Toh 415 · Derge Kangyur

Toh 415 in the Kangyur is a Vajrayāna tantric text known in Sanskrit as the Śrī Saṃvara Khasama Tantra Rāja, in Tibetan as the Dpal Khor Lo bDe mChog Nam mKha' dang mNyam pa'i rGyud kyi rGyal po, and in English as The Glorious Cakrasaṃvara — the King of Tantras Equal to Space. It belongs to the class of highest yoga tantras (Anuttarayogatantra) associated with the Cakrasaṃvara cycle, a major stream of Indo-Tibetan tantric practice centered on the deity Cakrasaṃvara and the ḍākinī Vajravārāhī, and it concerns the esoteric instructions on the net-vow of the ḍākinīs, the sequential blessing of the tantra, and the profound secret teachings requested by Vajrasattva in the presence of the Blessed One. The text opens in the classic sūtra-style framing of the Vajrayāna canon, with the Buddha dwelling in union with the Vajra Lady and responding to Vajrasattva's request for the most secret of teachings. It was translated into Tibetan by the Indian paṇḍita Gayādhara together with the Tibetan lotsāwa, the fully ordained monk Śākya Yeshe.

The Tantra Called "Sambara" — the Great Sequential Blessing of the Tantra Called "The Endowed One": the Examination of the Net-Vow of the Ḍākinī, Free of Confusion — is complete. This was translated by the Indian master, the paṇḍita Gayādhara, and the Tibetan translator, the fully ordained monk Śākya Yeshe.

In the Indian language: Śrī Saṃvara Khasama Tantra Rāja Nāma. In the Tibetan language: The Glorious Cakrasaṃvara — the King of Tantras Equal to Space.

Homage to Mañjuśrī, the primordial wisdom bodhisattva.

Thus did I hear. At one time the Blessed One, the body, speech, and mind vajra of all Tathāgatas, was dwelling in the bhaga of the noble Vajra Lady. Then, blessed by all the Tathāgatas, Vajrasattva made this request: "O Blessed One, please teach that great secret, more secret than the secret itself." The Blessed One declared:

Vajrasattva, listen well.

The life-force and the fifth — just so — are themselves the path and the fruit.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the life-force?" The Blessed One declared:

The life-force is that which holds.

It is the mantra, the wind, and the support.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the fifth?" The Blessed One declared:

The five buddhas and the five elements —
the fifth is itself one alone.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the path?" The Blessed One declared:

Ripening and liberation.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the path of ripening?" The Blessed One declared:

The vase, the secret, wisdom,
and the essential nature of the fourth —
one abides in that very form of it.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the path of liberation?" The Blessed One declared:

Born from great compassion,
perfected through the force of joy,
the supreme non-duality of method and wisdom —
great bliss is the path.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is great compassion? What is joy? What is method? What is wisdom? What is non-duality?" The Blessed One declared:

The supreme compassion is objectless.

Joy is non-dual great bliss.

Method is glorious Heruka himself.

Wisdom is the Vajra Yoginī.

Non-duality is the supreme union.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is Heruka? What is the Yoginī?" The Blessed One declared:

Heruka is the aggregates themselves,

and the aggregates again are Heruka.

The elements are glorious Vajrā —

and glorious Vajrā is the elements themselves.

The sense sources likewise are the same.
They are to be known as the very nature of the deity.

Vajrasattva asked: "Blessed One, what is the Heruka of the aggregates? What is the Vajra Yoginī of the elements?" The Blessed One declared:

Glorious Heruka is the very self itself,
bearing a color free of stain,
holding vajra and bell,
adorned with six ornaments and endowed with nine,
arrayed with moons of varied forms, vajras,
and the lord of the family.
Beautified by three pure eyes,
wearing a skirt free of attachment.

The Yoginī, whose nature is wisdom,
is of the color of a red bindu.
She is naked, adorned with the five mudrās,
beautified by a garland of fifty pure ones.
She holds the vessel of the vajra lotus,
and embraces the father, dwelling in posture of extending and gathering.
Delighting in the non-dual great bliss,
she sways in the midst of the lotus and the sun.

The elements themselves are the very deity.

This has been a section on the generation stage from the Glorious Cakrasaṃvara Tantra, the King of Tantras Equal to Space — the first chapter.

Vajrasattva asked:

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is purification by intrinsic nature? What is luminosity by essential nature?

The Blessed One declared:

All that is still and all that moves is itself the mother, wisdom's nature.
The fifth's essential nature is luminosity,
the body unborn, free of conceptual thought,
inexpressible and inconceivable,
beyond thought, like the midst of space,
of the form of non-dual bliss,

clear in nature, without movement,
the supreme bliss of non-duality —
this is the form of the fruit, the path.

This has been a section on the completion stage from the Glorious Cakrasaṃvara Tantra, the King of Tantras Equal to Space — the second chapter.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the purification of conceptuality?

The Blessed One declared:

Mantra, fire offering, torma,
the purification of empowerment,
maṇḍala, and likewise
knowing the vase's nature as deity —
this is the suchness of mantra.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the mantra? What is the fire offering?
What is the torma? What is the empowerment? What is the maṇḍala? What is the vase? What is the suchness of mantra?

The Blessed One declared: The mantra is the secret king of mantras:

Oṃ śrī vajra he he ru ru kaṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ. Ḍākinī jāla saṃbara svāhā. Oṃ hrīḥ ha ha hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ. Oṃ sarva buddha ḍākinīye vajra varṇanīye hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ svāhā. Oṃ vajra vairocaṇīye hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ svāhā.

These kings of secret mantra purify without remainder all misdeeds accumulated over a thousand eons and more.

Four-sided and four-gated,
adorned throughout with wheels,
the aśvattha tree, the nyagrodha tree,
and dūrvā grass and the like —
know these rightly as the nature of the fourth.

The five meats and the five nectars:
when the sound of phaṃ is proclaimed upward,
all the heroes and yoginīs rejoice.

The empowerment is the path of the final one.

Anointed well with nectar water,
worshipped with red flowers,
beautified by the bhrūṃ syllable in a fine jeweled vessel —
the nectar purifies the heroes.

With the rays of mantra from the four faces,
all harmful ones without exception are subdued,
in the form of extending and gathering.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what are the ḍākinīs of the sense sources?

The Blessed One declared:

Naked, of ash-colored complexion,
they wander through the twenty-four sacred sites —
the fifth and the sixth.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the mantra? What is the tormā?

The Blessed One declared:

Om jvala mukhi ḍākinī kaṃ kaṃ hūṃ phaṭ. Om parināyāni ḍākinī hūṃ phaṭ.
Om maḍira ḍākinī hūṃ phaṭ. Om para mukhi ḍākinī hūṃ phaṭ. Om ulukati ḍākinī hūṃ phaṭ. Om araṇa maṇi ḍākinī hūṃ phaṭ.

Adorned throughout with water-born flowers, beautified by the five nectars —
the six heroines will be pleased.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the path of ripening?

The Blessed One declared:

Its nature is that of the fourth;
one abides in that form.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the nature of form? What is the nature of emanation?

The Blessed One declared:

The nature of form is deity itself;
emanation is explained as the lord of the assembly.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, who is the lord of the assembly?

The Blessed One declared:

Red in color, by the power of empowerment,
one-faced and four-armed,
the emanation abides on the spokes of the wheel,
pressing down in the manner of extending and gathering.

Vajrasattva asked: Blessed One, what is the approach practice?

The Blessed One declared:

The approach practice is the mantra itself:

Oṃ gaṇapataye svāhā.

For black sesame pills —

one abides as the deity of approach and accomplishment, and is to be known as the essential nature of the mantra.

This is a section on miscellaneous rites, the third chapter, from the tantra called the Glorious Cakrasaṃvara Equal to Space.

When the Blessed One had spoken thus, the bodhisattva Vajragarbha, the bodhisattva Vajravikḥādāna, and that assembly of innumerable yoginīs rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had declared.

This concludes the self-translation made by the Kashmiri abbot Jñānavajra.

Translator's Notes

- The opening colophon belongs to the preceding text and the second colophon opens the new text, the Śrī Saṃvara Khasama Tantra Rāja. The Sanskrit title Khasama means "equal to space" or "sky-equal," rendered literally in the Tibetan.

The phrase "more secret than the secret" renders a superlative construction indicating that the teaching requested exceeds even ordinary esoteric Dharma.

The "fifth" throughout this dialogue is a compressed reference to the fifth element or fifth buddha within the fivefold scheme; the precise referent is deliberately terse, as is typical of tantric scriptural style.

"Bhaga" is left untranslated as in the source, being a technical tantric term referring to the consort's generative center understood symbolically as the locus of non-dual wisdom. Rendering it otherwise would lose the doctrinal precision.

"Adorned with six ornaments and endowed with nine" refers to standard tantric iconographic sets: the six bone ornaments and the nine expressions or gestures.

"Garland of fifty pure ones" likely refers to the fifty letters of the Sanskrit alphabet represented as a skull garland, a standard iconographic feature.

The final line "Vajrasattva asked:" indicates the passage ends mid-dialogue, exactly as in the source.

- The passage ends mid-sentence with the description of the approach practice and the instruction regarding black sesame pills; the text breaks off here at the end of the supplied input. The colophon closes chapter two of the completion stage before the question-and-answer sequence of chapter three begins, and the mantras are transliterated as they appear in the Tibetan without emendation, following standard practice for sacred syllables. The phrase "the fifth and the sixth" in the ḍākinī verse likely refers to the fifth and sixth of a categorized list (possibly the sense-source ḍākinīs numbered in sequence), the full list being elliptically omitted in this chapter section.
- The colophon phrase rendered "self-translation" reflects the Tibetan rang 'gyur, indicating that the Kashmiri paṇḍita Jñānavajra translated the text himself, without a Tibetan co-translator — an unusual circumstance noted in the colophon. The bodhisattva name Vajravikḥādana is a restoration from the Tibetan rdo rje gnod gnas, literally "vajra harm-abider," which corresponds to this attested Sanskrit name in the Cakrasaṃvara cycle.
