

The Dhāraṇī of Two Verses

Gāthādvayadhāraṇī · Toh 143 · Derge Kangyur

ཆགས་ས་བྱུང་པ་གཉིས་པའི་གཟུངས།

Toh 143 in the Kangyur is a short dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Gāthādvayadhāraṇī and in Tibetan as the Dhāraṇī of Two Verses. It belongs to the dhāraṇī literature of the Kangyur and presents a brief verse teaching on the spiritual obstacles that impede beings — including disrespect toward the Buddha and Dharma, laziness, attachment, and doubt — followed by a dhāraṇī mantra offered as their antidote. The text was translated into Tibetan by the Indian scholars Jinamitra and Dānaśīla together with the renowned Tibetan editor-translator Kawa Paltsek, and despite its compact form it carries the characteristic structure of canonical dhāraṇī scriptures, combining doctrinal verse with a ritual mantra formula.

Translated by Jinamitra, Dānaśīla, and the great editor-translator Kawa Paltsek, and definitively established.

In the Indian language: Gāthādvayadhāraṇī. In the Tibetan language: The Dhāraṇī of Two Verses.

Homage to Mañjuśrī, the Ever-Youthful.

Disrespect toward the buddhas and the Dharma, laziness, and being content with little,
acting out of attachment and arrogance, remorse, and those who engender doubt — these have become obscurations for sentient beings.
As their antidote, the supreme Vehicle is taught.
All the faults of those who create obstacles to it shall be thoroughly abandoned.

Tadyathā: oṃ vajraprakāra vajraprakāra vajracakra daṃṣṭrābhayanake amale vimale nirmacūluke cūluke cūlucūlu sarvābuddhe svāhā.

Now, whoever engages with this Dhāraṇī of Two Verses through the gateway of word or meaning — that noble sentient being endowed with intelligence shall attain ten kinds of benefit.

All the elements of being shall expand and flourish.

At the moment of death, the supreme, sublime joy shall be obtained.

Rebirth shall come as one wishes,
and throughout all lives past lives shall be remembered.
One shall come to meet the buddhas,
and likewise from them hear the supreme Vehicle.
With faith and intelligence one shall become inspired —

Translator's Notes

- The text breaks off mid-sentence at the end, as the source passage is incomplete. The final line "□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□" is unfinished; the translation renders what is present and stops there naturally.

The mantra line (tadyathā onward) is rendered in transliteration as is conventional for dhāraṇī passages, preserving the Sanskrit phonetics without translation.

The phrase "सर्वस्यैवास्तित्वं भवति" literally means "all the constituent elements shall expand"; in this context it likely refers to the bodily constituents or elements of vitality flourishing, which is a standard benefit formula in dhāraṇī literature.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.