Toh 580 · Derge Kangyur

Toh 580 in the Kangyur is a short dhāraṇī text known in Tibetan as something close to "The Essences of the Perfections," presenting a series of sacred mantra formulas — one for each of the six perfections, including generosity, moral discipline, patience, diligence, and the rest — paired with the assurance that merely hearing each formula once will cause one to attain that quality. The text belongs to the dhāraṇī section of the Kangyur, a broad category that gathers spells, incantations, and condensed ritual formulas drawn from the broader Mahāyāna tradition. Its structure is liturgical and mnemonic rather than discursive, making it representative of the practical, practice-oriented scriptural material preserved alongside the major sūtras and tantras. No distinct Sanskrit title is recoverable with certainty from the available source lines, though the mantras embedded in the text are clearly transliterated from Sanskrit originals.

Translator's Notes

- The passage is a series of dhāraṇī formulas corresponding to the six perfections, each introduced by a Tibetan rubric stating that hearing the respective "essence" dhāraṇī even once confers the corresponding perfection. The Sanskrit dhāraṇīs are reproduced as phonetic transcriptions from the Tibetan transliteration and are rendered here in standard Roman script approximating the intended Sanskrit; the Tibetan phonetic spellings are imprecise in places, and some syllables may represent corruptions of the original Sanskrit that cannot be fully reconstructed with certainty. The text breaks off mid-sentence at the beginning of the wisdom dhāraṇī, indicating that this is a fragment and the passage continues beyond the excerpt provided.
