Toh 89 in the Kangyur is a Mahāyāna sūtra known in Sanskrit as the Ārya-Akṣayamati-paripṛcchā and in Tibetan as "Phags pa blo gros mi zad pas zhus pa," rendered in English as "The Noble Sūtra of the Questions of Inexhaustible Intelligence." The text records teachings given by the Buddha on Vulture Peak Mountain at Rājagṛha, framed as a dialogue initiated by the bodhisattva Inexhaustible Intelligence, and belongs to a tradition of inquiry-centered Mahāyāna scriptures in which a bodhisattva's questions draw forth profound doctrinal exposition. It forms the forty-fifth chapter of the vast collection known as the Great Heap of Jewels, the Ratnakūṭa, a compendium of one hundred thousand chapters gathering numerous independent sūtras under a single organizing title. The translation into Tibetan was carried out and finalized by the great translator-monk Yeshé Dé, one of the most prolific and revered translators of the early period of Buddhist textual transmission in Tibet.

From the Great Noble Heap of Jewels, the Enumeration of Dharmas in One Hundred Thousand Chapters: Chapter Forty-Five, the Prophecy Requested by the Noble Inexhaustible Intelligence. One fascicle.

In the language of India: Ārya-Akṣayamati-paripṛcchā-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra.

In the Tibetan language: The Noble Mahāyāna Sūtra Called "The Questions of Inexhaustible Intelligence."

Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear. At one time, the Blessed One was dwelling at Rājagṛha, on Vulture Peak Mountain, together with a great Saṅgha of one thousand two hundred and fifty monks, and with a thousand bodhisattvas — namely, the great bodhisattva Jñānaketu, the great bodhisattva Dharmaketu, the great bodhisattva Candraketu, the great bodhisattva Sūryaketu, the great bodhisattva Anantaketu, and Bhadrāpāla and the other sixteen holy persons; the sixty incomparable bodhisattvas headed by the great bodhisattva Mañjuśrī; and all the great bodhisattvas of the Fortunate Aeon headed by Maitreya — all present together in that assembly.

The great bodhisattva Inexhaustible Intelligence was also there, seated in that very assembly, surrounded and attended upon in front by sixty million bodhisattvas.

Then the great bodhisattva Inexhaustible Intelligence rose from his seat, arranged his upper robe over one shoulder, placed his right knee on the ground, and, with palms pressed together turned toward the Blessed One, offered to the Blessed One a canopy of flowers of various precious gems and a shower of flowers, and spoke these words to the Blessed One:

"Blessed One, we speak of 'the awakening mind, the awakening mind' — but, Blessed One, by what measure does a bodhisattva truly possess the awakening mind? Blessed One, what is the awakening mind? Blessed One, with respect to awakening, no mind or act of thinking is apprehended — it has never been apprehended, and it will never come to be apprehended. Nor is the awakening mind apprehended anywhere apart from awakening. Awakening is inexpressible. Mind has no form, cannot be shown, has no obstruction, has no cognitive manifestation, and no act of thinking is apprehended in it either. Blessed One, how then are we to understand the meaning of these phenomena?"

The Blessed One declared: "Son of good family, with respect to awakening, no sign, no designation, and no conventional label is apprehended; and the awakening mind is likewise not apprehended anywhere apart from awakening. Awakening is inexpressible. Mind has no form, cannot be shown, has no obstruction, has no cognitive manifestation — and no act of thinking is apprehended in it. Why is this so? Awakening is inexpressible; and just as awakening is, so too is mind. Just as mind is, so too is awakening. Just as both awakening and mind are, so too are all those who think. And just as those who think are, so too are all phenomena of the past, future, and present.

"Son of good family, it is in this way that a great bodhisattva acquires the name 'bodhisattva.' The mind that follows along with all phenomena — that is called the awakening mind. Awakening is neither past, nor future, nor present; and mind is just the same; and thinking is just the same. Because not a single phenomenon is apprehended, nothing whatsoever is found here: there is no awakening, no designation of awakening, no sentient being, no designation of sentient being, no śrāvaka —"

no designation of śrāvaka, no pratyekabuddha, no designation of pratyekabuddha, no bodhisattva, no designation of bodhisattva, no buddha, no designation of buddha, no conditioned phenomenon (saṃskṛta), no designation of a conditioned phenomenon, no unconditioned phenomenon (asaṃskṛta), no designation of an unconditioned phenomenon — none of these is apprehended, nor can they be apprehended, nor will they be apprehended.

And yet, son of good family, by way of example: just as the first arising of the mind is perfectly exalted by all wholesome roots in the manner of Mount Meru, so too its cause is the perfection of generosity.

The second arousal of mind regards all phenomena as the ground of activity, viewing them in the manner of the earth; its cause is the perfection of moral discipline.

The third arousal of mind is like the prowess of the maned lion, the king of wild beasts, in that it is free from fear, free from apprehension, and free from terror; its cause is the perfection of patience.

The fourth arousal of mind, in the manner of one who is irreversible, is regarded as being like the power, strength, force, diligence, and swiftness of Indra's son (Jayanta); its cause is the perfection of diligence.

The fifth arousal of mind, in the manner of one who is never satisfied by merit, is regarded as one who is perfectly exalted by manifold virtues; its cause is the perfection of meditative concentration.

The sixth arousal of mind, dispelling great dense darkness, is regarded as being like the brilliant orb of the sun; its cause is the perfection of wisdom.

The seventh arousal of mind, liberating beings from the wilderness of saṃsāra in the manner of a great caravan leader richly endowed, is regarded as gloriously adorned by the complete fulfillment of all intentions; its cause is the perfection of skillful means.

The eighth arousal of mind is regarded as complete in the thorough purification of all obscurations, by way of the analogy of the disk of the nearby moon, perfectly pure; its cause is the perfection of aspiration.

The ninth arousal of mind is regarded as fulfilling all intentions in the manner of the maṇḍala of all the arranged adornments of virtue of a perfectly pure buddha-field; its cause is the perfection of power.

The tenth arousal of mind, having received empowerment that grants sovereignty over all qualities, wisdom, and phenomena, is regarded as equal to space, by way of the analogy of the marks of a wheel-turning sovereign; its cause is the perfection of gnosis.

Son of good family, these are the ten arousals of mind of bodhisattvas. By being endowed with these, one is called a bodhisattva. In ultimate truth, however, there is no awakening here, no bodhisattva, and no awakening mind.

Son of good family, there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of generosity for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: the faculty of faith as forerunner; intention as forerunner; superior intention as forerunner; the perfections as forerunner; great loving-kindness as forerunner; great compassion as forerunner; support for sentient beings as forerunner; the means of attraction as forerunner; longing for the qualities of a buddha as forerunner; and longing for omniscient gnosis as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of generosity for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of moral discipline for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: complete purity of bodily action as forerunner; complete purity of verbal action as forerunner; complete purity of mental action as forerunner; non-harmfulness as forerunner; abandonment of all lower rebirths as forerunner; abandonment of the eight states of non-leisure as forerunner; transcending the ground of śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas as forerunner; aspiring to the qualities of a buddha as forerunner; complete fulfillment of intention as forerunner; and complete fulfillment of aspiration as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of moral discipline for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of patience for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: abandonment of attachment as forerunner; abandonment of anger as forerunner; not regarding the body as forerunner; not relying on life as forerunner; devotion as forerunner; the aim to ripen all sentient beings as forerunner; the power of loving-kindness as forerunner; patience with the profound Dharma as forerunner; devotion to the vast as forerunner; and the dispelling of ignorance as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of patience for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of diligence for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: concern for whatever may benefit all sentient beings as forerunner; rejoicing in the accomplishment of virtuous body, speech, and mind as forerunner; absence of despondency as forerunner; the aim to attain the gathering of the stage of irreversibility as forerunner; right effort as forerunner; close placement of mindfulness as forerunner; taming the enemy of mental afflictions as forerunner; seclusion from all phenomena as forerunner; the aim to ripen sentient beings as forerunner; and fully accomplishing the gnosis of omniscience as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of diligence for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of meditative concentration for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: abiding in virtuous phenomena as forerunner; meditative absorption as forerunner; meditative attainment as forerunner; perfect and complete awakening as forerunner; meditative concentration and liberation as forerunner; the faculty of meditative absorption as forerunner; the power of meditative absorption as forerunner; the abandonment of the mental afflictions of all sentient beings as forerunner; the complete fulfillment of the aggregate of meditative absorption as forerunner; and the complete preservation of the sacred Dharma as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of meditative concentration for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of wisdom for bodhisattvas.

What are the ten? They are as follows: expertise in the aggregates as forerunner; expertise in the elements as forerunner; expertise in the sense bases as forerunner; expertise in dependent origination as forerunner; expertise in the truths as forerunner; the removal of all mistaken views as forerunner; the faculty of wisdom as forerunner; patient acceptance of the non-arising of phenomena as forerunner; the complete fulfillment of all the qualities of a buddha as forerunner; and the beholding of unobscured wisdom as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the Perfection of Wisdom for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of skillful means for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: entering into the intentions and conduct of sentient beings as forerunner; the basis of sentient beings as forerunner; loving-kindness and compassion as forerunner; unflagging perseverance in ripening all sentient beings to complete maturity as forerunner; entering into all the qualities of a buddha as forerunner; the thorough assimilation of the vision of distinctive wisdom as forerunner; the full ripening that perfects and purifies all the perfections as forerunner; the thorough examination of phenomena exactly as they are as forerunner; the cultivation of the strength of mind as forerunner; and bringing about the complete attainment of the stage of irreversibility as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of skillful means for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of aspiration for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: knowing the dense and continuous flow of the mental conduct of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the mental afflictions of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the faculties of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the intentions and inclinations of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the intentions, superior intentions, and aspirations of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the various world-systems and of all three realms as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the intentions and latent tendencies of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of the deaths and rebirths of all sentient beings as forerunner; knowing the dense and continuous flow of all sentient beings as they are classified into three groups as forerunner; and knowing the ripening of sentient beings with unflagging faculties to complete maturity as forerunner. Son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of aspiration for bodhisattvas.

Son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of power for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: that all phenomena are primordially without arising as forerunner; that all phenomena are primordially without defining characteristics as forerunner; that all phenomena are primordially without birth as forerunner; that all phenomena are primordially non-existent as forerunner; that all phenomena are primordially without attachment as forerunner; that all phenomena are without entry as forerunner; that all phenomena are without reversal as forerunner; that all phenomena have the essential nature of non-existence as forerunner; and that the beginning, middle, and end of all phenomena are equal as forerunner; and that entry into the suchness of all phenomena is free from thought and conceptual thought as forerunner. O son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of this perfection of power for bodhisattvas.

O son of good family, in this regard there are ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of the perfection of wisdom for bodhisattvas. What are the ten? They are as follows: that all phenomena have been thoroughly examined in their differentiation as forerunner; that the complete and perfect fulfillment of wholesome qualities (the white dharmas) as forerunner; that the immeasurable accumulation of the collections for awakening as forerunner; that the taking up of the great accumulations of merit and wisdom as forerunner; that the thorough inward penetration of vast great compassion as forerunner; that the knowledge of the sequential differentiation of world-systems as forerunner; that entry into the dispositions of sentient beings and the conduct of their afflictions as forerunner; that the mindful attention that knows how to enter into and follow the domain of activity of the Tathāgatas as forerunner; that the focused and thorough knowledge of the ten powers, the fearlessnesses, and the unshared qualities of a buddha as forerunner; and that the attainment of the ground of empowerment into the wisdom of omniscience, which is endowed with the supremacy of all aspects, as forerunner. O son of good family, these are the ten qualities that serve as the forerunners of this perfection of wisdom for bodhisattvas.

Now, what is the meaning of the word "perfection"? The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings the distinctive qualities of conduct to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings profound and vast wisdom to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is the absence of attachment to conditioned and unconditioned phenomena. The meaning of "perfection" is the accurate comprehension of the faults of saṃsāra exactly as they are. The meaning of "perfection" is that which causes those who are ordinary and unlearned to penetrate inwardly.

The meaning of "perfection" is the genuine teaching of the inexhaustible treasury of Dharma. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to complete fulfillment the unobscured liberation. The meaning of "perfection" is the thorough knowing of the dispositions of sentient beings. The meaning of "perfection" is the subsequent recognition of the equality of giving. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings the equality of moral discipline to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings the equality of patience to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings the equality of diligence to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings the equality of meditative concentration to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to complete fulfillment the definitive mastery of the Perfection of Wisdom. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to thorough knowledge all phenomena. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to complete fulfillment the patient acceptance of non-arising. The meaning of "perfection" is that which causes the genuine attainment of the ground of non-return. The meaning of "perfection" is the thorough purification of buddha-fields. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings all sentient beings to complete maturation. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to complete fulfillment the wisdom of a buddha at the seat of awakening. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings all māras to be tamed.

The meaning of "perfection" is that which teaches and liberates by showing that saṃsāra and nirvāṇa are not two. The meaning of "perfection" is that which goes beyond all qualities to the other shore. The meaning of "perfection" is that which cuts down all opposing adversaries. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings to complete fulfillment the ten powers, the fearlessnesses, and the eighteen unshared qualities of a buddha. The meaning of "perfection" is that which brings all the qualities of a buddha to complete fulfillment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which causes the manifest, complete awakening of unsurpassed, perfect, and complete enlightenment. The meaning of "perfection" is that which turns the wheel of Dharma in its twelve aspects.

Noble son, the foretoken of the first bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds the world-systems of the great trichiliocosm filled entirely with treasures numbering a hundred thousand ten-millions of ten-millions. Noble son, the foretoken of the second bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds the world-systems of the great trichiliocosm become like the palm of one's hand, beautifully adorned with many precious jewels numbering a hundred thousand ten-millions of ten-millions. Noble son, the foretoken of the third bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds oneself as a hero, bearing firm weapons and armor, taming all opposing adversaries. Noble son, the foretoken of the fourth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds the great maṇḍala of the earth, complete in all its features, being visibly showered with varied flowers from the four directions by four wind maṇḍalas. Noble son, the foretoken of the fifth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds a woman adorned with every ornament placing upon one's head a garland of campaka flowers. Noble son, the foretoken of the sixth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one sees a lotus pool with four stairways, its golden sands spread out, clear and unsullied, filled completely with water endowed with eight qualities, adorned with blue lotuses, white water-lilies, and white lotuses, and one beholds oneself joyfully delighting and moving about within it. Noble son, the foretoken of the seventh bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one sees on both the right and left sides the abyss of the hell of sentient beings, yet one beholds oneself turning back from it without falling in and without coming to harm. Noble son, the foretoken of the eighth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds upon both shoulders the lion, king of wild beasts, maned and crowned, seated there, causing all smaller predators to tremble with fear. Noble son, the foretoken of the ninth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds a wheel-turning king, encircled by many beings numbering a hundred thousand ten-millions of ten-millions, gazing forward, holding above his head a white parasol adorned with various precious jewels. Noble son, the foretoken of the tenth bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva is this: one beholds the body of a Tathāgata, golden in hue, radiating light filling a fathom all around, encircled by many hundreds of thousands of ten-millions of ten-millions of Brahmā gods, gazing forward, teaching the Dharma. Noble son, these ten are the foretokens of the ten bodhisattva grounds for bodhisattva mahāsattvas.

Noble son, in this regard, a bodhisattva abiding on the first bodhisattva ground excels in the perfection of generosity. On the second bodhisattva ground, one excels in the perfection of moral discipline. On the third ground, one excels in the perfection of patience. On the fourth ground, one excels in the perfection of diligence. On the fifth ground, one excels in the perfection of meditative concentration. On the sixth ground, one excels in the perfection of wisdom. On the seventh ground, one excels in the perfection of skillful means. On the eighth ground, one excels in the perfection of aspiration. On the ninth ground, one excels in the perfection of power. On the tenth ground, one excels in the perfection of primordial wisdom.

Noble son, in this regard, the first arising of the awakening mind in a bodhisattva mahāsattva is born held within the meditative absorption called Supremely Exalted Jewel. The second arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Unestablished. The third arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Utterly Unshakeable. The fourth arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Irreversible. The fifth arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Jewel Flower. The sixth arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Splendor of Sunlight. The seventh arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Accomplishment of All Aims. The eighth arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Direct Presence of the Buddhas of the Present. The ninth arising of the awakening mind is born held within the meditative absorption called Lamp of Primordial Wisdom. The tenth arising of the awakening mind is born and held within the meditative absorption called Courageous Advance. Noble son, these are the ten arisings of the awakening mind of bodhisattva mahāsattvas.

Noble son, in this regard, on the first bodhisattva ground of a bodhisattva mahāsattva there arises the dhāraṇī called Distinctive Blessing. On the second ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Unconquerable by Others. On the third ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Well Established. On the fourth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Difficult to Tame. On the fifth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Manifold Qualities. On the sixth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Lamp of the Maṇḍala of Primordial Wisdom. On the seventh ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Supremely Transcendent. On the eighth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Thought Without Contamination. On the ninth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Ornament of Limitless Gateways. On the tenth ground there arises the dhāraṇī called Inexhaustible Treasury.

Then at that moment a son of the gods named Unobstructed Light-Ray Brilliance of Lion's Crest addressed the Blessed One, saying: "Blessed One, it is wondrous that within this enumeration of the Dharma all things are complete and all buddha qualities and virtues are accomplished." The Blessed One declared: "Son of the gods, it is exactly as you say. Son of the gods, the very moment bodhisattvas hear this enumeration of the Dharma, they will become irreversible from unsurpassable, perfectly complete awakening. And why is that? Noble son, Noble daughter, the seal of those whose roots of virtue ripening into irreversibility is this: that they have heard this enumeration of the Dharma. For this enumeration of the Dharma will never reach the ears of those who have not yet generated roots of virtue.

Noble son, by the mere hearing of this enumeration of the Dharma, noble sons and noble daughters will become purified in their superior intention, and they will never be parted from seeing buddhas. They will never be parted from hearing the sacred Dharma. They will never be parted from attending upon the Saṅgha. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that accomplishes the seal of the ocean of inexhaustible treasury. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that enters into the intentions, conduct, and speech of sentient beings. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī of the radiance of the solar crest. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī of the radiance of the lunar crest. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that accomplishes the complete suppression of all arising. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that crushes mountains firm and stable as vajra. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that properly turns toward the teaching of that which is beyond expression. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that enters into all words, conduct, and speech. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī sealed with the mudrā that accomplishes the stainless maṇḍala of the sky. They will never be parted from the dhāraṇī that accomplishes the complete perfection of the boundless body of a buddha.

Son of the gods, through attaining these dhāraṇīs, bodhisattvas display emanated buddha bodies in the buddha-fields of the ten directions and teach the Dharma. Yet they do not stir from the nature of reality, and there is no going and no coming. They ripen sentient beings, yet they have no perception of sentient beings. They teach the Dharma, yet they do not waver from the equality of letters. They display death and birth, yet there is no transfer and no birth. Because there is no conceptual thought with regard to all phenomena, the formations (saṃskāra) neither go anywhere nor come from anywhere.

When this enumeration of the Dharma was taught, three thousand bodhisattvas attained the patience of non-arising with respect to phenomena (Skt. anutpattikadharmakṣānti). Immeasurable sentient beings generated the mind of unsurpassable, perfectly complete awakening.

When the Blessed One had spoken these words, the great bodhisattva Inexhaustible Wisdom, along with those bodhisattvas, those monks, the son of the gods Unobstructed Light-Ray Brilliance of Lion's Crest, and the entire world with its gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas were filled with joy and gave great praise to what the Blessed One had taught.

This is the chapter requested by Inexhaustible Wisdom, the forty-fifth chapter from the hundred-thousand chapters of the noble Great Jewel Heap, the enumeration of Dharma known as the Mahāratnakūṭa.

This was translated by the Indian preceptor Surendrabodhi and the great editor-translator, the monk Ye—

Translator's Notes

- The passage breaks off mid-sentence at the end of the Tibetan input, ending with "no śrāvaka." This is not an error in translation but a genuine textual truncation at the source.

The names Jñānaketu, Dharmaketu, Candraketu, Sūryaketu, and Anantaketu are given here in Sanskrit reconstruction from the Tibetan: Ye shes tog, Chos kyi tog, Zla ba'i tog, Nyi ma'i tog, and Mtha' yas tog respectively, meaning "Crest of Wisdom," "Crest of Dharma," "Crest of the Moon," "Crest of the Sun," and "Crest of the Infinite." Bhadrāpāla is reconstructed for Bzang skyong. These reconstructions are standard and uncontroversial within the tradition.

- The fourth arousal of mind compares the bodhisattva's irreversibility to "Indra's son" — the Tibetan reads Sred med kyi bu, literally "son of Nairriti" or possibly "son of one without craving," which in some traditions identifies the deity Jayanta, son of Indra. The precise referent is not entirely certain; it may instead point to a minor deity associated with irreversible energy. This is noted as the one genuinely uncertain identification in this passage.

- The phrase rendered "not regarding the body" and "not relying on life" in the patience section conveys the bodhisattva's willingness to sacrifice body and life in the practice of patience, a standard doctrinal point in Mahāyāna literature on the paramitās.

The "eight states of non-leisure" are the eight conditions unfavorable to Dharma practice, standardly enumerated as the hell realms, the animal realm, the hungry ghost realm, the long-lived gods, regions without a buddha's teaching, wrong views, a world without a buddha, and being born with sensory impairment.

The term rendered "gathering of the stage of irreversibility" translates a phrase indicating the accumulation or obtaining of the bodhisattva stage from which one does not fall back; this is a technical reference to the irreversible bodhisattva ground.

- The phrase rendered "dense and continuous flow" translates the Tibetan compound meaning something like "thick, pervasive movement" or "dense stream." The term conveys the idea of a dense, unbroken current or thicket — the bodhisattva's comprehensive knowledge penetrates the entire mass and flow of these qualities in all beings simultaneously. This rendering reflects the standard commentarial gloss.

The "three groups" into which sentient beings are classified likely refers to the three spiritual lineages or dispositions, though the context of the aspiration perfection suggests it may indicate a different threefold division. The passage ends mid-sentence in the source text at "that all phenomena are without reversal as forerunner," indicating the passage continues beyond the supplied excerpt.

- The phrase rendered as "the equality of giving," "the equality of moral discipline," and so forth follows a recurring formulaic pattern in which each perfection is said to be recognized or fulfilled in its aspect of equanimity or non-discrimination. The term "equality" here renders mnyam pa nyid, which can also be read as "sameness" or "non-differentiation," pointing to the view that each perfection is practiced without conceptual discrimination between giver, recipient, and gift, and so on. This is a standard Mahāyāna doctrinal point and not a textual ambiguity, but it is worth noting for listeners unfamiliar with this technical usage.
- The term translated as "a hundred thousand ten-millions of ten-millions" renders the Tibetan numerical expression bye ba khrag khrig brgya stong, a stacked large-number formula; the precise value is enormous and somewhat stylized, but the rendering follows standard scholastic convention for such cosmological quantities.

The pool's flowers: utpala (blue lotus), kumuda (white water-lily), and padma dkar po (white lotus) are kept in their Indian botanical specificity rather than collapsed into a single term.

- The ten named meditative absorptions are rendered by their literal Tibetan meanings, as they appear to be specific titles within this text rather than established canonical Sanskrit equivalents. The name "Unestablished" for the second absorption renders "gnas pa med pa," which could also be read as "Non-Abiding" or "Without Fixed Abode," pointing to the doctrine of non-abiding nirvāṇa; the translation "Unestablished" preserves the literal sense while leaving the doctrinal resonance intact.
- The colophon breaks off mid-name, as the Tibetan text itself ends abruptly after "Ye," indicating the passage as supplied is incomplete. The translator's name is Yeshé Dé (Ye shes sde), the well-known Tibetan lotsāwa who worked with Surendrabodhi on numerous canonical texts; this is supplied by context and standard attribution but the name is not completed in the given text.

The phrase rendered "patience of non-arising with respect to phenomena" translates the standard Mahāyāna technical term anutpattikadharmakṣānti, the realization that phenomena do not truly arise, a milestone attainment on the bodhisattva path.
