

Dhāraṇī Called Bestower of Well-being of the Noble Jambhala, Lord of Waters, the Compassionate One

Kāruṇikasya āryajambhala jalendrasu śaṃkaranāma dhāraṇī · Toh 769 · Derge Kangyur
འཕགས་པ་གནད་འཇམ་མཉམ་ཆེན་པོ་སྒྲིམ་པའི་ཐུགས་བརྒྱུན་པའི་བུ་བྱ་

Toh 769 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Kāruṇikasya Āryajambhala Jalendrasu Śaṃkaranāma Dhāraṇī and in Tibetan as the "Bestower of Well-being of the Noble Jambhala, Lord of Waters, the Compassionate One." It belongs to the dhāraṇī section of the Kangyur, a category of texts centered on protective and efficacious ritual formulas. The text concerns the bodhisattva and wealth deity Jambhala in his aspect as a compassionate lord of waters, and it unfolds as a discourse in which the yakṣa chieftain Maṇibhadra's son speaks before the Buddha, promising protection and the fulfillment of wishes to any person — monastic or lay — who recites his essence mantra regularly. As is typical of dhāraṇī literature, the text combines narrative framing with the transmission of a sacred formula believed to confer worldly and spiritual benefits on its practitioners.

In the language of India: Kāruṇikasya āryajambhala jalendrasu śaṃkaranāma dhāraṇī. In the language of Tibet: The dhāraṇī called "Bestower of Well-being of the Noble Jambhala, Lord of Waters, the Compassionate One."

Homage to the Omniscient One.

Thus did I hear. At one time, the Blessed One was dwelling in the Jewel City, in the residence of the bodhisattva Maṇibhadra, son of Maṇibhadra the great yakṣa chieftain.

Then the great yakṣa chieftain Maṇibhadra's son addressed the Blessed One with these words: "Blessed One, if any monk, or nun, or layman, or laywoman recollects my essence mantra three times by day and three times by night, Blessed One, I will always follow after that person. I will protect them from yakṣas at a distance of a hundred leagues. I will bring all their wishes to complete fulfillment. Apart from misdeeds arising from desire, I will bestow upon them food and drink, clothing and nourishment, wealth and grain, goods, and gold.

Tadyathā: hili maṇi bhadra, hili hili maṇi bhadra, kili maṇi bhadra, kili kili maṇi bhadra, kuru maṇi bhadra, kuru kuru maṇi bhadra, turu maṇi bhadra, turu turu maṇi bhadra, tsuru maṇi bhadra, tsuru tsuru maṇi bhadra, suru maṇi bhadra, suru suru maṇi bhadra, oṃ ehyehi tiṣṭha tiṣṭha me sādahaya svāhā. Tadyathā:

pūtane pūtane, surume, sumāte, subante supūṣye, hili mili svāhā.

The ritual is as follows: on the fifteenth day of the waxing moon, draw a maṇḍala with white sandalwood paste, burn aloeswood incense, and recite.

Translator's Notes

- The title identifies this text as a dhāraṇī of Jambhala (the wealth deity, a form of yakṣa), specifically the "Lord of Waters" aspect. The Tibetan title renders the Sanskrit "jalendrasu" as "chu dbang" (Lord of Waters), and "kāruṇika" as "snying rje can" (compassionate one). The bodhisattva title applied to Maṇibhadra here is unusual and worth noting; Maṇibhadra is standardly a yakṣa chieftain, and the text's application of "bodhisattva" to him likely reflects a syncretic Tantric context in which he is elevated to bodhisattva status.

The mantra syllables are transliterated directly from the Tibetan phonetic rendering of Sanskrit and are left untranslated, as is standard for dhāraṇī and mantra material.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.