

The Dhāraṇī for Curing Phlegm Disorders

Toh 802 · Derge Kangyur

བད་ཀན་གཞིན་སེལ་བའ་གཟུངས།

This very brief text, whose Tibetan title can be rendered as the dhāraṇī for curing phlegm disorders and relieving the vomiting of blood and piercing pain they cause, is a short healing dhāraṇī, a type of protective incantation used for curing illness. After a homage to the Three Jewels, it presents a mantra for curing consumption (kṣaya), "Namo hetu heke svāhā," and gives simple ritual instructions: water that is cooling is sprinkled over the afflicted person, the mantra is recited sixty-one times, and the person's body is then swept, after which the illness is said to disappear. A Sanskrit title is not given in the lines supplied here, so it is best left undetermined. The text is Toh 802 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the Tantra section, among the collection of short dhāraṇīs and ritual formulas aimed at practical benefits such as healing.

It thoroughly relieves the vomiting of blood and the piercing pain caused by phlegm disorders. Thus ends the dhāraṇī for curing phlegm disorders.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

The mantra for curing the illness of consumption (kṣaya):

Namo hetu heke svāhā.

When illness has arisen in the body, take a cooling water, and having sprinkled it over the afflicted person, recite the mantra sixty-one times, and then sweep it over that person's body. In this way the illness will be gone.

Thus ends the dhāraṇī for curing the illness of consumption.

Translator's Notes

- The opening line is the tail of a preceding text and, as is usual in such manuscript collections, the colophon follows it; I have translated it as it stands. The phrase "བད་ཀན་གཞིན་སེལ་བའ་གཟུངས།" is awkward and likely corrupt in transmission. I have rendered it as "when illness has arisen in the body," taking it as describing someone struck by a wasting illness, but the exact reading is uncertain. "ཁྱེད་ཀྱི་ལུས་ལ་" I take as "cooling water," meaning water used for sprinkling in ritual cure; the intended procedure is probably to consecrate water by reciting the mantra over it and then use it on the patient. The mantra syllables are given in the Tibetan transliteration of Sanskrit and are left as they are. Kṣaya, rendered as consumption, refers to wasting diseases such as tuberculosis.
-

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.