The Five Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-Three Names of the Buddha, known in Sanskrit as the Buddhanāmasahasrapañcaśatacaturtripañcadaśa and in Tibetan as Sangyé kyi Tsen Ngatong Zhigya Ngachu Tsasumpa, is Toh 262 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the General Sūtra section. It is a devotional sūtra made up almost entirely of a long litany of homages, each one paying respect to a tathāgata by name, beginning with the Tathāgata Glorious King of Stainless Space and continuing through thousands of buddhas whose names evoke qualities such as light, wisdom, glory, fragrance and freedom from doubt. Texts of this kind belong to the Mahāyāna genre of buddha-name sūtras, in which reciting and remembering the names of the buddhas is itself a practice of veneration and purification. The text closes with verses spoken by the Blessed One, teaching that whoever hears and upholds these names with faith, moral discipline and patience will purify even vast stores of past wrongdoing and in the end become a buddha.

In the language of India: buddhanāmasahasrapañcaśatacaturtripañcadaśa

In the language of Tibet: The Five Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-Three Names of the Buddha.

Whoever holds, reads, masters, or recollects and meditates upon these many names of the tathāgatas, which arise from endless, countless merit, will be free of eye disease. They will be free of ear disease, free of nose disease, free of tongue disease, and free of bodily disease, and all their obscurations will be purified. No harm will befall them from any humans or nonhumans. They will become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening. The buddhas, the blessed ones, of all the directions will keep them in mind, and will always guard, protect, and shelter them. Directly, or at the very least in dreams, they will reveal to them inconceivable wisdom and skill in means, so that they swiftly attain, each in turn, the samādhis and the doors of dhāraṇī.

They will never be parted from the buddhas, the blessed ones, or from the teaching of the Buddha. They will be born miraculously from jewel lotuses. They will always be endowed with the thirty-two major marks of a great being and the eighty excellent minor marks. They will be endowed with the superknowledges, the five eyes, the ripening of sentient beings, the complete purification of a buddhafield, the six perfections, the thirty-seven factors of awakening, the dhyānas, the immeasurables, and the formless absorptions.

They will be endowed with the powers, the fearlessnesses, the specific knowledges, the unshared qualities of a buddha, great loving-kindness, great compassion, great joy, and great equanimity. They will also be endowed with other countless, immeasurable qualities of a buddha. Just as these buddhas, these blessed ones, possess excellent qualities and renown, so it is not that they too will fail to come to such qualities: before long they too will have that excellence, and will easily and swiftly, directly and fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening.

When these buddhas were formerly bodhisattvas, they made this aspiration: "When we become manifestly awakened to awakening, may all sentient beings who hear, hold, or read our names become irreversible. May they pass entirely beyond the eight unfree states, and, kept directly in mind by all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, may they be born in pure buddhafields. Then, when they die and pass on, may they again be cared for by the world with its gods. May they pass utterly beyond all fears."

Let those who hold the names of these tathāgatas also hold this dhāraṇī-mantra constantly and without interruption. If one wishes to see the bodhisattva Maitreya, one should make offerings as far as one is able and recite it a hundred thousand times. One should always be clean and keep a mind of loving-kindness. If one wishes to see Samantabhadra, one should likewise make offerings and recite it two hundred thousand times. If one wishes to see the Tathāgata Vairocana, one should make offerings in the same way and recite it three hundred thousand times. Always being clean and with a mind of loving-kindness, one should be free of pride, arrogance, anger, and all wrongdoing.

When this dhāraṇī had been spoken, all those buddhas, the blessed ones, gave their approval, saying "Excellent!" and: "Excellent, holy being, that you have spoken such a profound dhāraṇī-mantra as this! Whoever holds or reads this dhāraṇī-mantra, or attends to it extensively, constantly and without interruption, for that son of noble family those buddhas, the blessed ones, will bring all his wishes to fulfillment."

Then the Tathāgata Stainless Luminosity covered the great trichiliocosm, the world system of a billion worlds, with his tongue, and said to the seven billion bodhisattvas: "Whatever son or daughter of noble family keeps these words of the dhāraṇī-mantra, reads them, and makes offerings to them as far as they are able, for them those buddhas, the blessed ones, will bring all their wishes to fulfillment, just as they have conceived them."

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva named Universal Discourse said this to the Tathāgata Stainless Luminosity: "Blessed One, in what way will offerings be made to those tathāgatas?"

When he had asked this, the Blessed One said this to the bodhisattva Universal Discourse: "Son of noble family, whoever it may be, if a beginner bodhisattva wishes to bring all his wishes to fulfillment, then he rises early in the morning, makes a maṇḍala with cow dung, and makes offerings as far as he is able with flowers, incense, perfume, garlands, and ointments. Giving up much busyness, for three days and three nights in seclusion he keeps in mind the names of those tathāgatas and these words of the dhāraṇī-mantra. Through the blessing of the words of truth of those tathāgatas, in this very present life all his karmic obscurations will be completely purified."

Whoever keeps the name of that tathāgata and attends to it constantly and without interruption will, in this very present life, have all karma and all wrongdoing completely purified. They will reach the culmination. Through the blessing of the Buddha they will remember their former lives for one hundred and forty million years, and until they finally reach the seat of awakening their roots of virtue will not be exhausted.

Then, at that time, the Blessed One spoke these verses:

Having heard these names of the Victors,
Be conscientious, show them devotion, and come to know them.
If, lacking faith, one rejects this excellence,
One will surely taste the suffering of the lower realms again.

Relying in due order on moral discipline,
Having faith in what is heard and dwelling in deep seclusion,
And having brought profound patience to completion,
One will behold all these protectors of the world.

Not knowing how the fruits of karma ripen,
One has done evil deeds for ten million eons;
Yet if one upholds these names of the Victors,
All of it is purified, and one becomes a buddha.

Here ends The Five Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-Three Names of the Buddha.

Translator's Notes

• The buddha names in this litany are rendered into English according to their meaning; most cannot be traced to secure Sanskrit forms, and the collection appears to derive from a Chinese source, so no Sanskrit reconstructions are offered. The opening name is long and loosely structured; it is read here as one extended name with descriptive epithets. Two names, "Lamp of All Directions" and similar Dharma Moon titles, recur, as they do in the Tibetan.
• As in the previous piece, the names are rendered by meaning, since most have no securely attested Sanskrit form; Śālendrarāja and Dundubhīśvararāja are given in Sanskrit because they are well-known buddha names. Two names are uncertain: "Longing to Belong" renders the unusual gtogs 'dod as written, and "Overcomes with Ease" is a tentative reading of bde 'joms. "Cataract" renders ling thog, a film that clouds the eye.
• The names are rendered by meaning, as in the earlier pieces. In "Glory of Greatly Renowned Name," mtshan is taken as "name" rather than "major mark," which suits the sense. "Every Quality of Melody" renders yan lag, the traditional branches or qualities of a buddha's voice.
• Aśokaśrī and Padmaśrī are given in Sanskrit as well-attested buddha names; the rest are rendered by meaning. Padmaśrī occurs twice, as it does in the Tibetan.
• The buddha names are rendered in English, following the practice of the earlier pieces of this text. "Drum Melody" corresponds to the known Sanskrit name Dundubhisvara. In "Glory of the Wisdom of Universal Avalokita," □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ renders Samantāvalokita, "looking upon all," rather than the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara as such. In the penultimate name, □□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□, "by others," since the written form makes no sense.
• The name Peaceful Banner occurs twice in this piece, as it does in the Tibetan. "Crown" renders □□□□□□□□, the uṣṇīṣa, the protuberance on a buddha's head. In "Cloud That Displays Everything," □□□□□□ is the verb "to display, reveal," not the epithet "the Teacher."

• The heading "the second section" marks the beginning of the second bampo, a traditional division of a Tibetan translation by length. Supreme Lamp occurs twice in the Tibetan list. In "Lamp of the Ocean of Spreading Flowers," □□□□□□□ has its ordinary sense "spread out, scattered," not the technical sense of conceptual elaboration; likewise □ in "Glory of the Earth" is the earth, not a bodhisattva ground.

• "Seat of Awakening" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, the standard Tibetan for bodhimaṇḍa, the place where a buddha attains awakening. Moon of Offering occurs twice in the Tibetan list. "Jambū River Gold" (Skt. jāmbūnada) is the finest gold of Indian lore.

• In "Unfailing Light Rays," □□□□□□□□□□□ is the idiom "without doubt, unfailing," not a reference to a graha spirit. In "Light Rays That Inquire of the Ten," □□□□□□ ("ask") may be a slip for □□□□□ ("resemble"), which would give "Light Rays Like the Ten"; the written reading is kept. "Light Rays of the Thousand Letters" takes □□□□□□ as "thousand"; it could also be read "empty letters." Luminosity of the King of Qualities repeats a name from the previous piece. □□□□□□□□□□□ and □□□□□□□□□□□□ are taken as spelling variants of the same expression.

• Here Maheśvara and Lokeśvara are names of tathāgatas, not the god Śiva or the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara, so no gloss is added. The names ending in "essence" (garbha) whose Sanskrit forms are standard (Padmagarbha, Candragarbha, Sūryagarbha, Vajragarbha) are given in Sanskrit, following the house glossary for Candragarbha; the rest are translated. The name rendered "Dharma Intelligence Following Between the Brows" is obscure, and the translation is literal.

• The name rendered "God Who Dispels Entry" (Tibetan ’jug sel) could not be identified with confidence; it may be a variant of a Tibetan name for Viṣṇu, but it is translated literally here. Likewise "Utmost Divine Boundary" (lha mtshams) is a literal rendering of an obscure name. In the entry addressed to "all the Tathāgatas Ocean of Qualities Unattached to Any of the Perfections," the Tibetan ends with "all" (kun la), apparently making the homage plural. The Tibetan word rendered "Chief" (dbang po, Skt. indra) is distinguished from "Lord" (dbang phyug, Skt. īśvara) used in the preceding passage; with "great" it is given as Mahendra.

• "Gift" renders sbyin (Skt. -datta, "given by"), a common ending of Indian names. The name rendered "Gift of Za Flowers" begins with the syllable za, whose sense here is unclear (it may mean "food" or be a scribal slip); it is kept literally. "Most Pure" renders shin tu tshangs pa, where tshangs pa may also mean Brahmā. In "Body Unfailingly Unfolding Light Rays," gdon mi za ba is the adverb "unfailingly, certainly," not the word for a seizing spirit.

• "Highest" renders bla ma (Skt. uttara) as the final member of names. In "Who Went Leaping Forth from the Lineage of the Gods," rgyud is taken in its sense of lineage or continuum, not tantra. The name rendered "Utter Vairocana Sporting Among Lotuses of Blazing Glory" contains rmos ("plowed"), which is obscure in this context; the rendering follows the evident sense. "Sublime Questioner" renders 'dri ba dam pa as written.

• The title line followed by "the third fascicle" marks the close of one section (bam po) of the sūtra and the opening of the next. In "Wholly Unsullied" the Tibetan reads kun tu dri ma yin pa, literally "wholly not a stain"; it is rendered by sense, distinct from the next name, "Wholly Stainless." The word ban lang in "Fragrant Banlang" could not be identified and is kept as written. "Encompassing the Three Times" renders dus gsum chug pa, whose verb is unusual here; the sense is uncertain.

• Most names in this list are rendered by their meaning, since no Sanskrit form can be identified with confidence; only Kāśyapa, Kauṇḍinya, Akṣobhya, Maitreya, Vipaśyin, Brahmā and Gaganagañja are given in Sanskrit. "Beautiful Voice" renders a name built on the word otherwise used for Sarasvatī; as the epithet of a tathāgata it is taken in its literal sense of "melodious one". "Bull" renders a word that can also denote an elephant or great ox; the stately gait in the later name suggests the Buddha's bull-like or elephant-like walk. "Who Laments" (smred pa) is uncertain in meaning.

• Names are rendered by meaning except where a Sanskrit form is secure (Virūḍhaka, Utpala, Vimalakīrti). "Upper River" and "Bestowal" render terse names whose intended sense is uncertain. In "Unfailing Splendor," the Tibetan phrase means "certain, unfailing" and is not the word for a seizing spirit.
• "Cared for by the world with its gods" takes the Tibetan "together with the gods" in its common sense of the world including its gods; the phrase is terse. The instruction to hold the dhāraṇī-mantra is given as an imperative; it may be read either as part of the bodhisattvas' aspiration or as the narrator's instruction.
• "Lord of Two-Footed Beings" renders an epithet meaning lord among humans. "Who Parts the Clouds" takes the rare verb as "clearing away"; its sense is not certain.
• "Seven billion bodhisattvas" renders "seventy times a hundred million." The name rendered "Bull" (as earlier in the text) is followed here by a mantra built on gaja, "elephant," which suggests the Tibetan word is meant as "elephant" in these names. "King of Holding": the Tibetan has an instrumental particle after "Tathāgata," evidently a slip for the usual form, and is read as the name. The sentence about reciting one hundred and eight times and giving "to however many are unfriendly" is terse and its sense uncertain, as is "things will come about at the proper time." "Concordant with Space" reads an evident scribal slip in the Tibetan for "in harmony with space."
• Most names in this litany are rendered by meaning, following the practice of the preceding pieces; Śākyamuni, Dīpaṃkara and Śālendrarāja (which occurs twice in this piece) are given in Sanskrit as well-established names. In two names, the phrase gdon mi za ba means "beyond doubt, certainly," not a graha spirit. "Generates the resolve" renders sems bskyed, the generation of the mind set on awakening.
• The line "The Five Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-Three Names of the Buddhas, fourth section" marks the division (bam po) at which the fourth fascicle of the text begins. Kāśyapa, Siddhārtha and Amitābha are given in Sanskrit as well-established names; other names are rendered by meaning as in earlier pieces. The Tibetan □□□□□□ in "Incense Elephant" is read as □□□□□□, "elephant," as in the earlier name Fragrant Elephant.
• Vipaśyin, Amitābha, Dīpaṃkara and Śālendrarāja are given in Sanskrit as well-established names; the rest are rendered by meaning as in earlier pieces. In "Armor Beyond Doubt," gdon mi za ba means "certain, beyond doubt," not a graha spirit.
• In "Luminous King of Qualities" (first occurrence), the Tibetan writes □□□□□□□□□□, evidently a slip for □□□□□□□□□□, as in the second occurrence later in this piece. Maitreya and Śākyamuni are given in Sanskrit; the rest are rendered by meaning as in earlier pieces.
• Siddhārtha, Śālendrarāja (written here both as □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ and as □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□) and Avalokiteśvara are given in Sanskrit. Other names are rendered by meaning. Several names here use gdon mi za ba in its sense of "beyond doubt, certain," not a graha spirit.
• In several names, □□□□□□□□□□ is the idiom "beyond doubt, unfailing," not a reference to grahas, and is rendered accordingly. The name □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is uncertain: □□□□□ may mean "attachment, devotion" or "formed, established"; "Utterly Devoted King" is a tentative rendering. □□□□□□□□□□ ("Elephant of Fragrance") may correspond to the well-known Gandhahastin, but since the usual Tibetan for that name differs, the name is translated literally. Most names in this litany are translated by meaning, following the practice of the earlier pieces.
• From Kanakamuni onward the sequence follows the opening of the list of the thousand buddhas of the Fortunate Eon (Kanakamuni, Kāśyapa, Śākyamuni, Maitreya, and so on); the names after Maitreya are translated by meaning, since their Sanskrit forms cannot all be confirmed here. □□□□□□ literally means "frightened" or "afraid"; "Awe-Struck" is a tentative rendering of an unusual name. □□□□□□□□□□□ is probably a scribal variant of the preceding □□□□□□□□□□ ("hard to withstand"); it is rendered "Hard to Assail" to keep the two entries distinct. □□□□□ ("Unattained") and □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Renowned for Nothing at All", perhaps meaning one who seeks no fame) are uncertain names translated literally.

• The line "The Five Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-Three Names of the Buddhas, the fifth section" is the text's own heading marking the start of its fifth fascicle (bampo). □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Elephant of Incense") resembles the name Gandhahastin but is translated literally, as was the similar □□□□□□□□□□□□ earlier. □□□□□□□□□□□ is unclear: □□□ may mean "vast", "seal" or "net"; "Vast Lotus" is a tentative rendering.

• □□□, as written, means an inauspicious year and makes no sense as a buddha's name; it is read as □□□ ("star"), which differs by one similar letter. □□□□□□□□□□□□ is likewise read as □□□□□□□□□□□ ("Assembly of Qualities"). The name □□□□□□□ ("Foundation Against Foes") is obscure and rendered tentatively.

• □□□□□□□□□ is an Indic name in transliteration that cannot be identified with confidence (it may be a garbled form of Tiṣya); it is given as spelled. □□□ is again read as "Star", as in the previous piece. □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ literally "holding death and transmigration" is rendered as holding them in check; the sense is uncertain.

• "Destruction Given" renders □□□□□□□□□□□ as written; it may be a slip for □□□□□□□□□□□□, "Fear Given" (Bhayadatta). Several names recur within the piece (Revealer of the Infinite, God of Arhats), as in the Tibetan. "Great Sorrowless" translates □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, which corresponds to Mahāśoka; names are given in English throughout to match the earlier pieces of this litany.

• As in the earlier pieces of this litany, the buddha names are rendered by meaning in English. "Accomplished Aim" translates □□□□□□□□□□, the Tibetan equivalent of Siddhārtha; "Elephant of Fragrance" translates □□□□□□□□□□□□, corresponding to Gandhahastin. Names such as "Brahmā Given," "Flower Given," "Person Given" and "Great Given" reflect Sanskrit names in -datta. The name "Moon" occurs twice in this piece, as in the Tibetan.

• "Stainless Intelligence at the Limit of Existence" reads □□□□□ ("stain") at the end of □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□ ("stainless"), the evident sense in a buddha name; read literally it would be "Stain of the Intelligence at the Limit of Existence." The meaning of □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Giver of the Brow Space," perhaps alluding to the ūrṇā hair between the brows) and of □□□□□□□ ("Excellent Session") is uncertain, so these are translated literally. "Rāhu Deva" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□, and "Jewel on the Crown" corresponds to Ratnaśikhin. Several names repeat within the piece, as in the Tibetan.

• □□□□□□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□□□□□□□, "Mindful"; □□□ (an ill-omened period, which makes no sense as a buddha name) is read as □□□, "Star." □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, "Wheel of the Gathering," is the Tibetan term for gaṇacakra, here simply a buddha's name. □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is taken in its idiomatic sense "unfailing, certain" (Unfailing Light). The line after Pacified Aggregates marks the start of the sixth fascicle of the sūtra.

• □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is the standard Tibetan rendering of Akṣobhya, and □□□□□□□□ of Kāśyapa, so these are given in Sanskrit. The sense of □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is uncertain; □□□□ is taken as □□□□□, "fresh, new" (Arhat Renowned as Fresh). □□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□□, "splendor." Some names repeat within the piece, as in the Tibetan.

• Most of these buddha names are rendered by meaning, following the practice of the earlier pieces; names that are standard Sanskrit names are given as such (Vairocana, Rāhu, Mañjughoṣa, Siddhārtha). The names "Considering Qualities," "Crest of the Lord of Qualities," "Upholder of Speech," and "Treasury of the Proper Way" are literal renderings of uncertain sense; in the last, mdzod may also be read as an honorific verb, giving something like "Acting Properly." "Possessing Fire" occurs twice in this piece, as in the Tibetan.

• In "Gone Unfailingly" and "Soaring Unfailingly," gdon mi za bar is the adverb "certainly, unfailingly," not the word for a seizing spirit. "Gnosis Peak" renders ye shes brtsegs pa, distinguishing it from the earlier "Wisdom Peak" (shes rab brtsegs pa). Several names are of uncertain sense and are rendered literally: "Unpierced" (btsud pa med pa), "Light Relinquished" ('od pa spangs pa), "Invincible" (thub pa med pa), and "Wrathful Ash" (thal ba khro bo).
• In the homage to Subduer of Foes the Tibetan repeats "la phyag" (dgra thul la phyag la phyag 'tshal lo), an evident copyist's dittography; it is translated as a single homage. "Homage to the form of the Tathāgata" follows the Tibetan genitive (de bzhin gshegs pa'i gzugs), which may be a slip for "the Tathāgata Form." The two transliterated names are given as the Tibetan spells them. "Guarding the Ignorant" (ma rig skyong), "Eyes Not Diverted" (spyan mi 'dren), "Solely Able Body" (gcig tu thub pa'i sku) and "Piercing" ('bigs pa) are literal renderings of uncertain sense. Dbang po standing alone is taken as Indra.
• "Ocean of Qualities" and "Giving Joy" each occur twice in this piece, as in the Tibetan. "Unlovely" (mi sdug pa) is literal and surprising as a buddha's name; it may reflect a variant or slip, but the Tibetan is kept as written. Dbyangs can and sgra gcan 'dzin are given as the standard names Sarasvatī and Rāhula, and mi 'khrugs pa as Akṣobhya.
• The heading in the middle of the piece marks the start of the seventh fascicle (bam po) of the text. In "Gladdening with Wisdom" the Tibetan reads ma gu bar, evidently a slip for mgu bar ("gladdening"). "Exalted Essence" renders mthos pa'i snying po, which may be a slip for either mtho ("high") or thos ("hearing"). Several names are literal renderings of uncertain sense: "Steadfast without Joy," "Without Flower Giving," "Chief of Ash" (thal pa'i gtso bo), and "Supreme Foe" (dgra'i mchog). "Great God" (lha chen po) is here a buddha's name and is not glossed as Śiva. The transliterated name is given as the Tibetan spells it.
• The buddha names are rendered by meaning, as the Sanskrit originals cannot be identified with confidence. "Mother of the Lost" (Tibetan stor ba'i ma) is uncertain in sense. "Infinite Eloquence" occurs twice in this piece, as in the Tibetan.
• Most names are rendered by meaning, since their Sanskrit originals cannot be identified with confidence. "Parasol of Iri Leaves" renders i ri lo ma'i gdugs, where iri is unidentified and probably transcribes an Indian plant name. "Encircling Ring" (kho ra khor yug) may allude to the ring of mountains surrounding a world system.
• Most names are rendered by meaning, since their Sanskrit originals cannot be identified with confidence; Amitābha and Vimalakīrti are the standard Sanskrit equivalents of their Tibetan forms. "Treasury of Nectar" occurs twice, as in the Tibetan. "Clear Recitation" renders klog gsal ba as written; it may be a slip for glog, which would give "Bright Lightning".
• Most names are rendered by meaning, since their Sanskrit originals cannot be identified with confidence. "Delighting in the Stars" reads skar for skag as written; skag ("inauspicious period") makes no sense in a buddha's name, and the similar-looking skar ("star") fits, as in the star names later in this piece. "Infinite Light Rays" occurs twice, as in the Tibetan.
• Most names are rendered by meaning, since their Sanskrit originals cannot be identified with confidence. "Sun Glow" reads nyi 'od for gnyi 'od as written, gnyi being meaningless here. Several names recur within this piece (Clear Jewel, Excellent Light, Splendor of Nectar, Glory of Truth), as in the Tibetan.
• The names are rendered by meaning, as is usual for this text; Sanskrit equivalents are not securely identifiable for most of them. "Possessing a Holy Retinue" and "Glory of Merit" each occur twice in the Tibetan and are kept as repeated.
• "Guide of Fellow Travelers" reads the written □□□□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□□ ("companion on the road"), the evident reading of a split syllable. Several names (Moonlight, Clearly Adorned, Moon of Humans, Great Ornament, Abiding Very Firmly, Radiant Sun, Soaring Greatly) occur more than once in the Tibetan and are kept as repeated.

• "Invincible and Deathless" reads the written □□□□□ ("not beneficial"), which makes no sense in a name, as □□□□□ ("invincible"). "Revealer of Existence" reads the unclear □□□□□□ as □□□□□□ ("revealing, teaching"); the written form is not a recognizable word.
• "Invincible Brahmā" again reads the written □□□□□ as □□□□□ ("invincible"), as in the previous piece. "Tone of Nectar" and "Tone of the Arhats" read □□□□□ as □□□□ ("tone, melody"); the written form means "gaping, opened" and is doubtful in a name. "Uplifted Railing" and "Excellent Railing" take the uncommon □□□□□□□ as a railing or parapet; this is uncertain. "Image of Ash" (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□) is a literal rendering of an obscure name.
• "Giving Rise to No Further Destiny" renders the obscure □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ tentatively. "Inexhaustible Leaf Piercing the Asuras" is a literal rendering of an unusual name whose sense is unclear.
• "Sublime Dispassion" renders dam pa mi dgyes pa, literally "sublime, not delighted," understood as freedom from worldly delight; the underlying Sanskrit name is uncertain. The name rendered "Melodious One" is dbyangs can, the usual Tibetan for Sarasvatī; since here it names a tathāgata, it is translated by its meaning ("possessing melody") rather than as the goddess's name. "Fragrant Elephant" renders dri'i ban glang, the equivalent of Sanskrit Gandhahastin. All tathāgata names in this piece are given by meaning, as in the rest of the text.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
