The Noble Dhāraṇī That Pacifies Wrath, in Sanskrit Āryakrodhaśamanīdhāraṇī, known in Tibetan as Phags pa khros pa zhi bar byed pa'i gzungs, is a very short dhāraṇī, a mantric formula of protective and ritual use. It begins with homage to the Great Glorious Goddess and then gives a brief spell whose purpose, as the title states, is to calm anger and wrath. The text is Toh 788 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the class of dhāraṇī texts within the Tantra section. Its brevity reflects the typical function of such works, which are intended for recitation rather than extended doctrinal exposition.

...the end. The dhāraṇī that pacifies anger is complete.

The Noble Dhāraṇī That Pacifies Wrath.

Homage to the Great Glorious Goddess.

Kaṭe vikaṭe, roṣa praśamani svāhā.

Translator's Notes

- The passage opens with the tail of a preceding colophon, so the first words are a fragment rather than a complete sentence; I have rendered it as an ending marker. The text breaks off at the final word, which appears to begin the next section, so it is left untranslated. The dhāraṇī is kept in its Sanskrit form, and its meaning is approximately "Kaṭe vikaṭe, pacifier of wrath, svāhā." The honorific "Great Glorious One" is feminine in sense and is rendered "Great Glorious Goddess"; the exact deity intended is not specified in this passage.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.
