

The Dhāraṇī for Giving Away the Bodily Secretions as an Offering

Toh 804 · Derge Kangyur

ལུ་ཀྱི་ཐུག་པ་སྤྱི་པར་གཏང་བའི་གཞུངས།

This short text, titled in English The Dhāraṇī for Giving Away the Bodily Secretions as an Offering, is catalogued as Toh 804 in the Kangyur; no Sanskrit title is given in the opening, and the Tibetan title is not fully determinable from the source lines alone. It is a brief ritual formula of the kind classed among the tantras, or among the dhāraṇī texts that sit alongside them, and it prescribes mantras for offering the body's secretions, namely saliva, phlegm, nasal mucus, bodily dirt, excrement, and urine, to beings who might feed on them. Each substance has its own short mantra, spoken with the wish that those who consume it may obtain it, and followed by a snap of the fingers. The practitioner then dedicates all the merit of this giving to awakening for the sake of all sentient beings. According to its colophon, the material was compiled from sūtras and tantras by the lama Vajrāsanapa and translated by Bari Lotsāwa, which places it among the later Indian-derived ritual writings translated into Tibetan.

This completes the dhāraṇī for not being overcome by living creatures.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

The dhāraṇī for giving away the bodily secretions as an offering.

For saliva: Oṃ āḥ śleṣmā hare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For phlegm: Oṃ āḥ khreḍa āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For nasal mucus: Oṃ āḥ siṅghāṇa āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For bodily dirt: Oṃ āḥ mala āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For excrement: Oṃ āḥ viṭ āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For urine: Oṃ āḥ mūtra āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For each of these, one should say, "May those who consume these obtain them." Then one snaps the fingers.

Whatever merit is gathered by giving these in this way, all of it should be dedicated to awakening for the sake of all sentient beings.

These teachings were drawn from the sūtras and tantras by the lama Vajrāsanapa, and were translated by Bari Lotsāwa.

Translator's Notes

- The opening line, "dang srog chags kyis mi tshugs pa'i gzungs," is the tail of the preceding text's title, so it is rendered as the close of that text. The mantra syllables appear in the Tibetan in somewhat corrupt transliteration; I have given the likely Sanskrit forms (śleṣma, khreḍa, siṅhāṇa, mala, viṭ, mūtra), but the exact readings are uncertain. "Āhare bhyaḥ" is likely "to the eaters," in keeping with the instruction to wish that "those who consume these" receive them. "Seng gol brdab" is rendered as snapping the fingers, which is the usual sense of this expression. "Vajrāsanapa" is the lama Vajrāsana, often identified with the Indian master Amoghavajra or a Bodh Gayā teacher; the identification is not certain.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.