

The Noble Dhāraṇī Called Flaming Wisdom, the Complete Purifier of All Beings in the Realms of Rebirth

Ārya-jñānolka-nāma-dhāraṇī-sarvagati-pariśodhanī · Toh 848 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་པ་ཡ་ཤེས་ཏྲ་ལ་ལ་ཞེས་བ་བྱའ་གི་ཟུང་ལ་འག་སྟོ་ཐམས་ཅད་ཡངས་ས་སྤྱོད་པ།

The Noble Dhāraṇī Called Flaming Wisdom, the Complete Purifier of All Beings in the Realms of Rebirth, known in Sanskrit as Ārya-jñānolka-nāma-dhāraṇī-sarvagati-pariśodhanī and in Tibetan as Phags pa ye shes ta la la zhes bya ba'i gzungs 'gro ba thams cad yongs su sbyong ba, is a short scripture centered on a dhāraṇī, a protective incantation. It opens with homages to the Tathāgata Flaming Wisdom and other buddhas, and presents a setting in which the bodhisattvas Samantabhadra, Mañjuśrī, Dhāraṇīśvararāja, and Vajrapāṇi dwell together with those Tathāgatas in the abodes of the moon and the sun, where the sons of the gods Moon and Sun come forward. As its title indicates, the text is concerned with the purification of beings across the realms of rebirth, and it belongs to the literature of dhāraṇīs and ritual protection. It is Toh 848 in the Kangyur, the Tibetan canon of translated Buddhist scriptures, where it is classed among the tantras.

In the language of India: Ārya-jñānolka-nāma-dhāraṇī-sarvagati-pariśodhanī. In the language of Tibet: The Noble Dhāraṇī Called Flaming Wisdom, the Complete Purifier of All Beings in the Realms of Rebirth.

Homage to the Omniscient One. Homage to all the buddhas and bodhisattvas. Homage to the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Flaming Wisdom. Homage to the Tathāgata Radiance of Heaped Golden Light. Homage to the Tathāgata Speaker of Truth. Homage to the Tathāgata King of the Fearsome Roar.

Then the bodhisattva Samantabhadra, the bodhisattva Mañjuśrī who has become a youth, the bodhisattva Dhāraṇīśvararāja, and the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, these four bodhisattvas together with those Tathāgatas, dwelt in the abodes of the moon and the sun.

Then the two sons of the gods, Moon and Sun, went to the place where those Tathāgatas and those bodhisattvas were dwelling. There the two beheld the Tathāgatas seated upon lion thrones adorned with jewels, and they also saw those bodhisattvas seated within multi-storeyed palaces crowned with banners of Jambu gold.

Then the two sons of the gods, Moon and Sun, thought to one another: "By what means might we obtain, from these Tathāgatas and these bodhisattvas, the dhāraṇī mantra called Mind Pervading the Ten Directions? It rises to give light to all sentient beings and to dispel the thick darkness, and by its power we would come to bring light to all sentient beings."

Then those Tathāgatas and those bodhisattvas knew in their minds the thoughts of the sons of the gods, Moon and Sun. At that time the Tathāgatas, together with the bodhisattvas, spoke this dhāraṇī mantra:

Syādyathā: tedan, cakṣurda, cakṣuśubhadhulamethākalatha, itti-tthans sūraṭa, sūraṭa, suddhāya, itthansā, velā velā pāṇi-carumūrtini, āraṇi, āraṇi, kālapāṇi, kālapāṇi, turudusi, turudusi, dhasute, dhasuti, dhiri dhiri, dhura dhura, dhuru dhura, kāla kāla, satthās, gīla gīla, gīlavaya, gīlavaya, dhusu dhusu, sundhu sundhu, satthāsu, atthāsu, etthāsu, etthā-sāpāni, yucure dhe, sudhare, kara kara, kiri kiri, kuru kuru, kurma kurma, kurmapāṇi, kurmavāṇi, kelu kelu, kelapāṇi, kelapāṇi, karkāri, karkāri, laru-buddhe, dhurudhe, dhurudhe, mahādhurudhe, kara kara, kiri kiri, bihusi, bihusi, dhasu dhasu, hasu hasu, hasupanisvāhā.

Then the bodhisattva Samantabhadra spoke these words to the two sons of the gods, Moon and Sun: "Noble sons, this dhāraṇī mantra was taught by eight hundred and forty million buddhas for the benefit of sentient beings who go to the lower realms. Noble sons, the flower of the udumbara tree is rather easy to find, but these words of the dhāraṇī mantra do not appear in the world so readily. Noble sons, these words of the dhāraṇī mantra are rather easy to find, but to uphold or recite them is not so easy. Noble sons, the appearance of a buddha is rather easy to find."

But the appearance of these words of the dhāraṇī mantra in the world is not like that. Noble sons, suppose there are sentient beings who dwell in the Avīci hell, remaining there for an eon, who have committed the five acts of immediate retribution, and who have rejected the sacred Dharma. If, for the sake of those beings, one recites these words of the dhāraṇī mantra three times by day and three times by night for twenty-one days, then through the power of these words of the dhāraṇī mantra the great Avīci hell will burst open in a hundred places, and those beings too will be wholly liberated. How much more so, then, the people of Jambudvīpa! For those in whose ears it is heard, they should simply know: "We are fully embraced by the four Tathāgatas, by the four bodhisattvas, and by the Moon and the Sun." About this they should generate neither doubt nor hesitation.

Tadyathā: dhunaṭi dhunaṭi, mahādhunaṭi, suru suru svāhā. Śuklaviśodhani, tara tara svāhā. Jyotiṣṭhadīpe, turu turu svāhā. Padmamālini, satyatarabuddhi, huru huru svāhā. Satyabuddhi, satyāvalokini, kara kara, kiri kiri svāhā. Dhāraṇabuṭi, apratihatabuddhi, curu curu svāhā. Lakṣaṇicite, dhūmaparihare, huru huru, khuru khuru svāhā. Dhara dhara, mādharma, dhara dhara, dharayantiye svāhā. Supraṭiṣṭhe, sumati, apratihata buddhi, dhara dhara, dharayantiye svāhā.

I pay homage to the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Jñānatalalala. I pay homage to the Tathāgata Radiance of Heaped Golden Light. I pay homage to the Tathāgata Speaker of Truth. I pay homage to the Tathāgata King Who Proclaims the Fearsome Sound. Svāhā.

This completes the dhāraṇī called "The Noble Jñānatalala, the Complete Purification of All Beings."

Translator's Notes

- The mantra is rendered as a reconstructed Sanskrit transliteration of the Tibetan; its syllables are partly corrupt and have no reliable translatable sense, so it is given as sound only. The line "the appearance of a buddha is rather easy to find" seems to be a damaged or truncated version of the usual comparison, in which a buddha's appearance is said to be rarer than the udumbara flower. The text as given ends here, and I have translated it as it stands. The title "Flaming Wisdom" renders the Sanskrit jñānolka, taken as "torch of wisdom."
- The Tibetan renders the dhāraṇī in transliterated Sanskrit that is in places corrupt, so I have reconstructed it conservatively. Some forms, such as "Jyotiṣṭhadīpe" and "Dhāraṇabuṭi," are uncertain. The Tibetan names for the four Tathāgatas and four bodhisattvas are not specified in this passage, so I have kept the generic wording. The names of the Tathāgatas at the end are translated from the Tibetan, and "Jñānatalalala" is retained as a transliteration. The title's "Jñānatalala" is a probable reconstruction. The Tibetan text has the sentence "Noble sons, the appearance of a buddha is rather easy to find" at the end of the prior passage, and this passage opens with its contrast, so I have begun with "But" to preserve the sense of contrast.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.