utpalas."

The Tibetan for "together with the Lord of Umā" follows the Sanskrit umāpati-sahita. This is usually understood as an epithet of Rudra himself, Umā's lord, accompanied by his retinue.

In the Mahākāla homage the Tibetan says only "together with." The words "his retinue" supply the implied companions.

The phrase on the vidyādhara sages literally reads "able to benefit by curses." Parallel Sanskrit versions read this as "able to curse and to bless."

The closing verb (rab tu brjod par bya'o) is a gerundive, "is to be proclaimed." It is rendered as an instruction to the reciter, not as a first-person statement.
• Many of the goddess epithets in the verse and several graha names in the list are rendered by their meaning, since a Sanskrit form could not be identified with confidence. These include "Vajra Voice" for rdo rje sgros, "she who stretches forth" for rnam bsgyings ma, the graha that "draws out mats" for re lde 'don pa, and "discharges" for nom bu. Lus Chagma (lus chags ma) is left in phonetics as an unidentified graha name. "The oppressing grahas" renders gnon po as it stands; it may be a corruption, and the Sanskrit parallels have a different name here. The first-person "I cut" and "I pin" follow the sense of the parallel Sanskrit, where the forms are chindayāmi and kīlayāmi; the Tibetan leaves the subject unstated.
• Several names in this litany are identified from the parallel Sanskrit of the Sitātapatrā dhāraṇī rather than read directly from the Tibetan. The least certain are "Meteor-Face" as Ulkāmukha, "Accomplisher" as Siddhikara, and "Youth" as Kumāra (Skanda).

The verbs "I sever" and "I pin down" render the future or intentional forms of the Tibetan. These correspond to the first-person verbs of the Sanskrit original.

"Together with their companions" renders lhan cig pa, which corresponds to Sanskrit sahāya.
• Several graha names in the prose list are uncertain in their Indian identification and are translated by meaning: "the oppressor grahas," "the grahas that cause trembling all over," "the grahas that draw out thorns," "the jar-like grahas," and "the body ḍākinī grahas." The item rendered "eaters of discharges" is uncertain, because the Tibetan word is obscure. The petition to protect continues into the next piece, where the list of fevers closes.

• Several disease names in the lists are uncertain in precise identification; "rashes" for the obscure term bas bldags is a tentative rendering. The large number qualifying the vajra-family deities combines koṭi with khrag khrig, a very large numerical unit, here rendered loosely as "trillions."
• The phrase rendered "over every calamity" is uncertain. As written, the Tibetan reads "all that is ruined" or "all that has disintegrated." It may refer to every kind of misfortune, or it may reflect a scribal variant.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
