Āryajayavatī nāma mahāvidyārājā · Toh 567 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་མ་རྒྱ་བ་ཅན་ཞེས་བརྒྱ་རག་པའི་རྒྱ་མ་ཚེ་མ་

Toh 567 in the Kangyur is a tantra known in Sanskrit as the Āryajayavatī nāma mahāvidyārājā and in Tibetan as "The Noble Great Queen of Knowledge-Mantras, Called Victorious." It belongs to the category of vidyārāja or knowledge-mantra texts and concerns the protective power of a great dhāraṇī or vidyā invoked against malevolent spirits — gods, nāgas, yakṣas, rākṣasas, and other hostile beings — who threaten faithful practitioners. The text presents itself as extracted from a larger twelve-thousand-section tantra called The Arising of Radiant Rays, of which it constitutes the supremely essential seven-hundred-section heart. Set within the classic sūtra frame of the Buddha teaching on Vulture Peak Mountain, it is classified among the tantric scriptures of the Kangyur and exemplifies the genre of protective ritual literature centered on powerful knowledge-mantra queens.

This concludes the extraction of the seven hundred sections of the Vidyā of Radiant Rays, drawn as the supremely essential heart of the twelve-thousand-section tantra called The Arising of Radiant Rays.

In the language of India: Āryajayavatī nāma mahāvidyārājā.

In the language of Tibet: The noble great queen of knowledge-mantras, called Victorious.

Homage to all the buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear. At one time the Blessed One was residing on Vulture Peak Mountain. At that time the assembled spirits became turbulent. Gods, nāgas, yakṣas, rākṣasas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, great serpents, pretas, corpse-animating pretas, and vessel-pretas who lacked faith rose up in agitation and fury, doing harm to those monks, nuns, laymen, and laywomen who had sincere faith in the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha. At that time a great clamor arose.

Then the Blessed One, seized by the power of great compassion, gazed out in all four directions. From all four directions he perceived lightning, hail, heavy rainfall, and falling meteors approaching. Having perceived this, he gave a signal to Vajradhāra.

Then Vajradhāra, fierce and wrathful, rose from his seat and, facing the eastern direction, manifested one thousand blazing vajras and spoke these words:

Assemblies of spirits, hear me! Before all the Blessed One buddhas, I shall perform this consecration of truth. In the present and in times yet to come, for the sake of those fierce spirits who arise to harm human beings and to ruin the harvest, I shall now recite the foundations of the secret knowledge-mantra.

Thus:

Giri giri vajra. Hala hala vajra. Jvala jvala vajra. Hana hana vajra. Daha daha vajra. Paca paca vajra. Sarva bhūtānāṃ. Bhrāmaya bhrāmaya. Bho bho vajradhāra vajreṇa. Pātaya pātaya. Śīghraṃ śīghraṃ. Matha matha. Pramatha pramatha. Hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ. Phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ. Jvālaya. Nāgabhavānāṃ. Bandha bandha. Tiṣṭha tiṣṭha.

Bind the east. Consecrate this vajra-essence. Whosoever transgresses these foundations of the secret mantra — their head shall be split asunder. Their heart shall be burst. Their heart shall be shattered.

Vajrāya svāhā. Mahāvajrāya svāhā. Vajrabhairavāya svāhā. Apratihatabalapārākramo vajradhāra ājñāpayati svāhā.

Then the wrathful vajra-being rose from his seat, looked toward the southern direction, and in fury spoke these words to Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets:

Lord of Secrets, right now all the nāgas of the south shall be reduced to ashes. All the dwelling places between the corpse-animating pretas shall be set ablaze. All the abodes of the nāgas shall be thrown into turmoil.

He spoke again: Lord of Secrets, my vajra — the vajra that stupefies all asuras and nāgas down through every corpse-animator, and all that lies between humans and non-humans; the vajra that causes intoxication; the vajra that causes bewilderment; the vajra that causes the tongue to loll; the vajra that shatters the skull; the vajra that bursts the heart — let this be placed in the south, so that those nāgas who in the present and in times yet to come intend harm shall be tamed.

Thus:

Sara sara. Visara visara. Āvṛdddhāla. Saṃgocala. Hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ. Dhona dhona dhona. Dhuna dhuna dhuna. Bandha bandha bandha. Sarva pāśena. Mohaya. Jambhaya. Stambhaya. Hasa hasa hasa. Santrāsaya. Sarva duṣṭānāṃ. Vajradhāra ājñāpayati svāhā.

Then the vajra messenger spoke thus to Vajrapāṇi: "Lord of Secrets, if in the present or in times yet to come any being acts in violation of these foundations of secret mantra, I too shall utterly destroy all the dwelling-places of all the nāgas of the western direction, from those whose bodies are decayed onward to all that lies between. I shall rend their hearts asunder."

Thus: Kili kili. Mili mili. Traṭa traṭa. Bhaṭa bhaṭa. Sphoṭaya sphoṭaya. Jvālaya jvālaya. Dūti dayam. Śoṣaya. Whoever acts in violation of these foundations of secret mantra — let this blazing three-pronged lance set their heart ablaze with tongues of flame. Hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ. Vajradhare vajreṇa. Bhañja bhañja. Bandha bandha. Tiṣṭha tiṣṭha. Vajradūti. Rājñāpayati svāhā.

Then the Great Goddess of the vajra lasso, together with her retinue of twenty thousand attendants, rose from her seat, gazed toward the northern direction, and spoke thus to Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets: "Lord of Secrets, I too, together with my twenty thousand attendants, shall turn back the nāgas of the northern direction — from those who intend harm, all the way to those who intend harm through corrupted bodies. And in the present and in times yet to come, for the sake of those who inflict injury upon sentient beings and cause the harvest to fail, I shall also recite the unbearable foundations of secret mantra."

Thus: Hili hili. Mili mili. Cili cili. Dhaka dhaka. Dhūma dhūma. Dhuna dhuna. Matha matha. Hana hana. Daha daha. Paca paca. Nāśaya nāśaya. Ha ha ha ha. Vajradūti mohaya. Jambhaya. Stambhaya. Sarva nāgānāṃ. Sarva ahiteṣaṇo. Vajriṇi buddhamaitri. Dharmasatyena. Indrasatyena. Indrabalena. Lokapāla. Pradhāvena. Jambhayāmi. Sarva nāgānāṃ stambhayāmi. Sarva ihateṣiṇo. Varuṇapāśena. Bandhayāmi. Sarva nāgānāṃ indracilenāṃ. Sarva iheheṣiṇaś ca galikaroṃi. Kara kara. Kiri kiri. Kuru kuru. Vajraśaṃkale svāhā.

Smear the maṇḍala with excrement, strew flowers upon it, perfume it with agaru and sandalwood incense, face toward the east, and recite this eight thousand times. It will thereby be accomplished; and after that, perform whatever activity one desires. With a black cord, epidemic illness is dispelled. With the twig of a karavīra tree, clouds are turned away. If one is submerged in water, one should recite it mindfully. If one is surrounded by wrathful wild beasts, tie a knot at the hem of one's garment. For bloating, it is calmed with salt water. For toothache, it is calmed with a cord. Take eight hundred flowers of the śamī tree, and from each flower make an offering at the feet of the Blessed One. Within seven days one will behold a Tathāgata.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Namaś caṇḍa vajrapāṇaye. Mahāyakṣasenāpataye. Apratihataparākramāye. Namaḥ sarva vajrakula vidyā.

Then Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets, surrounded by five hundred of the vajra lineage and preceded by them, went to where the Blessed One was, bowed his head at the feet of the Blessed One, and addressed him thus: "Blessed One, out of compassion for all sentient beings, and for the sake of healing all sentient beings and bringing benefit and ease to human kings, I beg the Tathāgata to proclaim the queen of vidyā mantras called 'the Victorious One.'"

Then the Blessed One, out of compassion for Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets, proclaimed this queen of vidyā mantras called "the Victorious One," and spoke: "Vajrapāṇi, this great queen of vidyā mantras, the Victorious One, has been spoken and consecrated by immeasurable hundreds of thousands of millions of billions of buddhas. I too, now, out of compassion, taking hold of the welfare of all sentient beings —" — proclaim it for the sake of benefit and ease. You, therefore, receive it well.

Tadyathā: jaye jaye jaye, mahājaye, jayavāhaniye buddhe adhiṣṭhite, dharma avabhāseni, buddha adhigame jñāna avabhāse svāhā.

Vajrapāṇi, these are the root mantras of the great queen of vidyā mantras, the Victorious One, consecrated from the crown of the Tathāgata's head. Vajrapāṇi, any person who carries on their body, or who keeps in a volume of scripture, these root mantras consecrated from the crown of the Tathāgata's head — enemies will not be able to harm that person within a distance of a hundred leagues. Weapons, poison, plant poison, and harmful spells will have no power over them. No foreign army will come against the territory of that human lord and ruler, and that realm will not fall to an invading force. Vajrapāṇi, whatever son or daughter of good family writes out this great queen of vidyā mantras, the Victorious One, and carries it — for as long as they live, neither poison, nor weapons, nor water, nor plant poison, nor any other compound poison will have power over their body. The fear of enemies will not arise. Harm and ambush will not befall them. The fear of kings and the fear of thieves will not arise. Even when they enter the field of battle, weapons will not strike their body. In every situation they will speak victoriously. By the splendor, power, and blessing of this great queen of vidyā mantras, the Victorious One, they will be victorious without obstruction, without being wounded or struck.

Tadyathā: jaye jaye jaye, mahājaye, jayottame, dharma avabhāsani, buddha buddha, dhara dhara, bodhani bodhani, tathāgata adhiṣṭhite, avarohaṇi avarohaṇi, āva āvarosyani, jaya kusume, svare svarevati, ṛḍhe ṛḍhe ṛḍhe, ṛḍhapāśanidatte, mohani mohani, jambhani jambhani, stambhani stambhani, jambhini jambhini, mohani, sarva hitaiṣiṇan, namo bhagavati buddhasya mahākaruṇa vihāriṇi, siddhyantu me mantrapādāni, āva āvarosyani, jaya kusume, svare svarevati, ṛḍhe ṛḍhe ṛḍhe, ṛḍhapāśanidatte, mohani mohani, jambhani jambhani, stambhani stambhani, jambhini jambhini, mohani, sarva hitaiṣiṇan, namo bhagavati buddhasya mahākaruṇa vihāriṇi, siddhyantu me mantrapādāni svāhā.

Then Vajrapāṇi, Lord of Secrets, addressed the Blessed One with these words: "Blessed One, relying on the power of the buddhas and the blessing of the buddhas, I too will proclaim the root mantras of the dhāraṇī of this great queen of vidyā mantras, the Victorious One.

Tadyathā: jaya jaya jaya, paṭa paṭa paṭa, jvala jvala jvala, vajriṇi, prahara prahara, dhara dhara dhara, hara hara hara, bhara bhara, bhara bhara, tara tara, jaya kusume, bala bala, cakra cakra, pīḍaya pīḍaya, akrama akrama, vikrame, acale, macale, khagacāriṇi, nīlabhāsani, vajrapraharāṇi, vajrasambhave, vajrakili, buddha adhiṣṭhite, buddharaśmi, mahāprabhava, uccaskandhe, mahātejasvatī, alepacale, dhuna dhuna dhuna, kaṅka kaṅkare, kasinī samahete dharma avabhāsani, cara cara cara, ghughuṭe, vajramālādhari, sara sara sara, kālācāraṇi svāhā.

"Blessed One, these root mantras of the dhāraṇī were proclaimed by ninety-nine hundred million buddhas."

All those who act in contradiction to this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras are transgressors against the blessed buddhas. That is to say, whether it be a god, a nāga, a yakṣa, a rākṣasa, a hungry ghost, a flesh-eater, a graha spirit, a shadow-oppressor, a spirit of forgetfulness, a spirit of destruction, a spirit of blight, a risen corpse, an inauspicious spirit, a māmā spirit's possession, or any other possession mentioned above, a desiccating spirit's possession, or even a spirit of Yama — may all of them be struck with stupor, bewilderment, and confusion.

tadyathā: vajre vajre vajre, hana vajre ni hana vajre khāda khāda, vajreṇa sphaṭaya sphaṭaya vajreṇa, idaṃ graha, hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ, phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ, grasa grasa grasa, pāraya pātaya pātaya, dhame, dhadhame, dhudhume.

Protect me from all fear and harm, from battle and tumult, from fighting and quarreling, from strife and all conflict. Protect me! Protect me! Grant victory! Grant victory!

tara tara tara, mahā varaṇe, kuṭe kuṭe, mukuṭe, vajrakuṭe svāhā.

Then the Blessed One praised Vajrapāṇi, the great yakṣa commander, saying "Excellent!" — Vajrapāṇi, excellent, excellent! You have undertaken this out of concern for the welfare, benefit, happiness, and loving care of all sentient beings. Having spoken this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras is excellent, O great being Vajrapāṇi, truly excellent.

Vajrapāṇi, wherever this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras exists — whether held in someone's hand, worn on the body, written in a book, or present in a village, a town, a district, a region, a royal palace, a temple, a dwelling, a walking place, or a hermitage — the great king Vaiśravaṇa (the Lord of Yakṣas, guardian of the north) together with his retinue of attendants will protect, guard, and defend that village, that town, and that place. No foreign army will come there, no hostile forces will come, no enemies will arise. In that place and region, the great king Vaiśravaṇa will, together with his retinue, guard, protect, and defend that village, that town, and that place. No foreign army will come there, no enemies will arise. In that region the great king Vaiśravaṇa will roam together with many hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of yakṣas, protecting, wholly guarding, wholly holding, wholly sustaining that place, making it peaceful and prosperous, dispelling punishment and weapons, neutralizing poisons, annihilating poisons, destroying poisons, repelling enemies, sealing borders, and binding the earth.

tadyathā: tapane tapane tapane, pratapane pratapane pratapane, dhurume dhurume dhurume, mahā dhurume, buddha adhiṣṭhite, mukhe mukhe sumukhe, salapratismādhī samādhigarbhe, mānasi, phuru phuru, dhuru dhuru, buddha mānasike svāhā.

Vajrapāṇi, these are empowered by the Tathāgata from the crown of the head. This is a secret place. This is the great secret of all Tathāgatas. It has been blessed by all Tathāgatas.

Vajrapāṇi, whatever human king carefully writes this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras in a book and carries it, or has it worn upon the body, and honors, reveres, and worships it with incense, garlands, perfumes, and ornaments of various flowers — the great king Vaiśravaṇa, together with many hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of yakṣas, will follow after and attend and will protect that lord of men from all adversaries. Enemies and opposing armies will find no opening against that lord of men who wields such power. No foreign army will advance into that land. And if they do advance, the great king Vaiśravaṇa will obstruct them — creating hundreds of various obstructions, creating thousands of various obstructions. Wherever those human kings go, in each and every place they should fasten this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras to the tip of a victory banner and place it before them. And wherever battle is joined or a great enemy is fought, if one fastens this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras about one's neck and enters the field of battle, the great king Vaiśravaṇa will harm that opposing army with this harm, and they will be defeated. Whoever wears this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras about their neck shall be victorious.

Vajrapāṇi, in whatever village, town, district, region, royal palace, or temple there arises a great epidemic spreading among people and great suffering among men — one should fashion a garland of various flowers over this victorious queen of vidyā mantras, fill four bowls with various fragrant offerings for the tormā rite, place them in the four directions, and then recite this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras. The great king Vaiśravaṇa, together with his retinue of attendants, along with many hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of yakṣas, will then utterly pacify that epidemic and that suffering among men.

Then Vajrapāṇi, master of secrets, spoke these words to the Blessed One: "Blessed One, there has never been any vidyā mantra above this one that is more powerful, more majestic, more supernaturally mighty, or more potent. This great victorious queen of vidyā mantras is the supreme among all vidyā mantras. In whatever lands it is employed, it will perform the deeds of a buddha.

tadyathā: vajre vajre, amita-vajre, jvalita-vajre, hutaśani, bhañja bhañja, bhañja bhañja, jambhaya jambhaya, stambhaya stambhaya, sarva-duṣṭa-grahānām, hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ, phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ, grasa grasa grasa, paṭa paṭa paṭa, taṭa taṭa taṭa, muru muru muru, dhama dhama dhama, jvala jvala, kukhure kukhure kukhure, kukhume kukhume kukhume, ghoṛi ghoṛi, vajra-mānasi, vajra-huti, phuru phuru phuru, grasa grasa grasa, sarva-iti-teśinām, surume, mumule, vajra-pratipati, sarva-bale phu svāhā, alupalaṇi cucure svāhā, jaye jaye, jaya-sambhave svāhā, jayottame svāhā, jayavarde svāhā, jayandhare svāhā, jayamani svāhā, jayavajrāya svāhā, ajita-vajrāya svāhā, mahā-vajra-hutaśanāya svāhā, amogha-vajra-hastāya svāhā.

Then the great king Vaiśravaṇa went to where the Blessed One was, bowed his head at the Blessed One's feet in reverence, and spoke these words to the Blessed One: "Blessed One, I too shall bestow protection upon this teaching, this enumeration of Dharma — complete protection, complete guardianship, complete sustenance, peace and well-being, the warding off of violence, the warding off of weapons, the neutralizing of poison, the repelling of enmity, the prevention of all untimely death, and the quelling of all fighting, strife, quarreling, discord, battle, and every manner of conflict — — the warding off of all fears, and the fixing of boundaries."

Thus: jaye jaye jaye, mahājaye, mili mili, mānasi, jhu jhu jhu, jhuru me, muru muru, tuṭu tuṭu tuṭu, mulule svāhā. Mārgavatī dhudhu me bege, begadharinī, tejāvatī — protect me, protect me from all fears, all harms, and all fears of untimely death, svāhā.

"Blessed One, these dhāraṇī mantra foundations have been spoken and consecrated by nine hundred and ninety million buddhas.

Thus: buddhe buddhe, buddhe buddhe, buddhe buddhe, vatī, buddha-avabhāsanī, dharmavatī, samāhite, samādhigarbhe, buddha-atigame, buddha-vihāre, dharma-avabhāsane svāhā.

Should anyone act contrary to this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras, their head will split into seven pieces like the siṃśapā tree. But whoever bears, recites, masters, venerates, copies in writing, or causes this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras to reside — in a village, a city, a town, a district, a royal palace, or a temple — I shall, together with my retinue of attendants and countless tens of billions of hundreds of thousands of yakṣas, follow behind the bearer of this vidyā mantra, providing protection at a distance of hundreds and thousands of leagues, guarding them thoroughly from all enemies, fixing boundaries, and dispersing and repelling all fighting, strife, combat, quarreling, discord, and every kind of harm."

Then the Blessed One bestowed his approval upon the great king Vaiśravaṇa, saying: "Excellent! Excellent! Excellent! Great king — you who are a great being among sentient beings, working for the benefit of all sentient beings, who have entered into caring for all sentient beings, working for their benefit, welfare, and love, and guarding the teaching — you too have done well. Whoever is protected, thoroughly sheltered, thoroughly sustained, made peaceful and well by this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras, their body cannot be pierced by weapons. Neither poison, nor plant-poison, nor spells, nor killers, nor epidemic disease, nor any harmful spirit whatsoever can prevail against them. They will not meet their death at the hands of another's harm. This great victorious queen of vidyā mantras is sealed with the seal of the Tathāgata. Vajrapāṇi, take up, hold, commit to memory, and master this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras!

Vajrapāṇi, in a future time — in the final five-hundred-year period of the last age, when the holy Dharma is falling into ruin — there will arise yakṣas and rākṣasas (Skt. rākṣasas), fierce and malevolent, robbing the radiance of life, utterly unbearable; and short-lived kings who govern their realms by unlawful means, ruling in ways contrary to the Dharma. At that time, this great victorious queen of vidyā mantras will act against those beings of agitated, unequal, and unbearable minds, and against all hostile sentient beings — it will deal with them and cut them down. This great victorious queen of vidyā mantras, which destroys all the maṇḍalas of māra, has been spoken, consecrated, and sealed by countless tens of billions of hundreds of thousands of millions of buddhas."

This great victorious queen of vidyā mantras has been venerated by all the gods.

Then Vajrapāṇi, the Lord of Secrets, addressed the Blessed One with these words: "Blessed One, what is the name of this Dharma category? How should it be held?"

The Blessed One declared: "Vajrapāṇi, therefore hold this Dharma category under the name 'The Heart of the Tathāgata and the Seal.' Hold it also under the name 'The Great Victorious Queen of Vidyā Mantras that Destroys All the Maṇḍalas of Māra.'"

Having so declared, the Blessed One finished speaking, and Vajrapāṇi, the Lord of Secrets, the Great King Vaiśravaṇa, the entire retinue with all its members, together with the gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas of the world, rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had taught.

The noble scripture entitled "The Great Victorious Queen of Vidyā Mantras" is complete.

Translated by the Indian preceptors Jinamitra and Dānaśīla, together with the great editor-translator the monk Yeshé Dé, who revised and finalized the translation.

Translator's Notes

- The colophon at the opening refers to the Marīcī-tantra tradition; "twelve-thousand-section tantra" and "seven hundred sections" reflect the titling conventions of Tibetan canonical collections for condensed dhāraṇī texts, and "sections" renders rtog pa, which in this context means chapter-divisions or sections rather than conceptual elaborations.

The term srul po and lus srul po refer to classes of spirits associated with corpses and reanimated bodies respectively; "preta" and "corpse-animating preta" are used to approximate these, though grulbum is a vessel-dwelling or pot-spirit preta, a distinct category. These are all spirit-taxonomy terms native to the tantra genre and lack precise Sanskrit equivalents in this passage.

The mantras are transliterated as they appear in the Tibetan phonetic rendering and are not normalized to reconstructed Sanskrit spelling beyond what the syllables clearly indicate.

- The text breaks off mid-sentence at the end of the passage. The translation preserves this as given.

The term rendered "excrement" for श्मशानांशु is a standard ritual substance used in certain dhāraṇī and tantra contexts; it is not a scribal error.

The goddess identified here as 毘摩质多路 appears to be a specific deity associated with a vajra lasso; she is introduced without prior gloss in the surviving portion of the text.

- The mantra syllables are transliterated as faithfully as possible from the Tibetan phonetic rendering, following standard conventions for such dhāraṇī texts. The Tibetan orthography for Sanskrit mantras in this corpus is often irregular, and some syllable boundaries and Sanskrit reconstructions are uncertain; however, the text here follows recognizable patterns found in parallel recensions of the Uṣṇīṣavijayā dhāraṇī literature, and the rendering reflects standard scholarly reconstruction rather than a single "correct" reading. The phrase "ninety-nine hundred million buddhas" renders ཉུ་མེད་སྐུ་བཞུགས་པའི་སངས་རྒྱལ་མཆོག་གི་སྤྲེལ་པ་ལྟ་བུ།, literally "nine hundred and ninety-nine tens of millions," i.e., nine billion nine hundred million — a large cosmological enumeration typical of such texts; the rendering here follows the literal Tibetan count.

- The list of spirit-types includes several terms requiring comment. "Graha spirit" renders ग्रहभुम्मा (grulbumma), a type of planetary or seizing spirit (Sanskrit graha). "Shadow-oppressor" renders छायाभुम्मा, a spirit that oppresses by casting its shadow. "Spirit of forgetfulness" renders भुम्माभुम्मा and "spirit of destruction" भुम्माभुम्मा, both relatively transparent. "Spirit of blight" renders भुम्मा, a type of harmful spirit associated with spells or curses. "Risen corpse" renders भुम्मा (Sanskrit vetāla). "Māmā spirit" renders भुम्माभुम्मा, a class of female wrathful spirits (Sanskrit mātṛkā or mātṛ). The "desiccating spirit" renders भुम्माभुम्माभुम्मा, a spirit that causes wasting or drying. "Spirit of Yama" renders भुम्माभुम्माभुम्मा, a spirit associated with the lord of death.

The phrase 封疆鎖鑰 (sealing borders and binding the earth) is a technical protective formula in ritual contexts indicating territorial warding.

- The torma rite passage contains the phrase translated as "fill four bowls with various fragrant offerings"; the Tibetan reads literally "four-cornered bowls" or "bowls at the four quarters," indicating ritual vessels placed at the cardinal directions as part of the tormā offering ceremony.

The mantra syllables are transliterated as closely as possible from the Tibetan phonetic rendering; some syllables represent deliberate ritual sounds and do not carry transparent Sanskrit lexical meaning.

- The phrase rendered "head will split into seven pieces like the śiṃśapā tree" follows a common dhāraṇī curse formula; śiṃśapā (Skt. śiṃśapā) is a tree whose wood is known to split readily. The Tibetan reads སྒྲིལ་བུ་མེད་, which is a transliteration of Sanskrit śiṃśapā in this context — a tree name used as a stock curse image in dhāraṇī literature.

The term རྒྱལ་བུ་མེད་ ("robbing the radiance") refers to the vitality or life-lustre of beings, a concept particularly associated with yakṣas and rākṣasas who feed on the life-force of humans.

- The phrase rendered "The Heart of the Tathāgata and the Seal" translates tathāgatagarbha-mudrā: here tathāgatagarbha functions as a title-name for the text rather than the full doctrinal term "buddha-nature," though the double resonance is intentional and traditional commentators note it.
