

The Noble One Who Dispels All Sicknesses

Toh 623 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་པ་ནད་ཐམས་ཅད་

Toh 623 in the Kangyur is a short dhāraṇī text known in Tibetan as Phags pa nad thams cad, belonging to the broader category of dhāraṇī and ritual literature within the canon. The text opens with homage to the Three Jewels and to the Vajra Guru, a buddhaform associated with healing and spiritual power, before presenting a Sanskrit mantra formula beginning with the invocation of vajra. As a dhāraṇī scripture, it is concerned with the pacification of illness, invoking the protective and curative force of the Vajra Guru through sacred syllables and ritual recitation. Its precise Sanskrit title is not fully recoverable from the opening lines, but the Tibetan incipit suggests it was understood as a noble scripture addressing the elimination of all diseases.

Homage to the Three Jewels. Homage to the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly and completely awakened buddha, the King of the Vajra Guru.

Tadyathā: vajra vajra, mahāvajra, sarvabhyādhīhana hana vajrena svāhā.

The noble one, all sicknesses —

Translator's Notes

- The passage breaks off mid-sentence at the end, cutting off what appears to be the title or opening of a sūtra or dhāraṇī text dedicated to the noble one who removes all sicknesses. The full title is likely something along the lines of "The Noble Dhāraṇī that Eliminates All Sicknesses." The mantra syllables are rendered in standard romanized Sanskrit transliteration as they appear phonetically in the Tibetan; the Sanskrit reconstruction of "sarvabhyādhī" (all diseases/afflictions) confirms the medical or healing context of this text.
