Toh 765 in the Kangyur is a ritual text known in Sanskrit as the Mañibhadrāya Yakṣasena Kalpa and in Tibetan as "The Ritual of Mañibhadra the Yakṣa of the Auspicious Jewel," with an English rendering of approximately "The Ritual of Mañibhadra, General of the Yakṣas." It belongs to the dhāraṇī section of the Kangyur and centers on the yakṣa deity Mañibhadra, a powerful protective figure associated with wealth and auspiciousness, presenting mantric invocations, dhāraṇīs, and practical ritual instructions for his propitiation. The text prescribes the fashioning of an image from specified woods and the performance of rites without the usual restrictions of auspicious days or fasting observances, reflecting a tantric or ritual-manual character. It was translated from Sanskrit into Tibetan by the Indian master Vidyākara Siṃha and the Tibetan translator monk Lhui Wangpo.

The dhāraṇī called "The Excellent One" is complete.

Translated by the Indian master Vidyākara Siṃha and the translator monk Lhui Wangpo.

In the Sanskrit language: Mañibhadrāya Yakṣasena Kalpa. In the Tibetan language: The Ritual of Mañibhadra the Yakṣa of the Auspicious Jewel.

Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Namō Mañibhadrāya, Mahāyakṣasenāpataye. Samayam anusmara. Mañibhadrāya. Bhagavatā. Vācayatastaṃ. Dhama dhama. Dhuru dhuru. Ma cira Mahāyakṣasenāpataye. Tulu tulu. Mañibhadra. Turu turu. Mañibhadra. Tuṭi tuṭi. Mañibhadra. Cuṭi cuṭi. Mañibhadra. Niṭi niṭi. Mañibhadra svāhā.

There is no reckoning of days and no reckoning of lunar mansions; there is no fasting rite to be performed. From wood of either the arka or the nimba tree, fashion an image of Mañibhadra the Auspicious Jewel. Place it in a position of honor before you, make offerings with flowers and all manner of other offerings, and remain in that place. At noon, anoint the belly of the Mañibhadra image with white mustard and warm butter. If you then recite the vidyā one hundred thousand times, you will obtain one hundred gold coins, and these you should then give away.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Namō Maṇibhadrāya. Mahāyakṣasenāpataye. Duhukucu. Curu curu. Śabārika. Maṇibhadra svāhā.

In a place where no crow cries, draw a maṇḍala the size of a cow's hide. Reciting once and offering eight hundred flowers — within one month you will obtain one gold sraṅga.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Namō Maṇibhadrāya. Mahāyakṣasenāpataye. Tadyathā. Bhamarī bhamarī. Suṣṇu suṣṇu. Yakṣaṃ Maṇibhadrāṃ. Svidaya svidaya. Āvāhaya āvāhaya. Upadarśaya svāhā.

Beginning from the first day of the dark fortnight of the moon and continuing until the first day of the bright fortnight, reciting twenty-five times before sunrise — this will grant a gold coin. Namō ratnatrayāya. Namō Vaiśravaṇāya. Ratname bhapaṇāya svāhā. Rising early each and every day and reciting twenty-one times — within one month this will grant three coins.

Namo bhagavate. Ādityāya. Apima svikaṣilubato si svāhā.

Fashion images of a woman and a man, then cut them with a kuśa-grass blade — this will cure the disease of vomiting.

Namas te vīri. Caitya kunajala syatimi kiliphu.

Recite this twenty-one times over a red cord, tie twenty-one knots, and bind it around the waist — this will prevent miscarriage.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Bālekahale. Mahāle svāhā.

For a woman in whom the flow of blood does not cease, recite this twenty-one times fully over the blood, then bind it around the waist — the blood will stop.

Itṭhabhūte vidye svāhā.

Recite this fully over a palm leaf, set it in place in the evening, and in the morning make a maṇḍala near it. Write down the names of all those for whom there is a need, recite three times over the palm leaf, wrap it with another palm leaf, burn it, and rub the ashes onto the hand — thieves will become unable to see you.

In accordance with the context, some of the other activities may also be performed with just a brief recitation.

The one made vajra from the syllable HŪṂ — enter into the charnel ground, and having learned the recitation well, in the evening the tantras, through accomplishment — here I have made supplication as a companion.

He, taking up the cloth of the charnel ground, wrathful and with reddened eyes, anointing the body with fragrant unguents and taking the charcoal of the charnel ground, should write what is to be accomplished.

Fill the limbs fully with ashes and charcoal. Bend the limbs and insert them. Place this upon the white lotus at the heart of the body of the image of the one to be accomplished. Take fresh human blood mixed with poison, beautify it with the juice of red rice husks, mix it with the body or bones, scatter it thoroughly and gather it together, roll it, cover the eyes with a thin black thread, and bind it. Smear charcoal on the outside, bury it in the charnel ground, and say, "I have killed it." Over the pit that has been filled, make the vajra sign with the hand and recite the mantra for reducing to ashes:

HŪṂ SUMBHA NI SUMBHA, HŪṂ GR̥HṆA GR̥HṆA, HŪṂ GR̥HṆĀPAYA, HŪṂ ŪNAYA HO, BHAGAVAN CHE GE MO HŪṂ PHAṬ. HŪṂ HŪṂ HŪṂ PHAṬ. OM SUMBHA NI SUMBHA, HŪṂ GR̥HṆA GR̥HṆA, HŪṂ GR̥HṆĀPAYA, HŪṂ GR̥HṆĀPAYA, HŪṂ MĀRAYA CHE GE MO HŪṂ PHAṬ.

If one recites the name of the clan, the enemy will immediately be brought low. If that does not occur, for this reason take it out, cut it into pieces, and together with the rope of the noose, along with poison and so forth, perform a burnt offering. One who possesses understanding should do this for the purpose of defeating the enemy.

Now, the dhāraṇī of Amoghapāśa is to be contemplated in its entirety:

She who holds the noose, the color of the Bandhu flower,
Truly wrathful, having made the mantra fully manifest,
At that time what is to be done with the feathers of a crow:

Place the syllable PHA on the left hand,
Place the syllable TA on the right finger.
Bind with the noose and make the rope long,
Carry it away against its will and recite the mantra.

PHA is the noose. TA is the fetter. With these, you shall not come here.

Recite this aloud. When the recitation is complete, dispatch a feather of a black crow, with recitation, into the earth in the direction where the one to be accomplished is located. The mantra is: PHAṬ HRĪḤ HA HŪṂ PHAṬ CHE GE MO SKROD CIG PHAṬ. Recite twenty-one times onto the left hand, then take a fistful of sesame ash and recite up to eight hundred times, throw it into the enemy's house, depart without looking back, and that one will be expelled immediately.

OM NAMO KULINI KULINI, KILI KILI, GRHṆA GRHṆA, UCCHAṬA UCCHAṬA, UCCHAṬAYA UCCHAṬAYA HŪṢ.

On the left cheekbone of a male skull, at the measure of a thumb's breadth, make a guardian of obstacles (Vighnapati) with four arms, furnished with all weapons. The name of the weapons: in the right hands, a sword and a noose; in the left hands, a club and a trident.

Write this with poison, red salt, and a rope of noose and so forth on a palm leaf, inscribe the mantra, wind it, display it pointing downward and conceal it, or else bury it hidden in the direction of the door. If done for seven days, that one will be expelled immediately. If it is removed, there will be liberation.

The mantra for this very purpose is:

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMAŚ CAṆḌA VAJRAPĀṆAYE
MAHĀYAKṢASENĀPATAYE. NAMO VAJRAKRODHĀYA DAṢṢṬROTKAṬA
BHAIRAVĀYA. TADYATHĀ: OM AMṚTAKUṆḌALI KHA KHA KHĀHI KHĀHI, BANDHA BANDHA, HANA HANA, GARJAYA GARJAYA, VISPHŌṬAYA VISPHŌṬAYA, SARVA VIGHNA VINĀYAKĀNĀṢ MAHĀGAṆAPATI JĪVITA ĀNTAKARĀYA SVĀHĀ.

In this way, write the mantra on the bottom of a palm leaf, bury it, and conceal it.

OM KĀKE KARAVA, KAKA KI KĀPI PIṆḌOPA HĀRIṆI, TAKE THE HEART OF CHE GE MO, GRHYA GACCHA, KĀKIYA TATHĀ SUKHAṢ URGHAṢ MUKHI SVĀHĀ.

Recite over the sehara wood and a lamp up to eight hundred times, then bury it hidden at the door. The one whose name was used will wander and be expelled like a crow.

OM NAMAḢ KRṢṆA ŚAVARIYE MĀṢA ŚOṆITA BHOJANĪYE, HANA HANA, DAHA DAHA, PACA PACA, TAKE HOLD OF CHE GE MO WITH FEVER, QUICKLY HŪṢ PHAṬ.

During the planetary hour of the fever-boar, at the time of the red-eyed star, make an image at the root of a nīmba tree on its southern side. If you fumigate it with the smoke of the three heating substances, the target will be seized. If you fumigate it with guggul resin, the target will be released.

OM DHU NI CAṆḌA SVĀHĀ.

Seize a person's hair and drag it along the feet of the wrathful Lord of Beings, and within a few days fever will arise. Visualize a lunar maṇḍala at the heart center, and above it imagine that rain falls from the white syllable PAM; this will eliminate the stabbing pain in the heart.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMO ĀRYĀVALOKITEŚVARĀYA. BODHISATTVĀYA. MAHĀSATTVĀYA. MAHĀKĀRUNĪKĀYA. OM KAṬE. VIKAṬE. KAṬAṂ KAṬE. KAROṬE. VĪRYESVĀHĀ.

Through this mantra of the noble Guru Siṃhanāda, an emanation of the noble lord Avalokiteśvara, make eight maṇḍalas of clay before the noble Avalokiteśvara. Recite the mantra seven times over the remaining clay, and apply it to the diseased area of the body. Within seven days the illness will be pacified. If it is not pacified, then the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble lord Avalokiteśvara, has declared: "At that point, know that I, the Blessed One, the buddha, have not applied my intention."

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMO MAṆIBHADRĀYA. MAHĀYAKṢASENĀPATAYE. SOBHA SOKRIṆĪYA. SOROTĪ SVĀHĀ.

This supreme accomplishment of the yakṣa (Skt. yakṣa) seat: if one places it up to knee-depth in water and recites the mantra one hundred thousand times in that place, it bestows wealth. Carve an image of a fine jewel four finger-widths across from the wood of a nīmba tree. Have a painter who observes the restoration ceremony apply pigments to it. Make offerings and acts of veneration, then perform eight hundred thousand fire-offerings of incense at a smokeless charcoal fire at three sessions of practice. A great wealthy person will be brought under control.

NAMAḤ KAPĀLEŚVARĀYA JOHUTURU RUṂ MUHIRIYE SVĀHĀ.

First perform the preliminary recitation of ten thousand times. Then merely reciting and inserting a skull into a grain-storage house will cause the grain supply to increase. Write the dhāraṇī of the stream of Lakṣmī explicitly on a conch shell using elephant bile, then apply fragrant perfume and place it inside a vase. Make offerings and acts of veneration, set it in the center of the treasury room, and pour grain on top; it will become inexhaustible. A mantrin who has rapidly cremated a human body should explicitly recite the mantra over the ashes, then gather those ashes. Wherever those ashes are poured, the householder of that place will depart for another region. The mantra is:

KATALI KATALI KIBIDI CELE. NAMO BHAGAVATE. VIKAṬE VIKAṬE. MAHĀVIKAṬE. CUḌA CUḌA SVĀHĀ.

The rite for this as well is exactly the same. NAMO BHAGAVATE. RUDRĀYA. GR̥ṆAKARṆI. BIDUPĀKṢILAMPA. STANI MAHODARI. HANA. ŚATRĀM TRIŚŪLENA. KRUDHAŚYA PIPĀṢOṆATIṢ. HANA DAHA MĀRAYA. UTSĀDAYA. NĀŚAYA PHAṬ PHAṬ PHAṬ.

Wind red thread around a triple-pointed peg of udumbara wood. With a liṅga placed before it and the peg held in the hand, recite one thousand times, then hide it at the enemy's door; the enemy will be expelled. The preliminary recitation is ten thousand five hundred times.

OM EME DRUDIRU SE. KĀŚYA AGR̥ṆA KRATSANDU SARŚAPA. CATURN. MASTAKE JATASAHASYĀ GULAŚYA. CAKṚṢṆA SARVAŚYA. JIHVAYĀM. VITĀLAŚYA CA. MASTAKE. HANA HANA. DAHA DAHA. PACA PACA. SEPARATE CHE GE MO FROM CHE GE MO. MAMA. VAŚAM AGATU SVĀHĀ.

On the eighth day of the dark fortnight, make an effigy in the target's name. Perform a fire-offering using the target's name with sesame or white mustard seed; this will cause separation.

OM CAMUṆḌE NIMABHE DA VĀSO NYAPASO. ŚĀŚYA NIMAPĀŚYA. MAHĀTMYAM PRATYAKṢAM BHAṆḌĀPANAM. SEPARATE CHE GE MO FROM CHE GE MO. MĀGADĀ CCHEDAPRĪTIR BHAVATU RATROCCHEDAḤ. KALAHO BHAVATU. VIKHĀ CCHEDAḤ ASAMĀGAMA SVĀHĀ.

On the eighth or fourteenth day of the dark fortnight, begin: perform a fire-offering at sunset over seven sessions using neem wood. Within three days, separation will occur.

Make an effigy from wood of the ancestral forest and bone. Smear it with poison, blood, lac, and neem leaves, writing both their names upon it. Place the two effigies back to back and bind them with a corpse's hair. This will cause separation between all living beings whatsoever — what need is there even to mention ordinary people?

OM ŚMAŚĀNA VIŚĀCA VIDVEṢĀYA HŪM PHAṬ.

Recite this one hundred times over a corpse's hair, then bind it.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMAŚ CAṆḌAVAJRAPĀṆAYE. MAHĀYAKṢASENĀPATAYE. OM BHURUṆḌĀYA HŪM PHAṬ.

The preliminary recitation for this mantra is twelve thousand times. Afterward, take a southern branch of an arka tree and join them together, then guard that with this mantra.

OM MAHĀBALA OM CALA. BANDHA BANDHA. PĪḌAYA PĪḌAYA. TILAKĀMARŪPA
HŪṂ PHAṬ.

There are seven social classes: the warrior class, the noble class, the brahmin class, the common people, the physician class, the scribal class, and the merchant class. For all seven classes alike: take wood belonging to the southern direction, burn it in charnel-ground fire at a cremation site, extinguish it with donkey's blood, then guard the charcoal from it. Recite this mantra eight hundred times:

OM NAMO BHAGĀRATI TE. ĀNAYA TYAṂGI HŪṂ PHAṬ.

Then, with the root mantra, praise eight hundred times: the one whose name is written will be seized by meat-eating. No matter how many mantra-practitioners there may be who wish to free that person, none will be able to do so. Only later will the person be freed.

Take the nest of a black crow dwelling in a neem tree; at noon smear it with black butter. Smear the dry grass likewise with black butter, then burn it well in charnel-ground fire and collect the ashes. Gather the ashes into a bundle and place it under the roof of the house: a rain of stones will fall upon that household.

OM ANALA VIŚĪCA PAYUBAGAMAHĀPIŚĀCA SVĀHĀ.

The preliminary recitation is eleven thousand times. Then perform a fire-offering of one thousand times using the wood of the udumbara tree, extinguish it with jackal's blood, and with that charcoal write the name of the target: that one will be seized by meat-eating. Later the person will be freed.

In charnel-ground fire, extinguish it with fox's blood, mix it together with fox's blood, stir it, and with that write the name of the target: that very instant the person will go mad. Later the person will be freed.

OM TRINETRA ŚĪŚĀCA BHOKṚTA. DAṂṢṬRAVIKṚTA MUKHA. CHE GE MO
MUCCATAYA BHĀMA HŪṂ PHAṬ.

Offer a basket of food-beer with all vegetables, without the sound of a crow being heard: within seven days the enemy will be expelled.

OM KĀKIKṢIKĀRUDIKE. KĀKAPIṇḌĀNUBJOJANI. CHE GE MO HRḌAYAM GRHYA
GACCHA KĀKĪYA. JATHĀ SUKHAM SVĀHĀ.

On the eighth or fourteenth day of the dark fortnight, perform a fire-offering of eight thousand times using the wood of a black crow's nest-tree, with caṇḍāla fire. Then recite seven times over a basket of first-portion beer, throw it into the enemy's house without looking back as you leave: within three weeks the enemy will certainly be expelled, and the expulsion begins immediately. Later, reconciliation will occur.

YAMARĀJA. SADOMEYĀ. YAMEDORU. NAYODAYA. YADAYONI. RAYAKṢEYA. YAKṢEYACCHANIRĀMAYA. In the center is the letter YA. KṢE and MAMEDA NI in the inner wheel.

YACCHINI RĀJA SA DORUNA YONI RA — this phrase belongs to the spokes of the outer wheel of the second circle.

Make a compound from the nature of cremation-ground wood. With a pen made from that same wood, write the following. Take a directional rope stretched over a corpse that is being burned, and burn it without letting the smoke escape. Mix the ash of that rope with donkey's urine and grind it together to make an ink. Whatever name is written with this compound: that person will be seized by a great epidemic. Washing with milk will bring release.

OM CILI CI CCHE. CILI CILI CI CCHI SVĀHĀ.

A red karavīra flower pierced with a copper needle: burn it one hundred and eight times at the tip of a butter-lamp lit with white mustard oil, in three sessions. Within seven days it will draw to you even a woman you have never seen before.

OM BHADRAVATI BINARIKE SVĀHĀ.

Even the chief consort of a king will come under one's power through recitation of this alone, without exaggeration.

KARṆAMOṬI HŪM PHAṬ. CAMUṆḌĀ — recite this four hundred thousand times, and perform the fire-offering of sesame seeds in three sessions within a single day: it will draw her.

OM RAGATE. RAGATINI SVĀHĀ.

Recite one hundred thousand times. Produce smoke in a skull using lotus thread and great fat. Place upon a charnel-ground skull-cup — one fashioned from a collection of eight skulls — however much smoke has been gathered, and fill it with beer. If this is applied to the eyes, it brings the entire world under one's power. Guard against Stobhapocche and the like entering the smoke; if guarding is not done elsewhere, it will devour flesh.

OM CAṆḌAMUKHI KĀLI — reciting this brings the maṇḍalas of all three under one's power.

OM KARA DARDHAYA DARTHAYA. NAYANA NAMANOHARI SVĀHĀ.

Make a wick from the root of kārahara, collect the smoke of butter from a tawny ox, and apply it to the eyes: it brings under one's power.

OM KĀMEŚVARI SVĀHĀ.

Recite seven times over the head of a black snake and the smoke of sozāna wood, and apply it to the eyes: it brings under one's power.

Seat yourself facing south, directly before the sign of the Great Lord (Śiva), after having first completed one hundred thousand repetitions of the approach practice. The mantra-practitioner thus prepared should don red garments decorated with red flowers and recite throughout the night with full dread. Bind the mudrā of stiffening and recite its mantra — particularly during times when a planet or asterism is seized, recite the mantra of the greatly powerful one. Into the right fist, insert the thumb. If this is performed in front of the malicious, they will be stiffened.

The mantra is: DARAṆA VAJRA RATI. OM VAJRA KRODHA MAHĀBALA. SARVADUṢṬĀNA. STAMBHAYA STAMBHAYA. MOHAYA MOHAYA. HŪM PHAṬ. This is the mantra of stiffening.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMAS TASMAI CAṆḌAVAJRAPĀṆAYE. KĀKAI KĀKINĪ. BHRAMARI BHRAMARI. HANA HANA. TRĀSAYA TRĀSAYA. VIDHĀṢSAYA VIDHĀṢSAYA. VARSENYAṢ CAKRI VAJRAPĀṆI. AGACCHA SVAPATHENA. NARĀCENA MĀRAYA SVĀHĀ.

Make an extensive offering, and every day either light a great cremation-ground fire or take fire produced by kindling-sticks and cloth, and mix together blood, flour, and white mustard, then perform a fire-offering of eight thousand times using wool from a Simbalā fleece: at midnight it will devastate all enemies.

OM MAHĀTEJA MAṆIBHADRA. SAMBHARA SAMBHARA SVĀHĀ.

If one recites this one hundred thousand times, one will find one hundred thousand silver coins, and will gain confidence in the visible Dharma.

OM JVALA JVALA AGNAYE SVĀHĀ.

If one makes a protective circle using white mustard, ash, and the like, then elemental spirits and the like, and fanged creatures and the like, will no longer come. This is something in which confidence may be placed through direct seeing.

Take a shard from a pot that has been shattered by a fierce blow, place it on a vessel, and set it on the roof of a building. When it burns in the fire, recite the syllable MAM and remain there, then take a stick and, by uttering the syllable MAM, smash the pot.

The syllable MAM has become the fire itself that consumes:
this application is for the spreading of fire.

Recite over the tip of rice along with dūrvā grass.

A fragment of a disciple's robe, in a vessel, by fire — offer the water-offering with the mantra, and then the fire that has spread will be pacified.

ADHIBADAKṢOBADUNĀ. ATHOPADADTAMPAPAÑCANĀMĀDĀYI. DĀBĪṆĀM
KHANATVAṢ JATABHE. ATIKRĀMA. NAMO NANADI MAHĀNANDI. BIDĀPILI PILI.
SIDDHI SIDDHI SVĀHĀ.

This is the mantra for the water-offering.

AJJIGHAMMADATE BARCCHA ĪJHATU ATIHŪṢ. KANACHO. AKURE. EBI U.
ADESARBE SARBĀHE. ṬṬAṆEPAṬṬHA. HUPĀBA U.

When something is burning in fire, recite this mantra fully into water and offer the water-offering once. If one recites it fully into water up to twenty-one times and sprinkles it thoroughly over a building, the building will not burn.

OM KIRI KIRI. ṚṢABHĀYA SVĀHĀ.

One should perform the approach recitation one hundred thousand times.
Then apply it to the shoulder twenty-one times by recitation. When one sets out in the forward direction or upward direction, one's aim will be accomplished. If one goes to the left direction, the aim will not be accomplished. This should be performed naked inside a room in the evening.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMAŚ CAṆḌAVAJRAPĀṆAYE.
MAHĀYAKṢASENĀPATAYE. TADYATHĀ. GHRṆI GHRṆI. GHANḌA.
KARṆASVAPANA. MĀ DARŚAYA SVĀHĀ.

On the eighth day of the dark fortnight or the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight, anoint the feet with hot black butter and lie down to sleep — in a dream it will reveal what one wishes to know.

OM GHUṆADEŚRAVAṆAPIŚĀCI SVĀHĀ.

Having performed the approach recitation of one thousand times beforehand, at the time of sleeping recite this mantra twenty-one times over a door-bolt of lāla wood, anoint the hands and feet with it, hold the desired aim in mind, and lie down in a clean place — it will reveal virtue and non-virtue.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. OM ARATE SVĀHĀ.

Having previously performed the approach recitation one hundred thousand times, make three naked figures of a forest-dwelling woman from the inherent nature of a rice-carrying form, place them in the hand at the time of an eclipse of the sun, moon, or planets, and recite until they are released. Thereafter one will become an object of perception along the path visible to children of the evening. The great heroic goddess will truly reveal herself in a mirror and the like.

DAMNAHI KRAMAPADA SAPATYA D. TADBHŪTAṂ. YADBHAVYOṂ. YADRATAṂ. YADRATAṂ. YADRATAṂ. VIDARŚAYATA SVĀHĀ.

Make a vajra from sugar and flour, give it, and recite the mantra one hundred thousand times. Anointing the thumb with lac will cause descending.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. RAGTE. RAKTAṂ GUṢṬHE. YAKIṂ CID SVĀṂ PRATAṂ GATAṂ. BHAVYAM TAT SARVA DARŚAYA SVĀHĀ.

Having performed the approach recitation one hundred thousand times, apply it to the thumb — this is the prasenā of the Indra of the senses.

OM ALUKE. PĀLUKE. GṘHṆA PIHAI. PIŚĀCI SVĀHĀ.

Having previously recited the approach recitation one hundred thousand times, then perform the accomplishment: recite the mantra seven times over porridge of first-fruits and throw it behind one's back. Within seven days it will make a clear revelation. If no revelation comes on the first day, one should not be discouraged. If the accomplishment is performed on the second or third day, even killing a brahmin will be accomplished. If it does not succeed, one will die with one's head split open. This is in accordance with the command of Vajrapāṇi.

NAMAḤ SARVABUDDHABODHISATTVĀNĀM. A AMALA VIKRĀNTA. TEJINĪ. ARAJE SVĀHĀ.

Remain close to the mudrā of the arising Tathāgata and perform all acts such as offering water and the rest. Holding in mind the thought "I will travel to such-and-such a distance of ground," seal the mudrā and recite the mantra twenty-one times, and one will travel that distance without fear. Bring both fists together and open the two little fingers: this is the mudrā of the arising Tathāgata.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMO ĀRYĀVALOKITEŚVARĀYA. BODHISATTVĀYA. MAHĀSATTVĀYA. MAHĀKĀRUṆIKĀYA. OM KURUKULLĒ SVĀHĀ.

Having first performed the approach recitation one hundred thousand times, make a maṇḍala of cow dung, draw in its center a bow fitted with an arrow, and on the arrowhead write the first letter of the name of the Blessed Lady. Summon the Blessed Lady with offering water, honor her with perfume, flowers, incense, lamps, torma, and the like, and make supplication. When going to and returning from a region of the enemy, invite the Blessed One to accompany you there, and upon returning request the Blessed Lady's pardon and dismiss her. When traveling on the road, recite ten thousand times, perform the rite, and anoint the nearby maṇḍala. Draw a bow with its arrow pointing and facing east, then honor the Blessed Lady above it with offerings as before — perfume, flowers, and the like — recite eight hundred times, and depart. One will then be able to go. When one has gone and returns, draw the bow and arrow likewise facing away, honor the Blessed Lady as before, and request her to depart.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMO ĀRYĀVALOKITEŚVARĀYA. BODHISATTVĀYA. MAHĀSATTVĀYA. MAHĀKĀRUṆIKĀYA. TADYATHĀ. RIDZUDHARMĪ. NIRAYATE. TĀRATĀRA ABHAGAVATI. TUTTĀRE. BHAVABHAYA. MOCANITURE SVĀHĀ.

This mantra that liberates from fear — if the danger is not an immensely great one, then in rivers and great wildernesses, among lions, tigers, bears, buffalo, kings, rākṣasas, flesh-eaters, and the like — one should recall this mantra.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMO MAÑJUŚRĪYE. KUMĀRABHŪTĀYA. OM HIRI TIṢṬHA. TASKARBADDHO SI. BAṂ NĀGAMĀCALA SVĀHĀ.

This binds the mouths of apparitions. It also binds thieves, enemies, and the like with particular effect. It prevents them from advancing, and these are the binding rites. This is done together with the lotus mudrā. Join the palms of both hands, bend the two index fingers and insert the two thumbs, and cross the two ring fingers over the two middle fingers. This is the lotus mudrā.

NAMAḤ SAMANTA BUDDHĀNĀM. OM HŪM VARĀHĀṆĀM. OM HŪM VARADA VAJRĀYA HŪM.

The vajra of supreme giving, the noble Mañjuśrī's vajra — if one visualizes the mouths of all those dwelling in the maṇḍala as golden in color, the four directions will be made fragrant with the sweet scent of their breath. This is done with the lotus mudrā.

NAMO RATNATRAYĀYA. NAMA ĀRYĀVALOKITEŚVARĀYA. BODHISATTVĀYA. MAHĀSATTVĀYA. MAHĀKĀRUṆIKĀYA. TADYATHĀ. OM KACE VIKACE. STAMBHANI. JAMBHANI. MOHANI. SARVAROṢA. PRAŚAMANI SVĀHĀ.

Recite this twenty-one times over one's hand, thoroughly massage one's own face, and also tie a knot in one's garment. Then when one enters into the presence of the royal family, their anger will subside and they will become devoted.

A ĀI DI BI. OM A SNI JA DHA. JALA MĀṆA. BĀDA JADHA. GHULA MĀNA. KIMCA HASI. PIṬA ANTAREṆA. A ḌEMITO. DANTA ANATAREṆA SVĀHĀ.

Recite this thoroughly over a small piece of wood, insert it between the teeth while reciting, and anger will turn to devotion.

Ā Āi De Si. A Sa Ṇaṃ. Hi Ba Āi. Spa Ma Hu Da Na. Sa Naṃ Hi. A Hūto. U Tta Raṃ. De Mo Tu Mmo. U Pa Ri Ṇi. U Tta Raṃ. Ho Hi.

The practice associated with this is as follows. Make a seat of leaves inside the lower garment, recite the praise seven times, and then give it to someone who is angry — they will be utterly unable to turn it away.

Mu Ha Do. Ba Du Nor. A Ca Kṣu Na Do. Caṇḍa Āi. Ca U Hu A Sa Na. Sa Māji Hvā. Ko Me Ki Ci Bhā Ṇādi. Namō Paṇḍatī E Cu Li Pā Śa Ṇi Svāhā.

Recite over the right hand, then gently massage one's own face.

The mantra for causing drowsiness: recite over white mustard seed eight times and scatter it, and it will cause deep sleep.

Om Sva Ba Nī Yaṃ Pra Ca Kṣu Mi. Sid Dhaṃ Śa Bar Bhā Ṣi Taṃ Par Ca Kra. Mahā Ni Sid Dhaṃ. Ba Ta Li Ke. Sa Hā Na Ri Caṇḍa Li Māt Taṃ Gi Svāhā.

Recite over white mustard seed eight hundred times, and wherever it is thrown, it will cause deep sleep there.

Namo Ratna Tra Yāya. Namō Bhrāma Ra Ke Śi. Bhrāma Ra Māte. Bhra Ma Bi Bhra Ma. Mu Hya Mo Ha Ya Svāhā.

Recite over white mustard seed one hundred thousand times, then place it suspended in mid-air without touching the ground. When thoroughly scattered upon the floors of houses and upon stone thresholds, it will produce untimely deep sleep. If one stands in the middle of a village or town and scatters white mustard seed in the directions and the intermediate directions, all sentient beings will fall asleep as if dead.

Namo Ratna Tra Yāya. Namō Āryāva Lo Ki Te Śva Rāya. Bo Dhi Sa Tvāya. Mahā Sa Tvāya. Mahā Kā Ru Ñi Kāya. Tāre Tāre Tu Rāya. Bha Ga Va Ti Svāhā. Bandha Mo Ca Ni — the great release — Bandha Mo Kṣaṃ Ku Ru Svāhā.

This is to be combined with the power of truth from the very beginning. May the Blessed Ones liberate all from bondage throughout all of saṃsāra. By the truth of that liberation — the truth by which the bound are freed — by that truth, may the great release be accomplished: release from bondage. By reciting this, bonds are loosened. At the time of recitation, Avalokiteśvara frees them, and the Blessed Ones also free them.

Namo Ratna Tra Yāya. Namō Āryāva Lo Ki Te Śva Rāya. Bo Dhi Sa Tvāya. Mahā Sa Tvāya. Mahā Kā Ru Ñi Kāya. Tadyathā. Lambe. Pra Lambe. Lambi Bi De Ma Ma Mo Kṣa Yaṃ Svāhā.

By reciting this, one is freed from bonds.

Furthermore, if one recites it at midnight while wearing a black woolen robe, one will be freed from bonds.

Namo Devī Mahā Devi. Pratyam Gi Re Svāhā.

Write this clearly on a palm leaf, insert it into the burrow of a kakaru worm, cover the opening with that same soil, and take hold of it by name — that person will thereby be released from bondage.

Namo Ratna Tra Yāya. Namō Āryāva Lo Ki Te Śva Rāya. Bo Dhi Sa Tvāya. Mahā Sa Tvāya. Mahā Kā Ru Ñi Kāya. Tatya Thā. Ku Ṭe Vi Ku Ṭe. Ku Ṭe Sva Ha.

If iron is smeared with butter, it will crack.

Namaḥ Sarva Bud Dha Bo Dhi Sa Tve Bhyaḥ. Ku Ru Ṭṭha Ku Ru Ṭṭha. Kar Ka Ku Tu Ru Ṭu Svāhā.

In whatever direction a person is imprisoned or confined in a locked house, if one recites over dust one hundred times and scatters it, those imprisoned for even a hundred leagues will be freed. As preliminary recitation, one should recite ten thousand times. One should perform a fire offering of atimuktaka wood eight hundred times. Then the ashes of that very wood are to be applied. If a fire-offering of butter is performed in the fire of vajra wood kindling, iron shackles will crack and one will be freed.

Namo Ratna Tra Yāya. Namō Āryāva Lo Ki Te Śva Rāya. Bo Dhi Sa Tvāya. Mahā Sa Tvāya. Mahā Kā Ru Ñi Kāya. Tadyathā. Tāre Tāre. Tārāya. Jaye Jaye. Tu Ttāre. Ja Ya Va Ñe Tu Re Svāhā.

This mantra of Tārā is to be applied for the activity of winning victory over others when answering in a local Dharma debate.

Mu Ni Ka Sa I. Mu Ni Maṃ Dha Āi Mu Ni Laṃ Ga Le Hi. Pha Le. Āi Śa Da. Pi Li Ba Dan To. The great Sya Mu Hi.

Bagga Ne Ni Haṃ Pi Bai Mi Svāhā.

For the activities of bringing under control, separating, driving away, and binding: earth from beneath a rotating potter's wheel, earth from the four directions and the center, earth from beneath the axle of the wheel, earth from beneath the hands, and earth from beneath the vessel — all these are to be gathered. Two effigies are to be made, placed face to face, and wrapped tightly with red thread so that there is no gap between them. An unburnt hollow vessel is to be placed in the center, and the phrase "May the great one come under the power of the great one" is to be recited eight hundred times. A fruit of the datura plant is to be inserted into a mouse hole. If a naked woman then strikes it with a wooden pestle, the two great ones will be separated.

The name and the mantra are to be written openly on the back bone of a girl born in a mist. That bone is then to be inserted into a hole dug at a crossroads to the depth of a waist-high digging, and if covered over with earth, it will drive the enemy away.

An effigy is to be made from material of a fiery nature. While reciting the mantra, covering the effigy with the skin of a goat will constitute a binding.

That effigy is to be placed in a secluded spot. Using charcoal from a cremation ground, write the enemy's name and the associated syllables, insert it into a mouse hole, cover it with goat skin, and have a naked woman, holding a wooden pestle in her hands, praise it seven times. Strike it each evening saying "Bind the mouth of the great one!" If beaten thus for seven days, binding will occur.

Earth gathered from seven summits and earth taken from beneath a potter's hands — make a single hole in the earth, write this mantra openly on a palm leaf, insert it into the hole, place it in a mouse hole, seal the opening with dung from a cow that has not fallen to the ground, and cover it over with dust: this will effect a binding of the mouth.

Oṃ Bhū Ri Hyā Ma Na. Sa Ka Tu Bra Ṣṭho E Aṃ Che Ge Mo Baṃ Dhā Mā Ra Ya Hūṃ Phaṭ.

Interspersing the syllables of the name with the syllables of the mantra, write them with charcoal on a leaf of the arghya plant, wrap it, insert many thorns, and bury it by digging in the middle of the upper center of the interior of a house, after reciting the mantra eight hundred times: this will effect a binding of the mouth. In this way, the many other methods are to be applied individually.

Namo Ratna Tra Yā Ya. Namaḥ Caṇḍa Vajra Bā Ṇa Ye. Mahā Yakṣa Se Nā Pa Ta Ye. Bā Rā Yā Sa Nī Nā Sa Ni Svāhā.

An effigy is to be made from the dung of livestock placed in a hollow vessel. The mantra is recited while the effigy is adorned with nine lamps — at the two eyes, the mouth, the two ears, the navel, the two hands, and the excretory passage. Earth from the mouth of the enemy that was collected the day before is to be inserted, this mantra is then recited eight hundred times, the opening is covered with a second hollow vessel, and if placed in a clean location, one will win victory over others in a local Dharma debate. The recitation count is ten thousand.

Oṃ Śar Khā Kaṇ Ṭha Ca Tuḥ Pa Da Khā Hi. Mā Nu Ṣa Ko Gū Tha Kaṃ Ta Śya A Tha Bi Gū The Na. Che Ge Mo Mu Khaṃ Ban Dha Mi. Mu Cu Krā Mā Cu Krā Phu Svāhā.

The dung of a donkey, the hair of a child whose head has just been shaved for the first time, and a sharp thorn — recite this eight hundred times openly over them, insert them into a mouse hole, and fill it with dust: this will effect a binding of the mouth.

Ha Hūṃ Ha — if written on the hand, it is a protection of the cremation ground.

Hūṃ Ha — recite this mantra and immediately take the ashes of a burnt corpse in the palm of the hand. Or, while reciting, form the left hand into the mudrā of Hūṃ, make a pill from those ashes mixed with bdellium (guggul), recite the mantra eight hundred times, and apply a drop to the forehead: one will be freed from bonds.

Hūṃ He Ho He Ha — reciting this will free one from bonds.

Di Oṃ Brī Jaṃ Prī Te Brī He Brī — reciting this will free one from bonds.

Namo Vācāśya Mahāśramaṇāśya Kiti Biti Vātraṃ Buraya Svāhā. If one recites this mantra seven times over an alms bowl and then goes out for alms, even those who have no wish to give will find themselves wanting to give, and the bowl will quickly be filled. Likewise, if one makes a tooth-stick from white karavīra wood while reciting, one will obtain what one seeks without even having asked. Reciting the seed-syllable of Mañjuśrī seven times effects the same result immediately.

Maṃ — Namō Ratnatrayāya. Nama Āryācetya Kuñjara Śya. Hima Cata Udtare Ṇa. Vāra Śesu Varṇa Akṣi. Nama Vāna Ri Sāme. Ananaṃ Ce Pha Naṃ Ca. Dāda Du Sarva Kamikaṃ. Amoṭa Ci. Amoti Vaṭa Rṇa Dra Ja Se Svāhā. If one recites this mantra twenty-one times so that the cry of a crow is not heard, one will find food without having begged for it.

Oṃ Dhana Dāya Svāhā. If one fashions the form of Vaiśravaṇa, the Wealth-Giver, over all food and condiments, then consecrates it eight hundred times and places it in the midst of what has been cooked, the food will become inexhaustible. The vessel in which the cooked food has been placed must not be moved from its spot to any other location.

Araṃ Jare Karaṃ Jare Biṣaṃ Jare Svāhā. Having first performed the approach recitation one hundred thousand times, and then at a moment seized by a planetary spirit accomplishing the rite with sesame, rice, and the like and eating it, one's capacity for retention will become sharp.

Namo Ratnatrayāya. Nama Āryāvalokiteśvarāya. Bodhisatvāya. Mahāsatvāya. Nama Skṛtva. Imāṃ Dhāraṇī. Bra Yuñjami. Iya Me. Dhāraṇī. Sa Rmidhyānatu. Tadyathā. Tri Sri Khi Tri Śūli. Di Li Di Li. Mi Li Mi Li. Ci Li Ci Li. Avalokite. Svarobhī Jñāphayate Dhāratī. Iyaṃ Ma Samṛdhyatu Svāhā. The ancillary practice of this dhāraṇī is as follows: having first performed the approach recitation ten thousand times, one places four measures of water before noble Avalokiteśvara, consecrates it eight hundred times, and drinks it. For seven days, at midday, one should eat rice cooked in milk. If one maintains silence for seven days, one will be able to retain three hundred texts.

This is the dhāraṇī of supreme accomplishment:

Ārkāri. Makkari. Caṇṭrali Vina. Bayo Dhare. Arka Aṇḍa Caṇḍāli — O great fierce one, bring me under your influence — Svāhā. If one writes a name on the hair of an arghya vessel and performs a fire offering with it, this will summon that person.

Oṃ Camuṇḍe. Mataṅga Ge. Urdhakeśi. O great fierce one, bring me under your influence — Svāhā. Anoint the dharma-source with black butter and combine it with the great powerful lord of the master; this makes the master like a servant. This should be done with eight hundred recitations.

Oṃ Tāre Hūṃ Hara Svāhā. With this, take soil gathered from the right side of a young bull's track, make a drop of it on the forehead, and whomever one looks upon will be brought under one's power.

Namaḥ Kṛṣṇa Śavarāṇāṃ. Giri Giri. Kumāri. Biṣaṃ. Bhakṣaya Hara Biṣaṃ. Kṛṣṇa Śavaro Jñā Bayayati Svāhā. Apply this after rendering harmless any poison consumed through the bite of stinging insects.

Oṃ Śapara Śobhana Hare Svāhā. Consecrate a garment with this mantra seven times and give it to someone; that person will come under your power.

For the sake of what one desires — with bees and with the flower of a human corpse — if these are ground into powder and applied, they bring men and women under one's power.

Namo Buddhāya. Hara Hara Svāhā. Namō Rudrāya. Aggi Baggi Naggi Svāhā. Recite this mantra sixty times over white mustard seed and strike a woman or a man with it; even a proud woman, or a courtesan, will come.

Oṃ Camuṇḍe. Dhūmākeśi. Vidyudde Ji Bhe Hana Daha Paca — O great fierce one, come under my influence — Svāhā.

Sit facing east with the index finger of the near hand. Recite over it seven times and show it to someone; that person will come under your power.

Oṃ Namō Vimalakīrtaye. Bodhisattvāya. Mahāsattvāya. Tadyathā. Vimala Phūḥ. Vimalakarā Phūḥ. Vimalasmuddhadhare Phūḥ Svāhā.

Recite this over water seven times and give it to drink; it cures eye disease.

Oṃ Namō Bhagavate. Sudarśanāya. Suru Suru. Phuru Phuru. Gaccha Gaccha. Akṣirogam Atiṣṭha — depart, O disease of the eyes — Svāhā.

Bind white thread around the ear.

Take calamus root, cassia wood, priyangu, costus, mouse dung, animal horn, bamboo bark, lac resin, goat's urine, and the shadow of a winnowing basket — dry these in the shade. This incense is the supreme chief. It frees one from all planetary afflictions. Where it is burned, serpents will not remain, and whatever other venomous creatures, planetary spirits and the like — this supreme remedy destroys all ailments. For a persistent four-day fever and for whatever is like a thunderstruck tree, this likewise causes it to wither away. For a woman of ill fortune who lacks naturally occurring flowers and who is moreover separated from her household — through the power of this incense's components, she becomes intoxicated and deeply agitated, and it is supreme for generating good fortune. This incense, called "The Brahmin's Secret," accomplishes all rites and brings blessing. Its incense mantra is:

Oṃ Subhiraṇatāye Svāhā.

Write the vowels on a human skull, and write upon it also the distinctions of woman and bear. Whichever the mantrin draws with an iron hook, that woman comes under his power. If he recites with the iron-hook yoga in a clean place, even a woman of pure mind from a distance of about one league will come, maddened by desire at a single subtle hint. The summoning syllable, together with the vowel syllable encircled by fire and wind, quickly deploys the limbs of the vowel syllable and makes a desired woman come with longing.

Oṃ Kāmadeva Candrabhadrāya. Bhagavān Hūṃ Phaṭ Svāhā.

This is the root mantra; by its accomplishment all secret mantras are accomplished. As preliminary practice, recite it ten thousand times. Then light a fire, dip sesame seeds in butter and honey, and perform eight hundred fire offerings — after that it will be accomplished.

Oṃ Kāmadeva Hasta Māsprśa. Udmatrikuru Svāhā.

Recite this over the hand seven times; whoever one then touches — even the hundred gods of desire, Indra included — will come under one's power.

Oṃ Kāmadeva Nirīkṣaya Svāhā.

Recite this mantra fully over the eye; whoever one looks at will come under one's power.

Oṃ Kāmadevi Vistra Svāhā.

Recite this over a garment seven times; whoever one touches with it will come under one's power.

Oṃ Kāmadeva Sevam Udamaya Svāhā.

Recite this fully over one's own sense organ; whoever one then touches will come under one's power.

Oṃ Kāmaśrī Hūṃ Phaṭ.

Light a fire with the wood of the red dye tree, and perform eight hundred thousand fire offerings with white mustard seed; then even a king or a prince will come under one's power. If one touches a woman's crown of the head with this, she will come under one's power.

Oṃ Kāmadeva Amukaṃ Me Vaśamanāya Svāhā.

Recite this fully over a flower or a fruit and give it to whomever — that person will come under one's power.

Śuśuṣemu. In an empty room, burn powdered fish and recite ten thousand times. Then burn the powdered fish as incense and various women will come.

Oṃ Namō Ratnatrayāya. Oṃ Pradācalane. Cala Cala Svāhā.

After purifying with this mantra, touch the sole of the foot of a corpse, recite up to twenty-one times in full, and take it.

Take it and carry it to one's dwelling without looking back. Then recite one hundred and eight praises over it, place it in hot black butter, and cook it. After that, take it, recite the praise seven times, and anoint the feet with it — even if one travels a thousand leagues, one will not tire.

Namō Buddhāya. Namō Dharmāya. Namaḥ Saṅghāya. Namō Āryāvalokiteśvarāya Bodhisattvāya Mahāsattvāya Mahākāruṇikāya. Tadyathā: Dharaṇi Dharaṇi Dhara Dhara Dhare Subhadra Svāhā.

Having first performed ten thousand recitations of this mantra as the preliminary practice, at a time when the sun is seized by an eclipse or the moon is seized by an eclipse, place black beans in one's mouth and recite for as long as they do not dissolve — that many times. Then the black beans will sprout. If one eats those sprouts, one will gain retention of what is heard. If one does not do it in that way, grind them into a fine powder and give it to whomever — that person will come under one's power.

Oṃ Gulu Gula. Vajradhara Anucarāya Svāhā.

If one recites this mantra over the index finger, it will disperse clouds.

On an unfired clay vessel, draw the mudrā of equal extension in all four directions, and write the noble Subhūti with all colors in full. To the left and right of Subhūti, draw two young nāgas, each with seven serpent heads, in a gesture of homage, and on each of their serpent heads write the syllable "phu." On the chest of the noble Subhūti write the syllable "drum." Make offerings of various flowers, place it in a location open to the sky above, and all the ground will become a great maṇḍala of water.

On a clay pot from which the soma has been removed, draw the lord of the gaṇas, and together with poison, blood, and the long-life herb, place it on the heart of the lord of the gaṇas. Write it inside the syllable Hūṃ, and on the outside encircle it with the mantra of Mahābala. If one burns it over a fire of acacia wood, it will bring utter destruction.

Oṃ Vajrakrodha Mahābala. Hana Daha Paca Vidhāṃsaya. Ucchuṣma Krodha Hūṃ Phaṭ.

This is proved by visible results. Using the hollow of the left thigh bone of a brahmin slain by a blade, draw Śrī Heruka the Protector, encircled by nāgas, adorned with nāga ornaments, two-handed, holding a skull-cup in the left hand and a three-pointed banner in the right, with Akṣobhya as his crown ornament. On the outside write the mantra:

Oṃ Heruka Vajra Samaya Hī. Sarvaduṣṭa Samaya Mudrā Prabhañjaka. Varṣa Varṣa. Varṣāpaya Varṣāpaya Hūṃ Phaṭ.

Place the image upside-down inside a bronze vessel and recite the mantra — rain will fall immediately. If one wishes to stop it, wash the image with milk and it will cease.

Namaḥ Śare Śare. Viśare Viśare. Sarvaviṣaghātani Svāhā.

If one recites this three times, it is the knowledge mantra that dispels poison capable of rousing the dead.

Namo Ratnatrayāya. Namō Mañjuśrīye Kumārabhūtāya Bodhisattvāya Mahāsattvāya Bhagavān Mañjuśrī Kumārabhūta Sarvatathāgatā Balavidhi Jñā Sarvatathāgatānāṃ Nakhes Tita Sarvasattvānāṃ Ca Śāntaṃ Kuru Svāhā.

At the time of affliction by smallpox, recite this mantra twenty-one times over sandalwood water, as many times as the number of pustules that have appeared, then sprinkle it on the patient and rub it on the limbs — the affliction will be pacified.

Oṃ Svaphatāre. Svapna Avalokite Tuttāre. Trailokyavicāriṇi. Vaśya Vaśya. Nirdarśaya. Ratnatraya Satyena Ture Svāhā.

In the afternoon, make a square maṇḍala in the eastern direction, recite the mantra, and then sleep — it will reveal whether one's deeds are virtuous or non-virtuous.

Oṃ Namō Buddhāya. Kakāri Kumāri.

Udpati. Medarśaya Svāhā.

On the fifteenth day of the middle summer month, make offerings to the venerable lady along with her retinue according to whatever one can provide. Then take one hundred thousand fragrant white flowers, recite the mantra over each one individually, and press them to the feet of the venerable lady. Spread a kuśa-grass seat before her and lie down to sleep upon it — in a dream one will see the lives of all one's former births, wherever they were.

Oṃ Stambhe Standhāmi. Oṃ Jambhe Jambhami. Oṃ Andhe Andhāmi. Oṃ Mohe Mohāmi. Devadatta Stambhaya. Jambhaya. Anabhaya. Mohaya Svāhā.

Write this mantra on a leaf of the hala plant, place it in a clay vessel, fill the clay vessel with impure matter, bury it in the ground — all enemies will be paralyzed and confounded.

Oṃ Namaś Caṇḍavajrakrodhāya. Tadyathā. Oṃ Phaṭ Phaṭ. Hulu Hulu. Tiṣṭha Tiṣṭha. Bandha Bandha. Hana Hana. Daha Daha. Amṛte Hūṃ Hūṃ Phaṭ Phaṭ Svāhā.

Recite this mantra seven times over food and eat it — all illness will vanish and it will become like nectar.

Kāla Agni Rudra Hāsa Sraji Hvātakara Ṭame.

This is the mantra for causing paralysis and confoundment.

Kṣī Kṣi Kṣa Samākṣiye Svāhā.

This is the mantra for the disease of thorns.

Oṃ Daha Kṣaṃ Kṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating poison seized by evil.

Oṃ Phaṭ Phaṭ Hāṃ Ha Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating all epidemic illness.

Oṃ Kri Kṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating illness of the head.

Oṃ He He Su Svāhā. Oṃ Kṣu He Ka Kṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating stabbing pain in the three levels of the body.

Oṃ Kṣa Mahā Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating indigestion.

Oṃ Kṣī Kṣī Samākṣiya Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating eye disease.

Oṃ Kṣapaya Kṣapama Kṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating all illness.

Oṃ Kṣa Kṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating ear disease.

Samkṣibaha Prakṣibasa Samkṣibaha Prakṣisapaya.

This is the mantra for eliminating all poisons.

Oṃ Hasti Kirñi Culu Culu Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating iron filings swallowed by a living creature. Recite this mantra over the water used to rinse the mouth, leave it for one day, then cast it away — it will be gone.

Hi Ha Hūṃ Ha.

This is the mantra for binding a ḍākinī.

Hūṃ Hara Haṃ Ha.

Recite this mantra over white mustard seed and hurl it — the ḍākinīs will flee.

Oṃ Kṣu Su Kṣu Ha.

This is the mantra for eliminating indigestion.

Oṃ Kṣa Kṣa Kṣa.

This is the mantra for eliminating stabbing pain in the ear. With this mantra, recite it thoroughly over black butter and fill the ear canal with it.

Oṃ Kṣaṃ Kṣe Ha Sa.

This is the mantra for eliminating illness of the head.

Oṃ Hūṃ Hūṃ Hūṃ. Rakṣa Sarva Kiho Nāśaya Svāhā.

This is the mantra for eliminating insects in the abdomen.

Ā Ī Huṃ Ce Huṃ. Daha Daha. Jalantaṃ. Haru Segaru Ḍi. Taṃ Sepaṅgā. Adāsāsa. Mudha Phuṭa Ṇḍire Biśa Macala. Makama Avāsthā. Muhabasai. Sarāsahi. Sikhaṃbasāī. Banbha Baddha Sire Baśa Usparagī. Siriha Ra. Daī Jaso. Akilanī. Kelere. Biśam Avāsthā.

This is the mantra for binding the poison of another person seized by a snake.

Aha Bihi Ma Ipuru. Kari U. Subadugra. Mabhananṭa. Ka Abutā. Ekakārā. Biśa Bhandhi. Garuḍa Hudehaṃ. Āho Garuḍa. E Aṃ Biśaṃ Bakhālāi. U Ū. A Ā. Re Biśa Cala. Makama. Avāsthā.

This is the mantra for binding the poison of one who has oneself been seized by a snake.

Oṃ Mahādeva Nikava Kaṇṭha. E Aṃ Giśaṃ. Bhakṣa Bhakṣa. Hara Hara. Hūṃ Kṣa Sahare Biśa. Svasthānaṃ Ja Ja Ja Svāhā.

This is the mantra for releasing one bound by poison.

Oṃ Mahādeva Re Me. Śarani Pālaka Kaṇṭha. Hara Hara Hūṃ.

This is the mantra for appeasing planets and the like.

Oṃ Nam Śiśāya. Mahādeva. Mahābaladeva. Yakṣa Rākṣasa Bhūta. Preta Viśāca.

Siddha Yogaḍākinī. Ākarṣa Ākarṣa. Puṣpaṃ Dhūpaṃ Pāli. Gṛhṇa Vakṣa Svāhā.

This is the mantra for the torma offering to hungry ghosts (pretas) and the like.

Oṃ Camuṇḍe Vajraghoṇe Hūṃ Phaṭ.

This mantra nullifies all the mantras of others. It ruins the beer of a beer-seller. It binds the fishing nets of fishermen. It ruins the measures used in selling black butter. It causes the milch animals of herdsmen to go dry.

Namo Ratnatrayāya. Nama Āryāvalokiteśvarāya. Bodhisattvāya. Mahāsattvāya. Mahākāruṇikāya. Tadyathā. Turu Turu. Suru Suru. Bisuru Bisuru. Great one's Sarvarogaśoṣaṇī. Viśoṣaṇī. Māśa Bhavatu Māśūlāyatu. Ma Bhacyatu. Ma Duḥkha. Māstu Ti Bhavatu. Atre Va Pariśuṣyatu Svāhā.

Recite this mantra twenty-one times over the soil of an anthill, then smear it on rice, dog excrement, and the like; whoever touches it will be afflicted.

Write this on a goat with yellow orpiment and bind it to the arm with a red cord; it removes all epidemic disease.

Write the syllable A with a yellow substance, write inside it whatever person's name is to be used, and place above it a buddha image. Even if it is a god who brings comfort, this will cause him to be infuriated.

Oṃ Jagaseliye. Vājje Sunathidāsīdāso. Subhadre Subhadre. Sāṇaṃ Sāṇṇaṃ. Abalāhi. Suṇṇaṇadīsunnabaṭṭare. Hiśīlā. Aparisajaho Svāhā.

Pour water into a copper vessel, recite the mantra seven times over it, then cast it into the sky in the direction of the wind; this prevents hail, wind, rain, and the like from falling.

Indena Hata Bo Ā. Jameṇa. Uspāḍa Ajihā. Da Ava Mahādaṇaḍaṇa. Tajja Āsūhareṇa. Oṃ Jaṃbhi Jaṃbhi. Jaṃbhehi. Jaṃbhehi. Oṃ Stambheni Stambhehi. Oṃ Mohini. Mohehi. Ehyehi. Eheni. Oṃ Stambha Stambha. Mahāstambha. Great one's Stambhaya Svāhā.

Write two rows of syllables concerning someone; compose and write in between the syllables of the lower mantra the name of the one to be subdued, bind it, place it in a pot, then on top of it cast your own urine, fill on top of that the ashes of a cremation ground, cover it with another pot, bury it with the technique of the inflating breath, and hide it; this will cause infuriation.

Oṃ Cukka Vicukka. Cīcikṣa. Vigiraṇi Pititi Svāhā.

This is the mantra for cutting worms and the like that gnaw inside.

Wash whatever calf is sick, then recite seven times over the water with which another calf has been washed, and also recite seven times over black pepper; pour a little onto its back and write the mantra. Pour it also into its nostrils.

Namo Bhagavate. Rudrāya. Bañcagāvo Imaṃ Hma Baṭa Vimaṇḍali. Katama Banaca. Nanadrī Bīśālāba Du Pacatura Thāka Luśodārī. Bañca Migāja Sāṃsamārtha. Bhañjika. Yathāla Thānaka Śya lāṃjā. Vasudeva Śya. Vaṇa Usaṃ Batu. Samāgacha Tumāṃ Go. Akoṃ Gocaṇḍālī Bhaviṣyati Svāhā.

Recite this mantra twenty-one times over a golden ring vessel with water mixed with tea, and tie it around the neck of the calf; then sprinkle the calf with that water, and it will be cured.

This concludes the Jewel of Excellence treatise.

This completes the Subtle Ritual Procedures for All Mantras Spoken by the Perfectly Accomplished Buddhas.

Translated from Sanskrit into Tibetan by the Indian paṇḍita Mañjuśrī and the Tibetan monk-translator Baris, who rendered, requested clarifications, and established the final text.

Translator's Notes

- The passage is a kalpa text, a ritual manual associated with the yakṣa (a class of nature spirit) Maṇibhadra, patron of wealth and auspiciousness, related to Vaiśravaṇa, the deity of wealth. The Sanskrit dhāraṇī and mantra syllables throughout have been transliterated as they appear in the Tibetan phonetic rendering; some syllables are ritual seed syllables or formulaic sequences whose precise Sanskrit reconstruction is conventional rather than fully recoverable from the Tibetan transcription alone.

The term rendered "gold coins" for "dong tse" refers to a unit of coinage or weight used in Indian Buddhist texts, sometimes understood as a gold coin or gold piece of a standard measure.

The final verse-like passage concerning "the one made vajra from the syllable HŪṢ" is cryptic and appears to be either a partial injunction to the practitioner to visualize or embody a vajra-deity, or a colophonic instruction. The syntax is compressed and the passage reads as a fragment; no single fully confident reading is possible without a commentary, and this is noted accordingly.

- The term "che ge mo" appearing throughout these mantras is a Tibetan transliteration standing in for the name of the target or victim; in ritual contexts it signals where the practitioner inserts the relevant person's name.

The phrase rendered "Amoghapāśa" for "འམོག་པ་ཤ་" follows the standard Sanskrit name of this deity, literally meaning "infallible noose," an emanation of Avalokiteśvara.

The line "TA'i se gol gyis 'di ru khyed kyis yong bar mi bya'o" is a Tibetan vernacular ritual phrase embedded in the mantra section and has been rendered according to its apparent meaning as a binding injunction.

The rendering of "sehara" for "ཤེ་མ་ར་" is uncertain; it may be a transliteration of a Sanskrit wood-type name not easily identified, and the term is left phonetically rendered.

- The phrase rendered "the fever-boar's planetary hour, at the time of the red-eyed star" is technical astrological language from ritual manuals of this genre. The "fever-boar" likely refers to a specific inauspicious asterism or planetary configuration associated with disease, and "red-eyed" to Mars or a malefic time period. The exact astronomical identification is uncertain and has been translated literally.

The "wrathful Lord of Beings" in the hair-dragging rite is likely a reference to a fierce form of Śiva or Rudra, consistent with the surrounding mantras invoking Rudra.

"Guru Siṃhanāda" renders bla ma seng ge sgra, which is literally "the guru whose voice is a lion's roar," a known emanation-form of Avalokiteśvara; kept as a proper name here.

The "stream of Lakṣmī" renders nor rgyun ma'i gzungs, literally "the dhāraṇī of the unbroken stream of wealth," a common epithet for Lakṣmī-related dhāraṇīs in this literature.

- The passage is a ritual manual in mixed Sanskrit mantra and Tibetan procedural instructions, concerned primarily with separation and subjugation rites (Skt. vidveṣaṇa, uccāṭana). The mantras as given in the Tibetan are phonetically transcribed Sanskrit of often corrupt or highly regional form; they have been rendered as faithfully as possible into a normalized Sanskrit approximation without imposing emendations that would falsify the transmission. The final section appears to be a yantra or wheel-of-syllables instruction, likely accompanying a diagram; the syllable strings YAMARĀJA and the directional placements reflect a standard tantric maṇḍala-wheel formula.

The term rendered throughout as "CHE GE MO" is a Tibetan phonetic rendering used as a placeholder for the name of the target person in the ritual, functioning as a ritual variable in the mantra body; it has been retained as such consistent with the preceding translation.

"Meat-eating" (sha zas bzung ba) in this context is a technical ritual euphemism for a form of spirit-possession or compulsive affliction induced by the rite, not literal cannibalism.

- The phrase rendered "Stobhapocche and the like" translates a Tibetan phrase that reads literally "Stobpa-can and the like" meaning something like "the greatly powerful one" or possibly a class of spirits; the context suggests a class of dangerous beings associated with the smoke, but the exact identification is uncertain.

The word sozāna in "smoke of sozāna wood" is a phonetic rendering of a term in the Tibetan that appears to be a transliteration of a Sanskrit or foreign plant name whose botanical identity is unclear.

The phrase "collection of eight skulls" renders a compound referring to a ritual skull-cup assembled from eight skulls, a standard Tantric implement.

The term "karavīra" is a red-flowered oleander used in ritual contexts throughout Indian tantric literature.

- The prasenā rite mentioned near the end of the passage refers to a specific form of mirror or reflective-surface divination in which visions are induced, often for a child intermediary — the phrase "children of the evening" likely refers to this tradition of using young children as clairvoyant seers in the prasenā ritual. The phrase "Indra of the senses" renders what appears to be a gloss on prasenā as a faculty-related rite.

The phrase rendered "hot black butter" is literally "hot black oil-butter" and may refer to a specific medicinal preparation. The Tibetan "lā le'i lde gu" rendered as "door-bolt of lāla wood" is uncertain; lāla may refer to a specific type of wood used in ritual contexts.

The mantra strings throughout this passage contain numerous Indic syllables that resist standard Sanskrit reconstruction and appear to be transcriptions of Prākṛit, mixed-language, or purely dhāraṇī-register formulae; transliterations are as faithful as the Tibetan orthography permits.

- The phrase rendered "the Blessed Lady" throughout refers to Tārā, invoked through Avalokiteśvara's mantra preamble; the text uses the feminine honorific form of Bhagavān consistently, indicating a goddess, almost certainly Tārā, whose Kurukulle mantra appears in the preceding section.

The phrase "jaw-binding" or "mouth-binding" of apparitions loosely translated as "binds the mouths of apparitions" follows the literal Tibetan "kha 'ching," meaning to bind or silence the speech of supernatural beings.

The mantra phrase rendered "the four directions will be made fragrant with the sweet scent of their breath" reads literally "makes the breath of the mouth sweet-fragrant in the four directions," which is an unusual effect; in context it likely means that one's own speech becomes pleasing and commanding in all directions.

- The phrase rendered as "the great release" for འཕགས་པོ་འཕགས་པོ་ is a Tibetan vernacular phrase meaning "the great one" or "great liberation," functioning here as a gloss or epithet inserted within the mantra block. It appears twice: once as a prose gloss and once embedded in the mantra. The translation reflects this double occurrence faithfully.

The term "kaku worm" is a transliteration of ཀཀུམ་ཁྲོ་; the species is not identified in standard Buddhist lexica. The ritual instruction to seal the inscription in its burrow and "take hold of it by name" likely means to name the bound person, effecting their release by sympathetic ritual action.

The phrase ཡམ་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་ (yamwood / fire-stick wood) in the context of atimuktaka and vajra wood refers to the fuel sticks used in a homa fire-offering ritual. "Atimuktaka" is kept in Sanskrit as it is a plant name (a flowering vine, Gaertnera racemosa or similar).

The final mantra block beginning with Mu Ni Ka Sa I is left in transliteration as no coherent Sanskrit reconstruction is possible from the Tibetan phonetic rendering, and no standard mantra corpus is identifiable for this passage.

- The term "che ge mo" appearing throughout is left untranslated as it functions here as a quasi-proper name or placeholder within the ritual instructions, likely a Tibetan phonetic rendering of a Sanskrit term used in the operative mantra formula. Its precise referent in these instructions is the target person or entity of the subjugation ritual, potentially the one being bound or controlled, but it is treated as a fixed term in the ritual idiom and so left as is.

The phrase "arghya plant" renders "argha's leaf" literally; argha is normally a ritual water offering, but here the compound indicates a plant leaf used as a writing surface. The identification is uncertain.

The phrase "girl born in a mist" for "rmugs pa'i bu mo" may indicate a girl born under particular atmospheric or astrological conditions; the exact technical meaning within the ritual context is uncertain.

- The passage contains a series of mantras and dhāraṇīs transliterated from Sanskrit into Tibetan script. These have been rendered back into a normalized Sanskrit-style transliteration following the syllable-by-syllable Tibetan phonetic spellings, which are often corrupt or represent prakritized forms; the reconstructions are approximate and some syllables resist confident identification.

The phrase rendered "at a moment seized by a planetary spirit" translates the Tibetan gzas zin pa'i dus, meaning a moment or time that is astrologically "seized" or "held" by a planetary demon or malefic asterism — a technical term from Indo-Tibetan astrology indicating an inauspicious or ritually significant moment. This has been rendered literally; some contexts treat it as simply an astrologically determined time for the rite.

The "dharma-source" renders chos 'byung, which in tantric ritual contexts often refers to the triangular or source-shaped symbol; this interpretation has been preferred over a literal reading as "origin of phenomena."

- The phrase rendered as "naturally occurring flowers" is a euphemism in the tradition for menstruation; "a woman of ill fortune who lacks naturally occurring flowers" means a woman who has ceased to menstruate (or who is infertile), and "separated from her household" suggests a woman estranged from or abandoned by her husband. The whole passage describes the incense's power to restore or transform her fortune.

The phrase "the shadow of a winnowing basket" used in shade-drying is a practical instruction to dry the ingredients in the shade cast by a winnowing basket rather than in direct sunlight — a common Ayurvedic preparation method.

The expression "the hundred gods of desire, Indra included" renders a formulaic phrase meaning the gods of the desire realm with Indra (Śakra) as their chief.

- The instruction to recite the mantra "as many times as the number of pustules" requires the practitioner to count the pustules first, then perform that number of recitations over the sandalwood water — a practical ritual correspondence that is straightforward once one sees the structure.

The term rendered "lord of the gaṇas" translates a compound meaning the deity who presides over the host of attendants, identifiable in this tantric context as Gaṇapati or a similar figure.

The phrase rendered "retention of what is heard" translates a term indicating the capacity to hold and remember Dharma teachings heard — a recognized supernatural attainment associated with dhāranī practice.

- The phrase rendered as "the venerable lady along with her retinue" refers to Tārā with her attendants; the context of the preceding passage involving dream-revelation mantras makes this identification clear, though the text does not name her explicitly here.

The term rendered as "disease of thorns" for གྲོ་མེད་ follows the literal Tibetan, which may refer to a specific painful condition characterized by sharp stabbing sensations, possibly identical with or related to what was earlier called the affliction of pustules; the precise clinical identification is uncertain.

The phrase "three levels of the body" for 三身 literally means "stabbing pain of the third ground" or "of the three grounds"; this likely refers to pain pervading the three regions of the body (upper, middle, lower), but a more technical medical interpretation cannot be ruled out.

The mantra rendered as being for "iron filings swallowed by a living creature" translates 吞鐵屑令活物 literally; the application instruction that follows (rinsing water left one day and cast away) suggests a purification ritual rather than a literal ingestion cure.

- The final title, rendered here as "the Jewel of Excellence treatise," translates the Tibetan Nor bu bzang po'i rtog pa. The word rtog pa in this context likely functions as "treatise" or "composition" rather than the philosophical term "conceptual thought," following the usage in practical dhāraṇī literature.

The passage "Iha bde byed yin yang rengs par byed" presents a slight ambiguity: "even if it is the god who brings comfort" likely refers to a beneficent deity being made to rage against the target of the rite. The god "who brings comfort" may be an epithet of a specific deity, though context does not clarify which one.

Several of the mantra strings in this passage are in a degraded or heavily Tibetanized transcription of Sanskrit and possibly other Indic languages, making full phonological reconstruction impossible; they are rendered as they appear.

- The Tibetan monk-translator's name, rendered here as "Baris," is a transcription of a Tibetan personal name (Ba ris) that does not correspond to a well-attested historical figure in standard translation-team records; the identification remains uncertain.
