The Dhāraṇī of the Noble Lady, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, known in Sanskrit as the Āryatathāgatoṣṇīṣasitātapatrāparājitā nāma dhāraṇī and in Tibetan as Phags ma de bzhin gshegs pa'i gtsug tor nas byung ba'i gdugs dkar po can gzhan gyis mi thub pa zhes bya ba'i gzungs, is a dhāraṇī text centered on Sitātapatrā, the protective goddess of the White Parasol who arises from the crown protuberance of the Buddha. It opens with an extended series of homages to the Three Jewels, to countless buddhas and their communities of hearers, to the noble ones at each stage of the path, to accomplished sages and vidyādharas, and to worldly deities such as Brahmā. These homages set the stage for a powerful incantation invoked to avert harm, repel hostile forces, and grant protection. It is Toh 986 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the class of dhāraṇī texts, the collections of protective and ritual spells within the tantric portion of the canon.

In the language of India: ārya tathāgatoṣñāṣ sitātabatra abarājita nāma dhāraṇī

In the language of Tibet: The Dhāraṇī of the Noble Lady, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata.

Buddha Wide-Eyed King of the Banner of Utpala Fragrance.

Having paid homage to them, this great Repeller called the Blessed Lady, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, subdues all bhūta grahas; cuts off all the vidyā-mantras of others; turns back untimely death; frees all beings who are bound; averts all hostility, bad dreams, and evil omens; destroys the eighty-four thousand grahas; delights the twenty-eight lunar mansions; destroys the eight great planets; repels all enemies; destroys all that is savage, all hostility, and all bad dreams; and rescues from poison, weapons, fire, and water.

Invincible one, greatly fierce,
Great wrathful one, of great strength,
Great blazing one, of great splendor,
Great White One, of great strength,
Garland of flames, White-Robed One,
Noble Tārā, the Frowning One,
Renowned as the Victor's Vajra Garland,
Lotus-emblemed, bearing the vajra's mark,
Invincible one with a garland,
She who destroys the vajra fortresses,
Worshipped by the peaceful gods,
Of peaceful form and great splendor,
Noble Tārā of great strength,
Vajra Chain and the others,
Vajra Maiden, holder of the family,
Vajrapāṇi, golden garland of the family,
Safflower Lady and Jewel Lady,
Vairocana, renowned as Vajra Uṣṇīṣa,
The vajra of the Yawning Lady,
She who has eyes like golden light,
Vajra Voice and the White Lady,
Lotus Eye and Moonlight:

May all those hosts of mudrās protect me! Please grant protection!

Blessed Lady, the One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, Vajra Uṣṇīṣa, great Repeller, great one with a thousand arms, great one with a thousand heads, great one with a hundred thousand koṭis of eyes, bearing the indestructible blazing marks, great Vajra Vast One who holds sway over the maṇḍala of the three worlds: please protect me on every side! Please protect me!

oṃ The fear of kings, the fear of robbers and thieves, the fear of fire, the fear of water, the fear of poison, the fear of weapons, the fear of hostile armies, the fear of famine, the fear of enemies, the fear of thunderbolts, the fear of untimely death, the fear of earthquakes, the fear of falling meteors, the fear of royal punishment, the fear of gods, the fear of nāgas, the fear of lightning, the fear of garuḍas, the fear of fierce wild beasts; the graha of gods, the graha of nāgas, the graha of asuras, the graha of Vāyu, the graha of garuḍas, the graha of gandharvas, the graha of kinnaras, the graha of mahoragas, the graha of yakṣas, the graha of rākṣasas, the graha of pretas, the graha of piśācas, the graha of bhūtas, the graha of kumbhāṇḍas, the graha of pūtanas, the graha of kaṭapūtanas, the graha of skandas, the graha of apasmāras, the graha of unmādas, the graha of chāyās, the graha of ostārakas, the graha of ḍākinīs, and the graha of Revatī. May I be safe from all those grahas!

From those who steal vitality, those who feed on the womb, those who drink blood, those who feed on grease, those who feed on flesh, those who feed on fat, those who feed on marrow, those who feed on newborns, those who steal life, those who feed on vomit, those who feed on filth, those who drink urine, those who drink what flows from the drains, those who feed on leftovers, those who drink spittle, those who feed on mucus, those who feed on snot, those who feed on pus, those who feed on torma, those who feed on garlands, those who feed on scents, those who feed on incense, those who steal the mind, those who feed on flowers, those who feed on fruits, those who feed on crops, and those who feed on fire offerings: may I be safe from them!

I cut the vidyā-mantras made by all of these and by all grahas. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by wandering ascetics. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.

I cut the vidyā-mantras made by ḍākas and ḍākinīs. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by the Great Lord of Beasts (Mahāpaśupati, that is, Śiva). I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by Nārāyaṇa. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by the true garuḍa together with his companions. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by Mahākāla and the host of mātṛkās. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by the bearers of human skulls (kāpālikas). I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by Jayakara, Madhukara, and Sarvārthasādhaka. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by the four sisters. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by Bhṛṅgiriṭi, Nandikeśvara, and Gaṇapati together with their companions. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by naked ascetics. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by arhats. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by those free from attachment. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.
I cut the vidyā-mantras made by Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets. I pin them down with the ritual dagger.

Blessed Lady, White Parasol arisen from the uṣṇīṣa of the Tathāgata, to you I pay homage! Please protect me, please protect me!

Whatever sentient beings there are who have minds of hatred toward me, those with violent minds, those who steal vitality, those who feed on the womb, those who drink blood, those who feed on grease, those who feed on flesh, those who feed on fat, those who feed on marrow, those who feed on newborns, those who steal life, those who feed on vomit, those who feed on filth, those who drink urine, those who drink what flows from the drains, those who feed on leftovers, those who drink spittle, those who feed on mucus, those who feed on snot, those who feed on pus, those who feed on torma, those who feed on garlands, those who feed on scents, those who feed on incense, those who steal the mind, those who feed on flowers, those who feed on fruits, those who feed on crops, those who feed on fire offerings, those with evil minds, those with minds of hatred, those with violent minds, the grahas of yakṣas, the grahas of rākṣasas, the grahas of pretas, the grahas of piśācas, the grahas of bhūtas, the grahas of kumbhāṇḍas, the grahas of pūtanas, the grahas of kaṭapūtanas, the grahas of skandas, the grahas of unmādas, the grahas of chāyās, the grahas of apasmāras, the grahas of ostārakas, the grahas of ḍākinīs, the grahas of Revatī, the grahas of Yama, the grahas of birds, the grahas that delight the mātṛkās, the grahas that cling all about, the grahas that draw out thorns, the fevers that come every day, every second day, every third day, every fourth day and every seventh day, constant fevers, fierce fevers, fevers that rise and leave one exhausted, fevers caused by bhūtas, disorders arising from wind, from bile, from phlegm, and from their combination, all fevers, and headache:

please dispel them!

Hemiplegia, loss of appetite, eye disease, nose disease, mouth disease, throat disease, heart disease, pain in the uvula, earache, toothache, heart pain, headache, pain in the neck, pain in the ribs and sides, backache, stomachache, pain in the waist, pain in the urinary tract, pain in the thighs, pain in the shins, pain in the hands, pain in the feet, pain in the limbs, and pain in the lesser limbs: please dispel them!

By this Great Repeller, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Vajra Uṣṇīṣa, within an area of up to twelve yojanas, I shall bind the spells of all those that take the lives of others: bhūtas, vetālas, ḍākinīs, fevers, sores, scabies, smallpox, leprosy, boils, abscesses, erysipelas, itching rashes, carbuncles, consumption, terror, mineral poison, compounded poison, sorcery, fire, water, calamity, enemies, harm, untimely death, the insects called tyaṃbuka and trailvaṭaka, scorpions, snakes, weasels, lions, tigers, bears, brown bears, crocodiles, and stinging bees. I shall bind their splendor. I shall bind the spells of others.

Whoever writes this Repeller, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, on birch bark, on cloth, or on tree bark, and wears it on the body or at the neck, for as long as that person lives, poison will not harm them, weapons will not harm them, fire will not harm them, water will not harm them, mineral poison will not harm them, compounded poison will not harm them, and sorcery will not harm them. They will not meet with an untimely death. All grahas, obstructors, and vināyakas will be pleased and delighted. The vajra family, eighty-four hundred thousand koṭis of myriads in number, will also protect, guard, and shelter that person, and they too will be pleased and delighted. That person will remember their past lives for eighty-four thousand great eons. Never will they become a yakṣa, a rākṣasa, a preta, a pūtana, or a kaṭapūtana. They will not become poor. They will come to possess a heap of merit equal to that of countless, immeasurable buddhas, blessed ones, as numerous as the sands of the river Ganges.

If one holds this great Repeller, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, even one who does not live the pure life will become one who lives the pure life. Even one who has not kept ascetic observances will become one who has kept them. Even the impure will become pure. Even one who has not kept the one-day vows will become one who has kept them. Even one who has not fasted will become one who has fasted. Even one who has committed the five acts of immediate retribution will be purified of that wrongdoing. Even the obscurations of former karma will be purified without remainder.

If any woman who wishes for a son holds this great Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, she who wishes for a son will obtain a son, and she will also fully obtain long life, merit, and strength. When she dies and passes from this life, she will be born in the world realm of Sukhāvatī.

Against all diseases of humans, diseases of livestock, diseases of cattle, plagues, afflictions, contagious diseases, harms, strife, and invading enemy armies, tie this great Repeller, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata, to the top of a victory banner, show it great reverence, make great offerings to it, and set it up at the gates of every city, or in villages, towns, market towns, districts, or hermitages. As soon as this great Invincible Repeller has been set up with great reverence, warfare will be pacified. Plagues, afflictions, contagious diseases, harms, strife, and invading enemy armies will be thoroughly pacified.

One should practice it as the yoga of the Buddha. The nāga kings too will send down rain at the proper times.

This completes the dhāraṇī called the Noble Lady, the Invincible One with the White Parasol, Who Emerged from the Crown of the Tathāgata.

Translator's Notes

• "Lord of Umā": the Tibetan literally says "lord of the one who turned back austerities." This is the Tibetan etymological rendering of Umā's name. The homage is to Rudra (Śiva) and his companions.
The last buddha in the list (literally "Wide-Eyed King of the Banner of Utpala Fragrance") could not be securely matched to a Sanskrit name, so the meaning is translated.
Several goddess names in the verses are rendered from their Tibetan meaning because the Sanskrit form is uncertain: "Vajra Voice," "Safflower Lady," "Jewel Lady," "Yawning Lady," "Lotus Eye," "Moonlight," "Vajra Maiden," and "Vajra Chain."
"The graha of Vāyu" renders rlung lha'i gdon; the Sanskrit parallel likely reads marut-graha.
• In the first graha list the text reads □□□□□□□□. This is evidently a slip for □□□□□□□□ (kumbhāṇḍa), as the later list and the dhāraṇī have it, and it is translated accordingly. The spirit classes skanda, apasmāra, unmāda, chāyā, ostāraka and Revatī are identified from their Tibetan renderings and from the parallel Sanskrit sequence in the dhāraṇī itself. Their Tibetan names mean roughly "one who causes withering," "one who causes forgetfulness," "one who causes madness," "shadow-oppressor," and "oppressor." The rendering □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("the true garuḍa together with his companions") is uncertain.
• The two graha names at the start, "the grahas that cling all about" and "the grahas that draw out thorns," are translated from the Tibetan wording. Their Sanskrit equivalents could not be identified with confidence. Several disease terms in the list of afflictions, for example the words rendered "abscesses," "erysipelas," and "carbuncles," are traditional Tibetan medical terms whose exact modern equivalents are uncertain. The phrase rendered "one who has not kept ascetic observances" is literally "one who has not made able." It is understood here in light of the parallel Sanskrit formula akṛtavrata, "one who has not kept vows." "Calamity" renders the Tibetan mi ngas, whose precise sense is unclear. The number of the vajra family uses khrag khrig, a very large numeral, here rendered loosely as "myriads."
