Toh 732 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Sanskrit as the Ārya-yaśovatī-dhāraṇī and in Tibetan as the Dhāraṇī of the Noble Lady of Renown. It belongs to the broader class of dhāraṇī literature and consists of a collection of protective mantras and ritual instructions, several of which are attributed to or invoked through the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara, offering remedies for epidemic disease, spirit-possession, and other afflictions. The text appears immediately following the Sūtra of the Noble Lady Tārā Protecting from the Eight Fears, with which it shares its manuscript context, suggesting it circulated alongside related protective and devotional materials. As a dhāraṇī scripture, it is characteristic of the Kangyur's extensive corpus of short ritual texts presenting mantra formulas together with practical instructions for their application.

"So be it," he declared, and all the assembled retinue rejoiced and offered praise.

The Sūtra of the Noble Lady Tārā Protecting from the Eight Fears is complete.

In the language of India: Ārya-yaśovatī-dhāraṇī. In the Tibetan language: The Dhāraṇī of the Noble Lady of Renown. Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Nama āryāvalokiteśvarāya bodhisattvāya mahāsattvāya. Tadyathā: jvare mahājvare, dukhemukti susaṃpanne, mahāsaṃpanne, saṃpatti, mahāsaṃpatti, kase mahākase, kacchajvaramuktesī svāhā.

Recite this mantra three times over a cord or over water, and one will be freed from epidemic disease.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Nama āryāvalokiteśvarāya bodhisattvāya mahāsattvāya. Tadyathā: cili cili, mili mili, rakṣa rakṣa māṃ, āryāvalokiteśvara svāhā.

For all spirit-possession, recite this mantra three times over a cord of five colors or over a red cord, tie three knots, and bind it on — all harm-causing interference will be pacified.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Nama āryāvalokiteśvarāya bodhisattvāya mahāsattvāya. Tadyathā: kili kili, cili cili, nigile svāhā.

Recite this mantra three times over sesame oil and apply it, and tumors will be healed.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Nama āryāvalokiteśvarāya bodhisattvāya mahāsattvāya. Tadyathā: sare sare, bisare bisare, saranāśani svāhā.

For lung disease, disorders of the abdomen and spleen, tongue ailments, and all diseases caused by spirit-possession, recite this mantra three times over water and apply it — benefit will follow.

Namo ratnatrayāya. Nama āryāvalokiteśvarāya, vajrapāṇidhyāma. Oṃ oṃ krāra prabhava, bhagavati buddhe, pratibuddhe, uddhe, śāntikari, hana hana, mama pāpam, daha daha, mama pāpadaṃ, paca paca, mama pāpakaṃ, oṃ oḍe, grasa grasa, rite ḍerite ḍe, śāntiṃ kārīye svāhā, śubhakārīye svāhā, kṣemakārīya svāhā.

If ritual action is performed for one struck down by epidemic disease, the epidemic disease will be healed. If medicine is consecrated with this mantra and administered, the patient will recover. If food is consecrated with this mantra and eaten, poison will cause no harm. For those seized by the possession of elementals, recite this mantra twenty-one times over a cord tied on by a girl, bind it on them, and they will be freed.

Translator's Notes

- The phrase rendered as "disorders of the abdomen and spleen" translates a term for the hollow viscera and a term for the spleen or flank area; the exact anatomical referents follow traditional Tibetan medical interpretation rather than modern anatomy.

The mantra syllables are transliterated as they appear in the Tibetan phonetic transcription and are not normalized to reconstructed Sanskrit, since some syllables are dhāraṇī-form and resist standard reconstruction. The title Ārya-yaśovatī-dhāraṇī is the back-translation of the Tibetan rendering of the Sanskrit title, which appears in the text in Tibetan phonetic script.
