The Great King of Tantras, the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, Called the Guhyasamāja, known in Sanskrit as the Sarvatathāgatakāyavākcittarahasya Guhyasamāja and in Tibetan as Sangwa Düpa, the "Secret Assembly," is one of the most influential scriptures of Indian and Tibetan Vajrayāna Buddhism. Taught by the Buddha while dwelling in the secret abode of the vajra consorts, amid an assembly of vajra bodhisattvas, it unfolds over seventeen chapters the maṇḍala of the five tathāgatas and their consorts, the pledges and vows of tantric practice, mantras and rites, and the transformation of body, speech, and mind into the three vajras of awakening. It is the root scripture of a major lineage of highest yoga tantra, interpreted in both the Ārya and Jñānapāda traditions of commentary, and was translated into Tibetan by Śraddhākaravarman and Rinchen Zangpo and later revised by Chak Lotsāwa Chöjé Pal. The text is Toh 442 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the Tantra section among the unexcelled yoga tantras.

In the language of India: sarbatathāgatakāyavākcittarahasyoguhyasamājanāmamahākalparāja. In the language of Tibet: The Great King of Tantras, the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, Called the Guhyasamāja.

Homage to glorious Vajrasattva.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One was dwelling in the bhagas of the vajra consorts, the essence of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas. He was together with bodhisattva great beings as numerous as the atoms in an inexpressible, inexpressibly inexpressible number of buddha fields, namely: the bodhisattva great being Samaya Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Body Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Speech Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Mind Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Samādhi Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Victor Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Earth Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Water Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Fire Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Wind Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Space Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Form Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Sound Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Smell Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Taste Vajra, the bodhisattva great being Touch Vajra, and the bodhisattva great being Vajra of the Essential Nature of the Dharma Realm. With these at their head were bodhisattva great beings as numerous as the atoms in an inexpressible, inexpressibly inexpressible number of buddha fields. He was also together with tathāgatas equal to the element of space, namely: the Tathāgata Vajra Akṣobhya, the Tathāgata Vajra Vairocana, the Tathāgata Vajra Ratnaketu, the Tathāgata Vajra Amitābha, the Tathāgata Vajra Amogha, and, with these at their head, tathāgatas equal to the whole element of space. As for their dwelling together, it was like a pod filled with sesame seeds: the whole element of space appeared completely filled with all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Great Vajra Vairocana, entered into the meditative absorption called the Way of the Great Passion of All Tathāgatas, and caused all the arrays of the tathāgatas to enter into his own body. Then all those tathāgatas, in order to fully delight the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas, emanated their own bodies in the form of women and came forth from the body of the Blessed One, Great Vairocana. Of these, some abided in the form of Buddhalocanā, some in the form of Māmakī, some in the form of Pāṇḍaravāsinī, and some in the form of Samaya Tārā. Some abided in the form of the very nature of visible form, some in the form of the very nature of sound, some in the form of the very nature of smell, some in the form of the very nature of taste, and some in the form of the very nature of touch.

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya blessed, in the bhaga of the consort of all the tathāgatas, the square, stainless maṇḍala of the great samaya:

Its very nature is radiant clarity,
It is filled throughout with manifold forms,
Clouds of buddhas are spread everywhere,
Masses of sparks stream forth in profusion;
Endowed with the maṇḍalas of clarity and the rest,
It is the abode of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the lord of the vajra body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, placed himself in the center of the maṇḍala of the great samaya of all the tathāgatas. Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, the Tathāgata Ratnaketu, the Tathāgata Amitābha, the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi, and the Tathāgata Vairocana dwelt in the heart of the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra That Overpowers All Tathāgatas. As soon as the Blessed One, the lord of all tathāgatas, had entered into absorption, this entire expanse of space came to abide as the vajra nature of all the tathāgatas. Then, through the blessing of Vajrasattva, all the sentient beings, however many dwell throughout the expanse of space, attained the bliss and the mental joy of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Arisen from the Samaya of the Vajra Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, and blessed the great knowledge in the form of a man with the blessing of the mantras of all the tathāgatas. The very instant it was blessed, all the tathāgatas beheld that same Blessed One, the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra, in a three-faced form.

Then the tathāgatas, Akṣobhya and the rest, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One, Great Vairocana, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The awakening mind
Of all the buddhas fully enters;
The secret of all the tathāgatas
Is utterly free of concepts and without abode.

Then all the tathāgatas gathered together once more, and having worshipped the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra, with clouds of the precious suchness that is the samaya of the outpouring of offerings of all the tathāgatas, and having bowed to him, they addressed him thus:

Arisen from the secret assembly,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The compendium of the vajra essence:
Blessed One, please explain that very reality.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Awakening Mind Vajra, spoke these words to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, excellent, excellent! And yet this is something that gives rise to doubt even in all the tathāgatas; what need is there to speak of the other bodhisattvas?"

Then all the blessed tathāgatas were amazed and filled with wonder, and they addressed these words to the Blessed One, the lord of all the tathāgatas, who cuts through all the doubts of all the tathāgatas: "Blessed One, you who are not eager to teach the secret of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas in the assembly of all the tathāgatas, even to those with such distinguished qualities, please bless all the blessed tathāgatas, and with words from which the vajra samaya of all the tathāgatas arises, please teach it perfectly, for the sake of causing them to experience the bliss and the mental joy of all the tathāgatas, up to causing them to attain the fruit of the wisdom and the higher knowledges of all the tathāgatas."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, knowing the request that all the tathāgatas had made, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Lamp of Wisdom, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this essence of the essence of the supreme mantra of the family of aversion: vajradhrik.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, through the supreme state of union with the great mudrā of Akṣobhya, in a form black, white, and red, took his seat at the body, speech, and mind vajra of the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra from Which the Samaya of All Tathāgatas Arises, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this essence of the essence of the supreme mantra of the family of delusion: jinajik.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the speech and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, through the supreme state of union with the great mudrā of Vairocana, in a form white, black, and red, took his seat in front of the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Glorious Vajra from Which the Jewels of All Tathāgatas Arise, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this essence of the essence of the supreme mantra of the family of the wish-fulfilling jewel: ratnadhṛk.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, through the supreme state of space, union with the great mudrā of Ratnaketu, in a form yellow, black, and white, took his seat to the right of the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra from Which the Stream of the Great Passion of All Tathāgatas Arises, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this essence of the essence of the supreme mantra of the family of vajra passion: ārolik.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, through the supreme state of union with the great mudrā of Lokeśvara, the great lord of knowledge, in a form red, black, and white, took his seat behind the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra from Which the Samaya of the Supreme Unfailing Accomplishment of All Tathāgatas Arises, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this essence of the essence of the supreme mantra of the family of the samaya of summoning: prajñādhṛk.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, through the supreme state of union with the great mudrā of Vajra Amogha, in a form green, black, and white, took his seat to the north of the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Aversion, delusion, and likewise passion,
The wish-fulfilling jewel, and samaya:
These very five families
Accomplish both desires and liberation.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Samaya of Passionate Love of the Vajra Holder of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this supreme consort of all vajra holders: dveṣarati.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas took on the form of a woman and took her seat in the eastern corner.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Passionate Love of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this supreme consort of all the tathāgatas: moharati.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas took on the form of a woman and took her seat in the southern corner.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Passionate Love That Holds the Passion of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this supreme consort who holds the passion of all the tathāgatas: rāgarati.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas took on the form of a woman and took her seat in the western corner.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra That Beguiles the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this vajra of passionate love, holder of the wisdom of all the tathāgatas: vajrarati.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas took on the form of a woman and took her seat in the northern corner. These are the perfect, supreme consorts of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vairocana Vajra, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this great wrathful one called Blessing the Maṇḍala of All Tathāgatas: yamāntakrīt.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, in a form that terrifies all the tathāgatas, took his seat at the eastern gate.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Complete and Perfect Awakening of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this great wrathful one called Blessing the Maṇḍala of All Tathāgatas: prarluntakṛt.

Then, the instant this was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, in a form that terrifies the vajra samaya, took his seat at the southern gate.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Source of the Dharma Jewel of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this great wrathful one called Blessing the Maṇḍala That Holds the Passion of All Tathāgatas: padmantakṛt.

Then, the instant it was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, in a form that terrifies the speech of all the tathāgatas, took his seat at the western gate.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own body, speech, and mind vajra this great wrathful one, Blessing the Maṇḍala of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas: bighantakṛt.

Then, the instant it was drawn forth, that very knowledge-person of the body, speech, and mind of all the blessed tathāgatas, in a form that terrifies the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, took his seat at the northern gate.

These are the samaya beings of the maṇḍala, who delight the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas.

This concludes the first chapter, on blessing the maṇḍala of the meditative absorption of all the tathāgatas, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas made offerings to the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, bowed to him, and addressed him thus:

The essence, supreme body, speech, and mind,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The unsurpassed awakening mind:
May the Blessed One please explain it.

Then the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas, knowing the request that all the tathāgatas had made, and knowing with his mind the thoughts in the minds of all the bodhisattvas, spoke these words to those bodhisattvas: "Generate the mind in the aspect of body, the body in the aspect of mind, and the mind through verbal expression!"

Then those bodhisattva great beings, having perfectly joined the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas as being like space, uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! O you who possess the vajra
Of Samantabhadra's body, speech, and mind,

Through the union of non-arising
This arising is proclaimed.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Way of the Complete and Perfect Awakening of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this awakening mind:

Where there is no entity, there is no meditation;
What is to be meditated on is not meditation.
Thus, since entities are not entities,
Meditation has no object to be found.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana Vajra, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Realization of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this awakening mind:

Free of all entities, of aggregates, elements,
And sense bases, rid of apprehended and apprehender,
Through the sameness of the selflessness of phenomena, one's own mind
Is unborn from the very beginning, its nature emptiness.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Vairocana.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Akṣobhya, entered into the meditative absorption called the Inexhaustible Vajra of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this awakening mind:

These entities are unborn;
There are neither phenomena nor the nature of phenomena.
Selfless, just like space:
This way of awakening is firm.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Akṣobhya.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Ratnaketu, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Selflessness of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this awakening mind:

All phenomena are without entity,
Free of the characteristics of phenomena;

Arisen from the selflessness of phenomena,
This way of awakening is firm.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Ratnaketu.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amitāyus, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Lamp of the Light Rays of Wisdom, and spoke this awakening mind:

For phenomena that are unborn
There is no essence, and no meditation either.
Through union with the state of space,
By this the entity is proclaimed.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amitāyus.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amoghasiddhi, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra That Overpowers All Tathāgatas, and spoke this awakening mind:

Phenomena are luminous by nature,
Pure from the very beginning, like space.
There is no awakening, no mind, and no realization:
This way of awakening is firm.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amoghasiddhi.

Then the bodhisattva great beings, Maitreya and the rest, having heard the syllables of the nature of reality of the secret of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, were amazed and filled with wonder, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful the Buddha! How wonderful the Dharma!
The teaching of the Dharma is a great marvel.
The perfect meaning, the meaning of purity:
Awakening mind, homage to you!

Truly arisen from the selflessness of phenomena,
Bringing the awakening of the buddhas to completion,
Free of concepts, without any object:
Awakening mind, homage to you!

Samantabhadra, the aim of all,
The awakening mind that fully revolves,

The great vajra of awakened conduct:
Awakening mind, homage to you!

Mind, the purity of the tathāgatas,
Possessed of vajra body, speech, and mind,
Fully revealing the awakening of the buddhas:
Awakening mind, homage to you!

This concludes the second chapter, on the awakening mind, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Array of the Radiating Clouds of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this chapter on the meditative absorption called the Vajra Array:

oṃ śūnyatājñānavajrasvabhāvātmako'haṃ

In the middle of the element of space
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the buddhas:
A great array of clouds of light rays,
Equal to the light of blazing buddhas,
Pervaded throughout by five light rays,
Perfectly round on every side,
Embellished with the five sense pleasures,
Adorned with the five kinds of offerings.

Having meditated, then by gathering it in,
One should meditate on the form in the center:
Vairocana, the great mudrā,
Marked with body, speech, and mind.
One should meditate too on the mudrā
Of the vajra of body, speech, and mind.

Through the union of the nondual gathering,
The supreme, excellent mudrā of Akṣobhya,
The great mudrā of Ratnaketu,
The light-maker of Amitāyus,
And the great mudrās of Amoghasiddhi:
Meditate on these in the maṇḍala of the buddhas.

The one with the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
Like the color of sapphire,
Holding a blazing vajra in his hand,
Fangs bared, radiant, terrifying.

Like the light of crystal and of the moon,
Adorned with a topknot and diadem,
Holding a blazing wheel in his hand,
Beautifully adorned with various ornaments.

Like the golden light of the Jambū River,
Clouds of buddhas massing all about him,
A great nine-pronged vajra:
Visualize it in his hand.

Like the light of emerald,
Adorned with blazing vajras,
Pervaded by clouds blazing all around:
Visualize him holding a jewel in his hand.

Like the color of ruby,
The lord who holds the blazing light of passion,
Holding a blazing lotus in his hand:
Meditate on the one with the vajra of passion.

Like the color of the five light rays,
The one with the manifold Amogha vajra,
Peaceful, holding a sword in his hand:
Meditate on him in the maṇḍala of the buddhas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Essential Nature of the Dharma Realm, and spoke this mantra that blesses body, speech, and mind:

oṃ dharmadhātusvabhāva ātmako'haṃ

A great jewel of five colors,
Just the size of a mustard seed,
At the tip of the nose, with diligence,
The yogin should always meditate on.
When the jewel has become stable, emanate;
If it has not become stable, do not emanate at all.

Light equal to that of blazing buddhas,
Clouds most supreme, should be emanated.
Holding as weapons the wheel, vajra, and jewel,
The lotus and the sword,
Great clouds of bodhisattvas
Are emanated by one whose nature is emanation.

In the middle of the element of space
One should draw the moon maṇḍala.
In the middle of the maṇḍala of clarity
One should meditate on the wheel maṇḍala.
The lotus maṇḍala, perfectly clear,
One should meditate on through lotus meditation.
The jewel maṇḍala, perfectly clear,
One should meditate on with the diligence of the jewel.
Arising from the maṇḍala of union,
It should be drawn so as to be like space.

These very supreme buddhas,
By accomplishing body, speech, and mind,
Arising from the vajra maṇḍala,
Attain the way of omniscience.

This concludes the third chapter, called the Meditative Absorption of the Vajra Array, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas gathered once more and made their request to the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas, with this king of praises:

Peace of all the tathāgatas,
Abode of all the tathāgatas,
Supreme selflessness of all phenomena:
Please explain the sublime maṇḍala.

All characteristics perfectly complete,
All that are not characteristics abandoned,
Supreme body of Samantabhadra:
Please explain the sublime maṇḍala.

Arisen from the supreme Dharma of peace,
Purifying the conduct of wisdom,
Supreme speech of Samantabhadra:
Please explain the sublime maṇḍala.

Great mind of all sentient beings,
Pure by nature and without stain,
Supreme mind of Samantabhadra, the guide:
Please explain the pure maṇḍala.

Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
Of the three worlds, of the three realms,
Supreme in the three worlds, the vajra lord,
Supreme teacher of the three worlds,

The abode of all the tathāgatas,
Fully explained the mind maṇḍala
Of all the tathāgatas, the way of the maṇḍala,
The delightful maṇḍala:

"Then, therefore, the mind maṇḍala,
Supreme, closely resembling the mind vajra,
The maṇḍala of body, speech, and mind,
I shall now perfectly explain.

Through meditating on body, speech, and mind,
The wise one should lay down the lines.
With a new cord well stretched,
With fine and beautiful proportions,
The sublime mind maṇḍala
Should be made twelve cubits in measure.
Its four sides and its four corners,
Four gates and the spaces between, are to be laid out well.
In its center a wheel,
Perfectly round, should be drawn.
Through the rite as it has been seen,
The mudrās should then be set out.

In its center one draws a vajra
Like the color of sapphire,
Greatly blazing, with five prongs,
Terrifying even the terrifying.

In the east, a great wheel
Adorned with blazing vajras;
In the south, a great jewel,
Massed with many light rays;
In the west, a great lotus,
Like the color of ruby;
In the north, a great sword
Is drawn, massed with blazing light rays.
In the center, clouds and peaceful light.

Locanā is drawn in the eastern corner,
And likewise in the south the vajra
That arises from the family of Māmakī.
A lotus in bloom, with its stem,
Should be drawn all about in the west.
In the north, a beautiful utpala,
Drawn like a dark blue cloud.
A hammer blazing with beautiful light all round
Should be drawn at the eastern gate.
A staff of fine light, with blazing vajras and the rest,
Is drawn all about in the south.
A lotus and a sword making blazing light
Should be drawn all about in the west.
In the north one should draw a vajra,
A coiled vajra endowed with vajras.

Having come to know that sublime mind maṇḍala
With complete clarity,
With offerings of body, speech, and mind
One should make offering with diligence.
Having found a consort, beautiful and radiant,
Sixteen years of age,
Adorned with perfumes and flowers,
One should make love in its center.
Māmakī, girdled with good qualities:
The wise one should bless her.
Peace is to be emanated, the abode of the buddhas;
The expanse of space is fully adorned.

Feces, urine, semen, blood, and the rest
Should be offered to the deities.
If one does so, the buddhas
And the greatly renowned bodhisattvas are pleased."

This concludes the fourth chapter, on the mind maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Tathāgata,
The king who holds the vajra
Of the body, speech, and mind of all,
The lord of the abode, supreme over all,
Declared the characteristics of conduct,
The supreme of all conduct, the meaning of the Dharma:

"Arisen from the nonconceptual meaning,
Stirring up passion, aversion, and delusion,
The supreme, unsurpassed vehicle
Accomplishes the most excellent accomplishment.

Caṇḍālas, bamboo workers, and the like,
Those whose minds are set on the aim of killing,
Will gain accomplishment in this supreme vehicle,
The unsurpassed Great Vehicle.

Even beings who commit great evils,
The acts of immediate retribution and the rest,
All of them too will gain accomplishment
In this great vehicle, this supreme practice.

But others, who revile the master,
Will never gain accomplishment, even if they practice.

Whatever beings take life,
Delight in speaking falsehood,
Covet the wealth of others,
And always delight in indulging desire,
Who eat feces and urine as food:
These become fit for practice.

If a practitioner makes love
To mother, sister, or daughter,
In the Dharma of the supreme Great Vehicle
He will attain vast accomplishment.

Even pleasuring the mother of the chief of buddhas,
He is not defiled;
That intelligent one, free of concepts,
Will attain buddhahood itself."

Then the bodhisattva great beings, Sarvanīvaraṇaviṣkambhin and the rest, were amazed and astonished, and said, "Blessed One, lord of all the tathāgatas, why do you speak such vile words in the midst of the assembly of all the tathāgatas?"

Then all the tathāgatas, having heard the words of the bodhisattva great beings Sarvanīvaraṇaviṣkambhin and the rest, spoke these words to those bodhisattvas: "Sons of good family, stop! Do not speak like that!

This pure nature of reality is the buddhas',
Of those whose essence is wisdom;
Arisen from the meaning of the essential Dharma,
These are the domain of awakened conduct."

Then the bodhisattvas, as numerous as the minute atoms of Mount Meru and the rest in inexpressible, inexpressibly inexpressible buddha fields, were terrified and frightened, and fainted.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas, seeing that those bodhisattvas had fainted, said these words to the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas: "Blessed One, please raise up these bodhisattva great beings."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of All Tathāgatas, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Nondual Equality with Space. As soon as he had entered absorption, merely by being touched by the light of the Blessed One, the lord of the body, speech, and mind vajra, those bodhisattva great beings were back upon their own seats.

Then all the tathāgatas were amazed and astonished, and, pervaded with delight, they spoke this song of the Dharma:

How wonderful the Dharma! How wonderful the Dharma!
How wonderful the source of the Dharma's meaning!

The meaning of the Dharma, pure and selfless:
Vajra king, I bow and pay you homage.

Body, speech, and mind utterly pure,
Abiding in equality with space,
Unchanging and without appearance:
To the vajra body I bow and pay homage.

The mind, the chief of the tathāgatas,
Arises on the path of the three times;
Its element has become the great space:
To the path of space I bow and pay homage.

Truly arisen from the body of space,
Abiding on the path of space,
Mind of space, supreme in the Dharma,
Abode of conduct, homage to you.

This concludes the fifth chapter, on supreme universal conduct, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Tathāgata Vajra Akṣobhya entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this mantra that blesses the mind: oṃ sarva tathāgata citta vajra svabhāva ātmako'haṃ

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Vairocana, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Abode Free of Dust, and spoke this mantra that blesses the body: oṃ sarva tathāgata kāya vajra svabhāva ātmako'haṃ

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amitāyus, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Nondual Equality, and spoke this mantra that blesses speech: oṃ sarva tathāgata vāka vajra svabhāva ātmako'haṃ

The threefold vajra, the secret of the tathāgatas,
Is to be meditated upon in place after place;
For these very supreme mantras,
Their characteristics and signs are to be accomplished.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Ratnaketu, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Lamp of Wisdom, and spoke this mantra: oṃ sarva tathāgata anurāgaṇa vajra svabhāva ātmako'haṃ

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajra Amoghasiddhi, entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra Amogha, and spoke this mantra: oṃ sarva tathāgata pūjā vajra svabhāva ātmako'haṃ

Always, with the five qualities of sense pleasure,
One should worship the buddhas in the proper way.
Through these five kinds of offering
One swiftly attains buddhahood.

So spoke the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the great Vajradhara, lord of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, lord of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas, spoke this great secret of the mantras of all tathāgatas:

Through the body that visualizes the mantra,
Urging on speech and mind,
The supreme accomplishment to be attained is won,
And the mind becomes truly joyful and lovely.

The mind's object is selflessness;
Meditate likewise on speech and body.
The threefold union, the state
Of equality with space, is to be accomplished.

The essential nature of body, speech, and mind as objects
Cannot be found as an object at all.
Through the union of the mantra body
There is no awakening, and no meditation either.

Having analyzed this characteristic
Of body, speech, and mind, by drawing it together,
One should meditate on the absorption of union with awakening,
The imagined form of the mantra.

Then the glorious Vajra Holder,
Honored by all the tathāgatas,
Supreme among all buddhas, the all-knowing one,
Declared the supreme meditation:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the moon.

Having meditated well on the form of the buddha,
One should undertake the subtle yoga throughout.

Imagine a white mustard seed at the tip of the nose;
Within the mustard seed, the moving and the unmoving,
The delightful abode of wisdom:
Meditate on the imagined form of secret wisdom.

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the sun.
Having meditated on the abode of the buddha body,
One sets the abode upon it.

hūṃ Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of radiance.
In the yoga of the mode of Locanā,
Then meditate on the lotus and the vajra.

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of jewels.
With diligence in the first yoga,
Meditate thoroughly upon it.

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of light.
Emanate the peaceful form of the buddha;
Emanate the retinue in their distinct forms.

Like the color of a blue utpala lotus,
Distinguished by its five points,
The size of a grain of barley, with diligence
Imagine it at the tip of the nose.

The size of a chickpea,
Eight-petaled, with its anthers,
At the tip of the nose this is auspicious;
Intent on awakening, one should meditate on it.

The wheel and the rest, in their particulars,
Are to be imagined in that meditation.
The abode of the qualities of all accomplishments,
The delightful abode of awakening, will be achieved.

The abodes of the buddhas' awakening
Are to be emanated there by gathering them in.
The Dharma abode of the signs
Of body, speech, and mind is to be sent forth.

Then glorious Vajradhara,
The revealer of all the meanings of reality,
Declared the supreme secret,
The well-purified conduct supreme above all:

Endowed with forms, sounds, and tastes,
The wise one should meditate for six months.
Having duly made the great offering
Of secret reality, one should meditate as well.

To take feces and urine as food,
One who wishes for the fruit of accomplishment should do so.
The accomplishment of unsurpassed reality
Is the flawless awakening of the buddhas.

In order to eat meat as well,
One should carefully examine the great meat.
Secret body, speech, and mind,
And all accomplishments, will be achieved.

Elephant meat and horse meat,
And likewise the excellent dog meat,
Should be eaten as food;
One should not eat any other food.

The buddhas will be pleased,
And the wise bodhisattvas too.
Through a practice such as this
One swiftly attains buddhahood.

In the world, as lord of the desire realm,
One will perform the deeds of that rank:
Powerful, preeminent, majestic,
Of fine complexion, pleasing to behold.
By mere sight, without any urging,
One will bring these worlds under one's power.

This is the secret of all the buddhas,
Their supreme awakening;
This secret of the true mantra
Transcends body, speech, and mind.

This concludes the sixth chapter, on the blessing of body, speech, and mind, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Blessed One, lord of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas, spoke this chapter on the perfect awakening to the supreme conduct of mantra, the reality of the great pledge.

Enjoying all objects of desire,
Relying on them just as one wishes,
Through a practice such as this
One will surely and swiftly attain buddhahood.

Enjoying all objects of desire,
One should rely on them just as one wishes,
And through the yoga of one's own deity
Make offerings to oneself and to others.

Through harsh and rigid austerities
Relied upon, one will not succeed;
But relying on them while enjoying all objects of desire,
One will swiftly succeed.

Living on alms, one should not recite,
Nor should one take delight in begging;
Enjoying all objects of desire,
Recite the limbs of the mantra without lapse.

When body, speech, and mind Attain abiding in bliss, awakening is attained;
Otherwise there will be untimely death,
And one will surely burn in hell.

The buddhas and the bodhisattvas,
Practicing the supreme conduct of mantra,
Who have found the Dharma and the supreme unchanging state,
Did so by relying on all objects of desire.

One with passion, who longs for wisdom,
Should always rely on the five qualities of sense pleasure.
The bodhisattvas are to be pleased,
And one should cleave with passion to the sun of awakening.

Having known form as threefold,
One should offer it to the one whose very nature is offering.
That itself is the Blessed One in manifold form,
The buddha Vairocana, the ground.

Having known sound as threefold,
One should present it to the deities.
That itself is the Blessed One in manifold form,
The buddha Ratnasambhava, the chief.

Having known smell as threefold,
One should present it to the buddhas and the rest.
That itself is the Blessed One in manifold form,
The chief, the Source of the Dharma of Passion.

Having known taste as threefold,
One should present it to the deities.
That itself is the buddha in manifold form,
The buddha Amogha, the Vajra Holder.

Having known touch as threefold,
One should present it to one's own family.
That itself is the vajra-bearing Blessed One.
Those who have attained the way of Akṣobhya
Should always apply their minds
To forms, sounds, smells, and the rest.

This is the essence of the secret
Gathered from all the buddhas.
The mantra practitioner should always meditate
On forms, sounds, smells, and the rest as the deities themselves.
Or else, one should meditate on them
By meditating on the divisions of the families.

Apply oneself to the recollection of the Buddha;
Meditate on the recollection of the Dharma;
Meditate on body, speech, and mind;

Meditate on the recollection of the vajra;
From the yoga of recollecting the family,
Meditate on the recollection of the wrathful ones;
From the yoga of recollecting the pledge,
If one meditates, awakening will be attained.

Having found a woman of beautiful form and fine complexion
Who has reached sixteen years of age,
With the three places of blessing
Undertake the offering in a secluded place.
Meditate on the great consorts of the tathāgatas,
Locanā and the others.
By joining the two organs in union,
The accomplishment of buddhahood will be attained.

The syllables hūṃ and oṃ,
And phaṭ as well, should be imagined.
Meditate on the vajra and the lotus Pervaded by rays of light of five colors.
Meditate on it as blazing,
Lovely like the light of the moon.
One who longs for awakening should meditate
On the yoga of recollecting the Buddha and the rest.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the Buddha?

Having placed the liṅga, the male organ, in the bhaga, the female organ,
One should meditate on the form of the buddha.
From the openings at the tips of the body's pores
The wise one emanates clouds of buddhas.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the Dharma?

Having placed the liṅga in the bhaga,
One should meditate well on Vajradharma.
From the openings at the tips of the body's pores
The wise one emanates clouds of the Dharma.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the vajra?

Having placed the liṅga in the bhaga,
Meditate on Vajrasattva.

From the openings at the tips of the body's pores
One should emanate clouds of vajras.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the family?

Having placed the liṅga in the bhaga,
Meditate well on the form of the buddha.
From the openings at the tips of the body's pores
The wise one emanates clouds of the family.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the wrathful ones?

Having placed the liṅga in the bhaga,
Meditate well on the lord of the wrathful ones.
From the openings at the tips of the body's pores
The wise one emanates clouds of wrathful ones.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the pledge?

Possessing one's own vajra and lotus,
Joining the two organs in union,
With the drops of one's own seminal fluid
Worship the buddha Vajrasattva.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the maṇḍala?

Placing the two organs in union,
The wise one, the great yogin,
Should draw forth his own seminal fluid
And make the maṇḍala in the manner of the maṇḍala.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the body?

The body of all the buddhas,
Fully developed through the five aggregates:
Through the essential nature of the buddha body
May I too become like it.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of speech?

The speech of Vajradharma,
Perfect in its words of certainty:
May my words likewise
Become like those of the Dharma Holder.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the mind?

The mind of Samantabhadra,
The wise Lord of Secrets:
May my mind likewise Become like the Vajra Holder.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of sentient beings?

Whatever is the mind of all sentient beings,
The mark of body, speech, and mind,
My mind too is just like that,
Like the heroes, equal to space.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the form of mantra and of all body, speech, and mind?

Whatever is the vajra body of mantra,
The body of speech, is to be meditated upon;
I too have a body just like it,
Always equal to the mantra holder.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the pledge?

The pledge, the seminal fluid, in accordance with the rite,
Should be drunk by one who desires the fruit,
And the host of tathāgatas should be slain:
The supreme accomplishment will be attained.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the pledge of the Perfection of Wisdom?

All things are by nature luminous,
Unborn and without defilement,
Without awakening and without realization,
Without elements and without arising.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the unborn?

From that natural luminosity,
Through space, signless and unchanging,
Nondual, not nondual, at peace,
Utterly stainless, like space.

How then should one meditate on the recollection of the offering of the family of aversion?

Having found a woman of very steady mind
Who has reached twelve years of age,
Through the distinctions of the yoga of the family
One should make offering with one's own seminal fluid.
By this, the body of the tathāgatas,
And the mind of the Vajra Holder, and

And the speech of the supreme Dharma Holder
Will be attained in this very life;
Body, speech, and mind are perfectly accomplished.
Whatever others are spoken of as lowborn,
By meditating on the three indivisible vajras
And by recitation, will succeed in this.

This concludes the seventh chapter, on the supreme conduct of mantra, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Ratnaketu, made a request to the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, lord of all tathāgatas, the supreme sovereign, with this king of praises:

Vajra King, great vehicle,
Who purifies through the conduct of space,
Supreme conduct of Samantabhadra,
Please explain the offering to the supreme Victor.

Great one of passion, aversion, and delusion,
Who fully reveals the Vajra Vehicle,
Supreme one equal to the expanse of space,
Please explain the offering to the four Victors.

You who fully reveal the path of liberation
And lead beings into the path of the three vehicles,
Pure self, supreme fortune of the buddhas,
Please explain the offering to the supreme among humans.

Eye of the vast mind of awakening,
Who fully turns the wheel of Dharma,
Utterly pure in body, speech, and mind,
Vajra Vehicle, homage to you.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
The great unchanging space of all,
The aim of all, the empowerment of all,
The all-powerful holder of the vajra jewel,
Explained the supreme offering to the tathāgatas,
The indivisible abode of the three vajras,
The supreme fortune of body, speech, and mind,
Through which the Victor comes to arise:

Having found a young woman with wide eyes,
Adorned with beauty and youth,
Take one who has reached twenty-five years;
One may examine one even from among the animals.

A place that is clean and secluded,
Or a peaceful, tranquil place where the Victor himself arose,
Smeared with feces, urine, water, and the like,
Should always be prepared for the worship of the Victor.

In the middle of the breasts, at the crown and the very center,
Down to the feet, the one who knows the rite,
At the navel, the hips, and the secret place, O child of the Victor,
Should carefully set out the five families.

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the ocean of wisdom.
Meditate on oneself abiding in the center of the moon;
The wise one, as the peaceful Vajra Holder,
Should also carefully perform the gatherings
Of whatever is desired at the heart.

A stūpa made of the four jewels,
Adorned with garlands of light rays,
Imagine it as having become the abode
Of the ocean of wisdom of the three times.
From the pores of one's own body
The wise one emanates clouds of offerings.

The wise one should know the utpala lotuses
And the lotuses of five kinds;
Having known jāti jasmine as threefold,
One should present them to the deities.

Karṇikāra flowers and mallikā,
And yūthikā, and karavīra flowers as well:
Imagining them, arrange the offering carefully.

Over an expanse of a hundred yojanas
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the wheel,
And the one of great skill should always Carefully set out the families.
Likewise the lotus and the vajra,
The sword and the utpala, the wise one meditates on.

Over an expanse of ten million yojanas,
Square and exceedingly beautiful,
A stūpa made of the four jewels,
Clear, and by nature stainless,
The abode of the families, for the sake of offering,
The one with wisdom should meditate on.

With the five qualities of sense pleasure
Undertake an ocean of offerings to it.
With jewel garments and the like
One who longs for awakening always worships.
With the supreme five kinds of offering Always please the deities.

The supreme young woman of Ratnasambhava,
Adorned with various jewels and the like,
For the sake of accomplishing and fully accomplishing,
Should be presented to all the buddhas.

This field filled with the seven jewels
The one of great skill, who desires wisdom and desires accomplishment,
The one with wisdom, should present each day.

Settled in equipoise in the mudrā of the lord,
In the center of the buddha maṇḍala,
To the buddha of passionate mind
One should present the yoga of touch.

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the arrangement of the maṇḍala.
One's own body has the nature of the tathāgatas;

Worship the guru with feces and urine.

Imagining a young woman of beautiful face,
Lovely, endowed with supreme fortune,
As the place of blessing,
Carefully arrange that very offering.
Having taken the fluid of the wide-eyed one,
One who possesses a steady mind should eat it.

This is the offering of body, speech, and mind
Of all the mantras,
The secret of the one who bears the vajra of wisdom,
Proclaimed to bring about the accomplishment of the mantras.

This concludes the eighth chapter, on the pledge of feces and urine, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
The great unchanging space of all,
Supreme in the conduct of all empowerments,
The supreme lord of the aims of all,
Fully explained, as a secret to those of the buddha vehicle,
The enjoyment of body, speech, and mind,
The maṇḍala of the three indivisible vajras,
The supreme delight:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the buddha maṇḍala.
Having meditated well on Akṣobhya Vajra,
One should meditate on a vajra in the hand,
Blazing with many radiating lights
And filled with rays of five colors.
Having meditated on the buddhas who arise in the three times,
Crush them to powder with the vajra.

The enjoyment of body, speech, and mind,
Crushed to powder by the vajra, becomes nonexistent.
If one meditates on that supreme meditative concentration,
The accomplishment of mind will be attained.

If, by means of this vajra secret,
One kills all sentient beings,
In the field of the buddha Akṣobhya
One will be born as a child of the Victor.

This, from the ocean of all the families, is to be known as the reality of the pledge of the family of aversion.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Who accomplishes liberation from ignorance,
Pure in essential nature and untainted,
By fully revealing the conduct of awakening Declared the true pledge
For accomplishing the awakening of the buddhas:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the wheel.
Having meditated well on Vairocana,
Meditate on all the buddhas.
Through the yoga of all the jewels
Carefully imagine the form of the vajra.
Having stolen all riches,
Meditate with the three vajras.
Like a wish-fulfilling jewel,
One will be filled with an ocean of wealth.
One will become a child of all the buddhas
And one among the great beings of the sages.

This, from all the oceans of the families, is to be known as the true pledge of the family of delusion.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Who fully accomplishes liberation through passion,
The pure secret beyond all objects,
Fully declared the maṇḍala:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the lotus.
Having meditated well on Amitābha,
Filling everything with buddhas,
There one should meditate on them all
In the yoga of the form of consorts.

Through the yoga of the four pledges,
This is the supreme way of the vajra.
By fully joining the two organs,
One closely enjoys them all.
This is the accomplishment of the three indivisible bodies
Of all the mantras.

This is the true pledge of the family of passion, which is to be meditated upon by the mantra practitioner.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Who accomplishes the aim of the vajra mantra,
Selfless, arisen from wisdom,
Declared these words:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the buddha maṇḍala.
Having meditated well on Vajra Amogha,
One should meditate on all the buddhas.
False speech is the abode of the vajra;
Meditate on all of it as form.
All the abodes of the victors
And all the victors are to be deceived.
This is the speech of space of all the buddhas,
Stainless, the secret of all who are wise in wisdom,
Declared to bring about the accomplishment of mantra.

This is the reality of the pledge of the family of the pledge of summoning; it should be emanated in accordance with its meaning.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
The abode of the victors, the three indivisible vajras,
Fully revealing the vajra of accomplishment,
Declared these words:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the pledge.
Having meditated well as Ratnaketu,
Fill all these with every form.
If one relies on harsh speech and the like,
Wisdom will be attained.

So declared the Blessed One, the Vajra Array of all tathāgatas.

Then again the bodhisattva great beings, Samaya Vajra Ketu of all tathāgatas and the others, were amazed and astonished, and spoke these vajra words: "Blessed One, lord of all tathāgatas, you who have transcended the three realms and transcended all world systems, why do you speak this vajra word, such a wondrous path of speech, in the midst of the maṇḍala of the assembly of all the tathāgatas and all the bodhisattvas?"

Then all the blessed tathāgatas spoke thus to those bodhisattvas, Samaya Vajra Ketu of all tathāgatas and the others, as numerous as the atoms of Mount Meru in buddha fields inexpressibly, inexpressibly many: "Sons of good family, do not give rise to such a perception of inferiority and such a perception of contempt. Why is that? Sons of good family, this conduct of mantra is the supreme conduct. This conduct of mantra is the conduct of the tathāgatas.

"Sons of good family, it is like this. Space, for example, pervades everything, and all phenomena are included within space. Yet they do not abide in the desire realm, do not abide in the form realm, do not abide in the formless realm, and do not abide in the four great elements. Sons of good family, all phenomena should be understood in this way. Knowing the import of such a meaning, and knowing the dispositions of sentient beings, the tathāgatas teach the Dharma. Sons of good family, through the definitive expression of just such words of space, one should understand these pledges of the tathāgatas.

"Sons of good family, it is like this. For example, through the conditions of the fire drill, the base, and the movement of a person's hand, smoke arises and fire comes to be. Yet that fire does not abide in the fire drill, does not abide in the base, and does not abide in the movement of the person's hand. Sons of good family, in just the same way the vajra pledge of all tathāgatas should be understood, as with going, coming, and the rest."

Then those bodhisattvas were amazed; astonished, they were struck dumb, their eyes wide open, and they spoke these words:

The phenomena of great wonder
Are equal to space;
In what is pure and free of concepts,
That even the conventional is taught is a marvel.

This concludes the ninth chapter, on the pledge of the meaning of reality, ultimate purity, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas assembled once more, bowed to the Blessed One, the tathāgata who is the secret of body, speech, and mind, fully and perfectly awakened to the vajra reality of the great pledge, and made this request:

The supreme mode of great accomplishment,
Proclaimed as the secret of body, speech, and mind,
Which gathers all the heart mantras of reality:
Blessed One, please explain it.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Chief of the ocean of all afflictions,
Blazing, fierce, and wide-eyed,
Declared these words:

Meditate on body, speech, and mind,
The vajras of body, speech, and mind,
Free of concepts, beyond all objects,
Equality that abides nowhere at all.

Then the Blessed One, the tathāgata pure by nature, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Mode of Mantra of the Perfections, and spoke thus to all those tathāgatas: "All you blessed tathāgatas, Akṣobhya and the others, together with many hundreds of thousands of koṭis of niyutas of knowledge mantras (vidyās), display the playful dance of working for the benefit of all sentient beings. Although throughout the infinite world systems of the ten directions you fully enjoy the five qualities of sense pleasure, playing and delighting in them, you do not care with your gaze for those who are diligent in the conduct of mantra. Why is that? Because, oh, these have heard the Dharma from all the tathāgatas by way of the conduct of mantra.

Therefore, in order to watch over those great holy beings with his gaze, he spoke, through the definitive expression of a path of words from his own vajra of body, speech, and mind, this compendium of mantra: the utterly secret one called That Which Arouses the Mind of All Mantras, the Vajra Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas; the object of the pledge of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas; the object of the pledge of the body, speech, and mind of all vajra holders; the object of the pledge of the body, speech, and mind of all Dharma holders: oṃ hūṃ āḥ svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
All the buddhas together with their children
Trembled violently and fainted,
And they recollected Vajrasattva.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, spoke this pledge:

Abiding in the middle of the expanse of space,
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of the array.
Abiding in its center, the syllable hūṃ:
Imagine it fully as one's own form.
Imagine the light rays of the vajra
Blazing greatly and radiating out.
Meditate that by them the body, speech, and mind
Of the buddhas are drawn in.
Immediately it becomes, right there,
The holder of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
Vajrasattva, the great king,
Chief of all, the supreme lord.
It becomes the rite by which one's own maṇḍala
Is generated by one's own vajra.
This is the vajra essence
Gathered from all the buddhas.
Having meditated on one's own mantra person,
In the four places, in the manner of form,
Through the yoga of the three-faced aspect,
Meditate fully with three colors.

So declared the Blessed One, Vajra Samaya.

Herein, this is the supreme vajra secret:

At the very center of the heart of the maṇḍalas
One should meditate on a subtle form placed within.
Within its center
Imagine the word of the supreme syllable.
The yoga of the great vajra:
Always meditate on it as five-pointed.
Through the yoga of the vajra hook
One should meditate on the three vajras.

By it the mind is to be compelled,
And the deity fully urged.
This is the full accomplishment of the buddhas' awakening
For all the vajras.
Meditating on the vajra hook,
The vajra, the lotus family, and the rest,
The urging of the mind has been fully explained.
This is the source of music.
If this supreme mode of the vajra
Is practiced for seven days,
The great secret body, speech, and mind,
The holder of the vajra of wisdom, will be accomplished.
Frightened, with mind terrified,
He looks on and grants the supreme;
Satisfied in mind and delighted,
He will bestow vast accomplishment.
Buddhas and bodhisattvas,
And holders of the supreme conduct of mantra,
If out of delusion they themselves transgress,
Their life will come to an end right there.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Revealer of the supreme three vajras,
The vajra chief, supreme in the three worlds,
Declared these words:

All persons of mantra, however many,
Complete in the wisdom of the three vajras,
Through the yoga of the two organs
Should examine all things.
This is the accomplishment of the pledge of mantra
Of all the buddhas.
Having entered the sovereign lady of the knowledge consorts,
Meditate fully on the vajra yoga,
And look with a passionate, impassioned gaze:
This is the maṇḍala of the pledge.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
Born as the very self of all tathāgatas,

The buddha chief of all empowerments,
Declared these words:

In all world systems,
However many are called women,
Through the preliminary yoga of the great mudrā
One should closely enjoy them all.
Countless koṭis of vajra holders,
The abodes of the buddhas, are to be emanated there.

So declared the Blessed One, the Pledge of Awakening:

By this, awakening will be attained.
The three vajras, like space,
The bodhisattva, the ocean of victors,
Vajrasattva, one attains in that very life.

This concludes the tenth chapter, called the Arousing of the Mind of All Tathāgatas, from the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra, entered into the meditative absorption called the Vajra Supreme Person of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this chapter on the supreme person of the vajra knowledge of the mantras of all tathāgatas:

The syllables of the three vajras, supreme among mantras,
Meditating on the great mudrā:
The attainment of all awakening
Is brought about by the vajras of wisdom.
The syllable oṃ is the essence of wisdom;
It brings about the attainment of the vajra body.
The syllable āḥ is the very self of the emanation of awakening;
It brings about the attainment of vajra speech.
The syllable hūṃ is body, speech, and mind;
It attains the three indivisible vajras.

So declared the Blessed One, the mantra person of the body, speech, and mind of all tathāgatas.

Abiding in the middle of the vajra of space,
Imagine the maṇḍala born of all the vajras.

There imagine the syllable bhruṃ, Generating radiating clouds of vajras.

Herein, this is the essence of the wisdom vajra: bhruṃ

Abiding in the middle of the vajra maṇḍala,
Meditate fully on the syllable hūṃ.
Abiding in the middle of the maṇḍala of radiance,
Imagine the syllable oṃ.
Abiding in the middle of the Dharma maṇḍala,
Meditate fully on the syllable āḥ.
Having meditated on the abodes with the syllable bhruṃ,
One should meditate on the arising of the three vajras.

So declared the Blessed One, the Secret of the Three Pledges:

The essence that pleases the body, speech, and mind
Of the buddhas of the three times:
The syllable oṃ is the supreme buddha body. oṃ
The syllable āḥ is the path of buddha speech. āḥ
The syllable hūṃ is the mind, the bond of wisdom. hūṃ
This is the supreme mode of awakening.
This is the full accomplishment
Of the buddhas' awakening for all the buddhas,
The emanation by the vajra of wisdom,
From which arise the buddhas' cause and fruit.
These are the buddha persons themselves,
Proclaimed as mantra and as knowledge mantra.
The pledges of generation and the rest,
By meditating on the three indivisible vajras:

This is the meditative absorption called the Cause of the Blessing of the Wisdom Vajra, the Reality of the Pledge of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas.

In a place secluded and delightful,
Undertake this yoga in full.
The vajra body, speech, and mind are accomplished
Even through a part of it, without doubt.
In the center of the vajra of space
Imagine the sublime, radiant maṇḍala.

Generate the pledge of your own mantra,
And place the syllable oṃ at the heart.
A great cloud of fivefold light rays:
Meditating on supreme Vairocana,
Through this the body of the buddhas
Becomes an ocean of Vajra Vairocana,
A light like the body of the buddhas.
The rite of the three vajras,
Endowed with the five wisdoms, is relied on and dwelt in;
Through merely a part of it, accomplishment will come.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Secret of the Vajra Body.

This is the meditative absorption called the Array of Light Rays of the Vajra Body of All Tathāgatas.

Abiding in the center of the vajra of space,
Imagine the sublime maṇḍala of the Dharma.
Generate the person of your own mantra,
And place the syllable āḥ on the pathway of speech.
The great vajra of five colors:
By meditating on supreme Lokeśvara,
Having perfected pledge and wisdom,
The supreme of the five pledges of speech,
Abiding on the path of the words of Dharma,
One becomes equal to Vajradharma.
The rite of the three vajras,
Endowed with the five wisdoms, is relied on and dwelt in.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Secret of Vajra Speech.

This is the meditative absorption called the Arising of the Pledge of the Speech Vajra of All Tathāgatas.

Abiding in the center of the vajra of space,
Imagine the sublime vajra maṇḍala.
Having generated the person of your own mantra,
The syllable hūṃ abiding at the heart,
That very great pledge,
Should be meditated on as five-colored.
The abode of all the vajras and the victors

Is made by the wisdom vajras.
The Teacher, arisen from the vajra mind,
Becomes an ocean of wisdom and qualities.
The rite of the three vajras,
Endowed with the five wisdoms, is relied on and dwelt in.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Secret of the Vajra Mind.

This is the meditative absorption called the Vajra of the Pledge of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas.

In the center of the wisdom maṇḍala
One should meditate on the great vajra.
On all the bodies, the syllable khaṃ;
The vajra wisdom becomes equal to space. khaṃ
Honored again and again
By buddhas and bodhisattvas,
Abiding in the pledge of the three rites,
One will not be seen even by the buddhas.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Pledge of the Space Vajra.

This is the meditative absorption called the Garlanded Array of the Arising of the Invisibility of Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra.

In the center of the vajra maṇḍala,
Meditate well on the person of your own mantra.
At the heart place the vajra called haṃ,
And meditate on its light rays. haṃ
Mañjuśrī, enjoying the perfect pledge,
Holder of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
As the very nature of a bodhisattva,
Comes to abide on the ten grounds.

This is the meditative absorption called the Moon Vajra, the Pledge of the Wisdom of the Bodhisattvas.

Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
A syllable blazing brightly with light rays:
If one meditates on it as a vajra body
With the supreme marks, one becomes equal to the vajra body. thlīṃ

This is the meditative absorption called the Abode of the Array of the Pledge of the Space Vajra.

One becomes equal to the five superknowledges,
The supreme pledge of the buddhas' superknowledge.
Among all accomplishments, this
Is the accomplishing of the buddhas' supreme superknowledge.

Abiding in the center of the element of space,
Imagine the sublime buddha maṇḍala.
Meditate well on Vajrasattva,
And meditate on the wisdom syllable oṃ. oṃ
By meditating on the three vajra pledges,
One becomes like Akṣobhya Vajra of the three.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra Akṣobhya.

A body like that of Akṣobhya,
And his supreme speech and mind, one always holds.
In all the world systems
One will be honored by Akṣobhya Vajra.

This is the meditative absorption called the Vajra Arising from the Pledge of the Blessed Akṣobhya.

Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
Imagine the buddha maṇḍala of beautiful light.
Meditate well on Space Vajra,
And meditate on the jewel syllable oṃ. oṃ
By meditating on the three vajra pledges,
One becomes like the banner of the three vajras.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra Ratnaketu.

Through the vajra of body, speech, and mind
One is like the light of Ratnaketu.
That one comes to abide equally
In selfless awakening and the secret of wisdom.

This is the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Enjoyment of the Jewel Pledge.

Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
Imagine the sublime buddha maṇḍala.

Meditate well on Lokeśvara,
And meditate on the Dharma syllable oṃ. oṃ
By meditating on the three vajra pledges,
One becomes like the Immeasurable of the three vajras.
Through the vajra of body, speech, and mind
One becomes like Amitābha.
That becomes the source
Of the path of the Great Vehicle for all sentient beings.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra Amitābha.

This is the meditative absorption called the Glory of the Light of Immeasurable Qualities.

Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
Imagine the sublime buddha maṇḍala.
Having meditated well on the vajra utpala,
Meditate intently on the pledge syllable oṃ. oṃ
By meditating on the three vajra pledges,
One becomes like the Vajra Amogha of the three.
Through the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
A light like that of Vajra Amogha:
That glorious ocean of wisdom
Becomes the source of benefit for all sentient beings.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra Amogha.

This is the meditative absorption called the Arising of the Pledge of Amogha, the Arising of the Supreme Wisdom of Light Rays.

Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
Imagine the buddha maṇḍala of beautiful light.
Meditate well on Vajra Vairocana,
And meditate intently on the syllable oṃ of the three bodies. oṃ
By meditating on the three vajra pledges,
One becomes equal to Vairocana.
Through the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
A light like that of Vairocana:
That is the perfect awakening of wisdom,
Which accomplishes the indivisible three bodies.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra Vairocana.

This is the meditative absorption called the Vajra of Perfect Awakening Focused on Body, Speech, and Mind.

On secluded mountains,
By flowing rivers,
And in charnel grounds and the like,
Practice these condensed meditative concentrations.
Akṣobhya, the wisdom vajra, and the rest:
Imagine them abiding in the center of vajra space.
Through the yoga of the five superknowledges,
Meditate on the supreme buddhas in their places.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Great Vajra, Superknower of the Samaya Vajra.

The great vajra with five prongs,
Adorned with five flames:
By applying it intently to the five places,
One becomes like the vajra superknowledge.
Meditate on the wheel of your own mantra,
Turbulent with many sparks.
Through the yoga of the five vajras,
One becomes like the vajra superknowledge.
Abiding in the center of the vajra of space,
The wheel is like the blazing light of the buddhas.
Having meditated, through the entry of the buddhas
One becomes like the abode of the buddhas.

Abiding in the center of the buddha maṇḍala,
Place Vairocana upon your own body.
Imagine the syllable oṃ at the heart,
And meditate on consciousness within the mantra.
His mind enters the vajra of cessation.
When he comes to be born,
He becomes a glorious wish-fulfilling jewel
That accomplishes the supreme of all the buddhas.

Abiding in the center of the buddha maṇḍala,
Meditate intently on Vajra Akṣobhya.
Having meditated on the syllable hūṃ at the heart,

Set the mind as having become a drop.
Abiding in the center of the buddha maṇḍala,
Meditate intently on Amitāyus.
Imagining the syllable āḥ at the heart,
Set it as belonging to the vajra drop.
This is the supreme of supreme pledges:
Meditate on the three vajras as indivisible.
The pledge of cessation is the wisdom
Through which the accomplishment of the buddhas is attained.

Abiding in the expanse of the vajra of space
Is the radiant maṇḍala to be meditated on.
If one imagines the syllable oṃ on body, speech, and mind,
One will remain for an eon.
Abiding in the expanse of the vajra of space
Is the Dharma maṇḍala to be meditated on.
If one imagines the syllable āḥ on body, speech, and mind,
One will remain for an eon.
Abiding in the expanse of the vajra of space
Is the vajra maṇḍala to be meditated on.
If one imagines the syllable hūṃ on body, speech, and mind,
One will remain for an eon.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Pledge of the Rite of the Three Vajras.

Whoever takes up this yoga
Of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
Whether by reading it or merely by thinking of it,
He too will become a Vajra Holder.

This is the eleventh chapter, on the Supreme Person Who Knows the Reality of the Mantra Pledge of All Tathāgatas, from the Guhyasamāja, the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas.

Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
Accomplishing the supreme wisdom of generation,
Proclaimed with vajra speech
That very pledge of the three vajras:

"Equal, the same as space,
The essential nature free of conceptualization:

In phenomena pure by their intrinsic nature,
Meditate intently on these displays.
In a superb spot in a great wilderness,
Adorned with flowers, fruits, and the like,
On a mountain secluded from people,
Practice the condensed practice of all accomplishments. maṃ
Upon the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
Meditate intently on Mañjuvajra.
Radiating to body, speech, and mind,
One becomes like Mañjuvajra.
Vast for a hundred leagues,
Through that light of the blazing vajra
One appears as a pure self,
Adorned with every ornament.
Gods such as Brahmā and Rudra
Can never see him."

This is the meditative absorption called Making Invisible, the Pledge of Supreme Mañjuvajra.

Arisen from the three indivisible vajras,
The five pledges, excrement, urine, and the rest,
Should be combined with the three metals,
Placed in the mouth, and then meditated on.
There meditate intently
On the indivisible mind of all the buddhas.
Immediately thereupon,
One becomes like the light of Mañjuvajra.
From your own mantra, having meditated on a wheel
Radiating light, of supreme luster,
If you meditate on it as the abode where all the buddhas dwell,
You will become equal to the buddhas.
As many atoms as there are
In thirty-six Mount Merus,
So many will follow after him,
All of them like the Vajra Holder.

This is the meditative absorption called the Pledge of the Wheel.

Through your own mantra, meditate well
On the great vajra in the center of the maṇḍala.
If you imagine it as the abode of all vajras,
You will become like the vajra.
As many as the subtlest atoms
Of thirty-six Mount Merus,
That many women
Will become abodes endowed with good qualities.
Paid homage by the fierce ones,
One becomes the great vajra of the three realms.

This is the meditative absorption called Vajra Equality.

Having imagined a great eight-petaled lotus
As the vajra of your own mantra,
The abode of all phenomena,
One becomes like Vajradharma.
As many as the subtlest atoms
Of thirty-six Mount Merus,
In the maṇḍala of supreme offering to the buddhas
One establishes the pure self.

This is the meditative absorption called Lotus Equality.

The pledge of the three rites,
Endowed with the five wisdoms, is relied on and dwelt in;
It attends upon and honors the threefold secret
Of all the buddhas of the ten directions.
With a light like the colors of the five rays,
Meditate on a sword in your own mantra.
Wide-eyed, holding it in the hand,
One becomes a knowledge-holder of the three vajras.
To be worshiped by the great three realms,
Paid homage by Brahmā, Indra, and the asuras,
Unique in the great trichiliocosm,
One becomes the supreme holder of the secret.
Whatever of the vajras of body, speech, and mind
One desires in one's mind,
Arisen from the vajra mind,
It bestows accomplishment of that kind.

This is the meditative absorption called the Most Sublime of All Swords.

Imagine the syllable oṃ as a pill
The size of a chickpea,
And in its center, imagining
The form of your own deity, meditate on it in the mouth.
Immediately thereupon,
One becomes like the light of a bodhisattva,
Like the light of the rising sun,
The color of the gold of the Jambū River.
Imagine the syllable āḥ as a pill
Merely the size of a chickpea,
And in its center, imagining
The form of your own deity, meditate on it in the mouth.
Immediately thereupon,
One becomes like the light of the wisdom of awakening,
Like the light of the rising sun,
The color of the gold of the Jambū River.
Imagine the syllable hūṃ as a pill
Merely the size of a chickpea,
And in its center, imagining
The form of your own deity, meditate on it in the mouth.
Immediately thereupon,
One becomes like the vajra body and its light,
Like the light of the rising sun,
Like the golden light of the Jambū River.

Abiding in the center of the radiant expanse of space,
Meditate intently on Vairocana.
If you meditate well on a wheel in the hand,
You will become a holder of the knowledge of the wheel.
Having meditated on the family of the great wheel,
Through intent union with the body of the buddhas,
This practice of supreme wisdom
Is to be done by the wisdom vajras.

Abiding in the center of the vajra expanse of space,
Meditate well on Akṣobhya of wisdom.
If you meditate on a vajra in the hand,
You will become a holder of the knowledge of the vajra.

Having meditated on the family of the great vajra,
Through intent union with the vajra body,
This practice of the supreme vajra
Is to be done by the wisdom vajras.

Abiding in the center of the jewel expanse of space,
Meditate intently on the Jewel Vajra.
If you meditate well on a jewel in the hand,
You will become a holder of the knowledge of the jewel.
Having meditated on the family of the great jewel,
Through intent union with the jewel body,
This practice of the supreme jewel
Is to be done by the wisdom vajras.

Abiding in the center of the Dharma expanse of space,
Meditate intently on Amitāyus.
If you meditate well on a lotus in the hand,
You will become a holder of the knowledge of the lotus.
Having meditated on the family of the great lotus,
Through intent union with the Dharma body,
This practice of the supreme lotus
Is to be done by the wisdom vajras.

Abiding in the center of the pledge expanse of space,
Meditate intently on Amogha of wisdom.
If you meditate well on a sword in the hand,
You will become a holder of the knowledge of the sword.
Having meditated on the family of the great pledge,
Through intent union with the pledge body,
This practice of the supreme pledge
Is to be done by the wisdom vajras.

If one practices the trident, the wisdom hook, and the rest
With the special features of the vajra,
Then through the practice of body, speech, and mind,
That meditative concentration will be accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra of the Accomplishment of the Great Pledge.

At a crossroads, or beneath a solitary tree,
With a single sign, in calm abiding,

Through the special features of vajra summoning
The practitioner should practice constantly.
The person of the mantra of the three yogas,
Having imagined the union of the three vajra holders,
The hook of body, speech, and mind,
Abiding in the supreme maṇḍala of wind
Of the wise one with the wisdom of the buddhas,
Is the sublime summoning of the buddhas.
Those of the ten directions, arisen from the pledge,
Are summoned by the vajra and then enjoyed.

This is the summoning of the Samaya Vajra of the expanse of space.

Having imagined Vairocana, the great wheel,
And the hook in the abode of the victors,
With the vajra, the lotus, and the rest,
Perform the supreme summoning of the pledge.

This is the summoning of the pledge of the three realms.

Meditate on the body of the buddhas
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
And in the hands meditate intently
On body, speech, and mind, the hook and the rest.
Through yoga such as this,
He will perform the activity from his place.
Meditate on the vajra body
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
And meditate through the yoga of the vajra of the tongue:
One will become like the vajra speech.
Meditate on oneself as the body of the buddhas
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects;
If one imagines in the hand what is to be accomplished,
One will become like the vajra.
The supreme offering of the pledge of the three secrets:
This thorough practice, having made offerings with offerings,
Is the condensed heart of the secret
Of all the buddhas.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Pledge of the Great Secret.

With the supreme pledge of great flesh,
One should practice the offering to the three vajras.
With the supreme pledge of excrement and urine,
One becomes the chief of knowledge-holders.
With the pledge of elephant flesh,
One should attain the five superknowledges.
With the pledge of horse flesh,
One becomes the lord of invisibility.
With the pledge of dog flesh,
All accomplishments are accomplished.
With the pledge of ox flesh,
One becomes supreme in vajra summoning.
If all the kinds of flesh cannot be found,
Imagine them all, and so visualize them.
If one performs this vajra yoga,
All the buddhas bestow their blessing.

Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
Holder of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
With the pledge of wisdom at the heart
And holding the supreme vajra as a crown ornament,
All the buddhas will be pleased:
This is the supreme mode of the pledge.
The activity of the supreme pledge
Is supreme in bringing about all accomplishments.

This is the meditative absorption called the Food of the Wisdom Vajra of All Pledges.

The tongue is the supreme vajra pledge.
Having meditated on the syllable hūṃ bearing a vajra,
If one eats through the yoga of the five nectars,
One will attain the three vajras.
This is the supreme mode of the vajra;
The pledges of āḥ and oṃ as well,
Through yoga such as this,
Make one become like Vajrasattva.

This is the meditative absorption called the Garland of Nectar of the Vajra Pledge.

Supreme in accomplishing the three vajra pledges,
One becomes a holder of the vajra of the three bodies,
And becomes an ocean of wish-fulfilling jewels
For all sentient beings of the ten directions.
In every world system
One makes the vajra nature appear.
Supreme in accomplishing the pledge of the wheel,
One becomes equal to the body of the buddhas.
In places as many as the sands of the Ganges,
One moves about, accomplished in every way.
Through the supreme pledge of all,
One becomes the chief of the knowledge-holders.
The supreme form of the pledge of all:
By meditating intently on the vajra body,
One makes all that was invisible
Appear, alone, throughout the trichiliocosm.
One steals away what belongs to all the buddhas,
And enjoys the daughters of the supreme gods.
The buddhas as many as the sands of the Ganges,
Dwelling in the abode of the three vajras,
One sees with the vajra eye
As if they were a myrobalan fruit placed in one's own hand.
However many sounds resound
In realms as many as the sands of the Ganges,
The supreme lord of superknowledge hears them
As though they were sounding right beside his ear.
The minds of all sentient beings
In realms as many as the sands of the Ganges, Bearing the characteristics of body, speech, and mind,
He knows as they arise, like a display.
The circumstances of former abodes,
Of dwelling in saṃsāra
For eons as many as the sands of the Ganges,
He remembers as though three days had passed.
With bodies as many as the sands of the Ganges,
Adorned with clouds of buddhas and the like,
For eons as many as the sands of the Ganges
He fills all with the vajra of supreme miraculous power.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Superknower of the Pledge.

Here the five superknowledges are the vajra eye, the vajra ear, the vajra mind, the vajra of former abodes, and the vajra of miraculous power.

Having accomplished the aim of the buddhas' superknowledge,
One becomes like the body of the buddhas.
Encircled by a retinue
Countless as the sands of the Ganges,
With vajra body, speech, and mind
One travels through all the world systems.

The yoga of the pledge of approach,
The arising of near accomplishment,
The pledge for the sake of accomplishment,
And the great accomplishment make four.
Having understood them through the distinctions of the vajra,
One should then accomplish the activities.
In approach, intently applying meditative absorption,
One should meditate on supreme awakening.
In near accomplishment, the supreme attainment,
One investigates the vajra sense bases.
In accomplishment, the urging is proclaimed,
Meditating on the mantra and the lord.
At the time of performing the great accomplishment,
Imagine the form of the vajra holder of your own mantra,
With the lord upon the crown ornament:
The wisdom vajra will be accomplished.
Approach is to be done with the nectar of wisdom,
In all things and at all times.
This is what accomplishes
The mantra and the reality of all mantras.
In the region of a great wilderness,
Utterly secluded from people,
On mountains, at forest edges, or on riverbanks,
One will always attain accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Vajra of Great Accomplishment.

Alternatively, through the four vajras,
One of steadfast discipline should perform the approach.

If one meditates through that equality of the three vajra bodies,
One will attain accomplishment.
Through intent application in the four sessions,
With the mind fixed on the five places,
Having meditated on the syllable oṃ,
The vow is taught by the wisdom vajra.
Seven days, half a month,
One month, and a month and a half:
If one accomplishes the vajra pledge,
One will swiftly attain accomplishment.
By distinguishing the different numbers of days,
I have taught it in full.
Those arisen from the supreme secret
Have declared accomplishment within a fortnight.

Here, this is the domain of the vow of near accomplishment:

Glorious holder of the buddha body,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,
Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Body, I pray you, do so.
Buddhas dwelling in the ten directions,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,
Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Body, I pray you, do so.

Here, this is the domain of the vow of accomplishment:

Glorious pathway of speech, the nature of reality,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,
Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Speech, I pray you, do so.
Buddhas dwelling in the ten directions,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,
Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Speech, I pray you, do so.

Here, this is the domain of the vow of great accomplishment:

Glorious holder of the vajra mind,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,

Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Mind, I pray you, do so.
Buddhas dwelling in the ten directions,
Reality indivisible from the three vajras,
Make me today an abode of blessing:
Vajra of Mind, I pray you, do so.

Whether a buddha, or Vajrasattva,
Or even a Dharmasattva,
If, deluded, one transgresses,
One will without doubt shatter to pieces here.

This is the twelfth chapter, the Definitive Teaching on the Supreme Accomplishment of the Pledge, the Vajra Yoga of All Tathāgatas, from the Guhyasamāja, the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All Tathāgatas.

Then all the Blessed Sugatas,
With the holder of the supreme wisdom vajra,
And the wise bodhisattvas,
Arising truly for the benefit of all beings,
Bowed to the great Teacher,
The Sage, the vajra holder of all aims,
And, making offerings to the one who knows the reality of the pledge, Sang this vajra song:

"How wonderful! How excellent the way of the buddhas!
How wonderful! The supreme way of awakening!
How wonderful! How peaceful the way of the Dharma!
How wonderful! The way of mantra that is taught!
Of phenomena that are unborn,
Distinguished by their essential nature,
In the genuine, free of conceptualization,
You have proclaimed that wisdom arises.
The delightful compendium of all mantras,
The vajra recitation, the great wisdom,
The maṇḍala of the indivisible three bodies,
Through which the wisdom of the buddhas is attained;
By meditating on the three indivisible vajras,

Through the yoga of the vajra recitation,
One is blessed by all the buddhas.
The families of all mantras,
The characteristics of body, speech, and mind,
The recitation of mantra: proclaim them today.
Ocean of wisdom, hear us,
Holder of the vajra of body, speech, and mind!
The buddhas who arose in the three times,
By meditating intently on vajra mantra,
Attained the unequaled wisdom:
Blessed One, please explain it."

Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
Arisen from the wisdom of the space vajra,
The sublime and supreme chief who creates and generates,
Spoke this vajra recitation.

The recitation of the meaning of all mantras
Has the character of the three indivisible vajras.
At the end of the vajra of three divisions,
The three arrayed vajras should be uttered.
In the places of body, speech, and mind,
Perform the threefold emanation.
Through this vajra recitation,
One becomes like the mind of the three vajras.
Having meditated on the body, speech, and mind of the buddhas,
And visualized the supreme offering,
If one does this with the wisdom vajra,
One becomes like the mind of the three vajras.
Having imagined the body, speech, and mind of the buddhas,
And visualized the supreme offering,
Do this intently with the wisdom vajra:
This is the attainment of supreme awakening.
Alternatively, through the three divisions,
Emanate each one separately.
Body, speech, and mind, which are selfless,
Emanate truly by the mind of wisdom.
Having uttered them, emanate the vajras,

And when complete, gather them back in.
This belongs to all the buddhas
Whose eye of wisdom has opened.

The vajra of body, perfect awakening,
Investigating entity and non-entity,
Is declared to be the body of the buddhas:
That is explained as the recitation of body.
The pledge of speech, perfect awakening,
Investigating sound and non-sound,
Is declared to be the vajra of speech:
That is explained as the recitation of speech.
The pledge of mind, perfect awakening,
Investigating the abiding vajra,
Is declared to be the vajra of mind:
That is explained as the recitation of mind.
The recitation of the realization of the meaning,
Through the excellent one arisen from essential nature,
Investigating the buddhas of the three times:
That is explained as the jewel recitation.
Emanating clouds of bodies
Into all the buddha fields,
Going and coming, the vajra meaning:
That is explained as the Amogha recitation.
Through knowing the pledge of the wrathful ones,
The maṇḍala proclaimed by one's own vajra,
Hearing the words of the syllables of mantra:
That is explained as the recitation of the wrathful.
Intoxicated by the objects of desire,
Without help or joy for any sentient being,
It places beings in the state of delusion:
That is explained as the recitation of delusion.
The words arisen from the vajra of attachment,
Abiding in body, speech, and mind,
Place beings in the lake of attachment:
That is explained as the recitation of attachment.
The mind arisen from the vajra of aversion,

Abiding in body, speech, and mind,
Places beings in the state of aversion:
That is explained as the recitation of aversion.
That very pledge of the three vajras,
The middle, holder of the vajra pledge:
That itself is explained as the neuter recitation
Of the vajra pledge.

Meditating on the meaning that is the reality of attachment,
All the vajra lords,
Wishing to benefit all sentient beings,
Bring about awakening born from attachment.
The great knowledge goddesses, Locanā and the others,
Always striving for the aims of desire,
Through the enjoyments of desire,
Succeed when they rely on them as they wish.
Arisen from the pledge of delusion,
The king of knowledge, the vajra holder,
Accomplishing the state of the neuter,
Bestows the sublime accomplishment.
The wrathful ones, born from the state of aversion,
Who always strive to kill,
The practitioner, for the purpose of killing,
Will succeed through those of supreme character.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Pledge of the Great Person.

The one who possesses the wisdom wheel
Should meditate on a wheel in the center of the heart.
Abiding in the center of the radiant maṇḍala,
Meditate in the center on the meaning of the wheel.
The one who possesses the wisdom vajra
Should meditate on a vajra in the center of the heart.
Abiding in the center of the vajra maṇḍala,
One should meditate on the meaning of the vajra mantra.
The one who possesses the jewel wisdom
Should meditate on a jewel in the center of the heart.
Abiding in the center of the jewel maṇḍala,
One should meditate on the meaning of the jewel mantra.

The one who possesses the lotus wisdom
Should meditate on a lotus in the center of the heart.
Abiding in the center of the Dharma maṇḍala,
One should meditate on the meaning of the lotus mantra.
The one who possesses the sword wisdom
Should meditate on a sword in the center of the heart.
Abiding in the center of the pledge maṇḍala,
One should meditate on the meaning of the sword mantra.

On the sides of all the maṇḍalas
One should place the five buddhas.
If one emanates them through the distinctions of the five rays,
One will attain awakening.
The emanation of all the mantras
Is proclaimed in two distinct kinds.
Through the distinctions of the three bodies' vajras,
One should emanate and gather back.
The body is the essential nature of the enlightened body;
The mind is the essential nature of the enlightened mind;
The speech, by its intrinsic nature, is enlightened speech.
If one makes offerings thus, one attains the state worthy of offerings.

With the wheel of the great maṇḍala
One should meditate on the five vajras.
In the center of the vajra of body and speech,
Having imagined the form of one's own lord,
The vajra form of one's own mantra,
And the four kinds of maṇḍala,
Visualize them in the four colors,
And meditate on the meaning of the mantra at the heart.
The activity of the four kinds of vajra
Is performed by those who hold the vajra of meditative concentration.
This, of all mantras,
Is the supreme, eternal great secret.

For pacifying, the mode of Locanā;
For increasing, the vajra holder of the lotus;
For subjugating, abide as Vairocana;
For fierce rites, the vajra wrathful one.

This, of all the vajras,
Because it arises from the secret of the three bodies,
Is the emanation, marked by the play
Of the activities of all mantras.

Toward beings who speak without faith,
Those who revile the vajra master,
And other malicious beings too,
One should perform this urging.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Great Wisdom Wheel Vajra.

Meditate on the beings abiding in the three realms
As the body of the buddhas,
And having imagined the enemy killed,
Then undertake the rites.
Abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
Five-pronged vajra, four-faced,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects:
Meditate on oneself as Vajrasattva.
Meditate on the wheel of the buddhas
Arisen from the pledge of the three times;
With the right hand perform this Mighty wheel of the buddhas.
The beings that have come from the ten directions,
Through the distinctions of the buddha body,
Gather them together in the manner of a ball
And place them into one's own body.
The one who holds the wheel of the buddhas' wisdom
Should then emanate them again intently.
Imagine the wrathful one, agitated with fury,
Hideous, vivid, and terrifying,
Holding the supreme of various weapons,
Intent supremely on the aim of killing:
He kills the greatly malicious.
Vajrasattva himself as well,
Granting the supreme three bodies of the buddhas,
Abiding in the maṇḍala of the three vajras,
Will bestow accomplishment even on one of deluded nature:

Have no doubt about this.

This is to be done for seven days;
Even the buddhas will not succeed against it.

This is the samādhi called the Wheel of Command of Vajra Samaya Wisdom.

Abiding in the center of the sphere of space,
Adorned with a blazing vajra wheel,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
Meditate intently on Vairocana.
Arisen from the samaya of the three times,
Vajrasattva of great renown:
Imagine that he holds in his hand
A vajra spraying sparks of fire.
The beings who come from the ten directions,
Through the distinctions of the vajra body,
Are gathered in the manner of light rays,
And one inserts them into one's own body.
The emanation of all the vajras
Is to be done by the kinsman of supreme wisdom.
"Endowed with the union of body, speech, and mind,
All you buddhas, listen to me!
I am the glorious Vajradhara.
Through applying the wheel of command,
If you transgress the samaya,
With a form of the vajra blazing all around,
Arisen from the three bodies, I shall split you apart.
You will be destroyed here; do not doubt it."

This is the samādhi called the Wisdom Vajra of the Samaya of the Wheel.

Imagine the buddha maṇḍala with its vajras
Abiding in the center of the space vajra.
Yamāntaka, the great wheel,
Visualize intently as one's own vajra.
The buddhas and sattvas of the three times
Who dwell in the maṇḍala of the three bodies,
Buddhas and Yamāntakas, again
Are to be emanated, alike in aspect.

The beings who dwell in the three times,
The malicious and the enemies,
Meditate that all of them are killed in wrath.
This is the vajra maṇḍala of command.

This is the samādhi called the Wisdom Vajra of the Three Bodies of Yamāntaka, Arisen from All Samayas.

With the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
Or with the quality of the meaning of one's own mantra,
Or else with the uṣṇīṣa samaya,
One should apply the wheel of command.
To protect all mantras, supreme wisdom
Is to be employed by the vajra holder.
This is called the means
Of guarding the awakening of all the vajras.

Thus declared the Blessed One, Bodhisattvavajra.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
The samaya Dharma of the three bodies
Arising from Vairocana's supreme body:
Having imagined this, visualize that seat intently.
Meditate that the sphere of space
Is completely filled with all the buddhas.
The wisdom abiding in the syllables of one's own mantra
Should be meditated on in the form of the mind.
Then again the buddhas who were meditated on
As mind alone are fully gathered in;
Having made them into the mind vajra,
Insert them into the three bodies.

Thus declared the Blessed One, Space Vajra.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra Mantra that Fully Illuminates the Jewel.

Meditate intently on Vajrasattva,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects.
Having arranged the buddhas in sequence,
One should tread upon the water.
Through the yoga of setting the feet evenly,

Meditate on the feet upon the crown of the head.

Thus declared the Blessed One, Svabhāvaśuddha.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra that Presses Down the Ocean with the Feet.

In the center, imagine the Mahendra maṇḍala
And place the family of the wrathful ones there.
Meditate upon its crown
On Karma Vajra, who presses down the place.

This is the samādhi called Suppressing All the Non-Buddhists (tīrthikas) and the Contrivances of Adversaries.

The three wrathful forms, the supreme vajra,
Resembling the color of yellow saffron,
All of them like the king of mountains:
Imagine them on the crown and meditate intently.
If it suppresses even the army of the buddhas,
There is no doubt here as to a lord of men.

Thus declared the Blessed One, Arisen from the Body, Speech, and Mind of All the Tathāgatas.

This is the samādhi called Suppressing All Armies.

For the samaya of terrifying enemies,
Contemplate this meditative concentration intently.
Even if the buddhas should proceed against it,
It will become manifest; there is no doubt of this.

The Blessed One, Samaya of the Three Vajras, spoke thus:

From the syllable hūṃ comes a kīla;
Its measure is that it is five-pointed.
Meditate on it as a vajra kīla,
And with it meditate intently on this at the heart.
Even the army of the buddhas, enraged,
Will be destroyed here; there is no doubt of this.

This is the samādhi called Suppressing Deluded Enemies.

In a city, or else in a village,
Or in a region as well, it should be fully applied.

The pacification that removes all diseases
Should also always be applied by this means.
Meditate on a vajra abiding in the sky,
Five-pointed,
Imagine it like the burning at the end of the eon,
And then gather it in again.
The emanations too are to be done again.
Having meditated on the light of the precious wish-fulfilling jewel
And on the clouds of Dharma, Perform the empowerment correctly.
Through this vajra meditative concentration,
Even what is hard to fill is completely filled.
The vajra of generosity shines forth brightly;
The wish-fulfilling jewel becomes glorious.
There one should emanate the clouds
Of the great Dharma of the buddhas and of Vajrasattva.
Even abiding for three countless eons,
It is blessed by all the buddhas.
This is the secret of the stainless body
Of all the buddhas.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra Source that Eliminates All Diseases.

The pledge arising from meditative concentration:
In whatever place it is to be undertaken,
If one abides there in the yoga of concentration through this,
The buddhas bestow their blessing.
Meditate intently on the great king Vajra Amṛta
As a vajra kīla,
And strike the supreme maṇḍalas of the ten directions
With it, as with blazing sparks of fire.
Thus too it was spoken.

This is the samādhi called the Peaceful Vajra that Tames Beings.

Abiding in the center of the sphere of space,
Imagine the sublime peaceful maṇḍala.
Having imagined the form of Vairocana,
Place the petitioner at one's own heart.

Meditate that the sphere of space
Is completely filled with supreme Locanās.
Gathering them in, with a ball of light
Let it descend upon the sick person;
Then from the tips of the pores
The one who keeps the vows emanates clouds of buddhas.
At that time the clouds of buddhas
Bestow empowerment upon him.
The sick person, a samaya vajra,
In an instant becomes glorious.

This is the samādhi called the Array of Clouds of the Samaya of the Buddhas.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime Mahendra maṇḍala;
Imagine the form of Dharma Holder.

Place the petitioner at one's heart.
Fill the delightful abode of the sphere of space
Completely with the one called the White Lady.
The precious light of the wish-fulfilling jewel,
A ball of light, is to be gathered in;
Let these descend upon the place
Of the body, speech, and mind of the one desired.
From the tips of the pores, clouds of jewels
Are emanated by the one who keeps the vows.
One should meditate on clouds of Dharma
And perform the empowerment correctly.
Through this vajra meditative concentration,
Even what is hard to fill is completely filled.
That is the glorious wish-fulfilling jewel,
The brilliant shining of the vajra of generosity.

This is the samādhi called the Array of the Samaya of the Clouds of Dharma.

Abiding in the center of the sphere of space,
Imagine the vajra maṇḍala of the half moon.
The form of the Dharma of the vajra space before one,
Place the one desired at its heart.
With buddhas and bodhisattvas

The maṇḍala of space is completely filled.
Through the yoga of the five light rays,
Let splendor descend upon that one.
Immediately thereupon,
He enters the mind of all the buddhas.
Equal to Mañjuśrī and radiant,
There he becomes one who performs the work of that state.
Those whose nature is delight confer empowerment on him
And grant him a great festival.
All beings who come upon him,
Merely by seeing him, come under his power.

This is the samādhi called the Array of the Clouds of the Samaya of the Jewel.

In the space vajra, meditate that it is filled
With rākṣasas, fierce, wrathful, and savage,
With jackals and all kinds of crows,
With vultures and with dogs.
Meditate constantly on the enemies
Abiding in the maṇḍala of fire.
Imagining those who do harm to all the buddhas,
One should apply the yoga.
Meditate that their entrails, marrow, blood, and the rest
Are dragged out by all of these.
They are crushed by those bearing various weapons;
If one meditates thus, the enemies will die.
If one meditates intently in this way,
Even a buddha or a vajra holder
Will die within a full half month;
There is no doubt of this.

This is the samādhi called the Array of the Samaya of the Vajra Cloud.

Imagine Vairocana with three faces,
Like the color of an autumn crystal,
White, black, and deep red,
Adorned with topknot and crown ornaments.
Imagine the Vajra Bearer with three faces,
His faces black, white, and red,

With a blazing topknot and crown ornaments,
He who stirs up the world systems.
Imagine the Passionate One with three faces,
His faces red, black, and white,
With topknot, crown ornaments, and enjoyments.
If one meditates thus, one will surely succeed.
Meditate on the wheel, the vajra, and the great lotus
In their right hands.
Meditate on the excellent six-armed vajra ones
Holding various weapons.
She who wishes to benefit all sentient beings,
Locanā, imagine with three faces,
White, black, and deep red;
Meditate intently on her in a beautiful form.
The Space-born Eye, the great queen,
Stainless and three-faced,
In the manner of black, red, and white:
Meditate on her always in a beautiful form.
The Eye of Speech Vajra, the great queen,
In the aspect of red, black, and white,
Three-faced, swiftly brings accomplishment;
Meditate intently on her beautiful colors.
The consort holding the vajra utpala,
With three faces of brilliant radiance,
In the aspect of yellow, black, and white:
If one meditates on her, one will attain wisdom.
The great wrathful one Yamāntaka,
Three-faced, with fierce and excellent light,
Sharp, terrifies even the terrifying;
Meditate intently on his black color.
The great wrathful one Aparājita,
Who sends forth a sound of fierce laughter,
Three-faced, with many light rays:
Imagine them streaming forth intensely.
The great wrathful one Hayagrīva
Blazes intensely like the fire at the end of the eon;
Three-faced, he crushes the malicious with his feet.

The one possessed of yoga should always meditate on him.
Vajra Amṛta, the great wrathful one,
With streaming light rays, is intensely agitated;
Fierce, like a blazing vajra,
He terrifies even the terrifying.
The great wrathful one, wisdom of desire,
Three-faced, he causes terror;
Four-armed, supreme among those who cause terror:
Meditate intently on Ṭakkirāja.
Mahābala, the great vajra,
Who dispels the darkness of the three worlds
And vanquishes all the malicious:
Always meditate on him as three-faced.
The great wrathful one Nīladaṇḍa
Terrifies the three realms;
Three-faced, arisen from the vajra,
Meditate on him blazing and sharp.
The vajra Acala, the great wrathful one,
Arisen from the vajra, glances sidelong;
Peaceful, he holds a sword and a noose.
The one who keeps the vows should meditate on him as three-faced.
The Great Uṣṇīṣa, the single syllable,
Sends light rays streaming forth everywhere;
Three-faced, with a blazing wheel,
One should meditate on the excellent light of concentration.
Sumbha, holding supreme wisdom,
Truly makes an ocean of terror;
His body three-faced, streaming blazing light:
One should meditate on the maṇḍala of concentration.
Tejorāśi, the uṣṇīṣa king,
And whoever else possesses a wheel of mantra:
Through these samaya enjoyments
One should meditate on each of them individually.
The samādhis of the mantras
Have been taught as immeasurable.
Each one of the wrathful ones as well
Far surpasses the expanse of space.

Abiding in the center of the sphere of space,
Imagine the sublime maṇḍala of clarity.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Imagine Vairocana:
Clear and peaceful like the moon,
With light like light rays of many kinds,
Truly arisen like a mirror,
The ornament of the three realms,
Adorned with every ornament.
If one imagines him thus, one sees awakening.
One who meditates intently on the vajra of concentration
Will, in this very life, attain
The great nature of the buddhas,
Which holds sway over all the worlds.

This is the samādhi called the Beautiful Vajra, the Source of the Samaya of Vairocana.

Abiding in the center of the sphere of space,
Imagine the sublime vajra maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Imagine Vajrasattva,
Like a body wrathful and radiant,
With an even light of many kinds of blaze,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
Fully adorned with every ornament.
If one meditates on the abode of peaceful wisdom,
One swiftly attains vajrahood itself.
Through this, one who intently urges on the vajra of concentration
Will, in this very life, attain
The great nature of the vajra,
Which holds sway over all sentient beings.

This is the samādhi called the Beautiful Vajra, the Source of All Samayas.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime Dharma maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate on Dharmasattva:
Peaceful, bearing a radiant body,

Fully adorned with every ornament,
Meditate intently on clouds of light rays
Streaming forth as a great wheel.
Through this, one will in this very life attain
The great nature of the Dharma,
Arisen from the indivisible three bodies,
Adorned with an ocean of wisdom.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra Source of the Samaya, the Arising of Dharmasattva.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime moon maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate on supreme Locanā:
Her face beautiful, her eyes wide,
Fully adorned with various ornaments,
Perfectly complete with all the marks,
Possessed of the supreme illusion of a woman,
She holds sway over the three realms
And brings about every accomplishment of wisdom.
The light of the wish-fulfilling jewel of the wheel:
One should meditate on a wheel in her hand.

This is the samādhi called the Samaya of Locanā, Endowed with the Supreme Hand.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the vajra maṇḍala of supreme light.
Having meditated intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on the supreme Space Vajra:
Her face lovely, her eyes wide,
Like the color of a blue utpala,
Perfectly complete with all the marks.
Meditate intently on the supreme samaya of space,
Holding in her hand a blue and red utpala,
Saluted by the three realms,
The supreme one who brings about the awakening of buddhas,
The secret of the vajra holder of accomplishment.

This is the samādhi called Space Mother, Endowed with the Vajra that Delights with Clouds of Jewel Light.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime Dharma maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Vajradharmā:
Her face lovely, her eyes wide,
Like the color of a ruby,
Arisen from the supreme one marked by illusion,
Lovely, bearing the attachment of passion,
Perfectly complete with all the characteristics,
Adorned with every ornament,
Holding in her hand a beautiful red utpala.
She whom all the buddhas meditate on intently,
The supreme source of the wisdom of Dharma,
Is the secret of the samaya vajra holder.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra that Fully Teaches the Perfect, Complete Awakening to the Suchness of the Samaya of Dharma.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime maṇḍala of accomplishment.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
One should meditate on supreme Tārā:
Her face lovely, her eyes wide,
Fully adorned with various ornaments,
With light like the color of greenish yellow,
Intoxicated by the illusion of a woman,
Arisen from the vajra samādhi,
Saluted by all sentient beings:
Meditate intently on her holding in her hand
An utpala of green, yellow, and red radiance.

This is the samādhi called Endowed with the Supreme Samaya Tārā.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate on the supreme Yamāntaka:
Many blazing light rays stream forth;

In a terrifying maṇḍala, intensely wrathful,
His eyes red, baring his fangs:
Meditate on him holding a sword in his hand.
If one meditates on Vairocana seated in his crown,
The Vajra Bearer will be delighted.
This is the samaya of all the wrathful ones,
The holder of the wisdom vajra.

This is the samādhi called Meditation on the Array of Appearances Emanated by Yamāntaka.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Aparājita:
With many blazing light rays,
Adorned with snakes and wearing a belt,
His mouth baring its fangs and gaping wide;
Meditate intently on his white color.
If one imagines the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
The vajra holders are delighted.
This is the samaya of all the wrathful ones,
The holder of the wisdom vajra.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra Array of Aparājita.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Vajra Hayagrīva:
Many light rays of wrath
Stream forth in every direction;
He crushes all the malicious with his feet.
Imagine him red in color.
If one meditates on the perfect Buddha Amitābha in his crown,
The vajra holders are pleased.
This is the samaya of all the wrathful ones,
The holder of vajra wisdom.

This is the samādhi called the Array of the Source that Generates Hayagrīva.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Vajra Amṛta:
Many blazing light rays stream forth;
Clouds of vajras churn on every side.
Meditate intently on him, wrathful and furious, black,
With sharp fangs.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
The Vajra Bearer will be pleased.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called the Vajra Source of the Samaya of Amṛta.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
One should meditate intently on Ṭakkirāja:
Wrathful, savage in terrifying attire,
He terrifies even the terrifying,
Perfectly complete with every ornament.
One should meditate on the excellent vajra light.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
Delight will greatly increase.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called the Joy of the Perfect Awakening of the Vajra of Concentration.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Mahābala:
Many blazing light rays stream forth;
In the maṇḍala, the abode of the three vajras,
Wrathful and fierce, holding a noose,
One should meditate on the vajra possessed of strength.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,

Delight will greatly increase.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called the Strength of the Three Vajras.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate on the blue vajra:
A wrathful one in terrifying attire,
He terrifies even the terrifying.
His form is deep black and sharp;
He gives rise to an ocean of blackness.
Many blazing light rays stream forth.
One should meditate on him bearing a vajra staff.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
He will be greatly pleased.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called Endowed with the Supreme Samaya of the Vajra Staff.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate on supreme Acala:
Wrathful, he glances sidelong in a terrifying way,
Agitated, holding a sword and a noose;
Many blazing light rays stream forth.
One should meditate on Acala, the vajra bearer.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
Delight will greatly increase.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called Suppressing the Abode of the Vajra Sphere of Space.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
He arises fully as the wheel of knowledge,
Perfectly complete with all the marks,
Encircled by a blazing wheel.
Meditate intently on the samaya
Of the uṣṇīṣa wheel streaming forth.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
Delight will greatly increase.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi called the Wheel of the Power of Knowledge, the Samaya of the Uṣṇīṣa.

Abiding in the center of the space vajra,
Imagine the sublime sun maṇḍala.
Meditating intently on the form of the buddha,
Meditate intently on Vajra Sumbha:
His body blazing with sharp tongues of flame,
Clouds of vajras streaming forth intensely,
A brilliantly blazing vajra in his hand.
If one meditates thus, one will attain accomplishment.
If one meditates on the samaya of Akṣobhya in his crown,
Delight will greatly increase.
This is the samaya, hard to transgress,
Of all the wrathful ones.

This is the samādhi of the Full Arising of Sumbha, the Vajra Samaya.

The wheel of the wrathful ones that brings cessation,
Through relying on the wheel of the buddhas,
The vajra wisdoms of samādhi,
Will accomplish the vajra maṇḍala.

This is the thirteenth chapter, called the Perfect Awakening of the Meditation on the Meaning of Suchness, the Array of the Vajra Samaya, from the Guhyasamāja, the Great Secret of the Body, Speech, and Mind of All the Tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, lord of the samaya of all the tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Supreme Samaya of Peace, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very consort of all the tathāgatas:

oṃ ru ru sphu ru jvala tiṣṭha siddha locani sarvārtha sādhani svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
All the perfect ones took it to heart;
Pleased and greatly delighted,
They recollected the buddha vajra.
She who generates peace for the buddhas,
Who fully accomplishes all rites,
She who urges on the vajra samaya,
Is said to restore the dead to life.

Thus spoke the great Vajradhara.

Then the Blessed One, Wrathful Vajra, the samaya of the three bodies, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra Samaya of Entity and Nonentity, and this supreme consort of all the vajra holders came forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra:

oṃ śaṃkari śāntikare ghuṭṭa ghuṭṭa ghuṭṭini ghātaya ghātaya ghuṭṭini svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
The indivisible three vajras,
The vajra bearers, pleased, opened their eyes
And recollected the vajra mind.
She who in the yoga of the protecting vajra
Always fully accomplishes the rites
Is said always to give strength
In great vajra dangers and terrors.

Then the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called Seeing the Samaya of Great Passion, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very supreme consort of the body of the Dharma samaya:

oṃ kaṭe bikaṭe nikaṭe kaṭaṃkaṭe svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
Those who hold the supreme vajra Dharma Recollected Vajradharma.
Pleased, they attained meditative concentration,

And so, ever flourishing in the Dharma and endowed with power,
She who always does the deeds of a great doer
In accordance with the command of vajra speech
Accomplishes them merely through recitation.

Then the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra Arising from All Samayas, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very supreme consort of the samayasattva:

oṃ tāre tuttvare ture svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
The lord of all the buddhas, the greatly born, was pleased
And recollected the vajra body.
Having attained the wisdom of meditative concentration,
The great hosts of buddha vajras
And the realm of sentient beings everywhere,
All of them, in an instant, like servants,
She brings under her power, unwavering.

Thus spoke the Blessed One.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all the tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra Cloud of Stainless Light Rays, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very great Vajra Yamāntaka, the vajra wrathful one:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ oṃ kha kha khāhi khāhi sarva duṣṭa satva damaka asi musala parṣu pāśa hasta caturmukha caturbhuja ṣaṭacaraṇa āgaccha āgaccha sarva duṣṭa praṇā apahāriṇe mahā vighā ghātaka vikrītānana sarva bhūta bhayaṃkara aṭṭāṭṭa hasa nādine vyāghra carma nivasana kuru kuru sarva karmāni chindha chindha sarva mantrāna vindha vindha para mudrāna ākarṣaya ākarṣaya sarva bhūtān matha matha nirmatha nirmatha sarva duṣṭāna praveśaya praveśaya maṇḍala madhye vaivasvata jīvitāntakara kuru kuru mama sarva kāryaṃ daha daha paca paca mā vilamba mā vilamba samaya manusmara hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ visphoṭaya pisphoṭaya sarvā nanāśayaṃ kara kara vishvānāṃ sarvāśā vari pūraka he he bhagavān kiñci rayasi mama sarva arthāṃ sādhaya svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
All the buddhas of great renown,

Terrified and thoroughly frightened,
Recollected the vajra mind.
Having found a skull, unbroken and uncracked,
Of beautiful form and pleasing,
And having made the gesture of pressing it with the foot,
One should recollect this mantra.
Māmakī, or else Locanā,
Of the great vajra, of high family:
If one recites it three times,
She is surely summoned at once.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, Mind Vajra.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Supreme Dense Light Rays of Samaya, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very vajra wrathful one of the samaya of amṛta:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ namo vajra krodhāya mahā daṃṣṭrotkaṭa bhairavāya asi musala parśu pāśa hastāya oṃ amṛta kuṇḍali kha kha khāhi khāhi tiṣṭha tiṣṭha bandha bandha hana hana daha daha garjja garjja visphoṭaya visphoṭaya sarva vighnā vināyakān mahā gaṇapati jīvitāntakarāya svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
All the buddhas of great renown,
Swooning and greatly terrified,
Recollected the vajra body.
In the application of all the mantras,
The rites of vajra expulsion,
Performed by the ritual, will by themselves
Drive away even the armies of the buddhas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Ratnaketu, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra of the Light Rays of the Buddhas, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very great vajra wrathful one, Aparājita:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ oṃ hūṃ jinariṭiṭṭa hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
All the great-souled buddhas,
Terrified and thoroughly frightened,
Recollected the mind of awakening.
Against cruel and savage rākṣasas
And the turmoil of great terrors,
When applied intently by the vajra mind,
The rites are carried out according to the ritual.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Amitāyus, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra Source of the Immeasurable, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very vajra wrathful one, the lotus-born:

namaḥ samanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ oṃ hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ tarūla virūla sarva viṣa ghātaka jvalita visphuliṅga aṭṭāṭṭa hāsa kesaris ṭā aṭopa ṭaṃkāra vajra khura nirghātan calita vasudhātala niśvāsa māruto ṅkśaṃptā dhāraṇidhara bhīṣaṇa aṭṭāṭṭa hāsa avarimitā vala varākrāma ārya gaṇā bhīta bhūta gaṇā dhyaṣita budhya budhya hayagrīva khāda khāda vara mantrān chindha chindha vindha vindha para mudrān siddhimle diśa āveśaya sarva jrara piśācādīna sarva graheṣva pratihato bhava vajra daṃṣṭa kiñcirāyasi idaṃ duṣṭa grahana duṣṭa sarvaṃ vā dhuna dhuna matha matha marda marda pāṭaya pāṭaya maṭa maṭa bhandha bhandha buddha dharma saṅgha anujñātaṃ karma kuru śīghraṃ hayagrīvāya phaṭ vajraye phaṭ vajra gātrāya phaṭ vajra netrāya phaṭ vajra rdaṃṣṭrāya phaṭ vajra khurāya phaṭ vajra khura nirghātanāya phaṭ para mantra vināśanāya phaṭ sarva trailokya bhayaṃkarāya phaṭ sarva karmmeṣva pratihatāya phaṭ vajra kula santāsanāya phaṭ hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
The supreme-born Dharma vajras Became terrified and swooned,
And recollected the king of wisdom.
When the sphere of space is completely filled with poison,
By the light of the vajra halāhala,
Through urging on the king of the wrathful ones,
All poisons are eliminated.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the Vajra Banner, the Source of the Unfailing Samaya, and drew forth from his body, speech, and mind vajra this very king of the wrathful ones, Vajra Nīladaṇḍa:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ oṃ ehyehi bhagavān nīla vajra daṇḍa turu turu hulu hulu hā hā gulu gulu gulāpaya gulāpaya krama krama bhagavān vāyu vegena bhūtān śīghraṃ daha daha dara dara vaha vaha paca paca matha matha pātaya pātaya maṭa maṭa moṭāpaya moṭāpaya sarva karmāṇi chindha chindha bhakṣaya bhakṣaya asthi meda masya rudhira majja meda paśa majja rudhira priya ehyehi bhagavān sarva vighnani sarva vidyāni sarva mantrāṇi sarva mūla karmāṇi kṛtrima ṇiṣādīni sarva grahāna hana hana bhañja bhañja marda marda idaṃ me kāryaṃ sādhaya hūṃ nilāya nilāya nīla vajra daṇḍāya turu turu vighnan vināyakā nāśaya nāśaya huru huru dīpta caṇḍāya sarva śatrūṇāṃ hṛdayāni pīḍaya chindha chindha vara vidyānāṃ cchedaka hūṃ vidyānāṃ śiṣṭaka samaya manusmara vajradhara vacanaṃ ca

marmāṇi nikrinta hūṃ hana hana daha daha paca paca kuru kuru turu turu huru huru phaṭ phaṭ hūṃ hūṃ kṛtantāya deva ṛṣi pidrāpakāya hana hana vajra daṇḍena svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all who had arisen from the foremost of the wicked,
their minds afraid and utterly terrified,
called to mind Sattvavajra.
This greatly renowned king of the wrathful ones,
when it is recited one hundred and eight times and urged on according to the method of the rite, will slay all the wicked.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, entered into the meditative absorption called Glory of Clouds Everywhere, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very Vajra Mahābala:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajāṇoṃ oṃ hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ ugra śūla pāṇi hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ ajyoti nirnāda hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ phaṭ oṃ mahābalāya svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the nāgas of great strength,
their minds afraid and utterly terrified,
called to mind the vajra of the three bodies.
By mere recitation and its application
one should accomplish all the rites.
Even at a time when drought has come,

one brings down a maṇḍala of water.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra Proclaiming Everywhere, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very great Ṭakkirāja of all the tathāgatas, the great wrathful one:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ ṭakki hūṃ jaḥ

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the buddhas, the lords of all, the great beings,
were afraid, and calling to mind
the vajra of the three bodies, they became endowed with the pledge.
Through the yoga of Vajrasattva, pressing down the liṅga with the right foot and reciting the mantra of the three vajras, one summons all the mantras.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Water Vajra of the Garland of Wisdom, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very pledge of Acala, the Fierce Vajra:

namaḥ samanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇāṃ acala kāṇa caṇḍa naṭṭa naṭṭa maṭṭa maṭṭa moṭṭa moṭṭa saṭṭa saṭṭa taṭṭa taṭṭa hana hana daha daha moha moha moha kara hasa hasa vajra hasa kuru hasa hasa mardaraṭa mardaraṭa gajja gajja hana hana bhandha bhandha tiṣṭha tiṣṭha āviśa āviśa mahā mantra bālaka dhuna dhuna tiṇi tiṇi khāda khāda vighān māraya māraya duṣṭān bhakṣa bhakṣa sarvāna kuru kuru kiri kiri mahā viṣama vajra sphoṭaya sphoṭaya hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ trivali taraṅga nartaka āṃ āṃ āṃ hāṃ hāṃ hāṃ acala ceṭa sphoṭaya sphoṭaya hūṃ hūṃ asamantika trāṭ mahābala śātaya samayani ghataya vara samaya mantrāna āṃ āṃ hāṃ hāṃ māṃ śuddhyaṃtu loka tuṣyaṃtu vajrī namaḥstu apratihata balebhyo jrālaya trāṭ asahana namaḥ svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the gods together with their retinues fainted, and their minds utterly terrified, they called to mind the vajra body.
By this mantra of the great wrathful one,
even the gods of great might, the Great God (Śiva) and the rest, become terrified
and are summoned, bodily, with palms joined.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra of the Magical Display of the Pledge, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very great wrathful one of the pledge of all Vajra Holders, Sumbha:

oṃ sumbha ni sumbha hūṃ gṛhṇa gṛhṇa hūṃ gṛhṇapaya gṛhṇapaya hūṃ ānaya hoḥ bhagavāna vidyā rāja hūṃ phaṭ

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the maidens of great power,
themselves with hair unbound and stripped of clothing,
called to mind Vajrasattva.
Pressed down by the feet of Vajrasattva,
the lord of all the tathāgatas,
and bound with the vajra hook and noose:
this is the supreme summoning of maidens.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra Arising from the Suchness of the Great Pledge, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very state of suchness of the pledge of speech, the secret of the three vajras of the great pledge:

Upon the three vajra bodies of the buddhas,
meditate on Vajrasattva
holding the noose and the vajra crook:
this is the sublime summoning of the buddhas.
Through the yoga of the buddhas' speech and body,
from the application of the great wheel,
Vajrasattva, the great king,
is always and certainly summoned.
Wheel, lotus, and supreme vajra:
by meditating on the three indivisible vajras,
through the varieties of the vajra crook,
this is the supreme summoning of all mantras.
Having meditated on the person of one's own mantra, wholly of vajra nature and peaceful,
place the vajra crook
at the hearts of the finest human maidens;
through the yoga of the maṇḍala of wind
they are always and certainly summoned.

Meditate on the great form of Vairocana and on the maṇḍala of the moon;
imagine Śacī abiding there.
Through the yoga of Vajra Amṛta,
if one recites it fifty times,
she is always and certainly summoned.
The vajra hook of mighty form,
with light like a sharp blaze:
meditate intently on the vajra maṇḍala;
this is the supreme summoning of the lotus of the sky.
The pledge of Wrathful Vajra himself, dwelling beneath the vajra ground,
with trident, vajra, crook, and noose:
this is the supreme summoning of asura maidens.
Red ochre or stone fiber will also do;
through the yoga of the vajra crook,
when the moon is seized by the planet of eclipse,
place it in the mouth and accomplish the rite.
The gods Brahmā, Indra, Rudra, and the rest,
if one writes their own names,
in accordance with the command of the vajra speech
come in fear and terror.
Meditate intently on Mañjuvajra,
endowed with the supreme of all aspects;
visualize the great wrathful one Yamāntaka
as the vajra hook.
Having meditated on the great wheel that burns the eon,
engage with the yakṣiṇīs.
By the varieties of mudrā for all,
and by the varieties of mantra in every case,
the thorough application of summoning has been taught;
if it is done otherwise, one will perish.
Vajrasattva, the great king,
should be urged again and again.
He is ever the supreme king
of all the mantras.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Wisdom Vajra Magically Displayed Throughout Space, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very Vajra Ekajaṭī, the supreme Speech Vajra of the great pledge:

oṃ śūlini svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
the nāga maidens of great power were scorched and stripped of their clothing, and called to mind the awakening of the buddhas.
By this knowledge-mantra
all the nāgas will be summoned.
Having summoned the fair-eyed nāga maidens,
one should enjoy them closely.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra Arising from the Pledge of Space, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very Vajra Bhṛkuṭī, the pledge of the great Dharma:

oṃ sarvva bhaya nāśani trāsani trāse trāsaya trāsaya vairaṭa bhṛkuṭī taṭi vairaṭi vairaṭi śvete śveta jaṭini svāhā

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the women of vidyādhara nature trembled and became afraid,
and so called to mind the Wisdom Vajra.
The supreme vidyādhara maidens,
with their swaying golden earrings, should be summoned by this knowledge-mantra
and by the supreme pledge.
The vajra king of cessation,
supremely beautiful in his perfect completeness, arisen from the three wisdom vajras,
summons from every side at once.
Or else all the wrathful ones,
in a solitary place or a great one,
through the mantrin's recitation a hundred thousand times,
are said to perform all the rites.
Others who revile the vajra master,
and those who revile the supreme Great Vehicle,

should be slain with every effort,
or else be driven from their place.
Through this one will attain the mantra accomplishment of supreme awakening.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara. And again he said:

The slaying of the body, speech, and mind
of all sentient beings in the ten directions is meditated on according to the rite.
As for enemies with malicious minds,
wearing a garment soaked with blood and water,
or soaked with excrement and urine, press down the liṅga with the foot and apply the king of the wrathful ones.
If one recites it fully one hundred and eight times,
even buddhas will certainly perish.

And again he said:

Having soaked the garment with water,
by the binding of the supreme wrathful one,
if one presses down the liṅga with the foot,
even buddhas will certainly perish.
Wearing a garment soaked with excrement and urine,
foul and reeking of rot,
if one recites the mantra,
in an instant there will be withering and death.
Wearing a garment soaked with ash-water,
while agitated with wrath,
if one recites it one hundred and eight times,
even Vajrasattva will perish.

And again he said:

Stripped naked, with hair unbound,
in a terrifying manner, grimacing and contorted,
if one presses down the liṅga with the foot,
even the sphere of space will be destroyed.
At a shrine of the mātṛkās or a charnel ground,
an empty house or a crossroads,

at a lone sacred sign or at the foot of a lone tree,
one should undertake the fierce rites (abhicāra).
A peg made of human bone,
eight fingers in length:
having recited over it one hundred and eight times,
if one hides it at the enemy's door,
even one who grants the supreme three bodies of the buddhas, who has abandoned both knowing and not knowing,
within a full half month will decline or else die.
Or else, whole skull cups
the wise should seek out especially;
write the words of the mantra on them and recite with the vajra words.
If one hides them at the enemy's door or in his village,
he will certainly be driven out.
On a palm leaf or something else write out the wrathful one's mantra in full;
if one hides it in the enemy's house or at his door,
he will wither and die.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the Vajra of the Cause of the Great Pledge.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra That Definitively Binds the Body, Speech, and Mind of All the Tathāgatas, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very vajra mantra for nailing with the peg the body, speech, and mind of all beings of the three realms:

oṃ gha gha shātaya ghātaya sarva duṣṭran phaṭ phaṭ kīlaya kīlaya sarva pāpaṃ phaṭ phaṭ hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ vajra kīla vajra dhara ājñāpayati kāya vākcitta vajra kīlaya hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ

Then, as soon as this was spoken,
all the vajras of great miraculous power fainted and became utterly afraid, and called to mind Space Vajra.
A peg made of human bone,
or else one born of the finest acacia,
or pegs made of iron,

destroy the three vajra bodies.
In the equipoise of Vajrasattva, with turbulent radiating light and lovely luster,
at the limit of the three vajra bodies imagine the form and apply it.
The great mudrā of Vairocana, or else the Vajra Bearer of Desire,
or the great mudrā of Yamāntaka:
when these are visualized, it is the peg of the three vajras.
Through Vajra Amṛtakuṇḍalin,
the cutting down of malicious wrathful ones is done by the vajra application.
Even of a buddha, a great being,
from the heart down to the feet,
meditate on the vajra peg;
above it, perform the pledge.
This magical display of the peg,
through the yoga of the vajra meditative concentration,
is certainly struck in even by the buddhas.
Vajrasattva, the great king,
if struck with the peg, will swiftly die.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra of the Magical Display of the Body of the Great Vairocana, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very mantra of the forceful vajra peg of the body pledge:

oṃ cchindha cchindha hana hana daha daha dīpta vajra cakra hūṃ phaṭ

In the manner of mutual entwining, the four thumbs are tightly bound;
pressing down the place of Vairocana,
one should definitively drive in the vajra peg.
As soon as it is driven in, the great being arisen from the three vajra bodies will rise up through the supreme pledge,
provided that it does not fall into a state of failure.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra of the Magical Display of Lokeśvara's Speech, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very mantra of the forceful vajra peg of the speech pledge:

oṃ hrīḥ bhūr bhuvaḥ

The wisdom lotus opened,
the vajra fingers definitively placed,
pressing down the place of the vajra of desire,
one should definitively drive in the vajra peg.
As soon as it is driven in, the great vajra arisen from the three stainless bodies
will rise up through the supreme pledge,
provided that it does not fall into a state of failure.

Then the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, entered into the meditative absorption called Vajra of the Magical Display of Mind, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very mantra for pressing down with the forceful mind pledge:

oṃ vajra rāja hūṃ

Having bound the hands into five points, meditate on many rays of light massing like clouds;
pressing down the place of the mind vajra,
one should definitively strike with the vajra peg.
Merely by its being struck, the great vajra arisen from the three stainless vajras
will rise up through the supreme pledge,
provided that it does not fall into a state of failure.
Through the yoga of body, speech, and mind, merely by performing the rite correctly,
even the vajra sphere of space, to its boundless limit, is struck with the peg; of this there is no doubt.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the Great Vajra Peg.

Then the supreme three bodies of the buddhas, who benefit the realm of sentient beings,
being pleased and utterly delighted,
spoke these words:

How wonderful, the supreme place of secrecy!
How wonderful, the gathering of every essence!
How wonderful, the peaceful place of the Dharma!
How wonderful, the vajra that utterly vanquishes!
The pegging of all the buddhas,
of the greatly renowned bodhisattvas,
and of the vajras of body, speech, and mind:
the striking with the peg has been rightly explained.
This, arisen from the very suchness of pegging
of all the mantras,
granting the supreme from body, speech, and mind,
is the compendium of the suchness of mantra.

This concludes the fourteenth chapter, called the King of the Emanation of Summoning by Mantra, the Wondrous Body, Speech, and Mind, from the Guhyasamāja, the great secret of the body, speech, and mind of all the tathāgatas.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
the great immutable space of all,
the omniscient one who empowers all,
spoke the vajra speech:
A great-souled girl marked with a mole,
twelve years of age,
the practitioner should always practice with,
especially in a solitary place.
With the pledge substances of excrement and urine and the rest,
by the rite, a square
maṇḍala should be made, and there, by meditating on the vajra maṇḍala,
one completely pure in every characteristic, lovely of face and most excellent,
fully adorned with all the ornaments,
having placed her on the lap, one should meditate.
By the wheel of the five maṇḍalas meditate on the form of the buddha.
The secret of the one possessed of the mantra wheel:
meditate on the delightful place of offering.

Body, speech, and mind, the Vajra Bearer, Vairocana of the great body:
through the yoga of meditative concentration and mantra
one becomes like the light of the buddha.
The great-souled daughter of a dyer,
a girl the color of the blue utpala,
and those like her, one should always practice with.
Through the yoga of Vajrasattva,
having performed the rite of union with suchness,
one should begin the work.
This is the pledge of all the mantras,
exceedingly hard to transgress.
At that very moment
one becomes like the light of Vajrasattva.
Equal to the king who holds all dharmas, who fully accomplishes desire and liberation,
by meditating on Vajradharma,
a dancer's daughter, very beautiful,
with a lovely face and long eyes,
the practitioner should always practice with.
He, the very self of Vajradharma, will come to abide on the ten grounds.
The king who holds the pledge of speech is supreme over all, the sublime lord.
Girls born of the brahmin, kṣatriya, vaiśya,
and śūdra castes:
the one who is the very self of Vajradharma should practice with them, the means of attaining the secret.
When the vajra sun has set,
one should begin every practice;
at the time when dawn breaks,
through the supreme meditation, it will be accomplished.
Fully perfect in all the ornaments,
adorned with perfumes and flowers,
if one meditates on the supreme Vajrasattva, accomplishment will swiftly be attained.
This one, who grants the supreme three bodies,

will be marked with the marks of a buddha;
across an expanse of a hundred yojanas his light too will shine.
Through the union of the two organs
one should undertake all the applications.
This is the pledge of all accomplishments,
exceedingly hard to transgress.
If the Vajra Bearer wishes for accomplishment,
he should eat the pledge substances of excrement and urine.
This is the pledge of all accomplishments,
exceedingly hard to transgress.
With the pledge substances of excrement and urine and the rest,
through the union of the two organs,
the peaceful state of the buddhas' awakening, that unsurpassed suchness, is accomplished.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the Vajra of the Pledge of Desire and Liberation.

Then the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called Wrathful Vajra of the Great Pledge, and drew forth from the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra this very wrathful one who terrifies all the vajras of all the tathāgatas:

oṃ hrīḥ ṣṭīḥ vikritānana sarva śatrūṃ nāśaya stambhaya hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ phaṭ svāhā

Mix poison thoroughly with blood, with salt, mustard seed, and rapeseed oil,
and burn it wrathfully in a fire of thorns,
together with the words of the girl's name.
At midday or at midnight:
this is auspicious in every way.
The wise one, in a triangular hearth, should burn eight thousand offerings according to the method.
For the sake of the girls
this should be done for three days.
For three countless eons
by this one will always hold them in subjection.
Should a buddha or a Dharma Holder,

Vajrasattva, or anyone else at all,
transgress it through delusion,
their life will end right there.
On the fourteenth or else the eighth day,
having taken charcoal from a charnel ground,
if one consecrates it with mantra according to the rite,
it will always bestow.
The one who knows mantra, having made an image of any enemy whatever,
if one writes upon it with countless syllables,
he will die; of this there is no doubt.
Through the yoga of the hammer meditation,
if one does it thus, he will certainly fall.
With the syllable hūṃ intensely blazing,
meditate intently on the blazing vajra.
It destroys all the wicked.
Calling to mind the family of Vajrapāṇi, with stone fiber, charcoal, and the like,
draw the form of a man or a woman;
imagining an axe in the hand,
visualize the throat being cut.
Even the supreme jewel, the three bodies of the buddhas, who wishes to benefit all beings,
will by this be harmed
or will die; of this there is no doubt.
Karma Vajra, greatly blazing,
massed with many sparks:
meditate on the vajra at the center;
this is supreme for suppressing the waters.
When drawing the maṇḍalas, if wind or the like arises,
bind the fang mudrā
and call to mind the wicked enemy.
Even what is filled with emanations
by buddhas and bodhisattvas
will be stopped merely by being seen;
if it is done otherwise, there will be terror.

Buddhas and bodhisattvas,
and other wicked persons too,
if terrified by this mantra,
will die; of this there is no doubt.

Now, this is the secret essence of all mantras: phaṭ

Through the yoga of the wisdom being, meditate on the form at the center.
The one who knows mantra should always place queens in the four places.
Fully perfect in all the ornaments,
marked with all the marks,
having made the lotus fully bloom,
meditate intently on this mantra: hūṃ Blazing with the light of five rays, meditate on the yoga of the Vajra Bearer.
If one lets it descend into the vajra of one's own body, speech, and mind,
one will attain awakening.
At that very moment
he becomes like the light of Vairocana, Vajrasattva, the great king,
the Vajra Holder of the three bodies of the buddhas.

This is the meditative absorption called the Vajra That Generates All Beings.

If one finds a fair-faced woman who wishes to help, then according to the rite
one should begin the worship in solitude.
Having taken the secret substance, one should eat it.
At that very moment
he becomes equal in splendor to Mañjuśrī, the glorious lord of invisibility, like the luster of Jambu river gold.
Excrement, or else food,
or meat too, according to the rite,
should be consecrated and then put inside;
if one eats it, one is not seen even by the wise.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara.

Having taken excrement according to the rite,
place it in a pair of bowls joined together;
if one urges it one hundred and eight times,
one is not seen even by the sun of the buddhas.
Dog meat and horse meat,
and the great meat, according to the rite,
having been taken and placed in joined bowls,
if one eats them, one is not seen by them.
A pill made together with excrement,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
A pill mixed with dog meat,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
A pill made with the great meat,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
A pill made with beef,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
From creatures born of excrement
the one who keeps the vow should make a pill;
through the union of the two organs,
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
A pill mixed with camphor and sandalwood,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.
A pill mixed with bezoar and aloeswood,
wrapped in the three metals,
through the union of the two organs:
one becomes Vajra Mahābala.
A pill mixed with camphor and saffron,
wrapped in the three metals,

through the union of the two organs:
one is not seen by any of the buddhas.

Thus he spoke.

Any of the Vajra Bearers at all,
if blessed as the great mudrā, becomes like that: glorious,
of great strength, the vanquisher of others.
To a height of a full ten million yojanas
the vajra will go;
glorious, traversing the trichiliocosm,
he becomes like the light of the buddhas.
With girls dwelling in the desire realm,
and the divine enjoyments of the vowed families,
or else among those dwelling in the form realm,
the one of great strength enjoys his desires.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the Great Vajra of the Invisible Pledge.

Then the buddhas, lords of great delight, their minds stirred, masters of mentation,
were amazed, and with eyes wide open
they spoke these words:
How wonderful, this great marvel!
How wonderful, the unchanging secret place!
How wonderful, pure by its very nature!
How wonderful, the utterly stainless Dharma!
Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
the generator, the maker, the great immutable one,
the buddha, the great Vajradharma,
declared in vajra speech:
Through the yoga of the being vajra
the Vajra Holders should be pleased.
Through the thorough distinctions of the buddhas' awakening the buddhas and the Vajra Bearer are pleased.
With Vajra Locanā, Form, and the rest,
remember to please the Uṣṇīṣa.
For the wrathful ones too, that is supreme:

intent meditation on the buddha vajra.

For the supreme Dharma ones, the knowledge kings,
one should meditate on Ratnaketu.
For the yoga of the knowledge queens,
meditate intently on Amitāyus.
For the mantras that perform every action,
meditate on the unfailing wisdom.
For all the mantras themselves,
meditate on Vajrasattva.

Thus he spoke.

For the mantra tantra of the yakṣiṇīs,
Yamāntaka himself should be visualized.
For the mantras of every application, urging them at the crown of the head is auspicious.

Thus declared the Blessed One, the Great Pledge.

By this wheel of meditative concentration,
the maṇḍalas that please the mantras,
which accomplish the great pledge,
have been taught for the benefit of practitioners.
Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
the chief, the lord over all dharmas, with body, speech, and mind made perfect, declared the Wisdom Vajra:
On delightful mountain peaks,
and in utterly solitary forests too,
the vajra meditative concentration should be done.
Through the yoga of mantra and recitation, Vajrasattva and all the rest, urged on by mantra and meditative concentration,
in accordance with the command of the speech karma,
will perform various actions.
The great form of Vajradharma,
like the light of a ruby,
the vajra of body, speech, and mind:
in three places one should examine the family.

All the rites of descent,
if performed, will succeed without fail.
Urging and stiffening, the Great God (Śiva), and the four noble grounds,
are to be done by those accomplished in the vajra;
if one does it thus, one will always succeed.
A girl twelve years of age,
or a boy twelve years of age,
complete in every characteristic,
having been taken, should be examined well for the descent.
Having performed all the rites,
one should accomplish the actions.
If it is done in any other way,
one will be mocked by the people of the three realms.

Now, these are the syllable-words of the heart mantra: hūṃ hāḥ āḥ jhaiḥ

The element of space, which is without mind and free of all conceptual thought,
and even Vajrasattva himself,
will descend through the rite.
The syllable hūṃ is the very self of Vajrasattva;
the syllable hāḥ is the Vajra Bearer of body;
the syllable āḥ is the king, the Dharma Holder:
this is the teaching of the mantra words.
The syllable jhaiḥ is said to urge;
it is saṃsāra and movement.
This is the secret of all urging:
so it is well explained.
One cubit or two cubits,
or as far as eight or five cubits:
if the vajra king is intently urged,
afraid and terrified, he will leap up.
Likewise everything as before:
this is what attains the secret.
Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
the lord of all the tathāgatas,
the abode of the three bodies fully purified,

spoke these words:
Even one who has not become single-pointed,
being steadfast in vows, should do this;
it should be done with no other application.
It destroys all the wicked.
From charnel-ground charcoal, chaff, and the like,
having made an image of the enemy,
one who has come forth naked with hair unbound destroys even the three realms.
With the ash of corpses burned in the charnel ground,
having made an image of the enemy,
by reciting even one thousand one hundred and eight times,
he will die; of this there is no doubt.
In a triangular maṇḍala that has been made,
with beef and horse meat,
dog meat, or various kinds,
even a vajra will perish without doubt.
Destruction by the great meat:
remember that it all arises from the vajra.
Remember this as the utterly unbearable terror of all enemies.
With the excrement and urine of one who has the supreme Dharma,
having made an image of the enemy,
burn it wrathfully in a fire of thorns:
even buddhas will certainly perish.

Thus he spoke.

With earth from both banks of a river,
having made an image of the enemy,
fill all its limbs with thorns
born of poison, each the size of a sesame seed, together with words of urging:
even buddhas will certainly perish.

Thus he spoke.

Mustard seed, salt, and sesame oil,
poison and dhattūra:

for slaying all the buddhas
these are said to be the most supreme.
Wearing garments soaked in charcoal water,
with an enraged mind,
pressing down the liṅga with the foot,
he will be seized by rākṣasas without doubt.
If an image is fully made with bone powder, blood, and poisons, even fierce Vajrasattva
will swiftly be seized.
Fully supplied with mustard seed,
and filled with excrement and urine,
if one presses down the liṅga with the foot,
he will be seized by a great fever.

Now, this is the heart of the great pledge Wrathful Vajra of all the tathāgatas:

namaḥ smanta kāya vākcitta vajrāṇaṃ oṃ hulu hulu tiṣṭha tiṣṭha bandha bandha hana hana daha daha paca paca garja garja visphoṭaya visphoṭaya sarva vighna vināyakān mahā gaṇapati jīvita antakarāya hūṃ phaṭ

The fire offering, and again the meditative concentrations, are the destruction of body, speech, and mind.
With an undistracted mind,
if it is a killing, this supreme rite should be done.
Vajrasattva, the great wrathful one,
eyes wide open, gazing in terror upon terror,
holding an axe and a hammer in his hands:
having imagined him, examine the meditation well.

Now, this is the pledge of the great fierce wrathful one.

Meditate intently on the sphere of space
as completely filled with all the buddhas;
having imagined the wicked one slain by them,
he dies at once.
Having meditated on it as completely filled
with buddhas and bodhisattvas,
if he is slain by the fierce being,
even the Vajra Holder himself will die.

Enemies who harm the buddhas,
if the mantrin imagines them before him stirred up by fear and terror,
will die; of this there is no doubt.
By imagining him terrified
by various wrathful rākṣasas, fierce and unbearably wrathful,
even the Vajra Holder himself will die.
If one imagines him eaten
by owls, hawks, and vultures, by long-beaked birds and by foxes,
even buddhas will certainly perish.
A black snake, intensely wrathful, which terrifies even the terrifying,
the pledge of the supreme poison:
if one imagines it on the forehead, this is exceptional.
Through being eaten by that snake,
even the one targeted will certainly perish.
The epidemics and the afflictions
of all sentient beings in the ten directions:
bringing these down as terror upon the enemy is supreme.
This is the supreme urging.

With an intensely fierce hammer
the vow-holder strikes at the heart.
In accordance with the command of the Vajra Holder,
the enemy's life will be no more.
If one imagines the Vajra Bearer splitting and chopping with axes and the like,
even fierce Vajrasattva,
who grants the supreme of the three bodies, will die.
Protection and the rest, the first mantra:
even the gods are to be pinned down with the ritual dagger.
This is the supreme of supreme slayings,
the pledge exceedingly hard to transgress.
All the sentient beings that dwell in the maṇḍala through the vajra of the aggregates,

if one imagines them as belonging to the Lord of Secrets himself,
by this he is pleased, and not otherwise.
The Teacher, the Buddha, the Vajra Holder, Vajradharma and the Vajra Bearer will die through the application of meditative concentration, just as the vajra mind commands.

The Blessed One, Wrathful Vajra, the pledge of the great wrathful ones, spoke thus.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
the great sage who is all of space,
the perfect buddha who empowers all,
Wisdom Vajra, declared:
How wonderful! Pure by its very nature is the unsurpassed Vajra Vehicle.
For phenomena that are unborn,
the Victors have taught birth.

Now, this is the vajra secret of the minor rites.

A snake, hideous and terrifying,
black, blazing, agitated and wrathful,
with two tongues and a garland of fangs:
draw it with mineral pigments or with charcoal.

Now, this is the heart mantra for urging the wrathful nāga: khaṃ.

Imagining it inside the mouth,
the poison like halahala,
burning, with the color of fire:
if one meditates thus, it will doubtless stir.

Now, this is the heart mantra for summoning all poisons: hrīḥ.

All the poisons arising from various sources that exist in the three realms:
having meditated that it carries them off,
imagine that they have come down.
At that very instant
it becomes an unbearable ocean of poison.
All beings, the moment they touch it, will perish; of this there is no doubt.

For scorpions, frogs and the like,
and for the various kinds of snakes as well,
one should perform it according to the rite,
by the defining mark of the arising of the application.

Now, this is the heart mantra for transferring all poisons: oṃ.

The vajra poison of the gaze and the like,
and other unbearable poisons as well, Wisdom Vajra summons and makes enter the maṇḍala of Space Vajra.

The Blessed One, Vajra of the great pledge of poison, spoke thus.

Now, this is the heart mantra of Samaya Vajra for curing poison: hūṃ.

This heart mantra, the great vajra,
one should visualize as white in color,
a cloud of light, greatly blazing,
cool like the rays of the moon.
By applying it at the four places,
the victim at once rises up as the poison is gathered.
Having meditated on it twice or three times,
if one imagines the poison being vomited out, even what fills all the realms of space is in an instant made free of poison.

Thus too he spoke.

Now, this is the heart mantra for drawing out all secondary poisons: āḥ.

Tumors, blisters and pustules,
and whatever else is described as disease,
in accordance with the command of Vajrapāṇi, vanish merely by being imagined.
A great lotus of eight petals, stainless like the hare-marked moon:
imagine oneself seated at its center,
fully endowed with five rays of light.
In tormenting, the pledge is black;
in urging, it is like white.

This state of meditative concentration is secret,
the great secret, stainless wisdom.

Now, these are the syllable words of the vajra heart mantra for curing outer and inner diseases: jinajik ārolik bajradhṛk.

Whatever syllable word one wishes, through faith one will gain its qualities.
One should meditate on such a form.
By urging the vajra of disease,
the pledge in the form of a monkey,
or else one that comes and carries it off, should be imagined as emerging from the seats of one's own body, speech and mind.
Whether a wheel or a vajra,
meditate on it abiding in the vajra state,
and meditate that by it the pledges of body, speech and mind are crushed to powder.
From then on the perfect buddhas and the greatly renowned bodhisattvas bestow the sublime state of blessing with delighted eyes.

He also spoke thus:

In the vajra of one's own body, speech and mind,
imagine clouds of buddhas.
Meditate on the vajra king, a great cloud,
and on being freed from disease.
All the buddhas of the ten directions
and the wise bodhisattvas
should be imagined as wrathful toward that one:
causing death is the sublime aim.
Through these applications of meditative concentration, whatever is known as born of karma,
through the practice of reciting one hundred and eight times,
will be destroyed within seven days.
Or else, with one's own king of mantras, contemplate the rite of vajra meditative concentration.

This is the pledge for all diseases,
exceedingly hard to transgress.

Then the king, the Vajra Holder,
the great light of wisdom,
the great vajra, liberation through desire,
spoke these words:

Phenomena are like dreams,
unborn by their essential nature.
With regard to that reality, pure by intrinsic nature,
the vajra of illusion is proclaimed.
The practitioner devoted to the aim of meditative concentration and mantra recitation constantly sees the buddhas and bodhisattvas, seeing them in two kinds of division.

Now, this is the pledge state of the great dream.

One who has gained the supreme wisdom of awakening sees the light of the buddhas as excellent, and quickly sees himself as well in the body of the buddhas' perfect enjoyment.
He sees great beings
of the three realms making offerings to him.
His own form equal in light to great wisdom,
he sees buddhas and bodhisattvas making offerings to him without fail
with the five qualities of sense pleasure.
As the great form of Vajrasattva, as greatly renowned Vajradharma,
as the greatly renowned Secret Vajra:
thus in dreams he sees his own form.
Bodhisattvas and the Vajra Bearer and great buddhas, paying homage, bestow the accomplishments of body, speech and mind:
one will see dreams such as these.
If one sees lovely goddesses
fully adorned with every ornament,

and boys and girls,
one will attain accomplishment.
He will surely see all the buddhas of the ten directions dwelling in their fields, and they, their minds delighted,
bestow the delightful treasury of Dharma.
His body abiding in the wheel of Dharma, encircled by all the buddhas:
this he will see through the application of the pledge abiding in the vajra of meditative concentration.
Varied groves of delight, adorned with goddesses and the like,
blessed by all the buddhas,
are seen by one who keeps the pledge of meditative concentration.
He sees himself fully empowered by the buddhas and bodhisattvas, and surely sees great kings of the vidyādharas making offerings to him.

Thus too he spoke.

Seeing various stainless dreams that have arisen from the vajra, he will accomplish the unsurpassed born from the vajra of body, speech and mind.
If, with vajra intellect, one sees outcastes, those who deal with dogs, and the like,
the wise one will accomplish
the state of the mind of Vajrasattva.

Now, this is the heart of the pledge of examining dreams.

In one's own mind, the mind as the object of focus,
all phenomena are firmly established.
This abode of the mind of Space Vajra is without phenomena, without the nature of phenomena.

Then all the Blessed Ones, the tathāgatas, were amazed and filled with wonder, and they asked Vajrasattva, who cuts off doubts about the pledges of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas:

"Blessed One, what is this?
In phenomena that lack essential nature
the reality of phenomena is fully taught;
space is meditated upon in space.
How wonderful! A true marvel has occurred!"

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, spoke thus to all the tathāgatas:

"Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, space is not endowed with any phenomenon whatsoever, nor is it not endowed with one. Space is included in all phenomena, yet it does not think, 'I follow along with all.' In the same way, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, dreams and what arises from dreams should be understood.

"Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, it is furthermore like this: space cannot be examined, cannot be seen, and is unobstructed. In the same way, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, all phenomena too should be understood.

"Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, it is furthermore like this: the pledge of body, speech and mind, of all phenomena, and of the vajra state pervades everything and is of a single essential nature, namely the essential nature of mind. Whatever is the element of body, speech and mind, and the element of space: these two are nondual and cannot be made two.

"Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, it is furthermore like this: all sentient beings abide in the element of space, and that element of space does not abide in the desire realm, does not abide in the form realm, and does not abide in the formless realm either. Whatever phenomenon does not abide in the three realms is without birth. That which is without birth cannot be examined by any phenomenon at all. Therefore, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, all phenomena are without essential nature.

"O Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, it is furthermore like this: the awakening mind is the aspect of the vajra state that gives rise to the wisdom of all the tathāgatas. That awakening mind does not abide in body, does not abide in speech, and does not abide in mind. Whatever phenomenon does not abide in the three realms has no birth. This is the vajra state that gives rise to the wisdom of all the tathāgatas.

"O Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, a dream does not think, 'I shall see the state of dreaming in the three realms.' Nor does a person think, 'I shall see a dream.' All the activities of the three realms are like a dream, resemble a dream, and arise from a dream. In the same way, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, however many reside in all the world systems of the ten directions, and all sentient beings, however many there are, should be understood as being, in a dream, in the state of selflessness.

"Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, it is like this. For example, the precious wish-fulfilling jewel is the chief of all jewels and is endowed with every quality. Whatever sentient beings pray to that which is the chief of all jewels and endowed with every quality, whether for gold, for jewels or for silver, it provides it all to them merely by their thinking of it. Yet those jewels and the rest do not abide in the mind, nor do they abide in the wish-fulfilling jewel. In the same way, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, all phenomena and all the qualities of a buddha too should be understood."

Then all those Blessed Ones, the tathāgatas, opening wide their delighted eyes, said this to the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all the tathāgatas:

"Blessed One, how wonderful it is that the qualities of a buddha follow along with all phenomena, which follow along with the element of space!"

Then all those buddhas and bodhisattvas bowed at the feet of the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, and said this: "The Blessed One has taught the accomplishments of the vajra of all mantras, compiled in full. Where do those accomplishments, compiled in full from the vajra of all mantras, abide? From where have they arisen?"

Then Vajrapāṇi, having said "Excellent!" to all the tathāgatas and to all those bodhisattvas, spoke thus to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, the accomplishment compiled in full from the vajra of all mantras does not abide in the body, speech and mind of all mantras. Why is that? Rather, Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, all accomplishments and all the qualities of a buddha abide in the vajra of one's own body, speech and mind. And those vajras of body, speech and mind do not abide in the desire realm, do not abide in the form realm, and do not abide in the formless realm. Mind does not abide in body, nor does body abide in mind. Speech does not abide in mind, nor does mind abide in speech. Why is that? Because, like space, they are pure in their essential nature."

Then those tathāgatas said this to the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all the tathāgatas: "Blessed One, where does the Dharma of all the tathāgatas abide? From where has it arisen?"

Vajradhara declared: "It abides in one's own body, speech and mind. It has arisen from one's own body, speech and mind."

All the Blessed Ones, the tathāgatas, asked: "Where does mind abide?"

He declared: "It abides in space."

They asked: "Where does space abide?"

He declared: "It does not abide anywhere at all."

Then all those buddhas and bodhisattvas were amazed and filled with wonder, and abiding in the true nature of their own minds, they sat reflecting, without saying a word.

This concludes the fifteenth chapter, called "The Arising of the Vajra, the Heart of the Pledge of All Sentient Beings," from the Guhyasamāja, the great secret of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas.

Then all the Blessed Ones, the tathāgatas, assembled once more, petitioned the Blessed One, the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all the tathāgatas, with words of the body, speech and mind vajra of all the tathāgatas, and made offerings to him with an array of offerings of the vajra jewel of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into the meditative absorption called "the array of the king of the lion pledge of the maṇḍala of all vajras," and drew forth this maṇḍala of the vajra body from the body, speech and mind vajra of all the buddhas themselves.

Then, next, the body maṇḍala, closely resembling the supreme mind maṇḍala,
supreme among all maṇḍalas:
this I shall properly explain.
It should be made sixteen cubits in measure, square, even, and most beautiful,
the maṇḍala of all the buddhas,
where the vajra of body abides.
Within it a wheel
should be drawn by the vajra rite.

The supreme secret of the mantras,
Vairocana, abides in the center;
it should be made the seat of the vajra mudrā.
Akṣobhya and the rest should also be drawn,
the supreme vajras of body, speech and mind;
they should be placed in all the corners.
At the gates draw the first wrathful ones,
of great strength, who overpower adversaries.
One who knows mantra should make the offering of one who meditates on the vajra secret.
This is the pledge of all mantras,
exceedingly hard to transgress.
Feces, urine and the like should in particular, without fail, be offered.
This is the pledge of all mantras
of the Vajra Bearer of body.

This is the body maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into the meditative absorption called "the cloud array of the pledge of all speech vajras," and drew forth this speech vajra maṇḍala from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Then, next, the speech maṇḍala,
closely resembling the supreme mind maṇḍala,
supreme among all maṇḍalas:
this I shall properly explain.
It should be made twenty cubits in measure, square and even, according to the rite.
With four corners and with four gates,
the lines should be laid out while meditating on the vajra.
Abiding in the maṇḍala of one's own body, generating the qualities of vajra speech,
one should cause the great king Vajradharma,
the lord of knowledge, to enter.
In its center a great wheel should be drawn, perfectly round.
In short, all the mudrās should be drawn with diligence in the rite.

The great mudrā of Amitāyus should be placed at its center.
The vajra abode is delightful indeed;
all of these should be fully arranged.
Having made the sublime maṇḍala fully clear, according to the rite, one should then perform the secret offering;
by this the Vajra Bearer is pleased.
If one makes offerings with the pledge of feces, urine and semen, one will attain accomplishment.
This is the pledge of all the buddhas,
exceedingly hard to transgress.

This is the speech vajra maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into the meditative absorption called "the vajra of the all-encompassing cloud array," and drew forth this great secret, utterly secret maṇḍala from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

When the form of the supreme Vajra Holder is well drawn in the center,
it becomes the abode of its maṇḍala, arisen from the secret of body, speech and mind.

This is the great secret, the utterly secret, the knowledge of the vajra abode of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into the meditative absorption called "the arising of the wheels of all maṇḍalas," and drew forth from his own body, speech and mind vajra this secret of the body, speech and mind vajra of all maṇḍalas.

Now, these are the syllable places of the lines of the heart mantra of the vajra maṇḍala: oṃ āḥ hūṃ.

Laying down the vajra lines and spreading the colored powders should not be done with the mind of mantra;
if one does so, awakening is hard to find.
Therefore one who knows the rite of the pledge,

having caused the mantra deities to enter,
and meditating on the place of blessing, should fully examine the maṇḍalas.
The great king Vairocana and Locanā as well should be caused to enter.
The body maṇḍala is a delightful abode;
one attains the qualities of the vajra body.
Vajradharma, the great king,
should be caused to enter with his own Dharma consort.
This is the supreme, constant secret
of all the mantras.
Vajrasattva, the great king,
and Māmakī as well should be caused to enter.
This is the supreme, marvelous great secret
of all the mantras.
By doing so, swiftly, of themselves,
the supreme ones and the lords of mind arrive,
and, greatly delighted,
they inquire after the supreme secret.

Thus too he spoke.

What the one accomplished in mantra is to do is the great and marvelous vajra secret:
through the king of the wrathful ones,
he should summon all the buddhas and make offerings to them.
To the three vajras and their places,
the pledge offering of the three times should be made with the application of the three vajras;
this brings the accomplishment of mantra.

Thus too he spoke.

To all the mantras as well
offer the torma of the great marvel.
With feces, urine, flesh and sesame oil,
the fifth, which arises from the mind,
and semen, all the mantras are satisfied: so it is taught everywhere.

This is the supreme pledge that brings buddhahood and awakening to perfection.
This rite of laying down the lines,
whenever one performs it oneself,
having meditated well on Vairocana,
one should meditate well on Vajrasattva.
Or else, as the one renowned as Vajra Amṛta,
the disciple, as great vajra light,
should meditate on the state of action,
on which all the buddhas surely rely.
The five great victorious buddha kings,
the Thus-Gone Ones, should be set upon the vajra cord.
This is the utterly marvelous secret
of all the buddhas.
With twenty-five distinctions
the colored powders too should be spread.
This is the great secret of all the buddhas,
the sublime awakening.
For all the mantras as well
one should meditate on Vajrahūṃkāra.
The supreme pledge of body, speech and mind should be meditated upon at the five places.
If one does so, no fault will arise.
Born from the three indivisible vajras,
wise Vajrasattva,
striking terror and fear, bestows his blessing.
The placing of the vajra vases,
as made known by the lord of mantra tantras, abiding in the meditative absorption of Vajrasattva,
should be examined with a steady mind.
The one who knows mantra, desiring the fruit of all accomplishments, should perform the fire offering.
Feces, urine, sesame oil, flesh and the like should be offered as substances to be burned.
On the wheel of the three indivisible vajras offer the fire offering of the vajra secret.
Imagining in the center the form of one's own deity,

one should pour the offerings into its mouth.

Thus too he spoke.

Through the union of the two organs,
one should perform the fire offering one hundred and eight times.
This is the pledge of all the buddhas,
exceedingly hard to transgress.
Through the application of Vairocana,
the disciple arisen from the three vajras, meditating on the syllable āḥ in body, speech and mind,
becomes a vajra holder.
The great king Vajrasattva and the greatly renowned Vairocana bestow their blessing
as the pledge of body, speech and mind.

Now, this is the vajra pledge for causing entry into the great maṇḍala: āḥ khaṃ bīra hūṃ. This is the king of heart mantras of the body, speech and mind of all the pledges.

Now, this is the great secret, the secret wisdom of the great vajra empowerment.

Meditate well on all the buddhas completely filling the element of space.
With vajra mind, meditate on cymbals, perfumes and the rest, massed clouds of pledge offerings.

Thus too he spoke.

With the mantra of the three vajra bodies,
the vow-holder strikes with white mustard seed.
Then, at that time,
he himself bestows the empowerment.
Again, through the meditative absorption of Vajrasattva, one should meditate on the buddhas.
The wise one should visualize them
holding the vases with the supreme pledges.
The disciple of steady mind should constantly imagine the vajra Vairocana.

The one who knows mantra should set in place
the Vajra Bearer of body, speech and mind.

Now, this is the great secret of all empowerments, which all masters should speak as vajra words:

The great empowerment, the vajra,
to which the three realms pay homage,
arisen from the three vajra secrets,
is to be given by all the buddhas.

Now, this is the great secret rite of the great vajra petition to be made by all disciples:

Just as the great offering was granted to the buddhas by Bodhi Vajra, so, in order to deliver me as well,
grant it to me today, O Space Vajra.

At that time the empowerment should be given to him with a joyful mind.
Through the application of the deity's form,
the lord should be placed at his heart.
Having given the syllable words of the mantra to the wise vajra disciple,
one should then show him the maṇḍala.
The secret pledge taught by all the buddhas should be proclaimed:
"You should kill living beings.
You should speak false words.
You should take what has not been given.
You should resort to the women of others.
By this vajra path
urge on all sentient beings.
This is the supreme, constant pledge
of all the buddhas."

Thus too he spoke.

To the one who has spoken the urging by mantra
the mantra too should be given.

Having given the meditative absorption of the king of mantras, one should properly begin the secret.
Semen, or else feces,
having been consecrated according to the rite,
should be given him to eat with vajra mind.
By this, accomplishment is not hard to find.
These four kinds are the great secret;
the Vajra Bearer is the secret of all.
Through the wheel of mantra, the form of a woman abides in order to act for the benefit of beings.

Now, this is the secret of the vajra maṇḍala by which all the mantras are pleased.

Elephant flesh and horse flesh,
and the great flesh too, should be eaten,
and should be offered to all the mantras.
If one does so, the Protector is pleased.
Every day the wise one should show the maṇḍala to the vajra disciple.
Through the acts of feces, urine and flesh,
and through the abode of the vajra secret as well,
if one meditates on oṃ, the syllable of all the mantras,
it will at once blaze forth.

The Blessed One, the Great Being of the knowledge of mantra, spoke thus.

This is the accomplishing of all accomplishments,
the accomplishing of the great pledge.
What is to be accomplished with great effort, even buddhahood and awakening itself, invisibility, strength and vigor,
and the supreme vajra summoning:
according to the command of the vajra body,
all are accomplished in the maṇḍala.
Feces, urine and the great flesh, having been made equal in portion and placed mixed together in a bowl:
then one sits together with all the buddhas.

Thus too he spoke.

Now, this is the supreme pledge for fully accomplishing the vajra servants of all secrets.

Imagine the syllable hrīḥ, blazing, of excellent light, abiding in the center of Space Vajra.
Meditate on all the buddhas
completely filling the element of space.
At the places of their body, speech and mind,
there one should cause the mantras to descend.

Now, this is the place of the vajra blessing of the mantras of body, speech and mind: aṃḥ khaṃ dhīḥ.

Vajrapāṇi of great form,
Padmapāṇi of great light,
and Aparājita of great form:
having meditated on them, set in place the abode of the secret.

Now, this is the abode of the vajra secret.

Dwelling in the center of the sun disc,
Akṣobhya should be fully visualized,
the great vajra of Amitāyus, and likewise Vajra Vairocana,
all of them of great light.
The great suffering should be urged with the heart mantra.

Now, this is the urging, the heart of all vajras: āḥ.

With great spearheads and great vajras and various supreme hooks, urge according to the vajra rite:
buddhahood and awakening will be fully accomplished.

Thus too he spoke.

In delightful places and on kings of mountains,
and on islands of various kinds,
within half a month, when it is complete,
one will surely attain buddhahood itself.
As many atoms as there are

in thirty-six Mount Merus,
so many hosts of followers will be accomplished as Vajra Bearers of awakening.
They will go to the buddha fields
of all the buddhas of the ten directions,
they will hear the profound Dharma,
and they will attain the ground of a buddha as well.

The Blessed One, Samaya Vajra, the Great Laughter, spoke thus.

Now, this is the vajra great secret, the secret of all servants.

Vajrasattva, the great wisdom,
and likewise the Vajra Holder of speech,
with the great laughter of the vajra body,
should constantly urge on the servants.

Now, these are the four kinds of pledge states of the mantra of the vajra wisdom wheel: urging the pledge, dispatching the pledge, calling the pledge, and binding the pledge.

The vast pure expanse of space,
free of all phenomena:
the vajra, in the manner of a single mass,
will bring forth a marvelous form.

The Blessed One, the great Vajrasattva, only son of all the buddhas, spoke thus.

Should one wish to bring under one's power
even a buddha or Vajrasattva, the great holder of the three supreme vajras should contemplate this great secret.
Imagine Mañjuvajra of great strength
abiding in the center of Space Vajra.
Through the application of the five arrows,
emanate them properly at the tip of the crown ornament.
At the five places the one who knows mantra should cause Wrathful Vajra to descend.
One should meditate that the mind of the childish is stunned and made to swoon by the greatly renowned one.

This meditative concentration should be cultivated single-pointedly with the urgings of the secret.
The utter secret of all the mantras is spoken by the mind of the vajra meaning.
The syllable hūṃ, abiding in the center of Space Vajra,
the supreme maṇḍala of the buddhas,
should be imagined; with the vajra mantras and the rest,
meditate on the three vajras and the rest.
Having imagined the syllable oṃ at the place of the eyes,
one should reveal these by the rite.
The forms of all the mantras,
the Vajra Bearers of body and speech, are seen.
Hunger, thirst and the other great torments:
if one contemplates this application,
according to the command of the vajra mind,
all suffering will be purified.
Imagining the great form of Vairocana, and all aims brought to fulfillment,
meditate on the syllable baṃ abiding at the mouth,
and imagine the syllable oṃ resting on the tongue.
The source of all that is to be eaten,
adorned with the wish-fulfilling jewel, peaceful, dispels all suffering:
this is the urging of Wisdom Vajra.

The Blessed One, the Wish-Fulfilling Jewel, spoke thus.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, the Tathāgata Great Hero, drew forth from vajra speech the supreme words of vajra meditation: bīḥ.

In the center of Space Vajra
imagine the maṇḍala of the buddhas, of excellent light.
Having generated it through the application of the three vajra bodies, contemplate this:
fully complete with all ornaments,
yellow, a vajra, majestically poised,
peaceful, with topknot and crown ornament.
Having imagined this, begin all the rites.

This is the meditative absorption called "the garland of waves of the hero vajra."

Then the Blessed One Vajradhara entered into the meditative absorption called "the vajra proclaimed with certainty everywhere," and drew forth these words of great vajra meditation from his own body, speech and mind vajra: cuṃ.

In the center of Space Vajra
imagine the sublime disc of the sun.
By the rites, clouds of buddhas,
the greatly renowned supreme three vajras,
descend through body, speech and mind.
Meditate on the urging Vajra Lady,
fully complete with all ornaments,
and meditate on her as white in color.
Imagining Vajrasattva, the great king, set out the places of the mantras.

This is the meditative absorption called "the light rays of the wisdom of the vajra pledge."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called "the vajra enjoyment of all intentions," and drew forth this very mode of the wheel of meditative absorption from his own body, speech and mind vajra: jaṃ.

Abiding in the center of Space Vajra,
imagine the sublime maṇḍala of the buddhas.
By the rite of all the buddhas, cause it to descend through meditation on the vajra.
Jambhala, who accomplishes wealth,
the great yakṣa, should be generated:
peaceful, holding the form of a yakṣa,
with a topknot and a crown ornament, a vajra bearer.
By the rite, the five buddhas should be meditated upon in the five places.
His vajra amṛta water
one offers while abiding in the state of meditative concentration.
By the rite of Vajrasattva, imagine his crown ornament.

When this is done, the lord of yakṣas,
the lord who dwells in the wilds, Great Light, is pleased.

This is the meditative absorption called "the glory of the rite for accomplishing the pledge substances of the vajra mudrā."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called "the glory of enjoying the objects of desire," and drew forth these very vajra words of the pledge of all yakṣiṇīs from his own body, speech and mind vajra: kṣiṃ.

Abiding in the center of the vajra of the expanse of space,
a square, level and exceedingly beautiful,
made entirely of the four precious substances,
heaped all about with flowers and incense:
imagine the expanse of space
completely filled with all the yakṣiṇīs.
Having imagined clouds of forms,
draw them down through the union of the three vajras.
The forms should be imagined as one.
Distinguishing them by the three vajras,
one should meditate on their meditative concentration.
Abiding in the absorption of Mañjuvajra,
meditate on the wrathful one upon the crown ornament.
Having meditated on the words of the mantra at the heart,
one should undertake the vajra practice.

This is the meditative absorption called "the vajra of meditating on all yakṣiṇīs as abiding in sameness."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called "the vajra of the magical display of the accomplishment of all vajra mantras," and drew forth these very subtle accomplishments from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Body, speech and mind perfectly accomplished, holding the form of a buddha, with excellent light
like the golden light of Jambu River gold, abiding in the subtle accomplishments,
accomplishing all, invisibility and the rest,
one becomes the lord Vajradhara.

Through the great accomplishment of the yakṣa queen,
one becomes the chief of the vidyādharas.

Herein, these are the mantra accomplishments, the secret form of all vajra accomplishments.

Through accomplishment of the mantra, all lovely and beautiful forms, throughout all the world systems,
bring delight at the mere sight.
One becomes the master of the wish-fulfilling jewel that accomplishes every uṣṇīṣa.
This is supreme for bringing about the awakening of the buddhas;
one meditates fully on buddhahood itself.

So declared the Blessed One, the vajra of the complete fulfillment of all intentions.

Then the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth from his own body, speech and mind vajra this very conduct of fully taking up the knowledge observance of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas.

The body, speech and mind vajras,
the focus on body, speech and mind,
are to be done through one's own form itself;
in this way accomplishment will be attained.

Herein, this is the knowledge observance of the body, speech and mind vajra.

The form wears a topknot and crown ornament, great, and like white in color.
Do everything according to the rite,
fully bound by the vow of mantra.
One who has reached sixteen years of age,
adorned with all ornaments,
lovely of face, with long eyes:
having found her, practice the knowledge observance.
Enjoying the state of Locanā,
one should act with the sign of the vajra.
She who knows the rite of mudrā and mantra,
and is well trained in mantra and tantra,

should be made the consort of the Tathāgata, firmly established in the awakening of the buddhas.
With the great observance, in the four sessions, perform the secret offering thoroughly.
Stalks, roots and fruits,
all foods to eat and to chew, should be enjoyed.
By this one quickly becomes a buddha,
the lord, the great ocean of wisdom.
Within six months, all of these will without doubt be attained here.
Always stealing the wealth of others,
and killing too, is a great marvel.
Practicing the abode of the vajra of desire,
one is fully bound by this vow.
The consort, the hook of the vajra of desire,
Māmakī of the lineage of qualities,
through the mind of the supreme speech vajra:
this is fitting in every way.
Imagine her as one's own mudrā, or with the mind:
the meditative concentration, the three syllables, the Vajra Bearer.
In this way even the omniscient buddhas will be pleased here without doubt.
The practitioner of steadfast mind seeks alms in the forests.
Excellent food, set out in rows,
they will give in fear and dread.
If one transgresses the very self of the three vajras,
one perishes and becomes vajra letters.
A goddess, a nāginī, a yakṣiṇī,
an asura woman, or even a human woman:
having found her, perform the knowledge observance;
the wisdom of the three vajras is taught.
This is the great mode of the secret suchness
of all the mantras;
the wisdom of the three vajras arises:
it is full entry into the awakening of the buddhas.

So declared the Blessed One, the vajra of the suchness of the pledge of the knowledge observance of all tathāgatas.

From the Great Secret of the Body, Speech and Mind of All Tathāgatas, the Guhyasamāja, this is the sixteenth chapter, called "the vajra of the manifest and perfect awakening of the maṇḍala of all accomplishments."

Then all the blessed tathāgatas assembled once more and supplicated the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all tathāgatas:

Akṣobhya Vajra, great wisdom, great sage of the vajra expanse,
supreme three vajras, the three maṇḍalas,
you who proclaim the secret, homage to you.

Vairocana, great purity,
vajra peace, great joy,
teach the phenomena that by nature are luminous;
Vajra, homage to you.
King of jewels, most profound,
vajra space, stainless sky,
by nature pure and untainted, proclaim the secret! Homage to you.
Vajra Amitābha, great king, nonconceptual Vajra Bearer of space,
who has reached the far shore of desire,
proclaimer of the vajra, homage to you.
Amogha Vajra, perfect buddha, who completely fulfills all intentions,
arisen from pure essential nature,
Vajrasattva, homage to you.

If with these peaceful words of praise,
urged by all the buddhas,
one praises the vajra enjoyment,
one too becomes equal to the buddhas.

Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
out of compassion for all the buddhas,
spoke the vajra speech,
the pure place of the vajra secret:
How wonderful! The great letter of the sphere of reality of all the buddhas, by nature luminous and pure,

is stainless like the expanse of space.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the body vajra of all the buddhas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

By the ocean-light of the wisdom of the buddhas,
the four pledges are to be guarded;
the great flesh should always be eaten.
This is the supreme pledge.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of the tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the speech vajra of all the buddhas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

The four pledges are to be guarded;
by the great letter of the speech vajra,
excrement and urine should always be eaten.
This is the marvelous secret.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the mind vajra of all vajra holders from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

By Vajrasattva of great magical power,
the four pledges are to be guarded;
blood and semen mixed together should always be eaten by one firm in observance.
This pledge of the body, speech and mind vajra is a great marvel.
The constant pledge of all the buddhas is perfectly guarded for the sake of holding the vajra.
Whoever guards this pledge,
Vajrasattva of great light, realizing his body, speech and mind,
at once becomes a buddha.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge for the aim of the pratyekabuddhas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Teaching with the body, they abide fully in the vajra body;
this is the way in which beings enter,

the pledge of supreme permanence.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the training of the śrāvakas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Those who practice the paths of action of the ten virtues and have abandoned wisdom:
for all who aspire to the lesser,
that pledge is a great marvel.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of Brahmā from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Whatever actions done by the path of delusion are terrifying and repulsive, they teach the awakening of the buddhas and become the body vajra itself.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of Rudra from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

All the women born of the vajra who dwell in the three realms:
to enjoy them with various things is the supreme and marvelous pledge.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of Viṣṇu from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

As many sentient beings as are born, abiding in the indivisible three bodies,
should be slain with the vajra of meditative concentration, even one who is the very self of the vajra space element.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very vajra of the pledge of the three vajras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

The body vajra becomes Brahmā,
the speech vajra the Great Lord (Maheśvara, that is, Śiva),
the king of mind, the Vajra Holder, is himself Viṣṇu of great magical power.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of all the yakṣiṇīs from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Eating flesh and blood, always intent on the supreme desire for women:
with the pledge of these great vajras, hard to keep,
they should be pleased.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of all the queens of the nāga lords from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Slander, and drinking milk, always striving at desire and impurity:
by these pledges one should accomplish them;
otherwise one will surely be afflicted.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the daughters of the asuras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Wrathful, and weighed down by the burden of pride,
born to the enjoyment of incense and flowers:
the Samaya Vajra beneath the earth,
the hard to tame, the vajra terrifier.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the rākṣasīs from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

With skulls and bones, incense, sesame oil,
and fat, they become greatly delighted.
This pledge of all the bhūtas is the purifying vajra that accomplishes the great aim.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of all the vajra ḍākinīs from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Eating excrement, urine and blood, always drinking liquor and the like,
through the union of the vajra ḍākinī,
keep it secret by the characteristics of the places.
Arising everywhere by their essential nature,
they move about throughout the three realms.
All the pledges without remainder, all the accomplishments, should be practiced by one who wishes to benefit.

This is the meditative absorption called "following the vajra pledge of all the three realms."

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vajra pledge of bodily accomplishment from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

All three kinds of body should be made to arise perfectly as vajra;
the realm of sentient beings, in every way,
is always made the body of the buddhas.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vajra pledge of the accomplishment of speech from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

All the paths of action of speech without remainder,
in the stainless maṇḍala of the three realms:
this delightful abode of the accomplishment of speech is a pledge most difficult to transgress.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of the complete purification of mind from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

All that is the nature of the mind vajra,
the steadfast one meditates on with a vajra intellect.
This is the explanation of the pledge endowed with the threefold indivisible vajra.

So declared the Blessed One, Samantabhadra Vajrasattva.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vajra pledge of all mantras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Buddhas and bodhisattvas,
and likewise pratyekabuddhas and śrāvakas:
if one bows to them through the union of body, speech and mind,
one will fall from the pledge.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of the meditative concentration of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

With the maṇḍala of Vajrasattva, body, speech and mind in every way, through the union of the three vajras,
one should meditate by concentration and by reciting mantra.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vow of all mantra vajras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Gathering together the realms of sentient beings,
one should urge them with the vajra of meditative concentration.
The supreme of the supreme homage to the three vajras:
this is the source of the Samaya Vajra.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vow of approach, accomplishment, close accomplishment and great accomplishment from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Imagine the expanse of space completely filled with vajra excrement and urine, and offer it to the vajras of the three times.
This is the most constant pledge.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of the invisibility of all vajras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

That which is supreme in the four sessions:
practice with a vajra lady each day,
and again, always steal substances as well.
This is the pledge that perfects the vajra.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of the vidyādharas of the sky from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

The body, speech and mind vajras:
meditate on the meditative concentration of the crown ornament.
All the pledges of the three vajras
the wrathful ones cannot overcome.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of all beginner mantra holders from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

In eating food, be the body vajra;
outwardly, be the Vajra Holder;
and always be Vajradharma
in the ritual act of reciting the sūtras.

So declared the Blessed One, Svabhāvaśuddha Vajra.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, contemplating the vajra sameness, the vajra essence of the body, speech and mind of all vajra holders, fell silent.

Then bodhisattva great beings, equal in number to the finest atoms of the Mount Merus of inexpressible, inexpressible buddhafields, bowed to all the tathāgatas and said, "Blessed Ones, why does this lord of all tathāgatas remain silent in the midst of the maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas and the retinue of bodhisattvas?"

Then all the blessed tathāgatas said to those bodhisattvas, "Sons of noble family, this lord of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas remains silent, having investigated the unchanging state, without essential nature, that is the unchanging state of the essential nature of the body, speech and mind vajra, which cannot be apprehended. Sons of noble family, this lord of all tathāgatas thought thus:

The letter of the body is unborn;
speech and mind too are without characteristics.
Arisen in the conceptions of Space Vajra,
they are grasped through wrong grasping."

Then the bodhisattva great beings, Mañjuśrī and the others, said to all those tathāgatas, "Blessed tathāgatas, please do not regard the vajra words of speech as a source of error. Why is that? Because the one who goes and comes practicing the essential nature of the vajra voice of all tathāgatas is this lord of all tathāgatas. Why is that? Because the great bodhisattvas, beginning with Brahmā, who have attained the wisdom of the great superknowledges, do not know the essential nature of the characteristics of all phenomena, and so they speculate in this way. Some even think, 'Does this great vajra self expound the secret letters without fully knowing the vajra suchness of all the phenomena of all the tathāgatas?'"

Then all the blessed tathāgatas said to those bodhisattvas, "Leave aside you great bodhisattvas; what need is there to speak of you? Even we, who have found the secret letter of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas, do not know the awakening of body, speech and mind. Why is that? Because it is manifestly and perfectly awakened as the unborn vajra, without essential nature, arisen from the unchanging. Sons of noble family, as many sentient beings as there are, included among sentient beings, all of them, abiding in awakening, are buddha vajras. Why is that? Because these sentient beings, having taken up the very state of the Vajra Holder of the three bodies, have attained the wisdom of the body, speech and mind vajra."

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas, said to all the tathāgatas and to those bodhisattvas:

"Pure by nature and selfless,
the sphere of reality abides without remainder.
Conception has arisen perfectly as vajra;
it is not to be spoken, not to be spoken."

Then all the blessed tathāgatas bowed to the Blessed One, the great Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, and said, "Blessed One, from where does the accomplishment of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas arise? Where does it abide, and where does it cease to be?"

Vajradhara, lord of all tathāgatas, said, "Blessed Ones, the vajra abides fully in the continuum of one's own body, speech and mind; and so do all the accomplishments of all tathāgatas, the wisdom of omniscience, and the three realms in their entirety."

All the tathāgatas spoke again: "Blessed One, where do the accomplishment of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas and all of the three realms abide?"

The lord of Wisdom Vajra said, "Blessed Ones, the accomplishment of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas and all of the three realms abide in the element of space."

All the tathāgatas said, "Blessed One, where does space abide?"

The Vajra Holder said, "Nowhere at all."

Then all the tathāgatas and those bodhisattvas were amazed and astonished, and they uttered these melodious words:

"How wonderful, vajra! O vajra!
How wonderful is the teaching of the vajra!
Where there is no body, speech or mind,
there the body is meditated upon."

Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder,
to whom all the buddhas pay homage,
the supreme of the three vajras, supreme of the great supreme,
the lord supreme of the three vajras, spoke of the meditation on the knowledge being of all accomplishments.
Abiding in the center of the vajra of the expanse of space,
one should meditate on the maṇḍala of the buddhas.
Having meditated fully on the body vajra, meditate fully on a vajra at the crown of the head.

Three faces and three bodies perfectly arisen should be imagined radiating forth.
If one imagines holding the vajra wheel,
one will quickly attain awakening.
According to the distinctions of all the families,
imagine this secret.
Those who meditate otherwise will not gain the supreme accomplishment.

So declared the Blessed One, the knowledge being Vajra Secret.

Imagine pleasing the great queen
born from the three realms.
By this the supreme bull is pleased,
those marked by the three vajra bodies.
Whoever among them meditate on this,
the greatly renowned bodhisattvas,
with great light, within seven days,
will attain the accomplishment of the three bodies.

Then again the Blessed One, Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very great secret, the secret that is the compendium of the body, speech and mind vajra, from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

The pledge of body, speech and mind is the realization of the meaning of the great mudrā.
If one meditates according to the rite, with all its characteristics, one will attain buddhahood itself.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth once more the very great secret of the body, speech and mind of all practitioners from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

If you desire supreme awakening,
do not bind the mudrās of the hands.
This pledge of all the mantras even the victors do not transgress.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of all the buddhas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Excrement, urine, semen and blood should never be treated as contemptible.
Always eat them according to the rite.
This secret arises from the three vajras.

Then again the Blessed One, Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very pledge of the speech vajra from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

On the delightful path of the three realms,
as many women as there are,
enjoy them all according to the rite;
do not disparage the speech vajra.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth this very pledge of the mind vajra from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

All the pledges, as many as there are,
abiding in the three vajra bodies,
should be satisfied by the pledge of the three vajras;
do not disparage the mind vajra.

So declared the Blessed One, the Great Samaya of the Three Vajras.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very secret vajra of all tathāgatas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

In brief, the five aggregates are proclaimed to be the five buddhas.
The vajra sense sources themselves are the supreme maṇḍala of bodhisattvas.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vajra of the accumulation of the three realms from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Earth is called Locanā;
the water element is called Māmakī;
those called Pāṇḍarā and Tārā are proclaimed to be fire and wind.
The pledge of the vajra of the expanse of space is the Vajra Holder himself.

So declared the Blessed One, the great Vajrasattva, lord of the abode of all tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra of all tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called "the abode of the sameness of all tathāgatas." Having entered into equipoise, he looked upon the maṇḍala of the retinue of all the tathāgatas and fell silent.

Then the bodhisattva great being Maitreya bowed to all the tathāgatas and said, "Blessed Ones, how should all the tathāgatas and all the bodhisattvas regard the master who has been empowered in the Guhyasamāja, the Great Secret of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas?"

All the tathāgatas said, "Son of noble family, that master is a tathāgata: all the tathāgatas and all the bodhisattvas should regard him as the very vajra of the awakening mind."

"Why is that? Because the vajra of the awakening mind and this master are not two and cannot be divided into two. Son of noble family, to teach it in brief: all the buddhas and bodhisattvas who dwell, live and abide in the world systems of the ten directions come at the three times, worship that vajra master perfectly with the offerings of all the tathāgatas, and go back to their own buddhafields; and they also utter these words in the letters of the vajra speech: 'He is the father of all of us tathāgatas. He is the mother of all of us tathāgatas. He is the teacher of all of us tathāgatas,' and so forth.

"Furthermore, son of noble family, the merit of a single pore of the master's body far surpasses even the whole mass of merit arising from the body, speech and mind vajra of all the blessed buddhas, however many dwell in the ten directions. Why is that? Because, son of noble family, the awakening mind has become the essence of the wisdom of all the buddhas, generated and abiding, and so on, up to: it is the source of the wisdom of omniscience."

Then once more the great bodhisattva Maitreya, his mind frightened and terrified, fell silent.

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, the Tathāgata Ratnaketu, the Tathāgata Amitābha, the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi and the Tathāgata Vairocana entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called "the vajra that focuses on all the pledges of accomplishment of the Vajra Holder," and said to all those bodhisattvas, "All you bodhisattvas, listen! Even the blessed buddhas of the ten directions, who have arisen perfectly from the vajra wisdom of the three times, come and make offerings and bow to the master of the Guhyasamāja. Why is that? Because he himself is the Teacher of all the tathāgatas and all the bodhisattvas, the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, lord of the wisdom of all the buddhas."

Then those bodhisattva great beings said to all the tathāgatas, "Blessed Ones, where do the accomplishments of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas abide?"

All the tathāgatas said, "The body, speech and mind of the secret of the three bodies abide in the body, speech and mind vajra of the vajra master."

The great bodhisattvas asked, "Where do body, speech and mind vajra abide?"

All the tathāgatas said, "They abide nowhere at all."

Then those great bodhisattvas were amazed and astonished, and remained silent.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, arose from the meditative absorption of the secret vajra and said to all the tathāgatas and bodhisattvas, "All you tathāgatas and all you bodhisattvas, listen to the great maṇḍala of the meditative absorption called 'the vajra of the arising of the awakening mind of all tathāgatas.'"

Then once more all the tathāgatas and all those bodhisattvas joined their palms and said to the Blessed One Vajradhara, "Blessed One, please explain the great maṇḍala! Sugata, please explain it!"

Imagine, abiding in the center of the expanse of space,
a square, level and exceedingly beautiful.
Through the union of the maṇḍala of the buddhas,
fully urge on the vajra of meditative concentration.
Through concentration on the vajra maṇḍala, make seats for all the wheel bearers.
With that very rite of offering,
the intelligent one should always perform it.
Having meditated fully on the master at the heart, perform the empowerment perfectly.
Having imagined the expanse of space completely filled with all the buddhas, draw them all down according to the rite
through the three places of empowerment.
By this one who wishes to benefit all sentient beings will attain awakening,
and all accomplishments, a great marvel:

body, speech and mind will be accomplished.

This is the maṇḍala of meditative concentration called "the vajra of the pledge of all buddhas and bodhisattvas."

Then once again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth from his own body, speech and mind vajra the very secret of the body, speech and mind vajra called "the vajra union of all tathāgatas": hūṃ hrīḥ khaṃ.

Imagine the maṇḍala of flesh, bones and the rest
abiding in the center of the expanse of space.
Meditate on Vajrasattva,
the essence of the three, body, speech and mind,
fierce, ugly, wrathful in every way,
like the color of a blue utpala lotus.
Four-armed, according to the rite,
meditate on him holding a skull cup in his hand.
The one under observance should meditate on his own tongue blazing brightly with the light rays of the five.
Through the union of the vajra of meditative concentration,
this is supreme for drawing out blood.
With the pledge of the three-pointed vajra and with supreme, fierce ritual daggers, even the bodies of the buddhas themselves should be tormented through the vajra union.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, once again drew forth the very rite performed with the pledge of vajra food from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Whatever food or drink,
however little, the one under observance eats, should be fully examined according to the rite through the union of excrement, urine and flesh.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very supreme offering of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

With the supreme offering of the five sense enjoyments,
those who are worthy of offering should also be worshipped.

This is the pledge of all vajras,
most difficult to transgress.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, again drew forth the very secret offering of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Through the union of the two organs,
by taking one's own semen and the rest,
one should make offering to all according to the rite.
One will attain the awakening of a buddha.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vow of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Of the boundless realms of sentient beings,
the mothers who hold the pledge are to be enjoyed by the vajra of the three pledges.
This vow is a great marvel.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vajra of the vow that accomplishes all from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Body, speech and mind, the complete enjoyment,
vajra-born, abiding in the three secrets:
the excellent should be accomplished by oneself.
Otherwise everything will be destroyed.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very vow of Vajrasattva that accomplishes all from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

Measured by a mere span,
one should visualize a maṇḍala on the head.
Imagining the syllable oṃ placed in its center,
one should cause the five nectars to descend.
Through this vajra union,
in an instant one becomes radiant.
That body, speech and mind will abide in bliss,
of this there is no doubt.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very secret of the body, speech and mind of those who hold all mantras from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

One should not perform the work of stūpas,
one should not read books,
one should not make maṇḍalas at all,
one should not bow to the supreme three vajras.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very secret of removing all poisons, of subjugating and of summoning from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

oṃ
With a garland of blazing white light rays,
it should be placed, set within the center of the wheel.
With massed yellow light rays,
one should meditate on it as yellow.
Through the pledge of the light of the three vajras,
this seed has arisen from the three secrets.

Then once more Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very mantra of the protective wheel of body, speech and mind, endowed with the vajra, from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

oṃ hulu hulu tiṣṭha tiṣṭha bandha bandha hana hana daha daha amṛte hūṃ phaṭ

On birch bark and the like, the wheel, set upon the Karma Vajra:
having placed the syllable hūṃ in the center,
one should write the name in the center.
Fully adorned with the words of the mantra's syllables,
it should be kept always.
This is the gathered abode of the three secrets of all mantras.

Then once more Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, drew forth the very abode of the vajra añjana from his own body, speech and mind vajra.

At a crossroads, or beside a lone tree,
at a shrine of the mātṛkās or at a temple of Śiva,
there the vajra añjana should always be made to descend into a skull cup.

Using great oil, blood and excrement, and making the lamp wick from lotus fiber and arga fiber, at midnight on the fourteenth day of the waning fortnight the wise one should cause the vajra añjana to descend. If that very mantra is applied one hundred and eight times, the three kinds of accomplishment will come about.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Samantabhadra.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas said this to Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas: "Blessed One, if they possess realization of how many secret syllables will those bodhisattva great beings have faith in this vajra of conduct through the secret pledge of all tathāgatas, and meditate on it?"

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, said this to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, if they possess realization of three secret syllables, those bodhisattvas will have faith in this, which is the vajra of the conduct of awakening of all tathāgatas, and will meditate on it."

All the tathāgatas asked, "What are the three?"

The Vajra Holder said, "The body vajra of all tathāgatas, the speech vajra of all tathāgatas, and the mind vajra of all tathāgatas: these are the three."

Then all those tathāgatas bowed at the feet of the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi and remained silent.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, said to all those tathāgatas and to all those bodhisattvas: "Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, in the past, after eons as many as the atoms of inexpressibly, inexpressibly many buddhafields had passed, from the time of the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the Arhat, the perfectly complete Buddha Dīpaṃkara, until the great sage Kāśyapa attained complete and perfect awakening, this was not taught. Why was that? The meaning of the state of the great secret was not explained because at that time, in that age, sentient beings lacked the fortune for it. Nevertheless, Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, in this Guhyasamāja the awakening of a buddha is perfected in an instant, a moment, a mere second. That awakening which bodhisattvas do not attain, though they strive and search for it for eons as countless as the sands of the river Ganges, the bodhisattva who delights in the Guhyasamāja, in this very life, comes to be counted among those called buddhas of all tathāgatas."

Then those bodhisattvas, having heard these syllabled words of the Speech Vajra, wept profusely. Then all those tathāgatas said this to those bodhisattvas: "Bodhisattvas, do not weep! Do not give rise to the three sufferings!"

Then those bodhisattvas said this to all those tathāgatas:

"Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, how can we not weep? How can we not give rise to the three sufferings? And why is that? Blessed Ones, we have no fortune for the syllables of the three secrets; we have not even the fortune of hearing their name."

All the tathāgatas declared: "Sons of noble family, do not say that! The syllables are held in common. Sons of noble family, just as you do not know them and have not heard them, so too we, all the tathāgatas, and all the bodhisattvas as well, sons of noble family, have not truly attained these syllables of the three secrets, nor have we become completely and perfectly awakened. And why is that? Because the syllables of the three secrets are utterly pure."

Then all those bodhisattvas remained silent.

Then all the blessed tathāgatas dwelt in the bhagas of the vajra consorts, the essence of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas.

Then the consort of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas praised with joy the Blessed One, lord of all tathāgatas, the great Vajradhara:

"The realm of sentient beings is your abode, O lord; you are the vajra mind.
Desiring one who is joyful, delightful and meaningful, please protect me.
Protector, if today you wish that I should live,
father, supreme great kinsman of beings, please give me delight."

Then Māmakī, the consort of the mind of all tathāgatas, fully praised the Blessed One, lord of all tathāgatas, the great Vajradhara, with these syllabled words, the supreme offering of vajra desire and joy:

"You, vajra body, whose wheel of command benefits many beings, who for the aim of the buddhas, the aim of supreme awakening, teach what brings benefit:
Protector, if today you wish that I should live,
with passion please delight me, the pledge of passion."

Then Locanā of the Body, Speech, and Mind Vajra, the consort of Lokeśvara, fully praised the Blessed One, lord of all tathāgatas, the great Vajradhara, with the pledge of enjoying desires:

"You are the vajra speech, benefiting all, full of loving compassion, ever striving to accomplish the needed aims of the worlds.
Protector, if today you wish that I should live, delight me through the supremely joyful conduct of Samantabhadra."

Then the consort of the Samaya Vajra of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas praised the Blessed One, lord of all tathāgatas, the great Vajradhara, with this joy of bliss and gladness of mind:

"You, the vajra desire, of the supreme pledge, of great beneficial aim,
supreme lineage of the perfect buddhas, compassionate in accord with sameness:
Protector, if today you wish that I should live, delight me, who have become a treasure of sacred, precious qualities."

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the glory of the tathāgata who enjoys all desires, and with the wheel of the pledge he enjoyed desire with those consorts of all tathāgatas, and remained silent.

Then all these realms of space became completely filled with the semen of the vajra pledge of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas, and remained like a vase filled with vajra water.

Then all those sentient beings in this vajra realm of space in whom the three bodies truly arise, and who truly know through the vajra glory, all became tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, possessing the wisdom of the three vajras.

From then on, all sentient beings were empowered by the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas as "wholly good, Samantabhadra."

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, said this to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, do you see the sameness of all phenomena?"

Then all those tathāgatas said this to Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas: "Blessed One, we see the sameness of the wisdom of all tathāgatas and the conduct of vajra wisdom. Sugata, we see it."

Then all the blessed tathāgatas emerged from the bhaga of the consort of all tathāgatas and said this to the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the great Vajrapāṇi: "That the awakening of a buddha is to be realized through the syllabled words of desire, Blessed One, is a wonder! Sugata, it is a wonder!"

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, said this to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, all tathāgatas, do not speak so! And why? Because all phenomena are equal to the pledge of the Space Vajra, there is no aggregate of form, no aggregate of feeling, no aggregate of perception, no aggregate of formations, no aggregate of consciousness; there are no elements and no sense sources. Likewise there is no attachment, no aversion, no delusion; there is no dharma, and no non-dharma either."

Then all those tathāgatas fell silent.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, declared to all the tathāgatas and to those bodhisattvas: "You should meditate on this secret of the body, speech and mind vajra of all tathāgatas in all world systems. And why? Because these bodhisattvas dwelling in the ten directions have the fortune for this Dharma discourse."

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all tathāgatas, declared to Vajradharma: "Son of noble family, hold this suchness of the pledge of all tathāgatas. You are empowered by all the tathāgatas with the name Vajra, Lord of All Dharmas."

Then the bodhisattva great being Vajradharma said, "I shall do so," and fell silent.

Then all those tathāgatas caused their own body, speech and mind to enter the three syllables of Vajrasattva.

Then the Tathāgata Vairocana, abiding in the body vajra of all who dwell in the three realms, focused on the sameness of the body of all tathāgatas and fell silent.

Then the Tathāgata Speech Vajra, abiding in the speech vajra of all who dwell in the three realms, focused on the sameness of the speech of all tathāgatas and fell silent.

Then the Tathāgata Vajrapāṇi, abiding in the mind vajra of all who dwell in the three realms, focused on the sameness of the mind of all tathāgatas and fell silent.

Thus it was declared.

This is the seventeenth chapter, called the King of the Vajra Blessing of the Pledges and Vows of All Tathāgatas, from the Guhyasamāja, the great secret of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas.

The great king of tantras called the Guhyasamāja, the great secret of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas, is complete.

It was translated, edited and finalized by the Indian preceptor Śraddhākaravarman and the chief editor-translator, the monk Rinchen Zangpo. Later, in the presence of the paṇḍita and lama, the great vajra holder, the venerable Ravīndra, the translator Chak Lotsāwa, the monk Chöjé Pal, respectfully edited and corrected it and finalized it.

Translator's Notes

• "Vajra consorts" renders rdo rje btsun mo (vajrayoṣit); bhaga, the female organ understood esoterically, is kept as in the Tibetan. "Great knowledge in the form of a man" renders rig pa chen po skyes bu'i gzugs, the great vidyā embodied as a male figure. The fifth tathāgata in the opening list is called simply Vajra Amogha (rdo rje don yod pa) here, and Amoghasiddhi later in the passage; both are kept as written.
• "Knowledge-person" renders rig pa'i skyes bu (vidyāpuruṣa), the embodied mantra-person that emerges with each heart mantra. In the second emission the Tibetan reads only "speech and mind" rather than "body, speech, and mind"; it is kept as written. Lokeśvara here renders 'jig rten dbang phyug, the form of Amitābha's family.
• The four wrathful ones drawn forth at the gates correspond to Yamāntaka, Prajñāntaka, Padmāntaka, and Vighnāntaka; the Tibetan names them only by their mantras and by the epithet "Blessing the Maṇḍala." "Beguiles" renders slu ba (deceive, enchant). The chapter division falls within this piece; the second chapter begins with the request in verse.
• In the verse beginning "Light equal to that of blazing buddhas," the Tibetan reads mnyan pa'i 'od ("light of listening"), which makes no sense here; it is taken as mnyam pa'i 'od, "equal light," echoing the earlier line "equal to the light of blazing buddhas." "Amoghasiddhi" in the verse renders the shortened form don grub. The verses on the deities' colors and emblems are rendered in the order the Tibetan gives them.
• The opening lines complete a sentence begun at the end of the previous piece ("Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder ..."). In "Locanā is drawn in the eastern corner," the Tibetan has gla ru, which does not fit; it is read as grwa ru, "in the corner." The antinomian verses of the fifth chapter are rendered literally, as in the Tibetan; the tradition reads them through the higher, esoteric interpretation of the explanatory tantras, and the "mother" of the chief of buddhas is understood as the consort.
• "The great meat" (mahāmāṃsa) is understood in the commentarial tradition as human flesh; the eating of feces, urine, and the meats listed belongs to the transgressive samaya practices that the exegetical tradition reads both literally for qualified practitioners and in an internal, yogic sense. The line "at the tip of the nose this is auspicious" renders the Tibetan as written (shis).
• In the verse on austerities the Tibetan reads bstan pas ("taught"), evidently for bsten pas ("relied upon"), which matches the parallel lines; the latter is translated. The Source of the Dharma of Passion is an epithet standing for Amitābha, lord of the passion family, in the sequence of the five buddhas; it is translated literally rather than given a Sanskrit form. The slaying of the host of tathāgatas, the drinking of the pledge substances, and the sexual yoga are read in the exegetical tradition as esoteric instructions on the completion stage, not as literal injunctions to violence. The first line of the verse on alms is terse and its exact force uncertain.

• The commands to kill all beings, to crush the buddhas of the three times, and to steal all riches are read in the exegetical tradition, for example in the Pradīpoddyotana, as esoteric instructions on the dissolution of ordinary appearances, emptiness, and the seizing of the vital winds, not as literal injunctions. "The supreme young woman of Ratnasambhava" could also be read as "the supreme young woman, a source of jewels."
• The phrase rendered "you do not care with your gaze for" (spyan ras kyis mi 'tsho) is obscure, and its relation to the following clause, which in the next piece speaks of the tathāgatas watching over these practitioners with their eyes, is uncertain. The injunctions to false speech, deceiving the victors, and harsh speech are understood in the commentarial tradition as figurative teachings on the illusory nature of speech and appearances.
• In the verse on the three syllables, the word rendered "bond" ('jing) is obscure; the reading is uncertain. In the verse on the buddhas and bodhisattvas who "transgress," the sense, following the context of summoning, is that the deities who fail to come when summoned forfeit their lives.
• "Rite" renders the Sanskrit loanword kalpa written in Tibetan letters. In the line on the pledge of the three rites, the particle written □ makes no sense and is read as the genitive or locative. The line "a syllable blazing brightly with light rays" is a syllable short and does not name the syllable in the verse itself; the seed syllable thlīṃ follows the stanza.
• The chapter colophon closes chapter eleven; the next chapter begins with "Then the Teacher, the Vajra Holder." "Rite" renders kalpa (Tibetan rtog pa / kalpa). The phrase rendered "wide-eyed, holding it in the hand" is terse; it may instead refer to holding the sword as one of wide vision, and commentaries differ. "The fierce ones" may denote the Rudras.
• The word rendered "hook" (kyo ba) in "body, speech, and mind, the hook and the rest" is uncertain; it may denote some other implement held in the hands. "Great flesh" is the standard tantric term for human flesh.
• "A month and a half" renders the Tibetan idiom "half and two months." The line "Those arisen from the supreme secret have declared accomplishment within a fortnight" is terse; the word rendered "fortnight" may simply mean "a portion" of the period.
• "Subjugating" renders dbang, here the rite of bringing under control rather than empowerment. In the final lines, "even on one of deluded nature" interprets the terse rmongs bdag nyid; it could also be read as an address to the deluded practitioner.
• The opening line "even the buddhas will not succeed" is terse; it most likely means that even the buddhas cannot withstand or counteract the rite. Likewise "even if the buddhas should proceed against it" in the verse on terrifying enemies is uncertain in sense. "The petitioner" renders don gnyer, the one who seeks the benefit of the rite, here apparently the sick person to be healed. The Mahendra maṇḍala is the square earth maṇḍala.
• "The White Lady" renders dkar mo, which may stand for the consort Pāṇḍarā, but this is not certain here. The Vajra Bearer and the Passionate One are epithets apparently of Akṣobhya and Amitābha. The Space-born Eye and the Eye of Speech Vajra appear to be Māmakī and Pāṇḍaravāsinī, and the consort holding the utpala Tārā, following the usual set of four consorts; the Tibetan names them only by these descriptions. In "even a buddha or a vajra holder will die," the Tibetan has an instrumental, which makes the construction awkward; the sense seems to be that the rite is effective even against such beings.
• The consort meditated on in the third section is called "the supreme Space Vajra" and, in the samādhi's title, "Space Mother"; she is evidently Māmakī. Vajradharmā in the following section corresponds to Pāṇḍaravāsinī.
• The four mantras are those of the four consorts, Locanā, Māmakī, Pāṇḍaravāsinī, and Tārā, as their wording shows; the Tibetan does not name them here. In the opening section "the blue vajra" refers to the wrathful Nīladaṇḍa, the bearer of the vajra staff. The closing verses of each mantra section are compressed, and their subjects (the buddhas who rejoice, and the consort who acts) are taken from context.

• The lotus-born vajra wrathful one is Hayagrīva, as his mantra shows. The piece ends in the middle of Nīladaṇḍa's mantra, which continues in the next piece.
• The "nāgas of great strength" may also be read as "the nāgas of Mahābala," since the mantra just drawn forth is Mahābala's. The line rendered "summoned, bodily, with palms joined" (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□) is uncertain; □□□□□□ might instead describe the bodies as bent or bound together. "Lotus of the sky" (□□□□□□□□□□□□) is translated literally; it probably denotes celestial women. "Stone fiber" (□□□□□□□□□□) is a literal rendering of an uncertain substance used alongside red ochre in the rite.
• □□□□□□□□□□□ ("the frowning one") is taken as Bhṛkuṭī, whose name appears in the mantra that follows. □□□□□□□□□□ ("a lone sign") is understood as a solitary liṅga or sacred marker, a standard site for fierce rites alongside a lone tree. The epithet □□□□□ qualifying the vajra peg is obscure; "forceful" is a tentative rendering. The lines "even one who grants the supreme three bodies of the buddhas, who has abandoned both knowing and not knowing" describe the target of the rite and are translated literally.
• "A girl marked with a mole" renders □□□□□□□□ literally; since the following verses name a dyer's daughter, a dancer's daughter, and the four castes, it may stand for a particular low-status class whose Sanskrit name cannot be confidently identified. "The two organs" (□□□□□□□□□□□□) are the male and female sexual organs of the union practice.
• In "Excrement, or else food" the text reads □□□□□ ("explanation"), which makes no sense among substances to be eaten; it is taken as a slip for □□□□□ ("excrement"), the substance used throughout the surrounding verses. "The great meat" is human flesh. The line □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□

commentarial tradition reads esoterically; they are given here as the text states them. Bodhi Vajra renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ as a name.

• "The great flesh" (□□□□□) is the tantric term for human flesh. "The great suffering should be urged with the heart mantra" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ literally; the object of the urging is unclear. "Servants" renders □□□□□□□□□□, the attendant spirits dispatched in rites. In "with the great laughter of the vajra body," □□□□□□ may instead mean "placing, setting out."

• "Knowledge observance" renders rig pa'i brtul zhugs (vidyāvrata), the observance practiced with a consort (vidyā). The epithet of the yakṣa lord, 'brog gnas dbang po, "lord who dwells in the wilds," is translated literally, as is "Great Light" ('od chen); neither is identified with confidence. The phrase yon tan lug rgyud qualifying Māmakī is obscure and is rendered tentatively as "of the lineage of qualities." The verses praising stealing and killing reflect the deliberately transgressive language of this tantra, which the commentarial tradition interprets in a hidden, non-literal sense.

• "Slander" renders phra ma, which ordinarily means tale-bearing; its pairing with drinking milk is odd, and it may stand for some substance, so the reading is uncertain. The verse on Viṣṇu's pledge ends without a main verb in the Tibetan and is rendered as a continuation of the instruction to slay. The pledges of eating the great flesh, excrement, urine, blood and semen reflect the deliberately transgressive language of this tantra, which the commentarial tradition reads as referring to the five meats and five nectars and interprets in a hidden sense.

• The bodhisattvas' request, rendered "please do not regard the vajra words of speech as a source of error," is terse in the Tibetan and its exact sense is uncertain. The word yong ye qualifying "these sentient beings" near the end is obscure and has been left untranslated as a mere emphatic. The stray mark cha after "said to those bodhisattvas" is a scribal or section mark and is not translated. "Fall from the pledge" renders nyams par 'gyur, "will degenerate."

• "Knowledge being" renders rig pa'i skyes bu (vidyāpuruṣa). The name rdo rje gsang ba is rendered literally as "Vajra Secret," as it could not be identified with confidence as a fixed Sanskrit name. "Pāṇḍarā" renders dkar, "the White One," the consort Pāṇḍaravāsinī. The verse on the great queen and the supreme bull is terse and its construction uncertain.

• The phrases "and so forth" and "and so on, up to" render the Tibetan markers of abbreviation (zhes bya ba'i bar du and nas ... bar du), indicating that the text quotes only the beginning and end of a longer passage. "Wheel bearers" renders 'khor lo can, the cakrin deities of the maṇḍala.

• □□□□□□, normally "calm abiding," here names a place in a list of ritual sites (crossroads, lone tree, mātṛkā shrine); it is taken as "abode of Śiva" (śivālaya), a Śiva temple. "Great oil" (mahātaila) is the tantric term for human fat. The vajra añjana is an eye salve made from lampblack collected in a skull cup. The "mothers" in the second verse are understood in the tradition as the women who are consorts in practice.

• In the first praise the Tibetan reads □□□□□□ ("hear"), whereas the three parallel refrains read □□□□□□□ ("live"); this is taken as a copyist's slip and translated "live." The first speaker is identified only as the consort of the body, speech and mind of all tathāgatas; this passage names Locanā as Lokeśvara's consort, as the Tibetan has it.

• □□□□□□□□□□□□□ is taken as the Tibetan rendering of Ravīndra, the Nepalese paṇḍita known as a teacher of Chak Lotsāwa Chöjé Pal; the identification is likely but not certain.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
