Toh 572 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in English as "The Queen of Mantras Called the Noble Blessed Lady Aṅgulī, Accomplished by Reading," corresponding to the Sanskrit Siddhapaṭita Bhagavatī Āryāṅgulī-nāma-vidyārājñī and the Tibetan Bkag pas grub pa bcom ldan 'das ma 'phags ma sor mo can zhes bya ba rig pa'i rgyal mo. It belongs to the vidyārājñī genre — a class of powerful mantra texts associated with a female sovereign of spells — and is concerned with the recitation of protective mantras capable of eliminating the venom of nāgas, serpents, and a wide range of malevolent spirits and dangerous creatures. The text is presented as a teaching delivered by the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara to an assembly dwelling on Gandhamādana mountain, framing its mantras as both spiritually authoritative and practically efficacious for protection and healing. As a dhāraṇī scripture, it sits within the broader collection of ritual and incantation texts preserved in the Kangyur.

In the Indian language: Siddhapaṭita Bhagavatī Āryāṅgulī-nāma-vidyārājñī. In the Tibetan language: The Queen of Mantras Called the Noble Blessed Lady Aṅgulī, Accomplished by Reading.

Homage to the Buddha. Homage to the Dharma. Homage to the Saṅgha.

Thus, while the monks were dwelling on Gandhamādana mountain, noble Avalokiteśvara was also present there, and he spoke to me, saying: "Child, listen to these mantra words. They eliminate the venom of the lords of nāgas. They eliminate the venom of serpents. They eliminate the venom of attendant spirits, rākṣasas (demon flesh-eaters), elemental spirits, flesh-eaters, great powerful beings, scorpions, minute creatures, male spirits of disease, female spirits of disease, sea monsters, tigers, horned scorpions, and fang-bearing creatures. Thus, when the great and potent mantra Aṅgulī is properly heard, it is the sovereign of mantras, utterly devouring the venom of harmful beings. Whosoever, possessing this mantra, knows it, shall completely eliminate even the venom of the gods."

Oṃ namo bhagavatī ārya aṅgulī. tadyathā: Oṃ — whether nāga or nāginī, serpent or she-serpent, yakṣa or yakṣiṇī, elemental spirit male or elemental spirit female, male spirit of disease or female spirit of disease, whether seized by venom or not yet seized — pha pha pha, hare hare hare, reza re, beśabe, nāgare, sarva re re, hara hara, mara mara, dhara dhara, vidhara vidhara, mara mara, māraya māraya, maṭa maṭa, moṭaya moṭaya, śīghraṃ śīghraṃ, laghu laghu, ānaya ānaya, dhara dhara, bandha bandha bandha, ghūrṇa ghūrṇa, ghūrṇapaya ghūrṇapaya. Eliminate the venom of all nāgas dwelling within eighty thousand leagues. Bind all nāgas. Strike them. Release them. Oṃ hulu hulu, hala hala, hala viṣaṃ.

The Blessed Lady, the Queen of Accomplishment, Aṅgulī, then proclaimed: Takke, ṭakke, ṭakkeni, ṭakkeni, śira śira, candrakesarohinī — she who removes all obstacles, she of a thousand deeds. Blessed Lady, accomplished Aṅgulī, tathā vigata, worshipped by the assembly of thirty nāginīs, jaya jaya siddha, she who grants victory, she who wears a garland of human skulls — hūṃ kṣa — instantly, immediately, in a single moment, for the duration of a day, she dispels poison. She destroys the power of asuras, devatīs, and dānavas. She who crushes obstacles. Mother of the gods, to you I pay homage and offer praise. Svāhā.

This potent mantra must not be recited in front of a serpent, for it will cause death, and the head will split and shatter into a hundred pieces. If a great serpent hears this most potent mantra, everything is incinerated.

Oṃ kili kili, mahākili, kālarūpiṇī — reverse all obstacles, defeat the near enemy, defeat the far enemy. Svāhā.

This is the Aṅgulī mantra accomplished by reading, together with its heart essence.

tadyathā: Oṃ dhune dhune, dhuni dhuni, satya, tāṭṭa hāsini dhu dhuni, bandha bandha. Proclaimed by the great vajra dhāraṇīs. It causes those who bear poison to cast it away. Jaya jaya, muñja muñja, muñja muñja. Release! It has the swift force of lightning and wind — a great zombie (vetāla), issuing from the mouth of the Blessed One Śākyamuni.

This is the Blessed Lady, the Noble —

Translator's Notes

- The text breaks off mid-sentence at the end of the passage, ending with the title formula "Blessed Lady, Noble" without completing it. This appears to be a textual truncation in the

The term translated as "zombie" or "great zombie" renders ro langs chen mo, literally "great risen corpse," which in the Indic tradition corresponds to vetāla, a reanimated corpse or powerful spirit entity. The doctrinal-ritual context here is its invocation as a force with the speed of lightning and wind, which is unusual; some commentators read this as a description of the mantra's power rather than an entity. This uncertainty is noted here rather than flagged in the body.

The expression pha mam pha rol pham par mdzod cig is rendered as "defeat the near enemy, defeat the far enemy" following the internal grammatical logic of pha (near/own side) versus pha rol (far/other side), both being defeated. This is a standard protective formula structure.

The identification of Gandhamādana (ri dri rgyal, literally "king of fragrant mountains") follows standard Buddhist cosmographic usage.
