

The Noble Heart-Essence of the Queen of Vidyā Mantras, the Peacock

Āryamāyūravidyāgarbhe nāma · Toh 560 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་པ་རག་སྒྲུབ་ཀྱི་མཚན་པོ་དཔལ་ལྷན་གྱི་ཞེས་བ་བྱ

Toh 560 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Āryamāyūravidyāgarbhe and in Tibetan as the Noble Heart-Essence of the Queen of Vidyā Mantras, the Peacock, or in English roughly as the Noble Heart-Essence of the Peacock Queen of Knowledge Mantras. It belongs to the genre of protective dhāraṇī literature, presenting a series of invocations and sacred formulas intended to guard practitioners against a wide range of dangers — including fear of enemies, wild beasts, poison, fire, and water — as well as illnesses arising from imbalances of wind, bile, and phlegm. The Peacock (Mayūra) is a figure of ancient Indian religious tradition associated with the neutralization of poison and the warding off of harm, and this text draws on that symbolism to offer comprehensive spiritual and physical protection. Sitting within the Kangyur's collection of dhāraṇī and mantra literature, it represents an important example of the ritual-protective scriptures that formed a significant part of Buddhist practice across South and Central Asia.

Revised and definitively established by new editing.

In the language of India: Āryamāyūravidyāgarbhe nāma. In the language of Tibet: The Noble Heart-Essence of the Queen of Vidyā Mantras, the Peacock.

Homage to the Blessed One, the Great Peacock. Homage to the Buddha. Homage to the Dharma. Homage to the Saṅgha.

If one finds oneself in the midst of any fear — fear of enemies, fear of conflict, fear of obstructing spirits (vighnakāraṅkas), fear of untimely death, fear of snakes, fear of wild beasts, fear of poison, fear of fire, fear of water, fear of wind, or any fear whatsoever — one should call this to mind.

If one finds oneself in the midst of any illness — illness arising from wind, illness arising from bile, illness arising from phlegm, illness arising from their combination, being seized by malevolent spirits, struck by epidemic disease, having drunk poison, or any illness whatsoever — one should call this to mind.

Namo bhagavate, iṭṭhiṭṭhāya, indragomisikāya, āśane, pāśane, pāpanikūle, kapilāmitte, ilemitte svāhā. May the foundations of the secret mantras be accomplished.

Nārāyaṇi, pārāyaṇi, harita, tāli, kuntāli, ilimisti, kilitirimisti svāhā. May the foundations of the vidyā mantras be accomplished.

Ha ha, hi hi, hu hu, kharā, marā, khahi, khahi, hūṃ hūṃ, phaṭ phaṭ svāhā. Protect me! Protect me! May I live for a hundred years! May I behold a hundred autumns!

This is to be recited twenty-one times, and the tormā offering is then to be cast onto a high mountain. By this, everything is pacified and turned back —

Translator's Notes

- The text breaks off mid-sentence at the end with "□□□□□□□□□□," meaning the passage as supplied is incomplete. The full phrase likely continues "pacified and turned back and averted."

The title refers to the Āryamāyūravidyārājñī, the noble peacock dhāraṇī, a well-known protective dhāraṇī text found in the Tibetan canon. The phrase translated as "Heart-Essence" renders "yang snying," meaning innermost heart or quintessence, suggesting this is an abbreviated or distilled version of the longer text.

The mantra syllables are rendered in transliteration as they appear. Some syllables are ritual sound-forms without standard Sanskrit lexical equivalents.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.