

The Dhāraṇī Mantra That Heals Wounds

Toh 798 · Derge Kangyur

རྒྱལ་བའི་བར་བརྟེ་པ་ཞེས་བརྒྱའ་གི་ཟུང་ས་སྐྱུ་མ།

The Dhāraṇī That Heals Wounds (Tibetan: Rma 'byor bar byed pa zhes bya ba'i gzungs sngags) is a very short dhāraṇī text, a spell of protective and healing power, devoted to Mañjuśrī, the bodhisattva of wisdom. After a brief homage to the noble Mañjuśrī, it gives a mantra to be recited three times, with spittle then applied to the injury, as a remedy for wounds caused by blows from stones, by weapons, by severed sinews, or by a broken skull. One of the colophons also calls it a dhāraṇī that frightens Māra, though its practical focus is clearly on healing. It is Toh 798 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the Tantra section as one of its many brief dhāraṇī texts. A Sanskrit title is not given in the source lines provided, so none is offered here.

Thus the dhāraṇī that frightens Māra is completed.

The dhāranī mantra called "That Which Heals Wounds."

Homage to the noble Mañjuśrī.

Oṃ ubase ubase. Sum sum, sarva nanarbada svāhā. Hūṃ phaṭ. Śama śāntim kuru svāhā.

Recite this three times, and apply spittle to the wound. It heals wounds caused by blows from stones, wounds from weapons, severed sinews, and a broken skull.

The dhāraṇī that heals wounds is complete.

Translator's Notes

- The opening words, which seem to belong to the end of a preceding text, are fragmentary; I have rendered only the clearly legible colophon of the Māra-frightening dhāraṇī. The mantra syllables are given as they appear in the Tibetan transliteration and are not translated; some forms (ubase, sum sum, nanarbada) are corrupt or obscure and may reflect scribal variants. The phrase about severed sinews and a broken skull follows the Tibetan literally.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.