Toh 682 in the Kangyur is a Mahāyāna sūtra known in Sanskrit as the Āryāmoghapāśahrdaya and in Tibetan as the Phags pa don yod zhags pa'i snying po, rendered in English as "The Heart of the Noble Unerring Lasso." The text belongs to the broader Amoghapāśa cycle, a corpus of scriptures centered on the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara and the powerful noose-wielding form of this deity whose compassionate activity is said to be unerring in liberating beings from suffering. The sūtra opens with the Buddha residing on Potala Mountain, the celestial abode of Avalokiteśvara, surrounded by an immense assembly of monks, bodhisattvas, and divine beings, setting the stage for teachings concerned with devotion, compassion, and the salvific power associated with Amoghapāśa. As a Mahāyāna sūtra, it is classed among the works of the Kangyur's sūtra section and reflects a rich tradition of tantric-adjacent devotional literature that blends narrative splendor with the aspiration to universal liberation.

In the language of India: Āryāmoghapāśahrdayanāmamahāyānasūtra. In the Tibetan language: The Mahāyāna Sūtra Called "The Heart of the Noble Unerring Lasso."

Homage to the noble Unerring Lasso. Homage to the Buddha. Homage to Great Compassion.

Thus did I hear. At one time the Blessed One was dwelling together with a great Saṅgha of eighteen thousand monks, with ninety-nine koṭis of hundreds of thousands of bodhisattvas, and with many thousands of sons of the gods of the pure realms — all surrounding and facing him — at the summit of the Potala Mountain, the abode of the noble Avalokiteśvara, which was perfectly adorned with groves of many and various precious trees: the Tamāla, the Campaka, the Aśoka, the Atimukta, and many others. To them, with Īśvara and Maheśvara and the sons of the gods of the Brahma realms at the fore, he taught the Dharma.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble Avalokiteśvara rose from his seat, arranged his outer robe over one shoulder, placed his right knee upon the ground, and, joining his palms toward the Blessed One and bowing in homage with a smile upon his face, addressed the Blessed One in these words.

Blessed One, I possess something called the Heart of the Unerring Lasso. Ninety-one eons ago, in the world-system called Viśvadṛk, I received it from the Blessed One called Lokeśvararāja, the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly and completely awakened Buddha. And I also gathered there many hundreds of thousands of sons of the gods of the pure realms, with Īśvara and Maheśvara at their fore. I fully attained one thousand and ten supreme meditative absorptions (samādhi), the chief wisdom absorptions of the Unerring Lasso, oriented toward unsurpassed, perfect, and complete awakening.

Furthermore, whenever the Blessed One is known to wander in a single region of the earth, that region, at that time, will be guarded, protected, and sheltered by twelve thousand sons of the gods, with Īśvara, Maheśvara, and those of the Brahma realms at their fore. Whatever place this Heart of the Unerring Lasso is recited, Blessed One, that single region of the earth will become a stūpa. And those sentient beings who hear the Heart of the Unerring Lasso will come to make offering to many buddhas — koṭis upon hundreds of thousands of koṭis of buddhas.

Then, Blessed One, those bodhisattvas who hear here the Heart of the Unerring Lasso — through that hearing I will cause them to generate wholesome roots.

As for any person, Blessed One, who commits evil faults, who engages fully in all evil phenomena, who slanders noble ones, who disparages the sacred Dharma, who inclines toward the Avīci hell, who reviles all buddhas and bodhisattvas and noble śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas — if such a person comes to feel remorse and, going forward, cuts off and restrains themselves, then if during a single day of fasting they recite this very text once, the karma accumulated in this life will be completely purified and exhausted, and will be reversed.

Fever of one day, or of two days, or of three days, or of four days; blood flowing from the bowels on account of it; swelling; pain in the hands; pain in the feet; headache; affliction by the halāhala poison; leprosy; elephantiasis; small pustules; goiter; tumors; small boils; scabies; perineal rupture; blisters; conditions causing forgetfulness; widespread pain; life-threatening illness —

binding, or beating, or threatening, or speaking harshly — in short, any physical illness caused by the Blessed One, or mental suffering, or the seeing of bad dreams: by this, that karma will be completely purified and exhausted. Those whose minds were already pure from before, who have faith and heightened devotion, will become thoroughly cleansed.

Even if, O Blessed One, the fourfold assembly and the four castes perform worship before me with however much deceit and falsehood — whoever here listens to, retains in mind, holds fast to, reads, copies, has copied, fully masters, or causes other sentient beings to listen to this very essence of the Meaningful Lasso, or even recites it into the ear of one belonging to the animal realm — those who reflect upon the words of this mantra, without abandoning it, formless, without conceptual thought, without genuine arising, without prolonged arising, without deceit, without stain, with undistracted equanimity of mind — by this practice which is free of the five aggregates, let one call the buddhas to mind. To those persons, the buddhas of the ten directions, numbering in the hundreds and thousands, will appear face to face. Through your recitation, sins will be confessed and purified. Write it out in however many scrolls as desired and install it in one's home.

O Blessed One, what need is there of many things? Listening out of mutual competition, or out of fear of a lord or master, or following along after others, or listening for the sake of disparaging others — this should be known by those skilled in discernment as a blessing of the noble Avalokiteśvara. The sound of it will ring in their ears.

O Blessed One, consider this: when some person rubs together and applies to themselves sandalwood, camphor, saffron, or musk — whether kneaded or ground — smearing it upon their body, not even a hundredfold application of sandalwood, camphor, saffron, or musk would transfer its fragrance in the same way. And yet the sweet fragrance is precisely that.

O Blessed One, in just the same way, with respect to this essence of the Meaningful Lasso of mine as well — those who revile and disparage it, and those who, as before, offer however much deceit and falsehood before me — even they, O Blessed One, those beings of fierce and savage character, will have roots of virtue generated. It is said that they hold it with difficulty out of desire, and this carries over into future lives as well. In whatever existence and wherever they are born, they will be inseparable from the fragrance of moral discipline, meditative absorption, wisdom, and the accumulation of merit. It makes one into the sweet fragrance of moral discipline itself.

Furthermore, O Blessed One, if a son or daughter of good family, or a monk, or a nun, or a layman, or a laywoman, or any other person, having specially undertaken this essence of the Meaningful Lasso, observes fasting on the eighth day of the bright fortnight and recites this essence of the Meaningful Lasso in full seven times without mispronouncing the syllables — for that person, O Blessed One, one should enumerate twenty distinct benefits apparent in this very life. What are the twenty? Illness will not arise in that person's body; and even illness that has arisen through the power of karma will quickly subside. The body will become smooth, pleasing, and bright. One will become pleasing to many people. Sense faculties that had become dull will be restored, and wealth will be found. Whatever wealth one has, thieves will not be able to carry it away. It will not be burned by fire. It will not be swept away by water. Even a king's will cannot seize it. That person's karmic field will be greatly expanded. No danger from water will arise for that person. No danger from wind or from rain will arise.

When the essence of the Unfailing Noose (dhāraṇī) has been recited seven times over water or ashes, and that water or ash is bound to the directions, the intermediate directions, above and below, all harm nearby will be pacified. No force that drains vitality will be able to steal one's vitality. All sentient beings will become joyful. Any danger arising from enemies will quickly be pacified. One will not become an object of fear to people. No danger from epidemic disease will arise. No danger from ḍākinīs will arise. No violent afflictions will arise. One will not meet death by fire, water, or weapons. The gods will continually protect, guard, and shelter one. In whatever realm one is born, one will never be parted from loving-kindness, compassion, joy, and equanimity. These twenty benefits are to be understood individually.

Beyond these, eight further qualities are attained separately. What are the eight? At the time of death, the noble Avalokiteśvara, the powerful one, will appear in person in the form of a monk. One will pass away at ease. One's vision will not be confused. One's hands will not tremble. There will be no voiding of stool. There will be no voiding of urine. There will be no disturbance of breath. One will rest in a very good state, possessed of mindfulness. One will not die facing downward. At the moment of death, one will pass away while being clearly recollected in a state free of afflictions. In whatever buddha-field one has made aspirations to be born, one will be born in that very place. One will not be parted from a spiritual friend. Each day, three times in the three periods, one should recite this text.

Those who wish to observe this with special care should abstain from alcohol, meat, garlic, onions, and any remaining food offered to those who provide pleasure. The collection of teachings called the Essence of the Unfailing Noose should be made known to sentient beings — assessing whether they are capable or not — and they should be led to hear it. A teacher should not be miserly, for it is a bodhisattva who has abandoned the stains of jealousy and miserliness. For the sake of the welfare of sentient beings, and in order to attain the awakening of a buddha, one will also become part of the bodhisattva Saṅgha. Wisdom is spoken of as awakening, and the bodhisattva as skillful means; by these two together, the welfare of sentient beings will truly be achieved.

O Blessed One, if someone recites this teaching and proclaims its essence before the Tathāgata, they do so for the benefit and happiness of the four assemblies, and equally for the sake of those others who commit wrongdoing.

Then the Blessed One spoke to the great bodhisattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara: "The time has come for you to teach this to beings who are pure, and the Tathāgata too rejoices. In the future, in the time to come, this will serve as the work of a father toward the bodhisattvas."

Then the great bodhisattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, his eyes brimming with tears, addressed the Blessed One in these words: "O Blessed One, may it be so! This maṇḍala of liberation, which has been venerated by all buddhas and bodhisattvas, is proclaimed for the benefit of the many, for the happiness of the many, out of compassion for the world, for the benefit and happiness of the great multitude of beings, and for the sake of their liberation."

Homage to those who have stayed in the continuity of the three times. Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas. Homage to the saṅgha of pratyekabuddhas and śrāvakas of past, future, and present. Homage to those who have gone forth rightly. Homage to those rightly arisen in the present. Homage to the son of Śāradvatī, to the great mind.

Homage to the great bodhisattva saṅgha headed by the noble Maitreya. Homage to those headed by Supraṭiṣṭhita Śailendrarāja. Homage to all Tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly and completely awakened buddhas, the Blessed Ones. Homage to the Tathāgata Suvarṇa-varṇa-suprabhāsa-vimardita-śvara-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Siṃhavikrīḍita-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Amitābha. Homage to the Tathāgata Supraṭiṣṭhita-maṇikūṭa-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Samantaraśmyudgata-śrīkūṭa-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Vipāśyin. Homage to the Tathāgata Śikhin. Homage to the Tathāgata Viśvabhuj. Homage to the Tathāgata Krakucchanda. Homage to the Tathāgata Kanakamuni. Homage to the Tathāgata Kāśyapa. Homage to the Tathāgata Śākyamuni, the arhat, the perfectly and completely awakened one.

Thus it is: Oṃ mune mune mahāmunaye svāhā. Oṃ śame śame mahāśame rakṣa rakṣa māṃ sarvasatvāmś ca sarvapāpaṃ praśamane svāhā.

Homage to the Tathāgata Śrī whose name is supremely well celebrated. Homage to the Tathāgata Śrī Samantavabhāsa-vijita-saṃgrāma. Homage to the Tathāgata Śrī Indraketuḍḍhava. Homage to the Tathāgata Ratnatrabhāseśvara-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Apratihata-bhaiṣajya-rāja. Homage to the Tathāgata Vikrāntagāmin. Homage to the Buddha. Homage to the Dharma. Homage to the Saṅgha. Homage to all buddhas of the past, future, and present, the Blessed Ones.

Thus it is: Smṛtivarḍdhani. Mativarḍdhani. Gativarḍdhani. Dhṛtivarḍdhani. Prajñāvarḍdhani. Prahi-bhānavarḍdhani. Dhyānavarḍdhani. Śāmathavarḍdhani. Vipāśyanavarḍdhani. Sarvabodhipakṣadharmavarḍdhani. For the complete fulfillment of all the dharmas of a buddha — svāhā.

Homage to the Three Jewels. Homage to the noble Avalokiteśvara, the bodhisattva, the great being, the supremely compassionate one. Homage to the bodhisattva Mahāsthāmaprāpta, the great being, the supremely compassionate one.

Having paid homage to these, I now recite the heart dhāraṇī of the Amoghapāśa-rāja, spoken directly by Tathāgata Avalokiteśvara, which issues forth from his face — spoken in the presence of the Tathāgatas. At this moment I will now take it up. May the mantra words be accomplished for me. May all my aims be fulfilled, may I and all sentient beings be protected from all fears.

Thus it is: Oṃ cara cara, ciri ciri, curu curu, mara mara, miri miri, muru muru, mahākāruṇika, sara sara, siri siri, suru suru, curu curu, ciri ciri, piri piri, viri viri, miri miri, mahāpadmahasta, kala kala, kili kili, kulu kulu, mahāśuddhasattva, buddhya buddhya, bodha bodha, bodhi bodhi, bodhaya bodhaya, kaṇa kaṇa, kiṇi kiṇi, kuṇu kuṇu, paramaśuddhasattva, kara kara, kiri kiri, kuru kuru, mahāsthāmaprāpta, cala cala, saṅcala saṅcala, vicala vicala, pracala pracala, eṭaṭa eṭaṭa, bhara bhara, bhiri bhiri, bhuru bhuru, tara tara, tiri tiri, turu turu, ehyehi, mahākāruṇika, mahāpaśupati-veśadhara, dhara dhara, dhiri dhiri, Epam. Bondage and binding, striking, threatening, king, thief, fire, water, poison, weapons — from all these, release! kaṇa kaṇa, kiṇi kiṇi, kuṇu kuṇu, cara cara, ciri ciri, curu curu — sense faculties, strength, constituents of awakening, illuminator of the Four Noble Truths, tapa tapa, tama tama, dama dama, śama śama, masaṃsa, dhama dhama — O Great Compassionate One, O great dispeller of darkness, purifier, fulfiller of the six perfections — mala mala, mili mili, mulu mulu, ṭa ṭa ṭa ṭa, ṭha ṭha ṭha ṭha, ṭi ṭi ṭi ṭi, ṭu ṭu ṭu ṭu, ṭhi ṭhi ṭhi ṭhi, ṭhu ṭhu ṭhu ṭhu — arrayed in the accoutrements of black antelope skin, come, O Great Compassionate One, O Lord, O Great Lord, subduer of the host of great elemental beings — kara kara, kiri kiri, kuru kuru, para para, hara hara, vara vara, sara sara, mara mara, kara kara, kaṭa kaṭa, kiṭi kiṭi, kuṭu kuṭu, maṭa maṭa — dwelling in the realm of great purity, O Great Compassionate One, wearing the sacred thread of white sacrifice, wearing a jeweled crown, bearing garlands, your matted-crown of locks adorned by the heads of all the omniscient ones, your palms beautified with wondrous and astonishing lotuses, shaker of meditative absorption, liberation, and samādhi, ripener of the stream of so many beings, O Great Compassionate One, purifier of all karmic obscurations, fulfiller of all omniscient wisdom, liberator from all disease, fulfiller of the hopes of all beings, comforter of all sentient beings — homage and praise to you, svāhā.

To Amogha, svāhā. To Amogha-pāśa, svāhā. To the Unconquered (Ajita), svāhā. To the Undefeated (Aparājita), svāhā. To Amitābha, svāhā. To Amitābhāsuta, svāhā. To the Crusher of Māra's Army, svāhā. To the Fearless One (Abhaya), svāhā. To the Bestower of Fearlessness (Abhayaprada), svāhā. To Victory (Jaya), svāhā. To Complete Victory (Vijaya), svāhā. To Jaya-Vijaya, svāhā. To the Bestower of Boons (Varadā), svāhā. To the Supreme Bestower of Boons (Varapradā), svāhā. To the Pacifier of Untimely Death, svāhā. May you accomplish this very karma for me; homage and praise, svāhā. Om raṇa raṇa hūṃ phaṭ svāhā. Om jaya hūṃ phaṭ svāhā. Om jra jriṃ juṃ svāhā. Om hūṃ jaya svāhā. Om hrīḥ trailokya-vijayā-mogha-pāśa-pratihata hrīḥ haḥ hūṃ phaṭ svāhā. Om paśupati svāhā. Om ārolīka svāhā. Om bahule bahule svāhā. Om ārolīka hrīḥ hrīḥ hūṃ phaṭ svāhā. Niyatā niyata. O Blessed One, by this may the remainder of my karma of an indeterminate and determinate nature be exhausted entirely, svāhā. Om padmahastāya svāhā. Om buddha-dharma-saṃghāya svāhā.

By reciting this, all karmas will be accomplished. If it is recited three times a day, the five acts of immediate retribution will be entirely purified. All karmic obscurations will be completely purified. One should perform boundary-setting using agaru incense and its smoke, ash, water, white mustard, and acacia stakes and the like. For all epidemic diseases, one should tie a protection cord. For all sicknesses, one should recite over butter, black sesame oil, or water and administer it.

For sickness that has spread throughout the body, one should cut with a weapon and also tie a protection cord. For abdominal illness, one should alleviate it with salt water, warm poultice, or plain water. For eye disease, one should tie a white cord around the ear. For tooth disease, one should use the tooth-twig of the karavīra plant. For boundary-setting, one should recite fully into a five-colored cord up to twenty-one times, then bind it to four acacia stakes and plant them in the four directions — that constitutes the setting of a boundary. In all circumstances one should use a protection cord, water, or ash. For all planetary afflictions, one should use a five-colored cord. For all epidemic diseases, one should use a white cord. For snakes, insects, rodents, scorpions, and blocked throats, one should apply honey together with pippalī. For eye disease, one should use fragrant water, lac water, honey, or licorice root. In all times of strife, for quarrels and slander, one should recite fully into water and wash the face with it. For harm from the king of a foreign land, one should place a full vessel properly within the surrounding territory, and then, being clean and wearing clean clothing, make great offerings and recite — this will bring about great pacification. Sprinkling that water as well, all sentient beings will be protected. All nearby harms and epidemics will be pacified.

For the seal of a sandalwood dot, if one recites fully up to one hundred and eight times, all acts of immediate retribution will be exhausted. If recited continually, it protects the household. The fire offering of the lotus protects all sentient beings. The fire offering of sandalwood protects against all planets, spirits, and constellations.

The Victor, the All-Victorious, the Invincible, Naguli, Fragrant Naguli, Dharaṇī, the Hand of Fearlessness, the Hand of Lordship, Fragrant Priyaṅku, Takara, the Wheel, the Great Wheel, the Crusher, Somārāji, and what is called Sunatta — into whichever of these one recites fully up to one hundred and eight times, then fashions it like a jewel and ties it to the head and shoulders. For children it should be placed at the throat. If women bind it at the waist, it makes them supremely fortunate. Even those who have lost their vitality and are impoverished will be granted children. Whoever wears this jewel is protected in every circumstance. Poison and fire have no power over them. What has been done through poison will not take rise. Whatever sickness arises will not develop, and will swiftly be pacified. Planetary afflictions will be thoroughly pacified. Wind, clouds, and lightning will be dispersed by water. With the stalk of the karavīra plant one can accomplish all activities. Even without ritual accomplishment, this supreme heart-essence of the noble Avalokiteśvara, the Mighty Lord, will perform all these activities. And if thereafter one desires to accomplish it in practice, the ritual for a painted image consists of depicting the form of a buddha with all colors completely — that is, the noble Avalokiteśvara, the Mighty Lord, with his crown of matted hair, wrapped from the waist in the skin of an antelope, bearing the appearance of the Lord of Animals, adorned with all ornaments. A divine craftsman who holds the restoration and confession observance should execute the painting. The practitioner then, before that image, makes a maṇḍala with cow dung and strews it with white flowers, places eight vessels filled with fragrant water, arranges the eight requisite offerings and sixty-four necessities, makes a bloodless tormā along with meat, burns agarū incense, and recites the vidyā eight thousand times. For one full day one fasts, or one eats the three white foods, bathes three times at the three periods of the day, dons clean clothing, and then performs the recitation.

Then, before the image, one gazes upon one's own portrait that has been painted, and upon seeing it one will be filled with joy. Before long, the noble Avalokiteśvara, Lord of the World, will come and fulfill every wish completely.

When the vidyā has been thoroughly recited over collyrium or eye-medicine and it is applied to the eyes, one will become invisible and will be able to travel through the sky. One will fully attain the meditative absorption called the Assembly Free from All Confusion. Whatever the practitioner desires, this practice will accomplish it.

When the Blessed One had spoken these words, the great bodhisattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, Lord of the World, together with those monks, those bodhisattvas, those gods' sons of the Pure Abode class, and the world of gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas, rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had taught.

This completes the Great Vehicle sūtra known as the Heart of the Noble Amoghapāśa.

Translated by the Indian master Amoghavajra and the Tibetan translator, the monk Rinchen Drakpa, who also edited and established the definitive text.

Translator's Notes

- The divine names Īśvara and Maheśvara are Sanskrit titles meaning "Lord" and "Great Lord" respectively, used here as epithets of Śiva in his role as king of the gods. They appear as members of the heavenly assembly rather than as objects of devotion, which is consistent with this sūtra's genre.

The term translated as "sons of the gods of the pure realms" renders gnas gtsang ma'i lha'i bu, literally "sons of gods of the pure abodes," referring to the Śuddhāvāsa devas of the highest form-realm heavens.

The passage ends mid-sentence in the source text, listing various diseases and afflictions; the translation follows the source accordingly and does not supply a conclusion.

The name Lokeśvararāja ("King, Lord of the World") is given in Tibetan as 'jig rten gyi dbang po rgyal po, which I have rendered in Sanskrit following standard convention for this buddha's name in this sūtra.

- The phrase rendered "without mispronouncing the syllables" translates a Tibetan expression that more literally means "without uttering word by word" or "reciting in full without verbal error." The context of liturgical recitation makes "without mispronouncing the syllables" the most apt rendering for a listening audience.

The passage's self-referential phrasing — "this essence of the Meaningful Lasso of mine" — follows the Tibetan exactly; the mantra-dhāraṇī text is speaking in the voice attributed to the dhāraṇī itself, which is a known literary convention in such texts.

- The phrase rendered "no force that drains vitality will be able to steal one's vitality" translates a term for a type of malevolent being or force understood to consume the life-essence or vitality of others; the Tibetan "འགྲོག་པ་ལྔ་ལྔ་" literally means "vitality-eater."

The closing Sanskrit dhāraṇī-like passage includes the name "Śāradvatīputra," meaning the son of Śāradvatī, a well-known epithet of the elder Śāriputra, the disciple of the Buddha renowned for his wisdom. Its appearance here is unusual and may reflect a scribal tradition or liturgical interpolation; it is translated literally as given.

The phrase "binding to the directions, the intermediate directions, above and below" reflects a ritual of apotropaic protection by affixing consecrated water or ash as a boundary in all spatial directions.

- The passage consists almost entirely of Sanskrit transliterated into Tibetan script — a series of homage formulas followed by two dhāraṇī sequences from the Amoghapāśa cycle. The text has been rendered back into normalized Sanskrit rather than translated word-for-word in the mantra sections, as is standard practice: dhāraṇī and mantra syllables are not rendered into English but preserved in their Sanskrit phonetic form.

The phrase rendered as "which issues forth from his face" reflects the Sanskrit mukhodgīrṇam, meaning "uttered forth from the mouth" or "proclaimed face to face," here attributed to Avalokiteśvara speaking in the presence of the Tathāgatas. The framing is slightly complex: Avalokiteśvara is both the source and the subject of homage, and the dhāraṇī is said to be his heart-essence spoken directly by him.

The final list — Soma, Āditya, Yama, Varuṇa, Kubera — represents Vedic and Hindu cosmological deities invoked within the dhāraṇī, a standard feature of Amoghapāśa texts.

- The phrase "adored at the feet of the assembly of seer-gods" renders ṛṣi-deva-gaṇābhyarcita-caraṇa, a compound meaning "one whose feet are worshipped by the assemblies of seers and gods"; this is a standard honorific epithet within the dhāraṇī. The term "seng ldeng" rendered as "acacia" refers to the khadira or śamī tree species commonly used in ritual contexts in Indian and Tibetan tantric boundary-setting rites. "Niyatāniyata" is a technical term distinguishing determinate from indeterminate karma; the phrase here is a stock dhāraṇī formula. "Amitābhāsuta" ("child of Amitābha") is a rare epithet appearing in this specific dhāraṇī corpus.

- The names Naguli, Fragrant Naguli, Dharaṇī, the Hand of Fearlessness, the Hand of Lordship, Fragrant Priyaṅku, Takara, the Wheel, the Great Wheel, the Crusher, Somārāji, and Sunatta appear to be names of substances, protective objects, or possibly ritual implements used for amulet preparation. Their precise identification is uncertain; they may be names for specific types of gems, plants, or consecrated articles known in the ritual tradition but not transparently identified in the Tibetan text alone.

The phrase rendered as "Lord of Animals" translates phyugs bdag, literally "lord of cattle or livestock," which is an epithet associated in this context with Śiva in his aspect as Paśupati; however, since Śiva has already been introduced in the preceding passage, the descriptive rendering is used here without a further gloss.

- The colophon names Amoghavajra as the Indian paṇḍita, which is the famous eighth-century tantric master; the Tibetan translator Rinchen Drakpa is the monk who rendered and revised the text. The title "Amoghapāśa" literally means "the unfailing noose," referring to Avalokiteśvara's lasso of compassion that never fails to catch beings.
