Toh 568 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Ārya Jayavatī Nāma Dhāraṇī and in Tibetan as Pakpa Gyalwa Chen Zhejawa'i Zung, meaning "The Noble Dhāraṇī Called 'She Who Possesses Victory.'" It belongs to the class of dhāraṇī and vidyā mantra literature, presenting a sacred incantation taught by the Buddha for the benefit, welfare, and happiness of all sentient beings and for the protection of worldly rulers. The text is set on Vulture Peak Mountain near Rājagṛha, where Vajrapāṇi, the great lord of the yakṣa host, approaches the Buddha and requests the teaching of this vidyā mantra queen known as Jayavatī. As a dhāraṇī sūtra, it sits within the broader collection of such protective and meritorious scripture texts preserved in the Kangyur.

In the language of India: Ārya Jayavatī Nāma Dhāraṇī. In the language of Tibet: The Noble Dhāraṇī Called "She Who Possesses Victory."

Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear. At one time the Blessed One was dwelling together with a great Saṅgha of monks — fully a thousand monks — on Vulture Peak Mountain near Rājagṛha. Then Vajrapāṇi, the great lord of the yakṣa host, went to where the Blessed One was and, having arrived, prostrated with his head at the feet of the Blessed One and addressed him with these words:

"For the benefit, welfare, and happiness of all sentient beings, and for the welfare of human kings, may the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly and completely awakened buddha, please teach this great queen of vidyā mantras called Jayavatī."

Then the Blessed One, looking with affection upon Vajrapāṇi, the great lord of the yakṣa host, proclaimed the great queen of vidyā mantras called Jayavatī:

"Vajrapāṇi, this queen of vidyā mantras called Jayavatī — spoken by many tens of millions of buddhas, blessed by them, and proclaimed for the benefit, happiness, and loving care of all sentient beings — you, together with me, receive this as I now expound it as a deity:

Tadyathā: Jaye jaye mahājayavatīye buddhādhiṣṭhitiye dharma-avabhāsaṇi buddhadhigamajñānāvabhāse svāhā.

Vajrapāṇi, these are the root mantra syllables of the secret mantra, consecrated upon the crown by the Tathāgata. Vajrapāṇi, whoever wears upon their body or writes in a book these words — consecrated upon the crown by the Tathāgata — for that person, no hostile harm will arise within a range of a thousand leagues from their body. Weapons, poison, and snake venom cannot affect them. In the realm of that king, no harm from adversaries will arise. Enemies will not be able to cause harm to that region by their power. Vajrapāṇi, whatever son of good family or daughter of good family writes this queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, in letters and bears it, for as long as they live, weapons, poison, water, plague, and other poisons compounded by others will not be able to harm their body. Fear of enemies will not arise for them, nor harm, nor ambush. Fear of kings will not arise. Fear of thieves will not arise. Even if they enter into the midst of battle, weapons will not strike their body. Everywhere that person will speak victoriously. Without injury and without having uttered a word of slander, through the power, majesty, strength, and blessing of this queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, they will be victorious.

Tadyathā: Jaye jaye jayottame dharma-avabhāsaṇi buddha buddha dhara dhara dhara dhara bobhani bodhani bodhani tathāgata adhiṣṭhiti avarohaṇi arobhyaṇi jayakusume svare saravatī dṛḍhe dṛḍhe dadādṛḍhe pāśaribaddhe ohani mohani jambhani stambhani stambhita sarva ahitiṣṭhinām namo bhagavati buddhasya mahākaruṇām vihāriṇi siddhyantu mantrapadā svāhā."

Then Vajrapāṇi, the lord of secrets, spoke to the Blessed One thus: "Blessed One, by the power of the buddhas and by the blessing of the buddhas, I shall now recite the root mantra syllables of the dhāraṇī mantra of this queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī:

Tadyathā: Jaya jaya jaya paṭa paṭa paṭa jvala jvala jvala vajraprahara prahara prahara."

dhara dhara dhara. hara hara hara. bhara bhara bhara. jayakusume. bala bala. cakra cakra. pīḍaya pīḍaya. akrama. akrama. vikrame. vikrame. acale. macale. khagacāriṇī. nīlavatī. vajrapraharaṇi. vajrasambhave. vajrakāye. buddha adhiṣṭhite. buddha raśmi mahāprabhe. uccaskandhe mahātejasvatī. macale. macale. dhuna dhuna dhuna. kakamre. kāsini. samāhite. dharma avabhāsaṇi. cara cara. ghughuḍe. vajramālādhari. sara sara. kala kala variṇī svāhā.

Blessed One, these root mantra syllables were proclaimed by nine hundred and ninety-nine million buddhas. Whoever would transgress this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, shall have deceived those blessed buddhas. That is to say, any god, nāga, yakṣa, rākṣasa, hungry ghost, flesh-eater, spirit of forgetfulness, spirit of killing, sorcery-spirit, animated corpse, inauspicious spirit, mātṛkā-spirit, gongma-spirit, desiccating spirit, the spirit of desiccation, or gandharva-spirit — all of these are rendered stupefied and bewildered.

Tadyathā: vajre vajre vajre. hana vajreni hana vajre. khāda khāda vajreṇa. sphaṭaya. sphaṭaya. vajreṇa. idaṃ gṛhāṇa. hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ. phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ. grasa grasa grasa. pātaya. pātaya. pātaya. dhara dhara dhara.

Protect me and all sentient beings from every fear and every harm, from conflict, strife, dispute, and all disturbance. jayakāri. jayaṃ kuru. tara tara tara. mahātaraṇe. kuṭe kuṭe kuṭe. vajrakuṭe svāhā.

Then the Blessed One said "Excellent!" to Vajrapāṇi, the great chief of the yakṣas, the lord of secrets: "Excellent! Excellent, Vajrapāṇi! You are a great being, Vajrapāṇi, and it is excellent that you have entered upon this path for the benefit, the happiness, and the welfare of sentient beings. Vajrapāṇi, into whose hands does this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, go — whether it be worn upon the body, written in a book, and whether it comes to reside in a village, a town, a district, a temple, a dwelling, or a place of walking — in that very place the great king Vaiśravaṇa, together with his retinue of attendants, will protect that village, that town, or that district. No harm will come to that place from the armies of foreign enemies. No epidemic will arise in that region. Enemies, however, will arise — yet the great king Vaiśravaṇa, attended by tens of billions of hundreds of thousands of yakṣas following in his wake, will protect that place, will fully guard it, will fully uphold it, will bring it peace and well-being, will avert punishments, will avert weapons, will neutralize poisons, will repel enemies, will cut off border attacks, and will cut off territorial incursions.

Tadyathā: tapani tapani. pratapani. dhurume. dhurume. buddha adhiṣṭhite. mukhe. mukhe. sumukhe. sumukhe. prala pralate. samādhite. samādhigarbhe. samādhigarbhe. mānasi. phuru phuru phuru dhuru. buddha mānasike svāhā.

Vajrapāṇi, these are the words of the empowerment bestowed from the crown of the Tathāgata. This is the secret place. This is the secret of all Tathāgatas. This is what all Tathāgatas have blessed.

Vajrapāṇi, whatever human king has this queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, well written in a book and carries it, or wears it upon his body — and who further honors it, esteems it highly, has it depicted in images, and makes offerings to it with abundant incense, garlands, unguents, and various flowers — that human king will have the great king Vaiśravaṇa following in his wake, together with the yakṣas in the tens of millions, hundreds of thousands of multitudes, they will stand guard over that human king. No adversary, no enemy, and no host of foreign armies will find any opening against that human king. If a force should invade that land by power, or if obstructors should enter, the great king Vaiśravaṇa will cause hundreds of various obstructors, thousands of various obstructors, to be vanquished.

Wherever that human king travels, in each and every place, let this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, be fastened to the top of a victory banner and carried before him. Wherever one enters into battle or contends with a great enemy, let this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, be fastened about the neck, and upon entering battle, the great king Vaiśravaṇa will cause that host of enemy armies to be defeated. That king will be victorious. Whoever has this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, fastened about their neck will be victorious.

Vajrapāṇi, in whatever village, city, town, district, or royal palace and its environs, if various contagious diseases and great calamities and misfortunes among people should arise — in such a place, let this great queen of vidyā mantras, Jayavatī, be recited, along with various flowers, ritual procedures, offering cakes, and vessels filled with various drinks, set out in all four directions. At that time, the great king Vaiśravaṇa, together with his retinue of attendants and with tens of millions, hundreds of thousands of multitudes of yakṣas, will completely pacify those contagious diseases and those calamities among people.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of secrets, spoke these words to the Blessed One: "Blessed One, there is nothing whatsoever superior to this — no vidyā mantra more powerful, more glorious, more magically potent, or mightier than this. This great queen of all vidyā mantras, the supreme among all vidyā mantras, Jayavatī — in whatever land and wherever it comes to be employed, there and in those very places the deeds of a buddha will be performed."

Thus it is: Vajre vajre vajre, amṛtavajre, jvalitavajre, hutāśani, bhañja bhañja bhañja bhañja, jambha, stambhaya, sarvagrāhāṇām, hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ, phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ, grasa grasa grasa, vaṭa paṭa paṭa, taṭa taṭa taṭa, muru muru muru, dhama dhama dhama, jvala jvala jvala, khukhu me khukhu me, ghorī ghorī ghorī, vajramānasi, vajrahuti, hutiru, phuru phuru, grasa grasa, sarvāhitiṣiṇām, nāburuṇi, mumule, vajrabradīpāni, cimale phu svāhā, āyuhpālani cucure svāhā, jaye jaye, jayasambhave svāhā, jayottame svāhā, jayavaredhe svāhā, jayandhare svāhā, jayamānasi svāhā, jayavajra svāhā, ajitavajrāya svāhā, mahāvajrahutāśanāya svāhā, amoghavajrahasta svāhā.

Then the great king Vaiśravaṇa went to where the Blessed One was, arrived there, prostrated with his head at the feet of the Blessed One, and spoke these words to the Blessed One: "Blessed One, I too will bestow protection upon this enumeration of Dharma teachings — complete shelter and complete holding, warding off injury, warding off weapons, destroying poison, repelling enemies, preventing untimely death, and repelling all fighting, quarreling, dispute, dissension, warfare, bloodshed, and every fear. I will seal the boundaries.

Thus it is: Jaye jaye jaye, mahājaye, milimānasi, jhe jhe jhe, muru muru, tuṭu tuṭu, mumule, mārgavati — dhu dhu me, vegavegadhāriṇī, tejasvatī — guard, guard me and all sentient beings from every fear, from every harm, and from all untimely death, svāhā.

Blessed One, these root mantras of the dhāraṇī were spoken and blessed by nine hundred and ninety million buddhas. Thus it is: buddhe buddhe, buddhe buddhe, buddhāvatī, buddha-avabhāsanī, dharmāvatī, samāhite, samādhigarbhe buddha-avabhāsanī, buddhāparipūri, dharma-avabhāsanī, svāhā.

Whoever transgresses this victorious great queen of mantras, Sulalā, shall be split into seven pieces like the fruit of the śirīṣa tree.

Whoever carries, reads, venerates, recites, writes out, or inscribes in a book this victorious great queen of mantras — the Great Victorious One — and places it in a village, a city, a market town, a province, a royal palace and its grounds, or a temple: I, together with my retinue of attendants, accompanied by many hundreds of thousands of millions of yakṣas, shall follow in that mantra-holder's footsteps and protect them. I shall seal the boundaries for a distance of a hundred thousand leagues. I shall cause all counter-attackers, enemies, combatants, fighters, quarrelers, brawlers, and every kind of aggressor to be utterly absent and repelled.

Then the Blessed One praised the great king Vaiśravaṇa with the words "Excellent!" — "Excellent, great king! Great being, it is excellent that you have undertaken this for the benefit of all the world, out of tenderness toward all sentient beings, for their happiness, and for the protection of the Dharma. Whoever is completely sheltered, completely held, and completely sustained by this victorious great queen of mantras — no weapon, poison, sorcery, killer, epidemic, or any harm shall be able to touch that person's body. This victorious great queen of mantras bears the seal of the Tathāgata."

"Vajrapāṇi, take hold of this victorious great queen of mantras, embrace it, and make it fully complete."

"Vajrapāṇi, in a future time — in the final period of five hundred years, when the sacred Dharma is in utter decline — fierce sentient beings will arise, unbearable and color-stealing yakṣas and rākṣasas, and kings who act contrary to Dharma. Those who are short-lived and govern their realm contrary to Dharma — at that time this victorious great queen of mantras will serve the purpose of all those beings of unsteady and unbearable minds, and all those filled with hatred and fierce hatred; it shall utterly cut them down. This victorious great queen of mantras, which destroys every maṇḍala of māra, has been spoken and blessed and sealed by many hundreds of thousands of millions of buddhas. This victorious great queen of mantras has been revered by all the gods."

Then Vajrapāṇi, the Lord of Secrets, addressed the Blessed One thus: "Blessed One, what is the name of this enumeration of Dharma teachings? How should I hold it?"

The Blessed One declared: "Vajrapāṇi, therefore hold it as the Tathāgata-essence and Mudrā. Hold it also as the Victorious Destroyer of Every Māra-Maṇḍala."

When the Blessed One had spoken these words, Vajrapāṇi, the Lord of Secrets, and the Great King Vaiśravaṇa, along with the gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas, the entire world rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had declared.

This concludes the noble dhāraṇī called the Victorious One.

Translator's Notes

- The phrase rendered "you, together with me, receive this as I now expound it as a deity" reflects the Tibetan "ཁོས་བཤད་པའི་ཆོས་ཀྱི་རྒྱུ་གཞི་ལྟར་མཐོང་།" which is syntactically ambiguous and possibly corrupt; a literal reading yields something like "receive this which I, too, expound as a god" or "receive this which I expound as both myself and as a deity." The translation adopts the most coherent available reading.

- The name "Sulālā" in the curse formula is a dhāraṇī-deity name embedded in the mantra string; it is left as a proper name consistent with the preceding passage.
