The Noble Mahāyāna Sūtra Immeasurable Life and Wisdom (Sanskrit: Āryāparimitāyurjñāna nāma mahāyānasūtra; Tibetan: 'Phags pa tshe dang ye shes dpag tu med pa zhes bya ba theg pa chen po'i mdo) is a short Mahāyāna discourse set at Śrāvastī, in Anāthapiṇḍada's park in the Jeta Grove, where the Buddha addresses Mañjuśrī. It concerns the buddha Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, who dwells in a distant world-realm, and it teaches the benefits of hearing, remembering, and propagating his name and the sūtra itself, especially as a means of gaining longevity, merit, and wisdom. Texts of this kind belong to the widely practiced tradition of longevity sūtras and dhāraṇī-related literature. This work is Toh 849 in the Kangyur, the Tibetan canon of translated Buddhist scriptures, and it is classed among the sūtras (mdo).

In the language of India: Ārya Aparimitāyurjñāna nāma mahāyāna sūtra. In the Tibetan language: The Noble Mahāyāna Sūtra called Immeasurable Life and Wisdom.

Homage to all the buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One was dwelling at Śrāvastī, in the Jeta Grove, in the park of Anāthapiṇḍada, together with a great community of monks numbering one thousand two hundred and fifty, and with a great many bodhisattvas, great beings.

Then the Blessed One spoke to Mañjuśrī, who had become a youth. Mañjuśrī, in the upper direction there is a world-realm called Endowed with Immeasurable Qualities and the like. There dwells the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly complete buddha, Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, the King of Utterly Certain Splendor. He sustains his life, remains to the very end, and teaches the Dharma to sentient beings.

Listen, Mañjuśrī, who have become a youth. The people of this Jambudvīpa have short lives; scarcely any live to the age of one hundred, and even of those, most are shown to die untimely.

Mañjuśrī, any sentient beings who write down this Dharma teaching called The Full Recitation of the Qualities and Praises of the Tathāgata Immeasurable Life, or who have it written, or who even hear its name, or who read it, or who write it in a volume and keep it in their home, or who honor it with flowers, incense, perfumes, and garlands, will, even if their life is exhausted, live to the age of one hundred.

Mañjuśrī, for any sentient beings who hear the one hundred and eight names of the King of Utterly Certain Splendor, Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, their lives will also increase. For any sentient beings whose lives are running out, if they hold the names, their lives will also be extended.

Therefore, Mañjuśrī, sons or daughters of noble family who wish for long life should listen to the one hundred and eight names of the Tathāgata Immeasurable Life, or write them down, or have them written. The benefits and good fortune that come to them are these.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Mañjuśrī, should anyone write down these one hundred and eight names of the Tathāgata, or have them written, or write them in a volume and keep it in their home, or read them, their life will not be exhausted but will last a hundred years. And when they pass from this life, they will be born in the buddha-field of the Tathāgata Immeasurable Life, the world-realm Endowed with Immeasurable Qualities and the like.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life, or has it written out, that being will never be born in the hells, in the animal realm, or in the world of Yama, the lord of death. Such a being will never be born in a state without the freedom to practice, and in every birth, wherever born, will remember their births.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life, or has it written out, even if Māra, or gods of Māra's host, or yakṣas, or rākṣasas look for an opening against that person, they will not find one.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life, or has it written out, at the time of death will have ninety-nine million buddhas teach the Dharma in person, and a thousand buddhas will stretch out their hands to that person. That person will be led from buddha-field to buddha-field. Do not harbor doubt, hesitation, or wavering about this.

Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Any place where this precious sūtra is recited or copied will become a shrine (stūpa) and will be worthy of homage. All those birds and wild animals, born in the animal realm, in whose ears this is heard will all come to fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete awakening.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyakṣaṃbuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānaśaṃbhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life, or causes it to be written out, will never be born in a woman's body.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyakṣaṃbuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānaśaṃbhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever gives even a few kārṣāpaṇas (coins) in offering for the sake of this Dharma discourse will have made an offering equal to filling a great thousandfold world-system of three thousand worlds with the seven precious substances.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyakṣaṃbuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānaśaṃbhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

For example, the measure of the mass of merit from making offerings of the seven precious substances to the Tathāgatas Vipāśyin, Śikhin, Viśvabhū, Krakucchanda, Kanakamuni, Kāśyapa, Śākyamuni, and others can be counted.

But the measure of the mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life cannot be counted.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

For example, if one were to heap up a mountain of jewels as great as Mount Meru and give it away in generosity, the measure of the mass of that merit can be counted. But the measure of the mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life cannot be counted.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā:

Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

For example, if the four great oceans were filled to the brim with water, one could count the drops one by one. But the measure of the mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life cannot be counted.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life, or causes it to be written, or places it upon a throne and makes offerings to it, has thereby paid homage to all the Tathāgatas in all the buddha fields of the ten directions, and has made offerings to them.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyaksambuddhāya, tadyathā: Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra pariśuddha dharmate gaganasamudgate svabhāvaviśuddhe mahānaya parivāre svāhā.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimitāyurjñāna suviniścita tejo rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate samyakṣambuddhāya, tadyathā: Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimitapuṇye aparimitapuṇyajñānasambhāropacite. Oṃ sarvasaṃskāra parivāre svāhā.

When the Blessed One had spoken thus, delighted, then Mañjuśrī, who had become a youthful prince, together with that entire retinue, and the gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas along with them,

Translator's Notes

- The dhāraṇī is given in a standard Sanskrit reconstruction from the Tibetan transliteration, which has minor variant spellings between its repetitions. The text as given here breaks off at the third repetition without the usual concluding colophon, so the closing is left as it stands.

- The Tibetan numerals for the buddhas read, in sequence, 84, 77, 65, 55, 45, and 36 million, using the Tibetan counting of byeba phrag as ten million. The standard rendering "million" is used for readability, though byeba phrag strictly denotes a very large number (ten million times the multiple in some reckonings). The preceding passage's figure of ninety-nine million follows the same pattern, so I have kept this consistent. The mantra is given in reconstructed Sanskrit and is identical in each repetition. The Tibetan transliteration contains minor scribal variants (for example "buddhāya" and "bhagapate"), which I have normalized to the standard form. The dhāraṇī itself is left in Sanskrit as is customary.
- The Tibetan here reads twenty-five million buddhas (byé ba phrag nyi shu rtsa lnga), not the thirty-six million given in the preceding passage; I have followed the text before me, as the figures differ between witnesses. The mantra is given in the Sanskrit transliteration of the Tibetan, silently normalized to standard spelling; the Tibetan itself contains minor variant spellings across repetitions. In the fourth section, mi khom pa refers to the unfree states, the conditions in which one lacks the leisure to practice the Dharma. The closing phrase of the fifth section, rab tu gnas pa, is rendered as consecrated, in the sense of establishing the sacred text.
- The dhāraṇī is given in Sanskrit as it appears in the Tibetan transliteration, with the standard Sanskrit forms used for consistency with the preceding passage. The Tibetan transliterations vary slightly from repetition to repetition (for example bacite and pacite, vari and pari, and the form arhe in the first repetition), which are scribal variants, so the normalized forms are given. The passage ends mid-dhāraṇī, so the final repetition breaks off after "aparimitapuṇyajñānaśaṃbhāropacite" as in the source. The phrase "the Blissful" renders སུཁ་འཕུལ་བུ་ (Sukhāvātī), glossed once for the listener. The "four great kings" are the four guardian kings (Skt. caturmahārāja); I kept the Tibetan wording without naming them.
- The Tibetan names the seven buddhas by epithets, which I have restored to their Sanskrit forms: Vipasyin (rnam par gzigs), Śikhin (gtsug tor can), Viśvabhū (thams cad skyob), Krakucchanda (log par dad sel), Kanakamuni (gser thub), and Kāśyapa (od srung). The mantra is given in transliteration, with minor spelling variants among its repetitions in the Tibetan, which I have normalized to the form already used in the preceding passage. The final sentence breaks off after "tadyathā" in the source, so the translation ends there as well.
- The passage breaks off mid-sentence at the end; the Tibetan continues in the next section. The Sanskrit text of the dhāraṇī is given in transliteration as it appears in the Tibetan. The Tibetan simile of the oceans (counting drops of the four great oceans) differs from the mountain-of-jewels simile in the preceding passage, and I have followed the Tibetan as given. Mañjuśrī gzhon nur gyur pa is rendered "who had become a youthful prince" (Skt. kumārabhūta), following the standard sūtra formula. In the verses, "the lion among men" renders the Tibetan epithet for the Buddha; the line "city of the compassionate" translates the Tibetan as it stands.
