

This text is the concluding portion of the Tantra of the Blazing Flame Ḍākiṇī (I

Toh 842 · Derge Kangyur

This text is the concluding portion of the Tantra of the Blazing Flame Ḍākinī (likely Ḍākinī-jvālāmukhī-tantra in Sanskrit; Tibetan:

འཇིག་རྟེན་སྐད་ཀྱི་མཛོད་ཆུང་།), identified as Toh 842 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the class of tantric scriptures associated with wrathful ḍākinī practice. The passage presented here closes the twenty-second chapter, titled "The Complete Prophecy," and transitions into verses addressed to a fierce protective goddess, instructing the practitioner on proper offerings to the Victors of the five buddha families and on upholding the twenty-eight samaya vows. The verses further detail conditions under which the deity should unleash a "rain of weapons" against enemies of the Three Jewels and the Buddha's teaching, while cautioning restraint in cases of minor conflict. As a tantra concerned with ritual commitments, protective deity invocation, and the safeguarding of the Dharma, this text exemplifies the wrathful, protector-oriented strand of tantric literature preserved in the Kangyur.

Thus have I prophesied.

This concludes the twenty-second chapter, on the complete prophecy, from the Tantra of the Blazing Flame Dākinī.

If you make offerings, always offer to the Victors (Jinas) of the five families.

If you keep vows, keep the twenty-eight samaya commitments.

If an enemy arises, dark goddess, send forth a rain of weapons.

For a minor fault, mere quarreling, do not send forth weapons.

If my storehouse of offerings is destroyed, send forth a rain of weapons.

If the eminence of the Three Jewels is disparaged, send forth a rain of weapons.

If the Buddha's teaching is destroyed, send forth a rain of weapons.

If enemies of the Three Jewels' very body spread and flourish, send forth a rain of weapons...

Translator's Notes

- The final line is incomplete in the source text, breaking off after "mtshon char" (a rain of weapons), lacking the concluding verb "phyung" (send forth) that appears in the parallel preceding lines. I have rendered it as a natural continuation of the refrain, marked with an ellipsis to indicate the textual break, since the source itself ends mid-phrase.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.