Clarifying the Words: The Derivation of Forms Ending in ti and the Rest

Tyādyantasya Prakriyāpadarohaṇa · Toh 4452 · Derge Tengyur
ཏྱ་ལ་སགོ་སྐ་པའི་མཐའ་བྱ་བ་ཚིག་གསལ་བ

Clarifying the Words: The Derivation of Forms Ending in ti and the Rest, known in Tibetan as Ti la sogs pa'i mtha'i bya ba tshig gsal ba and given a Sanskrit title transcribed as Tyādyantasya Prakriyāpadarohaṇa, is a manual of Sanskrit grammar composed by the master known in Tibetan as Joyful Renown. Working in the tradition of the Kātantra or Kalāpa system, whose authorities it names as Kumāra, Śarvavarman, Kātyāyana, Durga and Trilocana, it sets out step by step how Sanskrit verb forms are derived, explaining roots, suffixes, augments and the special rules for denominative verbs with a great many worked examples. After a homage to the Buddha and opening verses that liken clear words to a blossoming lotus, the treatise proceeds through its rules in concise prose, and its colophon records that it was translated into Tibetan by the Śākya monk Dharmaśrībhadra at Riphuk, through the kindness of the great translator Butön. It is Toh 4452 in the Tengyur, where it belongs among the treatises on language and grammar, the field of śabdavidyā.

In the language of India: dyadyantasya prakriyapadarohaṇa nāma. In the language of Tibet: Clarifying the Words: The Derivation of Forms Ending in ti and the Rest.

Homage to the Buddha.

May the lotus of words in full bloom,
Rich in the fragrance of its petals, the meanings of speech,
Holding the honey-essence of fine nectar,
Come to flourish in my mind.

Purified through its various chapters,
Clear even where it is condensed,
Taught by groups and taught in brief:
With few words I shall make it clear in this work.

The procedure closely studied
By Kumāra, Śarvavarman, Kātyāyana, Durga and Trilocana,
This introductory procedure shall now be stated.

Let one who has spent twelve years on grammar
And has cast off its toil,
Seated on the lion throne of poetry,
Teach this Clarifying of the Words.

Here there are two divisions: the si series and the tī series. Of these, the si series are those that end with supa. Among them, si au jas is the first; am au śas is the second; ṭā bhyām bhis is the third; de bhyām bhyas is the fourth; ṅi bhyām bhyas is the fifth; ṅas os ām is the sixth; ṅi os supa is the seventh. Thus are distinguished the seven triads named "first" and so on, established by common worldly usage. They are to be applied after the nominal stem, in their numerical order, for the seven senses: the meaning of the stem itself, the object, the instrument, the recipient, the source, the owner, and the locus. Having stated these, now the ti series is to be stated: the endings from tī up to syāmahi.

Among them, ti tas anti si thas tha mi bas mas te āte ante se āthe dhve e bahe mahe is the barttamānā.

yāt yātām yus yās yātām yāt yām yāba yām ītā īyātām īran īthās īyāthāṃ īdhvaṃ īya ībahi īmahi is the saptamī.

tu tām antu hi tam ta āni āba āma tām ātām antāma sva āthām dhvaṃ ai ābahe āmahe is the pañcamī.

di tāma an si tam ta am ba ma ta ātām ānta thās athām dhvaṃ i bahi mahi is the hyasta. The adyatanī is just like this.

aṭ atus us thal athus a aṭ ba ma e āte ire se āthe dhve e bahe mahe is the parokṣā.

tā tārau tāras tāsi tāthās tāstha tāsmi tāsbas tāsmas tā tārau tāras tāse tāsāthe tādhve tāhe tāsbahe tāsmahe is the śvastanī.

yāt yāstvām yāsus yās yāstam yāsta yāsaṃ yāsva yāsma sīṣṭa sīyāstam sīrāṇ sīṣṭhās sīyāsthāṃ sidhvaṃ sīya sībahi sīmahi is the āśīṣa.

syati syatas syanti syasi syathas syatha syāmi syābas syāmas syate syete syante syese syethe syedhve sye syabahe syāmahe is the bhabiṣyanti.

syata syatām syan syas syatam syata syam syaba syama syata syetām syanta syathās syethām syadhvi sye syabahi syamhi is the lapsed action.

These ten sets of eighteen, named barttamānā and so on, are the divisions of the tī series.

Of these, "what is ongoing" is the barttamānā: an action from its commencement until it is not yet complete. For present time the barttamānā division is used. For injunction, invitation, summoning, request, inquiry and entreaty, that is, for injunction and the rest, the saptamī and the pañcamī are used. For permission, for enabling, and for wishing, the pañcamī is used once more. Time that took place yesterday is "yesterday"; for past time of yesterday the hyasta division is used. Time that took place today is "today"; for past time of today the adyatani division is used. What is beyond the senses is "hidden," meaning that it is not an object of the senses; for hidden past time the parokṣā division is used. Time that takes place tomorrow is "tomorrow"; for time that will come about tomorrow the śvāsta division is used. To speak auspiciously of attaining a desired aim in the future is a blessing; for future time accompanied by a wish the aśīs division is used. bhabiṣyatī means the time that will come about; for time that will come about the bhabiṣintī division is used. An action that has passed by is a lapsed action: where an action is not brought to completion because of a twofold action, for past time with a lapsed action the kriyātipatti is used.

Of the ten divisions bartamānā and the rest, the first nine words of each become those named parsmai words: ti tas anti si thas tha mi bas mas. The latter nine words of each become those named ātmane words: te āte atme se āthe dhve e bahe mahe. So it is in every case. Among the parasmai words and the ātmane words alike, the words three by three, in order, become those named first, middle and last. Thus ti tas anti is the first, si thas tha is the middle, and mi bas mas is the last; te āte ante is the first, se āthe dtve is the middle, and e bahe mahe is the last. So it is in every case.

Further, the endings named singular, dual and plural are each to be understood separately from worldly usage, as follows: ti is singular, tas is dual, and anti is plural. In the same way they are to be seen in all the triads. Because it says "to be understood separately," by the force of the fitting rule "what has no meaning of its own is a suffix," ti and the rest are to be called suffixes. Or else this is simply well known.

According to the rule "what comes before the suffix," there is the base. The base is also of two kinds: the nominal stem and the verbal root. Of these, bhū and the rest are to be stated. Among these, since those ending in the letter a occur as ones to be joined, they then express action, as ji in the sense of conquering. By the rule "what conveys action is a root," whatever is named a root is, by the rule "what comes before the suffix," the base.

By the very force of its agreement with the meaning, it is established as bearing the name "base." Where the name "base" applies, from the words "the suffix comes after," the suffix comes after the base. By the rule "in the present, the bartamā," the bartamā division comes in. Then, by the rule "the parasmai words," these bear the name parasmai words. Where the name parasmai words applies, by the rule "from the rest, for the agent, the barasmai words," they become parasmai words for the agent. Then, by the rule "the parasmai words" and the rule "the triads are first, middle and last," they become, in numerical order, those named first, middle and last.

Since there is no restriction here, a restriction is to be made. "With a noun, also the first." "With 'you,' the middle." "With 'we,' the last." With a noun, whether it is actually used or not used, it becomes the first person. With "you," whether it is used or not used, it becomes the middle person. With "we," whether it is used or not used, it becomes the last person. So it is in every case. In every case, when one wishes to express one thing, it becomes the singular for the meaning of one, the dual for the meaning of two, and the plural for the meaning of many.

From the force of the name that agrees with the meaning, "the expression of one, two or many," and by the rule "the first six of each are sārvadhātuka," they bear the name sārvadhātuka. Where the name sārvadhātuka applies, from the general rule "yaṇ in the sārvadhātuka," and by the rule "for the agent, āṅ, that is, the bikaraṇa," there is an for the agent. The letter na in an serves the particular purpose of the rule "also in the bikaraṇa." From the general rule "guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin and of the bikaraṇas," before aṇa, by "also in the bikaraṇa," there is guṇa. And what is guṇa? By the rule "ar and the first two sandhi letters," ar e o are guṇa. It comes in the place of a nāmin. And what is a nāmin? By the rule "the vowels other than the letter ā are nāmin," the vowels from i up to the letter o are nāmin. Then, by the rule "in place, the nearest," ar comes in place of the letter ri, the letter e in place of the letter i, and the letter o in place of the letter u, respectively. By the rule "e becomes aya," it is changed to aya: jayati.

By the rule "when the meaning of what precedes and what follows is perceived, a word," it bears the name "word." From the general rule "at the end of a word, the first of the dhuṭas," and by the rule "the visarga of ra and of the letter śa," the letter śa is changed into a visarga: joyatiḥ. By the rule "before a and the sandhi letters, a becomes those, and is also elided," a is taught in place of the letter a, and it is elided by the following letter a. By the rule "of a dhuṭa in the instruction, anusvāra," the letter na becomes anusvāra. Again, by the rule "before a class consonant, the final of that class," the anusvāra becomes the letter na: jayanti jayasi jayathāḥ jayatha. By the rule "lengthening of a before ba and ma," there is lengthening. By the rule "a consonant without a vowel is drawn to the following letter," it goes over to the following one: jayāmi jayābaḥ jayāmaḥ.

pra parā apa sama anu aba nida du ṅa babhi bi adhi su uda ati ni prati pari api, together with uba āṅ: these twenty are the group of prefixes, as the poet has said. By the rule "these twenty prefixes are joined with the action," they have the name "prefix" from worldly usage, and likewise, it is said, they are to be joined before the root. It is also said: "ca and the rest are to be known as particles, and pra and the rest are prefixes; because they are themselves manifest, their joining with the action is ascertained from the world."

Because it has meaning by way of making a meaning clear, by the rule "what has meaning, apart from a root and a case ending, is a nominal stem," it bears the name "nominal stem." By the rule "after it, the case endings," and so on, the case endings sī and the rest come after the nominal stem. When all of si and the rest could apply, by the rule "for a word in the meaning of the nominal stem, the first case ending," it takes the first case ending. Then, when one wishes to express one thing, for one thing there is the singular si. The i of si is for the sake of pronunciation. From the general rule "after others it is elided," and by the rule "also after an indeclinable," si is elided.

By the rule "ji after bi and parā," there are ātmane words. And again, what are ātmane words? By the rule "the latter nine are ātmane," they are ātmane words. By the rule "for the agent, after those of the ruca group and those with the marker ṅa," they become ātmane words for the agent. It is not without guṇa, and it is changed to aya: bijayate. By the rule "also of āte āthe," the letter i replaces the letter a. By the rule "a with the letter i becomes e," it becomes e itself, and the following one is elided as well: bijayete, by the rule for a preceding word and a sandhi letter. bijayante bijayase bejayethe bijayedhve. The rule for a and the sandhi letters is this: the letter e comes in place of the letter a, and the following letter e is elided: bijaye. There is lengthening of a: bijyābata bijayāmate. In the same way, parājayate barājayete parājayante and the rest are to be derived.

ṣmid is in the sense of laughing slightly. The letter da serves the particular purpose of the rule "for the agent, after those of the ruca group and those with the marker da." Those that do not come after svaradanti and so on are the ones taught with ṣa. So too are smi svadi svadi svabi. sṛ sṛbi sṛji smṛ styā sīkṛ sekṛ are left aside. By the rule "the sa at the beginning of a root," the letter sa replaces the letter ṣa. By the rule "for the agent, after those of the ruca group and those with the marker ṅa," because of the marker itself, there are ātmane words: smayate smayete smayante bismayate bismayante.

bhaja and śriña are in the sense of resorting to. The marker letter ña serves the particular purpose of the rule "after those with in and ña, and after yaja and the rest, both": śrayati śayataḥ śyanti. With pari before it: pariśayati bariśayata bariśayanti. With ut before it: by the rule "at the end of a word, the first of the dhuṭas," the letter ta replaces the letter da. By the rule "after the first letters of the classes, the letter śa followed by a vowel or by ya ba ra becomes the letter cha, or optionally does not," the letter cha replaces the letter śa.

By the rule "the letter ta, before la and before the ca and ṭa classes, takes the form of what follows," the letter cha replaces the letter ta. By the rule "before an unvoiced consonant, the first," the letter ca replaces the letter cha: ucchvayati, samucchvayati, atyucchvayati. With ni before it: niśrayati. By the rule "after those with in and ña, and after yaja and the rest, both," because of the marker ña the forms of both sets of endings occur: śrayate, śrayete, śayante.

ṭu o śvi is in the sense of going and of growing. The syllable ṭu serves the particular purpose of the rule "after one with the marker ṭu, athu." The letter o serves the particular purpose of the rule "also after lū and the rest and after those with the marker ot": śvayati, śvayataḥ, śvayanti.

Those ending in the letter i: ṭīd is in the sense of going through the sky: ḍayate, ḍayate, ḍayante. With ut before it: by the rule "at the end of a word, the first of the dhuṭas," the letter ta replaces the letter ḍa. By the rule "the letter ta, before la and before the ca and ṭa classes, takes the form of what follows," the letter ḍa replaces the letter ta: uḍḍayate, uḍḍayate, uḍḍayante.

ṇīña is in the sense of obtaining. The teaching with ṇa covers all such roots; nriti, nandi, narṅhi, naṭi, nādhri and nāthṛ are left out. Therefore, by the rule "na in place of ṇa," the letter na replaces the letter ṇa: nayati, nayataḥ, nayanti. By the rule "after the prefixes pra and pari standing before it, where there is no compound, the na of what is taught with ṇa," ṇa itself appears: praṇayati, pariṇayati. By the rule "after those with in and ña, and after yaja and the rest, both," because of the marker ña the forms of both sets of endings occur: nayata, nayete, nayante.

Those ending in the letter u: ṣu, sru, dru dru, ṛccha, gamli, si sli are in the sense of going: savati, pravati, davati, bravati. cyud, chyuṅ, jyud, jhyud, sruṅ, sluṅ, gāṅ, śyiṅ are in the sense of going: cyavate, chyavate, jyavate, jhyavate, pravate, slavate.

Those ending in the letter u: bhu is in the sense of existing: bhavate, brabhavati, praribhavati. With sam before it: by the rule "before a consonant, anusvāra in place of m," anusvāra replaces the letter ma. By the rule "before a class consonant, the fifth of the class," the fifth appears: sambhavati, anubhavati, vibhavati. With ud before it: by the rule "the first of a class at the end of a word, before vowels and voiced sounds, becomes the third," the letter da replaces the letter ta: uddhavati, abhibhavati.

bluṅ is in the sense of purifying: pavate. mūd is in the sense of binding: mavate.

Those ending in the letter ṛ: smri and dhyai are in the sense of thinking. The guṇa is ar: smarati, vismarati, saṃsmarati, apasmarati, anusmarati. spri is in the senses of sound and of affliction: svarati. By the rule "after saṃ: gam, ṛcchi, pṛcchi, spri, śru, ve, rti and driśa," the ātmanepada endings occur: saṃhvarate.

hṛña is in the sense of seizing: harati, prahati, anuharati, viharati, apaharati, abhiharati. By the rule "before a vowel that is not similar to it, i becomes ya, and what follows is not elided," the letter ya replaces the letter i: abhyavaharati, samabhyavaharati. With āṅ before it: the letter ṅa serves the particular purpose of the rule "always after āṅ and mā": āharati, vyāharati. Because of the marker ña, the forms of both sets of endings occur: harate.

Those ending in the letter ṝ: dṝ is in the senses of swimming and of carrying across: tarati, saṃtarati, vitarati, avatarati.

Those ending in the letter i: dheṭ and pā are in the sense of drinking. The letter ṭa serves the particular purpose of the rule "it shall also be stated after śve and dheṭ": dhayati, dhayataḥ, dhayanti. beña is in the sense of weaving. Because of the marker ña, the forms of both sets of endings occur: vayate, vayate. hveña is in the sense of challenging: hvayate. By the rule "hva after ni, saṃ, vi and upa," the ātmanepada endings occur: nihvaate, saṃhvayate, vihvayate, uvahvayate. By the rule "āṅ in the sense of challenging," the ātmanepada endings occur: āhvayate, sāmāhvayate.

maiṅ is in the sense of giving in return. Because of the marker ṅa, the ātmanepada endings occur: mayaste. When pra stands before it and ni stands before it, the na of ni becomes ṇa, by the rule "also in nada, gada, pata, pada, those named dī, miṅ, māṅ, syati, henti, yāti, pāti, drāti, psāti, vayati, vahati, śamyati, cinoti and degvī": praṇimayate. deṅ and traiṅ are in the sense of protecting: praṇidayaste.

Those ending in the letter e: treṅ. By the very force of the letter e being taught, there is no guṇa. By the rule "ai becomes āya," the letter ai is changed to āya: trāyate, paritrāyate. glai is in the sense of the waning of joy: glāyati. mlai is the decline of the body: mlāyati. kai, gai and rai are in the sense of sound: kāyati, gāyati, rāyati. daib is in the sense of purifying. The letter ba serves the particular purpose of the rule "dā and dhā, other than those with the marker ba, are called dā": dāyati, abadāyati. dhyai: dhyāyati, pradhyāyati, nidhyāyati. ṣṭyai and styai are in the senses of sound and of gathering together. Because both are taken up here, the change to sa under the rule "sa in place of ṣa at the beginning of a root" does not take place: ṣṭyeyati, styāyati. As for what is spoken of as ending in o and so forth, roots ending in the letter o simply do not occur.

Those ending in consonants, and those with the letter ā as penultimate: ḍāpacaṣa is in the sense of cooking. The syllable ṭu serves the particular purpose of the rule "after one with the marker ḍu, strimaka in the sense of what is accomplished by it." The letter a is for the sake of pronunciation. The letter ṣa serves the particular purpose of the rule "after those with the marker ṣa and after bhid and the rest, aṅ": pacati, pacatai.

yaja is in the senses of worshipping the gods, keeping company, and giving: yajati, yajate. bhaja: bhajati, bhajate. śapa is in the sense of cursing: śapati. By the rule "śapa in the sense of an oath," the ātmanepada endings occur: śapate. ṭuvapa is in the sense of sowing seed: vapati, vavate, praṇivavati, praṇivavate. vaha is in the sense of obtaining: vahati, vahate, praṇivahati, praṇivahate. By the rule "vaha after pra," the parasmaipada endings occur: pravahati. Here, because it is treated as a group, the parasmaipada endings occur. These are the explanations of the roots that take both.

tyaja is in the sense of abandoning: tyajati. phala is in the sense of coming to completion: phalati. vasa is in the sense of dwelling: vasati, pravasati, upavasati, nipasati. hase is in the sense of laughing. The letter a serves the particular purpose of the rule "optionally, for those ending in a consonant and the like that take iṭ, for those not marked with it, and for those ending in hma or ya, and for kṣaṇa and śvasa": hasati, prahasati, vihasati, upahasati. daha is in the sense of reducing to ashes.

dahati. ṇada is in the sense of indistinct sound: nadati, pranadati, praṇinadati. gada is in the sense of speaking clearly: gadati, praṇigadati, nigadati. pala, śala and patḷ, and laṃ as well, are in the sense of going. The letter ḷ serves the particular purpose of the rule "also after puṣa and the rest, dyuta and the rest, those with the marker ḷ, and arti, sarti and śati, in the parasmaipada": patati, nipatati, praṇipratati.

ṣvaṇa is in the sense of sound: svarati. By the rule "also after vi, of svana in the sense of eating," ṣa appears: biṣṇadi, apaṣvaṇati. naṭa is in the sense of dancing. Because it is not taught with ṇa, there is no ṇa: pranaprati.

tapa and dhuba are in the sense of tormenting: tavati. By the rule "tapa after vi and ut," the ātmanepada endings occur: vitapaste, uttapaste. By the rule "tapa when it has an object," the ātmanepada endings occur. And there, by the rule "of tapa, tipa, after one having an object," yaṇ applies in the sense of the agent: tapyate, tavastvapasaḥ. These are the parasmaipada forms.

rabha is in the sense of beginning: rabhate. With āṅ before it: aḍbhate. ḍulabhaṣa is in the sense of obtaining: labhate, ālabhate. Because of the prohibition in the rule "of rabhi and labhi, not in the vikaraṇa and the parokṣā," the letter na does not come as an augment. hada is in the sense of voiding excrement: hadate. ramu is in the sense of playing: damate. By the rule "rama after vi, āṅ and pari," the parasmaipada endings occur: viramati, āramati, bariramati. With upa before it: by the rule "also when it has an object," the parasmaipada endings occur: devadattamuparamate. These are the explanations of the ātmanepada.

Those with the letter ā as penultimate: ṭuyācṛ is in the sense of begging. The letter ṛ serves the particular purpose of the rule "not of śasu and of those with the marker ṛt": ācati, yācate. These are the explanations of the roots that take both.

Those with the letter a as penultimate: hladī is also in the sense of happiness. The letter ī serves the particular purpose of the rule "not for ḍīd and śvi, for those with the marker īt, and for those that take iṭ optionally, other than pati and niṣku": hlādate. ślāghṛ is in the sense of praising: ślāghate. nādhṛ and nāthṛ are in the senses of affliction, of lordship, and also of wishing: nādhate, pranādhate. By the rule "nātha in the sense of wishing," the ātmanepada endings occur: nāthāte, pranāthate. Otherwise the parasmaipada endings themselves occur: māṇavakamupanāthati. These are the explanations of the ātmanepada.

Those with the letter ī as penultimate: miha is in the sense of washing. Because it is stated short, it is light. By the rule "what comes before the final is the upadhā," it is named upadhā, and this follows from the general rule "of a light penultimate called upadhā." By the rule "also before a vikaraṇa, an," guṇa occurs: mehati, pramehate. citī is in the sense of perceiving: cetati. kita is in the sense of dwelling, and also of curing disease: ketati, which is in the sense of dwelling. Otherwise: cikatmite. ṣidhu is in the sense of going: sedhati, sedhati. By the rule "also of sthā, seni, sedhati, sica, manja and svanja, in the reduplication and elsewhere," ṣa appears: pratiṣedhati. Through the prohibition in the rule "sedhati, when not in the sense of going," there is no ṣa: parisetahi.

Those with the letter ī as penultimate: jība is in the sense of sustaining life. Because the penultimate is not light, there is no guṇa: jīvati. śīla is in the sense of meditative absorption: śīlati, pariśīlati mitvaṃ. mīla, smīla and kṣmīla are in the sense of closing the eyes: mīlati, smīlati, kṣmīlati. With saṃ before it: by the rule "before a fifth, the fifths, or else, not optionally, the thirds," the letter na replaces the letter ta: unmilati. krīḍaṃ is in the sense of abiding: krīḍati. By the rule "also of krīḍa after anu and pari," the ātmanepada endings occur: anukrīḍate, parikrīṭate. With sama before it: by the rule "after sam, when not in the sense of akūjana," the ātmanepada endings occur: saṃkrīḍate. These are the parasmaipada forms.

Those with the letter u as penultimate: guhū is in the sense of covering over completely. The letter ū serves the particular purpose of the rule "svarati, sūti, sūyate, and after those with the marker ūt." Guṇa occurs. By the rule "ūt for the penultimate of gohi," the letter u replaces the letter o: guhati, nighūhati, gūhate, nigūhate, avagūhati, avagūhate. These are the explanations of the roots that take both.

ṣṭubhu is in the sense of stiffening: stobhate. By the rule "after a prefix, of sunoti, subhati, syati and stobhyati, also with aṭ and elsewhere," ṣa appears:

abhiṣṭabhate. These are ātmanepada forms.

Those with the letter ū as penultimate: kṣīja, kūja and guji are in the sense of indistinct sound: kūjata. This is a parasmaipada form. ūhe is in the sense of conceptual thought. It takes the ātmanepada endings: ūhata. By the rule "after a prefix, optionally for asyati and ūhi," the ātmanepada endings occur optionally: samūhati, samūhate.

Those with the letter ṛ as penultimate: bṛtu is in the sense of proceeding. The letter u serves the particular purpose of the rule "for those with the marker ut, and for pū and kliśa, before ktra." Guṇa occurs: vartate, vartte, varttanda. śṛdhu is in the sense of contemptible sound: śardhate. kṛpū is in the sense of being capable. By the rule "la for the ri of kṛpa," la replaces the repha: kalbate, prakalbate, sikalbate, bikalbate, avakalpate.

Those with the letter e as penultimate: ṭubisri and kabi are in the sense of moving: bebati. The letter i serves the particular purpose of the rule beginning "of those without the marker it." For this very reason, by the rule "by the force of exclusion, there is na," the letter na is an augment: kampate. ejṛ, bhrejṛ and bhrajṛ are in the sense of blazing: ejate. By the rule "the a of a prefix is elided before a root's e and o," the letter a of the prefix is elided: prejate, upejate, barejate, bhrejate. edha is in the sense of growing: edhate. Through the prohibition in the rule "not of iṇ and edhati," the letter a of the prefix is not elided. By the rule "a with i becomes e, and so too ...," ai takes the place of e: ubedhate. hetha is in the sense of harming: baihethate.

Those with the letter e as penultimate: lokṛ and locṛ are in the sense of seeing: ālokastai, vilokate, vyalokate, ālocate, samālocate. okhṛ: o vati. The letter a of the prefix is elided: prokhati.

Those with the letter au as penultimate: dhaukṛ and traukṛ: dhaukate, traugate. In the same way it should be seen in other cases too. sbaddha is in the sense of complete rejoicing.

sbaddhate, pisbardhāte. ṣvakka is in the sense of going. By the force of the words "of ṣvakka there is no change," the root-initial ṣa does not become sa: ṣvakkate. These are ātmanepada forms.

ṭu o phūrjjā is in the sense of the vajra's crushing. The letter ā serves the particular purpose of the rule "also after those with the marker āt." By the rule "of a nāmin before ra and va, but not of kur and chur," the letter u is lengthened: pūrjjāti. narda and garda are in the sense of sound: nardati, pranardati, gardati. lunca is in the sense of removing. Anusvāra and the class-final occur: luncati, niluncati. bancu is in the sense of going: bancati. ancu is in the senses of going and of worshipping: ancati. With ut before it: by the rule "the first of a class at the end of a word, before vowels and voiced sounds, becomes the third," the letter da replaces the letter ta: udancate. This is a parasmaipada form.

śransu and bhaṣsu are in the sense of falling downward: śvisate, bhraṃsate. dhvensu is in the sense of going: bhraṃsate. śranbhu is in the sense of breathing out: biśrambhate. These are ātmanepada forms. danśa is in the sense of biting with the fangs. ṣanja is in the sense of clinging. These take parasmaipada forms. ṣvañja is in the sense of embracing. It takes ātmanepada forms. ranja is in the sense of dyeing. It takes the forms of both. By the rule "of dañji, sanji, ṣvañci and ranji, before an," the nasal is elided: daśati, sajati, svajate. By the rule "also of sthā, seni, sedtati, sica, sanja and ṣvañja, in the reduplication and elsewhere," ṣa appears: abhyiṣvajate, anuṣvejate, pariṣvajite, rajati, rajata.

ṇṛkṣa is in the sense of kissing. It takes parasmaipada forms: nikṣati. There, for nisi, nikṣi and ninba, ṇa is optional: praṇikṣati, praṇikṣati.

Those with the marker it shall now be stated. ṇidi is in the sense of reviling. The letter i serves the particular purpose of the rule "of those without the marker it, no guṇa." By this very thing, the letter na is an augment. Anusvāra and the class-final occur: nindati, praṇindati, pranindati. bāchi is in the sense of desiring: bāñchati. These take parasmaipada forms.

sbadi is in the sense of moving slightly: spyandate, praspandate, parisvandate. labi is in the sense of hanging down: lambate, pralambate, alambate. khadi is in the senses of speaking clearly and of praising: bandatai, apibandate. śaki is in the sense of doubt: śaṅkate, īśvaṅgate. mathi and kathi are in the sense of grief: manthate, utkanthate. jabha and jṛbhi are in the sense of the body's slackening. By the rule "of radhi and jabha, before a vowel," the letter na is an augment: jambhate, jṛmbhate. These are ātmanepada forms.

ṣṭhibu and kību are in the sense of expelling. It does not become sa under the rule "sa in place of ṣa at the beginning of a root," because of the teaching "an of ṣṭhibu, klamu and ācama." klamu is in the sense of weariness. camu, chamu, jhamu and jimu are in the sense of eating. By the rule "of ṣṭhibu, klamu and ācama, before an," lengthening occurs: ṣṭhibati, niṣṭhabati, klāmati, ācamati. kramu is in the sense of stepping. By the rule "of krama, in the parasmaipada," lengthening occurs: krāmati, saṃkrāmati, upakrāmati. By the rule "optionally, when there is no prefix," the ātmanepada endings occur: krāmaste.

gamḷ is in the sense of going. iṣu is in the sense of wishing. yamu is in the sense of cessation. By the rule "cha for gam, iṣu and yam," cha appears. By the rule "after a vowel, the letter cha is doubled," there are two chas. By the rule "before an unvoiced consonant, the first," the letter ca appears: gacchati. By the rule beginning "after si: gamba, ṛcchi, pṛcchi," the ātmanepada endings occur: saṅgacchate, icchati, yacchati. By the rule "after āṅ, yam and hana too, when their object is a limb of one's own," the ātmanepada endings occur: āyacchate.

dheṭa and pā are in the sense of drinking. By the rule "biba for pa," it is changed to piba. From this it is changed into a form ending in a. Then comes a, and the procedure for the letters in junction. Therefore guṇa does not occur, because it is the penultimate. By the force of the statement "or of one ending in a consonant," guṇa does not occur: bibati, pibataḥ, bibanti. ghrati is in the sense of taking in. By the rule "jighrā for ghra," it is changed to jighra: jighrataḥ, jighrataḥ, jighranti. dhmā is in the senses of sound and of kindling fire. By the rule "dhama for dhā," it is changed to dhama: dhamati, dhamatiḥ, dhamanti, bidhamāti.

ṣṭhe is in the sense of ceasing to go. Sa replaces the root-initial ṣa. By the principle "when the cause is absent, what depends on the cause is absent too," tha replaces ṭha. By the rule "tiṣṭha for sthā," it is changed to tiṣṭha: tiṣṭhati, tiṣṭhataḥ, tiṣṭhanti. By the rule "sthā after sam, ava, pra and vi," the ātmanepada endings occur: saṃtiṣṭhate, avatiṣṭhate, pratiṣṭhate, bitiṣṭhate.

mnā is in the sense of repeated practice. By the rule "mana for mnā," it is changed to mana: manati. dāna is in the sense of giving. The letter ṇā serves the particular purpose of the rule "yaccha for dāna." By the rule "yaccha for dāṇa," it is changed to yaccha: yacchati, ti, prayacchati.

dṛśir is in the sense of seeing. The letter i and the repha serve the particular purpose of the rule "optionally, after those with the marker ir." By the rule "baśya for dṛśi," it is changed to baśya: paśyati. By the rule beginning "after sam: gam, ṛccha, pṛcchi," the ātmanepada endings occur: saṃbaśyate. ṛ is also in the sense of obtaining. By the rule "ṛccha for artti," it is changed to riccha: ricchāti. By the rule beginning "after sam: gami," the ātmanepada endings occur: samṛcchati.

sṛ is in the sense of going. By the rule "dhava for siddhi," it is changed to dhava; this is held to be in the sense of going swiftly: dhavati. Otherwise: sarti, anusarti, saṃsarati, pratisarati, abhisarti. ṣadḷ is in the sense of decaying. By the rule "of śadi, in ān," the ātmanepada endings occur. By the rule "śīya for śada," it is changed to śīya: śīyate. ṣadḷ is in the senses of moving about, of going, and of despising. By the rule "sida for sadi," it is changed to sāda: sāditi, āpasāditi, prasīdate. By the rule "of sadī, when not after prati," ṣi appears: niṣīdani, biṣīdati, pāriṣīdati. After prati it does not change: pratisīdati, pariṣīdati. After prati it does not change: pratisīdati. These are parasmaipada forms.

gubū is in the sense of protecting. tapa and dhūpa are in the sense of tormenting. liśa and biccha are in the sense of going. paṇa is in the sense of trading, and also of praising; and so is bana. By the rule "āya after gupū, dhūpa, bicchi, paṇi and pani," the suffix āya is added. Guṇa of the light penultimate occurs. By the rule "these are roots," they receive the name root. Then an, and a, and the procedure for the letters in junction.

gopāyaste, dhūpayati, bacchayati, panāyati, panāyate. Paṇī and pani take the ātmanepada forms. Some say: "Because it goes together with pani, āya is to be formed from paṇi only in the sense of praising." Here, however, āya is to be formed from paṇi in the sense of trading.

Ṛta is a root that arises from the sūtra. It applies in the sense of compassion. By the rule "after ṛti, ṇīyaṅ is also to be stated," the suffix ṇīyaṅ is added. The letter ṇa serves the particular purpose of the rule "not for those with the marker ṇa and for cakrīyita," and therefore guṇa does not occur: ṛtīyate.

kamu is in the sense of desiring. By the rule "after kami, the kārita suffix eni," the suffix iniṅ is added. The letter ṅa is for the sake of the ātmanepada forms. The letter i is for the sake of pronunciation. The letter na serves the particular purpose of the rule "before in, ic and aṭ, a penultimate a is lengthened, and the vṛddhi of the nāmins." Kāmi; then an; guṇa occurs; it is changed to ay: kāmayate. With this, the roots of the bhū class and the rest, which take the general vikaraṇa an, are complete.

Ad and the rest shall now be stated. at and psā are in the sense of eating. The endings are those of the vartamānā. Then an. By the rule "after ad and the rest, the vikaraṇa is lost," an is lost. By the rule "before unvoiced sounds, the first, for those that are not ṣiṭ," the letter da becomes ta; and by the rule "a consonant without a vowel is drawn to the following letter," it passes over to the following one: atti, attaḥ, adanti, atsi, atthaḥ, attha, admi, adba, admaḥ. psā: psārti. By the rule "with a similar vowel it becomes long, and what follows is elided," what follows the long vowel is elided: praṇipsāti.

śas is in the sense of sleeping. An is lost: sasti, sastaḥ, sasanti. baśa is in the sense of being lovely. By the rule "of cha and śa, ṣa," ṣa appears. By the rule "after ṣa and the ṭa class, the ṭa class in place of the ta class," the ṭa class replaces the letter ta: biṣṭi. By the rule "also in the dual and the plural, in the parasmaipada," there is no guṇa. By the rule "of grahi, jya, bayi, byadhi, biṣṭa, byaci, pracchi, praṣchi and bhrasji, where there is no guṇa," saṃprasāraṇa occurs: the letter u replaces the letter pa: uṣṭaḥ, uṣanti. Ṣa appears. By the rule "ka for ṣa and dha before sa," ka replaces ṣa, and because of the conditioning factor, ṣa appears: pakṣi, uṣṭhaḥ, uṣṭha, baṣmi, uṣbaḥ.

hana is in the senses of harming and of going. An is lost. By the rule "anusvāra for ma and na before a dhuṭ," anusvāra replaces the letter na. By the rule "before a class consonant, the class-final," the letter na replaces the anusvāra: handi. By the rule "the consonants other than the semivowels and the nasals are dhuṭ," they receive the name dhuṭ. By the rule "of handi before a dhuṭ, in the sārvadhātuka," the letter na is elided: hata. By the rule "of gam, han, jan, khan and ghas, the penultimate before a vowel-initial ending other than aṇ, where there is no guṇa," the penultimate a is elided. By the rule "also when the penultimate is deleted," gha replaces ha: ghnandi, hansi, hathaḥ, hatha, hanmi, hanvaḥ, hanmaḥ, nihanti, praṇihandi, yrahandi. By the rule "of hanati preceded by pra, optionally before pa and ma," na appears: prahammi, prahaṇvaḥpra, prahaṭmaḥ, prahanmi, prahasvaḥ, prahanmaḥī.

With ī before it: by the rule "after āṅ, am and han too, when their object is a limb of one's own," the ātmanepada endings occur. By the rule "for all, in the sārvadhātuka ātmanepada, except the last of the pañcamī," there is no guṇa. Na is elided: āhate. When the penultimate is deleted, gha also appears: āghāte. By the rule "after what is not a, in the ātmanepada," na is elided: āghāte, āhase, āghāthe, āhadhve, āghāe, āhanmahe, āhanmahe.

dyu is in the sense of advancing. yu is in the sense of mixing. ṇu is in the sense of praising. kṇu is in the sense of sharpening. ṣtu is in the sense of oozing. ṭu kṣu, ru and ku are in the sense of sound. ṣu is in the sense of begetting. An is lost. By the rule "vṛddhi of ut before a consonant-initial sārvadhātuka ending that has guṇa," vṛddhi occurs. If one asks, "What, again, is vṛddhi?": by the rule "ār and the following ones are also vṛddhi," āra, ai and au receive the name vṛddhi. By the rule "there, by place, the closest," ār stands in place of the letter ṛ, ai in place of the letter i, and au in place of the letter u: dyauti, dyatāḥ. By the rule "iya and uva for a root's final i and u before a vowel-initial ending," it is changed to uv: dyavanti, dyauṣi, dyuthaḥ, dyutha, dyaumi, dyuvaḥ, dyumaḥ. In the same way: auti. Na replaces ṇa: nauti. By the rule "nu in the sense of asking," the ātmanepada endings occur: ānute, avate, kṣṇauti. Sa replaces the root-initial ṣa. Because of the presence of the conditioning factor, ṇa appears: snauti, prasnauti, barisnauti, kṣoti, rauti, kauti, sauti.

iṇ is in the sense of going. The letter ṇa serves the particular purpose of the rule "ga for iṇa." An is lost. By the rule "in the singular forms, guṇa of a root ending in a nāmin and of a vikaraṇa": itaḥ. By the rule "also after in," ya appears: ante, eṣi, ithaḥ, itha, emi, ivaḥ, imaḥ. With uba before it: where there is guṇa, through the prohibition in the rule "not of iṇ and idhati," the letter a of the prefix is not elided. By the rule "before e, e; and also before the letter e," e replaces the letter a, and what follows is elided: upaiti, upaiṣi, upaimi. Where there is no guṇa, by the rule "the letter a with the letter i becomes e," e appears: upaitaḥ, uyanti, udeti.

ika is in the sense of remembering. The letter ka serves the particular purpose of the rule "of ika too, as of iṇ." It always has adhi before it. An is lost. Guṇa occurs. By the rule "of ika too, as of in," it is changed to ya: adhyeti, adhītaḥ, adhiyanti, adhīṣi, adhīthāḥ, adhyami, adhīvaḥ, adhīmaḥ.

bi is also in the senses of begetting, of being lovely, of abiding and of eating: beti, bitaḥ. By the rule beginning "a root's final i and u before a vowel-initial ending," it is changed to iya: biyanti, beṣi, bīthaḥ, bitha, bemi, bāvaḥ, bīmaḥ.

bha is in the sense of shining: bhāhi, bhātaḥ, bhandi, bhāsi, bhāthaḥ, bhātha, bhāmi, bhāvaḥ, bhāmāḥ, pratibhate. yā is in the sense of obtaining: yāti, yātaḥ, yanti, praṇibāti. bā is in the senses of going and of smell: bāti, bātiḥ, banti, praṇibāti. ṣṇa is in the sense of cutting: snāti, snātaḥ, snanti. śrā is in the sense of cooking: śrāti, śrātaḥ, śranti. drā is in the sense of going in a contemptible way: drāti, drataḥ, dranti. With ni before it: nidrāti, praṇidrātiḥ, praṇīdranti. pā is in the sense of protecting: pāti, pātaḥ, panti. rā and lā are in the sense of taking.

rāti, rāteḥ, ranti; lāti, lātaḥ, lanti. dāp is in the sense of cutting. The letter pa serves the particular purpose of the rule "dā and dhā, other than dāb, are called dā": dāte, dātaḥ, danti. khyā is in the sense of proclaiming: khyāte, khyātaḥ, khyanti. prā is in the sense of filling: prāti, prātaḥ, pranti. mā is in the sense of measuring: māti, mātaḥ, manti. brita: the group ends. These thirteen are bhā and the rest.

bid is in the sense of knowing. An is lost. By the rule "of a light nāmin as penultimate," guṇa occurs. By the rule "before unvoiced sounds, the first, for those that are not ṣiṭ," ta replaces da: bitti, bittaḥ, bidanti, betvi, betthaḥ, bittha, bidmi, bidbaḥ, bebmaḥ. As for the rule "āha for prū in the five, and likewise for pita in the nine": from the statement "aṭ and the rest are optionally made the endings in place of ti and the rest, in their order," aṭ and the rest are to be made the endings, according to their number, in the same way as the nine endings named parasmaipada, ti and the rest, that first arise after vid. In place of ti, aṭ; in place of tas, atus; in place of anti, us; in place of si, thal; in place of thas, athus; in place of tha, a; in place of mi, aṭ; in place of vas, va; in place of mas, ma: they are changed into these. The ṭa of aṭa serves the particular purpose of the rule "of a penultimate a." The la of thal serves the particular purpose of the rule "thal after one ending in ṛ." An is lost. Guṇa of the light penultimate occurs: beda, bedatuḥ, biduḥ. By the rule "before unvoiced sounds, the first, for those that are not ṣiṭ," the first appears: bettha, bidthuḥ, bida, bidpa, bidma.

With sam before it: by the rule "after sam: gam, ṛccha, praccha, spṛśu, bithi, artti and dṛśa," the ātmanepada endings occur: sambitte, sambidāte, sambidate. By the rule "optionally after vetti," ra optionally appears: sambitrate, sambitse, sambidvethe, sambidhve, sambide, sambidvahe, sambidvamahe.

as is in the sense of existing. An is lost: aste. By the rule "the first of asta," the letter a is elided: staḥ, santi. By the rule "of ati, before si," the letter sa is elided: asi, sthaḥ, stha, asmi, sbaḥ, smaḥ. With byati before it: by the rule "here too, optionally, where it is not in the sense of going, of harming, of sound, or of laughing," the ātmanepada endings occur: byatiste, byatisate, byatisate. There, by the rule "before se," because the letter e is what is meant, sa is elided: byatise, byati sāthe. By the rule "the fourths of the dhuṭas become the thirds," the letter da replaces the letter pa: byatidhve. Some say that it is elided, since stating dhve with the third makes no distinction. By the rule "it shall be stated before e," the letter ha replaces the letter sa: byatihe, byatisvahe, byatismahe.

mṛju is in the sense of cleansing. The letter u serves the particular purpose of the rule "svarati, sūti, sūyati, and also after those with the marker ūt." An is lost. The guṇa of the light nāmin as penultimate is ar. By the rule "mārja for mārjja," it is changed to marjji. The mention of i is a conversion together with the case ending, not a vowel. By the rule "ṣa for bhrija and the rest," the letter śa replaces the letter ja. By the rule "after ṣa and the ṭa class, the ṭa class in place of the ta class," the letter ṭa appears: mākṣi, mṛṣṭaḥ. There, as the commentary explains, "it shall be stated as optional before a vowel without guṇa," and so it is changed to mīrjja: mārjjinda, mṛjanti. By the rule "ka for ṣa and ḍha before sa," the letter ka replaces the letter ṣa: mārkṣi, mṛṣṭhaḥ, mṛṣṭha, mārjmi, mṛjvaḥ, mṛjmaḥ.

baca is in the sense of speaking. An is lost. By the rule "ki for the ca class before a dissimilar letter," ki appears. This serves the particular purpose of the statement "the mention of i is a conversion together with the case ending, not a vowel": bakti, bagtaḥ, bacinta. Others, however, all say that vaci is not to be used in the plural of the first person of the parasmaipada vartamānā: bakṣi, bakthaḥ, baktha, bacmi, bacveḥ, bacmaḥ.

Rud and the rest shall now be stated. rudir is in the sense of shedding tears. ñiṣvaba is in the sense of sleeping. ṣaśvasa is in the sense of the breath of life, and so is ana. jakṣa is in the senses of eating and of laughing. An is lost. From the general rule "the augment iṭ at the beginning of a non-sārvadhātuka ending that begins with a consonant other than one beginning with a," and by the rule "after tud and the rest, in the sārvadhātuka," the augment iṭ is added. The letter ṭa serves the particular purpose of the rule "after grahi, lengthening of iṭ when it is not parokṣā." Guṇa of the light penultimate occurs: riditi, rudita, rudanti, rodiṣi, ruditha, ruditha, rudimi, rudivaḥ, rudimaḥ. In an auspicious sense, ṇañ is to be prefixed. Then the letter ña serves the particular purpose of the rule "artha without nañ, when not before si, arthanti": nadodīti. svapitaḥ, svabanti. śvasiti, śvasitaḥ, śvasanti. anati, anitaḥ, antina. By the rule "because iṭ and the rest are mentioned, also at the end of aniti," ṇa replaces na: prāniti. jaṃkṣiti, jakṣataḥ. By the rule "jakṣa and the rest too," it has the name abhyasta, and so, by the rule "after an abhyasta, the na of anti is elided," the letter na is elided: jakṣati, jakṣiṣi, jakṣithaḥ, jakṣatha, jakṣimi, jakṣivaḥ, jakṣimaḥ. These are the five, ruṅ and the rest.

jāgi is in the sense of waking from sleep. An is lost. By the rule "of a vowel ending a nāmin and of a vikaraṇa," guṇa occurs: jāgardi, jāgrataḥ. As before, the letter na is elided. By the rule "ra for the letter ṛ," ra appears: jāgrati, jāgarṣi, jāgṛthaḥ, jagṛtha, jāgarmmi, jāgṛvaḥ, jāgṛmaḥ. daridrā is in the sense of faring badly. Daridrā, jāgṝ and dīdhī: these are, in any case, roots with a single vowel. For roots ending in āt, the marker too is to be established: dāridrāti. By the rule "i for daridrāti," the letter i appears: daritītaḥ. By the rule "the ā of the abhyastas," the letter ā is elided: daridrāti, daridrāsi, daridrīthaḥ, daridrītha, daridrīmi, daridrīvaḥ, daridrīmaḥ.

cakāpri is in the sense of setting ablaze: cakāsti, cakāstiḥ, cakāsati, cakāssi, cakīsthaḥ, cakāstha, cakāsmi, cakāsbaḥ, cakāsmāḥ. śasuḥ is in the sense of instructing: śasti. By the rule "it for the penultimate of śasi before aṇ and consonants," i replaces the letter ā. By the rule "also of śāsi, vasi and ghasi," ṣa appears. After ṣa, the ṭa class appears: śithāḥ, śāsati, śāssi, śīṣṭhaḥ, śīṣṭha, ṣīsmi, śīṣṭhaḥ, śīṣmaḥ. bṛt: the group ends. These are the five, jekṣā and the rest. These are the explanations of the parasmaipada.

cakṣiṅ is in the sense of clear speech. The letter ṅa signifies the ātmanepada endings. The letter i serves to distinguish it, for the rule "khyañ for cakṣi." an is deleted. By the rule "also at the end, of s and k at the beginning of a cluster," the letter ka is elided. After ṣa, the ṭa class appears: āceṣṭe, ācakṣāta, ācakṣate. The letter ka is elided. By the rule "ka for ṣa and dha before sa," ka appears. By the rule "after a conditioning sound, ṣa replaces sa standing in a suffix, a modification or an augment," ṣa appears: ācakṣe, ācakṣātha. The letter ka is elided. By the rule "after ṣa, the ṭa class," ḍha replaces dha. By the rule "the third of the dhuṭ letters," ṣa becomes ḍa: ācaḍhve, ācakṣe, ācakṣvahe, ācakṣmahe.

īr is in the sense of going, and also of stirring. an is deleted: irtte, īrāte, īrate, īraṣe, īrātha, īrdhe, īre, īrbahe, īrmmahe. With sam prefixed: samīrtte. Because it stands in the middle of a word, the repha does not become visarga.

īḍa is in the sense of praising. an is deleted. The ṭa class appears. By the rule "before the voiceless, the first of those that are not sibilants," ḍa replaces the letter ṭa: īḍe, īḍāte, īḍāti. By the rule "also before sa and dhva, of īḍa and jana," there is the augment īṭ. ṣa appears after i: īḍiṣe, īḍāthe. There is the augment iṭ: iḍidhe, īḍi, īḍahe, āḍmahe.

īṣa is in the sense of lordship. By the rule "also of cha and śa," ṣa appears, and also the ṭa class: īṣṭe, biṣātai, īśāte. By the rule "of īśa, before sa," there is the augment īṭ: īśiṣe, īśāthe. Because the rule reads "also before sa and dhva, of īḍa and jana," the word "also" draws in īśa. Therefore for īśa too iṭ comes in when dhve follows: īśidhve, īśi, īśvahe, īśmahe.

āsa is in the sense of extolling. an is deleted: āste, āsāti, āste, āsse, āsāthe. By the rule "before the fourths, the third of the dhuṭ letters," da replaces the letter sa. Since, for letters joined with those of their own class, there is no separate distinction in pronunciation between one letter and more than one, there is no fault even in sa becoming the third. Some say it is elided: ādhve, āse, āsvahe, āsmahe, ubāste, ubhubāste, udāte, ānmate, adhyate, svaste.

āṅ-śāsu is in the sense of wishing: āśāste, āśāsāste, āśāsate, āśāsse, āśāsāthe. As before, sa becomes the third: āśādhve. Some say it is elided: āśāse, āśāshe, āśāsmahe.

vasa is in the sense of covering over: baste, basāhe, basate, basse, basāthe, basadhve, base, basvahe, basmahe.

kasi is in the sense of going and of sharpening. Because it has i as its indicatory letter, there is the augment na: kaṃste, kaṃsāte, kaṃsate, kaṃsse, kansāte. Before a class consonant, the final of that class appears: na replaces the anusvāra: kandhe, kaṃse, kaṃsvahe, kaṃsmahe.

ṇisi is in the sense of kissing. By the rule "na for ṇa," na replaces the letter ṇa: nīṃste, nīṃsāte, niṃsate, niṃsse, niṃsāthe, niṃddhva, niṃsa, niṃsvahe, niṃsmahe. With pra prefixed: there, by the rule "optionally also of nisi, nikṣi and nanda," ṇa appears after r: praniṃste, briniṃste.

ṇiji is in the sense of purifying. an is deleted. By the rule "ki for the ca class before a letter that is not homogeneous," ka appears. Then the anusvāra and the class final: nidke, niñjāte, niñjāte. ki appears. After the conditioning sound, ṣa appears: nidkṣe, niñjathe, nidghve, niñje, niñjvate, niñjmahe.

śiji is in the sense of an indistinct sound: śidkte, śiñjāte, śiñjate.

pṛjī is in the sense of abandoning: prikte, pṛjāte, pṛjate, pṛske, pṛjātha, pṛghve, pṛja, pṛjvahe, pṛjmahe.

pṛcī is in the sense of joining together: pṛkte, saṃpṛkte.

ṣūd is in the sense of a living creature giving birth from the womb. an is deleted. By the rule "for the sārvadhātuka ātmanepada endings other than the latter ones of the pañcamī," there is no guṇa: sūte. By the rule "before a vowel, of what ends in i or u," u is changed to va: subāte, sūbate, sūṣe, sūbāthe, sūdhve, sube, sūbahe, sumahe, prasūte.

śliṅ is in the sense of lying down. Although the absence of guṇa would follow from the rule "for the sārvadhātuka ātmanepada endings other than the latter ones of the pañcamī," guṇa appears by the rule "of śiṅ, in all sārvadhātuka endings": śete, śayāte. By the rule "after śete, ri at the beginning of ante," the repha appears: śerate, śeṣe, śayāthe, śedhve, śeye, śepahe, śemahe.

īṅ is in the sense of reciting, always with adhi prefixed. an is deleted. By the rule "before a homogeneous letter it becomes long, and the following one is elided": adhīte. By the rule "before a vowel, of a root ending in i or u," i is changed to iya. By the rule beginning "before a homogeneous letter, long," it is lengthened: adhīyāte, ādhīyāt, adhīṣe, adhīyāthe, adhīdhve, adhīye, adhībahe, adhīmahe.

dīdhīṅ is in the sense of shining and of playing. bibīṅ has the same sense. Some say these belong to metrical (Vedic) usage. With āṅ prefixed: ādīdhīte. By the rule "ya for e not preceded by a cluster, in a word of more than one syllable," ya appears: īdīdhyāte, adīdhyate, ābebīte, abebyate.

hnuṅ is in the sense of removing: hnute, hnubāte, hnubahe, nihnute, nihnubāte, ābahnute. These are the ātmanepada forms.

dviṣa is in the sense of displeasure. an is deleted. In the singular, guṇa of a light penultimate. After ṣa, the ṭa class appears: dviṣṭi, dviṣaḥ, dviṣanti. By the rule "ka for ṣa and ḍha before sa," ka appears: dvakṣi, dviṣthaḥ, dviṣtha, dviṣmi, dviṣvaḥ, dviṣmaḥ, dviṣṭe, dviṣāṭe, dviṣāthe, dvikṣe, dviṣahe. After ṣa, the ṭa class appears: ḍha replaces the letter dha. The third of the dhuṭ letters appears: ḍa replaces ṣa: dviḍhbhe, dveṣe, dviṣahe, dviṣmahe.

duha is in the sense of milking. an is deleted. Guṇa of a light penultimate. By the rule "gha for an initial," gha replaces the letter ha. By the rule "after gha, ḍha, dha and bha, except after dhā, dha replaces ta and tha," dha appears. The third of the dhuṭ letters appears: ga replaces gha: dobbdhi, dubdhaḥ, duhanti. By the rule "before sa and dhva, the fourth replaces the third of a root whose initial is so and which ends in gha, ḍha, dha or bha," dha replaces the letter da.

By the rule "before the voiceless, the first of those that are not sibilants," ka replaces gha. After the conditioning sound, ṣa appears: dhakṣi, dugdha, dundhaḥ, dehmi, duhvaḥ, duhmaḥ, dugdhe, duhāte, dhukṣi, duhāthe, dugdhve, duhe, duhvahe, duhāhe.

diha is in the sense of accumulating: digdhiḥ, digdhiḥ, dihanti, dhikṣi, digdhe, digdhe, dihmi, dihāḥ, dihmaḥ, degkṣi, dihāte, dehante, dhikṣe, dihāthe, dighve, dihvahe, dihmahe, ubadegdhi. With pra and ṇi prefixed: praṇidegdhe.

liha is in the sense of tasting. an is deleted. In the singular, guṇa of a light penultimate. By the rule "dha for ha," dha replaces the letter ha. By the rule "after gha, ḍha, dha and bha, except after dhā, dha replaces ta and tha," dha replaces ta and tha. By the rule "after ṣa, the ṭa class," ḍha replaces dha. By the rule "before ḍha, ḍha is elided, and the penultimate is also lengthened," ḍha is elided. Just as the elision of ḍha occurs in forms without guṇa, so does the lengthening of the penultimate: ledhi, līdhaḥ, līhanti. ḍha replaces ha. By the rule "ka for ṣa and ḍha before sa," ka replaces dha. After the conditioning sound, ṣa appears: lekṣa, līḍhaḥ, līḍha, lihmi, lihvaḥ, lihmaḥ, līdhe, lihāte, lihate, likṣe, lihāthe, liḍhve, lihe, lihvahe, lihmaho.

ūṇuña is in the sense of covering over. an is deleted. There is guṇa, as in uṇṇoti. Guṇa comes by the option stated for sārvadhātuka endings beginning with a consonant that take guṇa. Vṛddhi comes by the rule beginning "in one view, vṛddhi of ut before an initial consonant." In the singular endings, guṇa, as an exception to vṛddhi, is optional: ūrṇṇoti, ūrṇṇutaḥ, ūrṇṇubanti, ūrṇṇoṣi, ūrṇṇuthaḥ, ūrṇṇutha, ūrṇṇomi, ūrṇṇubaḥ, ūrṇṇumaḥ. When there is vṛddhi: ūrṇṇoti, ūrṇṇauṣi, ūrṇṇaumi. ūrṇṇute, ūrṇṇubāte, ūrṇṇubate, ūrṇṇubaṣe, ūrṇṇubāthe, ūrṇṇudhve, ūrṇṇube, ūrṇṇubahe, ūrṇṇumahe. So it is. It is always preceded by pra. By the rule "a before u," for the sound of pra, ā replaces the letter a, and the following one is elided: prārṇṇoti, prārṇṇauti, prāṇute.

ṣṭuña is in the sense of praising. There is vṛddhi of ut: stauti, studthastu, bante, staṣi, stuthaḥ, stutha, stomi, stubaḥ, stumaḥ, stute, stubāte, stubate, stuṣe, stubāthe, studhve, stuge, stubahe, stumahe. With abhi prefixed: by the rule "after a prefix, for sunoti, subati, syati, stoti and staubhati, also before aṭ and elsewhere," ṣa appears. After ṣa, the ṭa class: abhiṣḍaute, adhiṣṭutaḥ, abhiṣṭuphanti, abhiṣṭute, pariṣṭauti, pariṣṭuti.

bruña is in the sense of clear speech. an is deleted. These are the parasmaipada endings. In the singular endings, by the rule "after bru, iṭ for the first endings," there is the augment īṭ. The letter ṭa serves to distinguish it, for the rule "also iṭ, after iṭ." Guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel and of the vikaraṇas. By the rule "av for o," it is changed to av: prabāti, brutaḥ, brubanti, brabīṣī, brūthaḥ, brūtha, brabime, brubaḥ, brūmaḥ.

From the wording of the rule "After brū, for the first five, and likewise after vid, for the nine, aṭ and the rest are to be made as particles, for ti and the rest, in their order," it follows that after brū, in place of the endings named parasmaipada, ti and the rest, there are the five, aṭ and the rest, in their numbered order. In place of these five, ti, taḥ, anti, si and thas, these five, aṭ, atus, us, thal and athus, are put by particle formation, optionally. And by this special formation brū is changed to āha: āha, āhatu, āhuḥ. For this very reason, by the particle formation, before thal, ta replaces the letter ha: āttha, āhathuḥ, brūtha, brabīmaṃ, brūbaḥ, brūmaḥ, brūte, brubāte, brūbate. These are the forms of both voices.

At the end of ad and the rest, one should state juhoti and the rest, which take guṇa.

hu is in the sense of giving. an is deleted. By the rule "in the sārvadhātuka endings of juhoti and the rest," it is reduplicated, and by the rule "the former is the abhyāsa," it has the name abhyāsa. By the rule "ja for ha," ja replaces the letter ha of the abhyāsa. By the rule "not always, in an operation on what has a prior name, by this," there is no vṛddhi of ut. In the singular endings, guṇa comes by the rule "guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel and of the vikaraṇas": juhoti. The vṛddhi forms are excluded by the specific mention "of juhoti." By the rule "also in the dual and plural, in the parasmaipada," there is no guṇa: juhutaḥ. By the rule "both are abhyasta," it has the name abhyasta. By the rule "after an abhyasta, na of anti is elided," the letter na is elided. Where the change to uv would follow, va alone should be established by the rule "in the sārvadhātuka endings of juhoti": juhvati, juhoṣi, juhutha, juhomi, juhobaḥ, juhumaḥ.

ñibhī is in the sense of fear. ñi is the indicatory letter. ñi as an indicatory letter serves to distinguish it, for the rule "kta, in the senses of wishing, mind and worship." an is deleted. It is reduplicated. By the rule "short," it is shortened. By the rule "the first and third for the second and fourth," ba replaces the letter bha of the abhyāsa. Guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel: bibheti. By the rule "for bhī, it is to be stated optionally," ī appears, by option, before sārvadhātuka endings beginning with a consonant that take no guṇa: bibhītaḥ. By the rule "ya for the letter i not preceded by a cluster, in a word of more than one syllable," ya appears: bibhyeti, bibheṣiḥ, bibhithaḥ, bibhitha, bibhimi, bibhibaḥ, bibhābaḥ, bibhimaḥ, bibhīmaḥ.

hrī is in the sense of shame. an is deleted. It is reduplicated. By the rule "the initial consonant of the abhyāsa is to be left remaining," the meaning is that the initial consonant of the abhyāsa is to be left remaining, that is, preserved, and not elided. It is shortened. Guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel: jihreti, jihvītiḥ. From the wording "not preceded by a cluster," ya does not appear where a cluster precedes. It is changed to iy: jihviyati, jihriṣi, jihrīthaḥ, jihritha, jihrimi, jihribiḥ, jihrimaḥ.

pṛ is in the sense of protecting and of filling. an is deleted. It is reduplicated.

By the rule "a for ṛ," the letter ṛ of the abhyāsa becomes ā. By the rule "also of arti and piparti," i replaces the letter a. Guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel: pibartti, pipṛtaḥ, biprati, biparṣi, bipṛthaḥ, bipṛtha, biparmmi, biphṛbaḥ, bipṛmiḥ. Some think it ends in a long vowel, as pṝ. Yet even for those who hold this, there is no difference where there is guṇa. Elsewhere, by the rule "ur also for a labial penultimate," it is changed to ur. By the rule "long, before a consonant, for the r and v of a nāmin, except in kur and chur," it is lengthened: pipūrttaḥ, piburati, pipari, pipūrthaḥ, bipurtha, piburmmi, bipurbbaḥ, bipurmmaḥ.

ohāka is in the sense of abandoning. The letter ka serves to distinguish it, for the rule "of ohā and praha, when not padhi." The o serves to distinguish it, for the rule "after lū and the rest, and after what has o as its indicatory letter." ja replaces the letter ha of the abhyāsa: jahati. By the rule "before an initial consonant, except dā, of both," the letter i appears: jihitaḥ. As an exception to the general absence of guṇa, by the rule "for jahāti, i is to be stated optionally before sārvadhātuka endings beginning with a consonant," ī appears optionally for jahāti: jahitaḥ, jihītaḥ. By the rule "a of abhyastas," the letter ā is elided: jahati, jahāsi, jahithe, jahīthaḥ, jahitha, jahītha, jahāmi, jahibaḥ, jahībaḥ, jahimaḥ, jahīmaḥ.

ghri is in the sense of causing change and of shining. a for ṛ. By the rule "the ca class for the ka class," the ka class of the abhyāsa becomes the ca class: jaghartti, jaghriti, jighiti. As for the others, it is generally said that they are to be expressed according to usage in ti and the rest.

hri is in the sense of reducing to ash: jaharti, jahritaḥ, jahiti.

ṛ and sṛ are in the sense of going. an is deleted. It is reduplicated. a for ṛ: irtti. By the rule "also of bibasti," ī appears. By the rule "before a dissimilar letter, of the abhyāsa," it is changed to iy. Guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel: iyartti. By the rule "also in the dual and plural, in the parasmaipada," there is no guṇa: iyṛtaḥ. By the rule "ra for ṛ," ra appears: iyarti, iyarśi, iyrithaḥ, iyṛtha, iyrami, iyribaḥ, iyrimaḥ.

sri is in the sense of going: sasartti, sasṛtaḥ, sasrata.

bhasa is in the sense of reproaching and of shining: babhate, babhastaḥ, babhasati.

ki and kita are in the sense of knowing. It is reduplicated. Guṇa of the light penultimate of the root: ciketa, cikati. By the rule beginning "ya for the letter i not preceded by a cluster," ya appears: cekyati. By the rule "the ca class for the ka class," ca replaces ka of the abhyāsa. Guṇa of the root: cikirtti, cikittiḥ, cikitati, ciketsi, cikatthaḥ, cikattha, cikitmi, cikitvaḥ, cikitmaḥ.

tura is in the sense of speed: tutortti, tutūrttaḥ, tuturati.

dhiṣa is in the sense of sound: didheṣṭi, didhiṣṭaḥ, didhiṣati.

dhana is in the sense of grain: didhanti, didhantaḥ, dadhanti.

jana is in the sense of producing: jajanti, jajantaḥ. By the rule beginning "gam, han, jan," the a of the penultimate is elided. By the rule "before a conjunction with the ca and ṭa classes, the ca and ṭa classes for the ta class," ña replaces the letter na: jajñati. With vyati prefixed: by the rule "optionally, not restricted, in the senses of going, harming, sound and laughing," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, the ātmanepada endings apply: byatijajanta, byatijajate, byatijajñate. By the rule "also before sa and dhva, of īḍ and jan," there is the augment iṭ: byatijajñaṣe, byatijajñāṣe, byatijajñāthe, byatijajñidhve, byatijajñe, byatijajanvate, byatijajanmate. These are the parasmaipada forms.

ṇijir is in the sense of cleansing and of nourishing. vijar is in the sense of separation. viṣḷ is in the sense of pervading. an is deleted. It is reduplicated. By the rule "guṇa in the sārvadhātuka endings of niji, vaji and viṣi," there is guṇa of the letter i of the abhyāsa in all forms, that is, before what follows the root. In the singular, guṇa of a light penultimate. By the rule "ki for the ca class before a letter that is not homogeneous," ki appears: nenekti, neniktaḥ, nenejati, nenikṣi, nenikṣaḥ, neniktha, nenijmiḥ, nenijaḥ, nenijmaḥ, nenikṣe, nenijāte, nenijate, nenikṣi, nenijaithe, nenighve, nenije, nenijvehe, nenijmahe. bebekti, bebektaḥ, bebījāti, bebakṣi, bebikte, bebījate, bebijati. bebiṣṭi, bebiṣṭaḥ, bebiṣate, bebiṣa, mepīṣate, bebiṣate.

ḍudāña is in the sense of giving. an is deleted. The vowel of the abhyāsa is shortened: dādāti. By the rule "a of abhyastas," the letter ā is elided. Before the voiceless, the first of those that are not sibilants appears: dattaḥ, dadāti, dadāsi, dhatthaḥ, dattha, dadāmi, dadvaḥ, dadmaḥ, datte, dadāte, dadāete, dvatse, dadāthe, daddhva, dede, dadvaha, dadhmahe. By the rule beginning "na after a prefix," ṇa appears: praṇidadhāti, praṇidhatte. With ti and ad prefixed: by the rule "after āṅ, dāñ, when not in the sense of opening oneself," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, the ātmanepada endings apply: ādatte, āddāte, ādate.

ḍudhāña and ḍubhṛña are in the sense of holding and of nourishing. an is deleted. It is reduplicated. The abhyāsa is shortened. By the rule "the first and third for the second and fourth," da replaces dhā: dadhāti. By the rule "of dadhāti, before ta and tha," dha replaces the letter da: dhattaḥ, dadhāti, dadhāsi, dhatthaḥ, dhattha, dadhāmi, dadhvaḥ, dadhamaḥ, dhatte, dadhāte, dhatsa, dadhāthe. By the rule "the third for the fourths of the dhuṭ letters," the letter da replaces dhā: dadha, dadho, dadhvahe, dadhmahe, bidadhāti, bidhatte, paridadhāte, paridhadte, abidadhāti, abidhatte, saṃdadhati, saṃdhatte, praṇidadhāti, praṇidhatte.

ḍubhṛña is in the sense of holding and of nourishing. an is deleted. It is reduplicated. a replaces the letter ṛ of the abhyāsa. By the rule "i of bhṛñ, hāṅ and māṅ," i replaces the letter a. By the rule "the first and third for the second and fourth," ba replaces bha. In the singular endings, guṇa of roots ending in a nāmin vowel: bibhatti, bibhitaḥ. By the rule "ra for ṛ," ra appears: bibhrati, pibhṛ, bibhāte. These are the forms of both voices.

mā is in the sense of measuring, and also of sound.

ohā is in the sense of going. As before, i appears in the abhyāsa.

By the rule "ī in place of ā, before an initial consonant, except dā, of both," ī replaces the root's ā: mimāte, mimāte. By the rule "a of abhyastas," the letter ā is elided: mimāte, mimīṣe, mimāthe, mimīdhe, mimi, mimībahe, mimīmahe, pramimāte, praṇimimīte. For ohā: jihīta, jihāte, jihīṣe, jihāthe, jetādhve, jihe, jihībahe, jihīmahe. These are the ātmanepada forms. "These are the twenty-four, juhoti and the rest": with this, the ad class and the rest, in which the vikaraṇa is deleted, are complete.

Now div and the rest are to be stated. divu is in the senses of playing, wishing to dedicate, transaction, loveliness, praising, beauty and going. Where an would follow, yan is to be established by the rule "yan after div and the rest." The letter na serves to distinguish it, for the rule "of e before yan." Because of the restriction "and before a vikaraṇa, before an," there is no guṇa of the light penultimate. The penultimate before r and v is long: dībyati, dībyataḥ, dībyanti, dībyasi, dībyathaḥ, dībyatha, dībyāmi, dībyapāḥ, dībyāmaḥ.

ṣibu is in the sense of sewing thread: sībyati, sībyataḥ, sībyanti. By the rule "after pari, ni and vi, for seva, sita, saya, sibu, saha, suṭ, stu and svañja," ṣa appears: pariṣībyati, niṣībyati, bāṣibyati.

śribu is in the sense of going and of drying: śrībyati. ṣṭhibu and kṣibu are in the sense of casting out: ṣṭhibyate, kṣibyati. ṣṇusa is in the sense of eating: snusyati. kṇusu and kṣusu are in the sense of forceful placing and of shining: kṇusyati. nṛtī is in the sense of moving the body: nṛtyati.

trasī is in the sense of dismay. Because it belongs to div and the rest, yan would always follow; but by the rule "also after bhrāsa, bhrāsa, bhrāmu, kramu, tasri, truṭi, leṣi, yasi and saṃyasi," the suffix yan is optional: trasyati. In one view, an is the vikaraṇa for the agent: drasati.

kutha is in the sense of putrefying: kuṣyati. yutha is in the sense of harming: yuthyati. gudha is in the sense of encircling: gubhyati. kṣipa is in the sense of driving away: kṣibyati. puṣpa is in the sense of blossoming: puṣpyati. tima, ṣṭim and ṣṭima are in the sense of becoming fresh: timyati, stimyati, stimyati. brīḍya is in the sense of disputing: bṝḍyati. By the rule "ḍa and la are one," it is optionally la: brīlyati. iṣu is in the sense of going. With pra prefixed: priṣyati, anviṣyati. ṣaha and ṣuha are in the sense of being able: sahyate, suhyate. jṝṣa and jhṛṣa are in the sense of the decline of youth. By the rule "for what ends in ṛt, when there is no guṇa," ir appears. The penultimate before r and p is long: jreryati, dhīryati.

śo is in the sense of making thin. By the rule "of o before yan," the letter o is elided: śyāti, niśyati. che is in the sense of cutting: chyati. ṣo is in the sense of the act of ending: ṣosyati, anusyati. do is in the sense of destroying: dyati, abadyati, praṇityati.

rādha and sādha are in the sense of complete accomplishment. Since radhi applies both with and without an object, after radhi yan becomes the suffix: rādhyati, sādhyati. Otherwise it is like su and the rest: rādhoti. In the sense of growth, this one belongs to div and the rest. Otherwise, from the wording "having div first," this indication of aṣa is intended.

vyadha is in the sense of striking. By the rule "when there is no guṇa, of grahi, jyā, vayi, vyadhi, vaṣṭi, vyaci, pracchi, praśchi and bhvasji," in samprasāraṇa the letter i stands in place of the letter a. Because of the prohibition "not in samprasāraṇa," it does not become samprasāraṇa again: bidhyati.

puṣa is in the sense of nourishing: puṣyoti. śuṣo is in the sense of drying: śuṣyati. duṣa is in the sense of being altered: duṣyati. śliṣa is in the sense of embracing: śleṣyati. ṣvidā is in the sense of bodily change. The letter ā serves to distinguish it, for the rule "also after what has āt as its indicatory letter": svibyati. kṣudha is in the sense of hunger: kṣudhyati. śudha is in the sense of purity: śudhyati, biśudhyati. ṣidhu is in the sense of being fully pleased: sidhyati, abhisidhyati. radha is in the sense of harming: radhyati. dṛba is in the sense of joy: dṛpyati. dṛpa is in the sense of joy and of release: dṛpyati. muha is in the sense of bewilderment: muhyati. druha is in the sense of wishing to harm: druhyati. ṣṇuha is in the sense of vomiting: snuhati. ṣṇihaḥ is in the sense of joy: snihyati. ṇaśa is in the sense of disappearing: naśyati, binaśyati. These are the eight, radha and the rest, and the five, muha and the rest. vṛt: the group ends.

Now śam and the rest are to be stated. śamu and damu are in the sense of becoming calm. tamu is in the sense of desire. śramu is in the sense of austerity, and also of weariness. bhramu is in the sense of not staying still. kṣamuṣ is in the sense of forbearance. klamu is in the sense of weakness. madī is in the sense of joy. By the rule "long before yan, of śam and the rest," the vowel is lengthened: śāmyati, dāmyate, tāmyati, śrāmyati, biśrāmyati, bhrāmyati, kṣāmyati, klāmyati, mādyati, pramādyati, unmādyati. These are the eight, śam and the rest.

asu is in the sense of throwing: asyati, udasyate. By the rule "after a prefix, optionally for asyati and uhi," the ātmanepada endings apply optionally, as for ruca and the rest: narisyati, narisyati, paryasyate, paryasyati.

yasu is in the sense of striving. By the rule "also after bhrāśa, bhlāśa, bhramu, mu, trasī, truṭi, laṣi, yasi and saṃyasi," the suffix yan is optional: asyati. In one view, an: yasati, saṃyasyati, saṃyasati. After other prefixes, yan always appears: āyasyati, brayasyati.

jasu is in the sense of liberation: jasyati. tasu and dasu are in the sense of setting down: tasyati, dasyati. basu is in the sense of stiffening: basyati. pyuṣ is in the sense of dividing: pyuṣyati. pluśa is in the sense of burning: pluṣyati. bisa is in the sense of driving: bisyati. kuṣa is in the sense of joining: kuṣati. puṣa is in the sense of giving away: puṣyati. muṣa is in the sense of destroying: muṣyati. masī is in the sense of measuring: masyati. luṭa is in the sense of churning: luṭyatri. uca is in the sense of gathering: ucyati. bhṛśu and bhraṃśu are in the sense of falling down. The anuṣaṅga is elided: bhṛśyati, bhraṣyati. briśa is in the sense of obscuring: bṛṣyati. kṛśa is in the sense of making thin: kṛśyati. ñitṛṣa is in the sense of thirst: triṣyati. tuṣa and hṛṣa are in the sense of satisfaction: tuṣyati, hriṣyati. kupa, krudha and ruṣa are in the sense of anger: kubyati, krudhyati, ruṣyati. ḍipa is in the sense of throwing: ḍipyati. ṣṭūpa is in the sense of raising up.

stūbyati. gupa is in the sense of agitation: gupyati. yupa, rupa and lupa are in the sense of bewilderment: yupyati, rupyati, lubyati. lubha is in the sense of attachment: lubhyati. kṣubha is in the sense of being shaken throughout: kṣubhyati. ṇabha and tudha are in the sense of harming: nabhyati, tubhyati. klidu is in the sense of becoming moist: klidyati. ñimidā is in the sense of moistening. By the rule "of midi," there is guṇa: medyati. ñiṣvidā is also in the sense of release: ṣvidyati. ṛdhu is in the sense of growth: ridhyati. gṛdhu is in the sense of longing: gṛdhyati. These are the sixty-four, puṣa and the rest. vṛt: the group ends. These are the explanations of the parasmaipada.

ṣūd is in the sense of living beings giving birth: sūyate, prasūyate. dū is in the sense of torment: dūyate, through dejection of mind. dīd is in the sense of wasting away: dīyate, abadīyate. dhiṅ is in the sense of disrespect: dhīyate. mīd is in the sense of harming: mīyate, pramīyate. rīṅ is in the sense of listening: rīyate. līṅ is in the sense of joining: līyate, bilīyate. ḍād is in the sense of going: ḍīyate, uḍḍayate. briṅ is in the sense of covering: brīyate. These are sū and the rest, which have oṭ as their indicatory letter.

pīṅ is in the sense of drinking. māṅ is in the sense of measure: pīyate, māyate, praṇimīyate. īṅ is in the sense of going: īyate. prīd is in the sense of joy: prīyate. janī is in the sense of being born. There is yan. By the rule "jā for jani before the vikaraṇa," it is changed to jā: jāyate, prajāyate, upajāyate, bijāyate, as of a sprout.

biḍā is in the sense of shining: dībyite. pūrī is in the sense of satisfying: paryate. jūrī is in the sense of being agitated: jñāryate. tūrī is in the sense of speed and of living: tūryate. dhūrī, guri and ghūrī are in the sense of harming: dhūryate, gruryate, gyuryate. śūri is also in the sense of certainty: śāryate. cūdri is in the sense of burning: cūryate. tapa is in the sense of lordship: tapyate. Some, holding the view that reads the word "optionally" here in another position, give by the rule "also in the sense of lordship, because it belongs to div and the rest": tapati. Or else pritu is in the sense of holding: prityate. Some say that in one view it applies because it belongs to bhū and the rest. Others do not accept "or else britu." In that case, optionally: prityate.

kliśa is in the sense of torment: kliśyate. kāśṛ is in the sense of shining: kāśyate. bāśri is in the sense of sound: pāṣyate. pada is in the sense of going: padyate, prabadyate, ābadyate, saṃpadyate, ubpadyate, dibadyate, praṇibadyate. bida is in the sense of lack: bibyate. bida is in the sense of existing: bidyate. budha is in the sense of understanding: budhyate, prabudhyate, bibudhyate. yudha is in the sense of fighting: yudhyate. With anu, rudha is in the sense of desire. The meaning is that rudha preceded by anu, in the sense of desire, belongs to div and the rest: anurudhyate. mana is in the sense of knowing: manyate. an is in the sense of breath: anyate. yuja is in the sense of samādhi: yujyate. sṛja is in the sense of separating: srajyati, utsijyate, bisrajyate. laśa is in the sense of becoming small: liśyate. These are the ātmanepada forms.

śaka and mṛṣa are in the sense of forbearance: śakyati, śakyate, mṛṣyati, yīti. In senses other than forbearance, because it belongs to su and the rest, the suffix is nu: śaknoti. Because inclusion in the list is not obligatory: barimiṣyati, a parasmaipada form. Likewise pratimṛṣyabati.

īśucir is in the sense of becoming pure. The letter i serves to distinguish it, for the rule "not for ḍī, śī, what has ī as its indicatory letter, and what optionally takes iṭ, except pati and niṣkuṣa." The letter i and the repha serve to distinguish it, for the rule "also after what has ir as its indicatory letter": śucyati, śucyati.

ṇaha is in the sense of binding: nahyati, nahyate, saṃnahyati, saṃnahyati. By loss of a letter, the a of api is optionally elided: pinahyati, abinahyati, pinahyati, apinahyate, braṇinahyati, praṇinahyate.

rañja is in the sense of dyeing. There is yan. By the rule "when there is no guṇa, of those that do not have it as an indicatory letter," the anuṣaṅga is elided: rajyati, rajyate. śala is in the sense of reviling: śabyati, śabyate. "These are the explanations": with this, div and the rest, which take the vikaraṇa yan, are complete.

bhrājṛ, ṭubhrābṛ and ṭubhlābri are in the sense of shining. bhramu is in the sense of moving. kramu is in the sense of stepping. drasī is in the sense of weariness. cuṇa, cuṭa, kuṭa and ṭuṭa are in the sense of cutting. laṣa is in the sense of beauty. yisu is in the sense of striving. By the explanation "also bhrāsi, bhūsa, bhlāsa, bhramu, kramu, klamu, drasī, truṭi, laṣa, yasi and saṃasi," the suffix is yan. bhrāsi and bhlāsi take the ātmanepada endings; the others take the parasmaipada endings: bhrāsyate, bhrāsate, bhlāsyate, bhlāsate. By the rule "long before yan, of śam and the rest," the vowel is lengthened: bhrāmyati. Here too, in one view: bhrāmati. By the rule "of krama, in the parasmaipada," the vowel is lengthened: krāmyati, kramati, drasati, drasati. In one view, an, because it belongs to tud and the rest: truṭati, truṭati. Because it belongs to tud and the rest, there is no guṇa: laṣyati, laṣyati, abhilaṣati, yasyati, saṃyasyati, asati, saṃasati. Where another prefix is shown, the suffix is always yan.

Now su and the rest are to be stated. ṣuña is in the sense of pressing out. Where an would follow, nu is to be established by the rule "nu after su and the rest." Because of the restriction "also before a vikaraṇa, before an," at the end of the vikaraṇa there is no guṇa of a root ending in a nāmin vowel. In the singular endings, there is guṇa by the definition of what ends in a nāmin vowel: sunoti, sunutaḥ. The change to uv being blocked, va appears by the rule "the letter va for nu of the vikaraṇa": sunvinta, sunuṣi, sunuthaḥ, sunutha, sunomi, sunuba, sunumaḥ. By the rule "the letter u is optionally elided before va and ma," the letter u is optionally elided: sunvaḥ, sunmaḥ. Because it has ña as its indicatory letter, it takes the ātmanepada endings: sunote, sunvāte, sunate, sunuṣe, sunvāthe, sunudhre, sunve, sunahe, sunubahe, sunmahe, sunumahe.

ṣiña is in the sense of binding: sinoti, sunutaḥ, sinvanti, sunute, sinvāte, sinvate. śiña is in the sense of sharpening: śinoti, śinutaḥ, śinanti, śinute. ḍubiña is in the sense of throwing: minoti, minute. cañ̃a is in the sense of gathering.

ciniti, cinutaḥ, cinute, bracinoti, braṇicinoti, braṇicinute. stiña is in the sense of covering over. By the rule "After ra, ṣa and the letter ṛ, a na that is not final becomes ṇa, even when vowels, ha, ya, va, the ka class and the pa class stand between," it is ṇa: stṛnoti, stṛṇute. kṛña is in the sense of harming: kṛnote, kṛnute. briña is in the sense of obscuring: bṛnoti, bṛnute. dhuña is in the sense of shaking: dhunati, dhurmyote. These are forms in both voices. ṭudhu is in the sense of tormenting: ḍunoti. hi is in the sense of going, and also of increasing: hinoti. Preceded by bra: by the rule "by hi, nu and mī," it is ṇa: brahinoti. bṛ is in the sense of joy: bṛnoti. smṛ is also in the sense of moving: smṛṇoti, smṛṇutaḥ, smṛnvanti, smṛnoṣi, smṛnuthaḥ, smṛṇutha, smṛṇomi, smṛṇubaḥ, smṛṇvaḥ, smṛṇumaḥ, smṛnmaḥ.

asli is in the sense of pervading: āsnoti, prāsnoti, byāsnoti. śaklṛ is in the sense of being able: śaknoti, śaknutaḥ. Here, on the general rule "of one not preceded by a conjunct," by the rule "and also of the nu of the vikaraṇa," it only undergoes the change to uv: prāsnubanti, śaknupanti. rādhva and sādha are in the sense of being fully accomplished: rādhnoti, sādhnoti. tika, tiga, ṣagha, rikṣi, kṛbi, ciri, jiri, dās and druha are in the sense of harming: tiknoti, tignoti, saghnoti, rikṣnoti. Because it has i as its indicatory letter, there is an augment. From the statement "It should be explained that dhinvi and kṛṇvi also become dhi and kṛ," it becomes kṛ: kṛnoti, ciriṇoti, jiriṇoti, dābsnoti, druhnoti. ñidhṛṣā is in the sense of boldness: dhṛṣṇoti. dabbhu is in the sense of deceit. The nasal (anuṣaṅga) is elided: dabhnotvi. ṛdhu is in the sense of increasing: ribhnoti. dhibi and tripa are in the sense of pleasing. Because it has i as its indicatory letter, there is an augment. By the rule "dhinvi and kṛṇvi also become dhi and kṛ," it becomes dhva: dhinoti, trisnoti. These are parasmaipada forms.

aśū is in the sense of pervading: aśnute. ṣṭigha is in the sense of going everywhere: ṣṭighnute. These are ātmanepada forms. śru is in the sense of hearing. By the rule "śru also becomes śri," there is the suffix nu and also the change to śri: śriṇoti. By the rule beginning "after so, gami," it takes the ātmanepada endings: saṃśriṇute. akṣū is also in the sense of gathering; it is listed because of a different usage. By the rule "optionally after akā," the suffix nu is optional. After ṣa it becomes the ṭa class: na becomes ṇa: akṣṇoti, akṣati. takṣu and tvakṣu are in the sense of paring. By the rule "also after takṣā," the suffix nu is optional: takṣṇoti. Preceded by nir: the ra becomes visarga, and by the rule "before ta and tha, sa," the visarga in turn becomes the letter sa: nistakṣṇoti, nistakṣati. Because of the words "in the sense of paring," this does not happen in another sense: saṃtakṣati vāgbhiḥ, which means "he rebukes the pupil." By the statement "These, śru and the rest, which occur among bhū and the rest, are stated here in the context of forming nu," the roots with the vikaraṇa nu, su and the rest, are complete.

Now tuda and the rest will be stated. tuda is in the sense of afflicting. The vikaraṇa is an. When guṇa would be obtained by the rule "also before a vikaraṇa, before an," by the rule "before the an of tud and the rest," it does not become guṇa: tudati, tudataḥ. Then the procedure for the letters in sandhi with a: tudanti, tudasi, tudathaḥ, tudatha. The a is lengthened before va and ma: tudami, tudāba, tudāmaḥ. tudate, tuṅate, tudante. ṇuda is in the sense of driving: nudati, nudate. diśi is in the sense of utterly relinquishing: diśiti, diśate, ādiśati, saṃdiśati, nirdiśati, uddiśati, upadiśati.

bhraja is in the sense of roasting. By the rule "grahi, jyaṃ and the rest," there is saṃprasāraṇa: the ra becomes the letter ṛ. The dhuṭ letters become the third of their class: the letter sa becomes the letter da. Joined with the ṭa class or the ca class, the ta class becomes that class: the letter da becomes the letter ja: bhṛjjati, bhṛjjate. kṣipa is in the sense of driving away: kṣīpati, kṣipati, nikṣipati, ākṣipati, praṣyikṣipati, adhikṣipati. Preceded by prata and abhi: because the marking of the group is not invariable, by the rule "kṣipa after prati, abhi and ati," it takes the parasmaipada endings: pratikṣipati, ebhikṣipati, atikṣipati. kṛṣa is in the sense of plowing: kṛṣati. mucḷ is in the sense of releasing. The vikaraṇa is an. By the rule "after the vowel of muc and the rest, before the ān of the vikaraṇa, a letter is added as an augment," the letter nā is added as an augment, and then come the anusvāra and the final nasal of the class: muñcati.

luslṛ is in the sense of cutting: lumbati, lumbate. pidḷ is in the sense of finding: binte, bindati. lipa is in the sense of smearing: limbati, limbate. ṣica is in the sense of sprinkling: siñcati, siñcate. By the rule beginning "sthā, seni, sedhati," it is ṣa: abhiṣiñcati, abhiṇiñcate, paraṣiñcate, niḥṣiñcite, niḥṣiñcate duḥ, ṣiñcate. These are the explained forms. kṛtī is in the sense of cutting: kṛnadati. khida is in the sense of crushing utterly: bindati. piśa is in the sense of parts: biśati. These are the eight beginning with luca.

ripī and riṣī are in the sense of going: ripati, reṣati. dhi is in the sense of holding. By the rule beginning "the first vowel ending in the letter i or the letter u," i becomes iya: dhiyati. kṣi is in the sense of dwelling and of going: kṣiyatī. ṣū is in the sense of impelling. u becomes uva: suvati. After a prefix, by the rule beginning "sunoti, suvati," it is ṣa: abhiṣuvati, bariṣuvati. braścu is in the sense of cutting. By the sūtra "grahi, jya and the rest," there is saṃprasāraṇa: pṛścati. richa is in the sense of going, of the faculties, of dissolution, and of becoming embodied. The cha is doubled. By the rule "the first, before an unvoiced letter," it is the first: ṛcchati.

kṛ is in the sense of scattering. gṝ is in the sense of swallowing down. By the rule "a root ending in ṝ, where there is no guṇa, takes ir," it becomes ir: kirati, girati. By the rule "optionally before a vowel," the ra becomes la: gilati. By the rule "of gira after apa," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada endings: avagirate, avagilete. By the rule "after saṃ, in the sense of making a promise," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada endings: sigirate, sigilate. In a sense other than making a promise: sigirati, saṃgilote. This is the meaning of the statement "optionally in the sense of declaring and of affirming."

uchi is in the sense of separating: ucchati. jarcca and jharjha are in the sense of rebuking and of threatening: jarccati, carccati, jarjhati. tvaca is in the sense of covering over: tvacati. ṛca is in the sense of praising: ṛcati. ubja is in the sense of the sky: ubjati. ujjha is in the sense of letting go: ujjhate. lubha is in the sense of bewilderment: lubhati. ripha is in the senses of speaking, fighting, reviling, harming and giving: ripati. tripha and trinā are in the sense of satisfaction. By this rule, "of those that do not have i as their indicatory letter, where there is no guṇa," the nasal (anuṣaṅga) of trinpha and the rest is not to be elided before an: triphati, trimphati. tupa, tuppa, tupha, tunpha, ṛpha and ṛnpha are in the sense of harming: tubati, tumbati, tuphati, tumpati, ṛphati, rimphati. dṛpha, drinpha and micca are in the sense of extreme affliction: driphati, dṛmphati, miccheti. gupha, gunma and pṛbhī are in the sense of knotting: guphati, guṃphati, dṛbhati. cvitī is in the sense of harming: crihati. ubha and unbha are in the sense of filling: ubhati, umbhati. śubha and śunbhra are in the sense of being beautiful: śubhati, śumbhati. These are the eight beginning with trinpha.

bidha is in the sense of accomplishing. juḍa and śuna are in the sense of going. priḍa and mriḍa are in the sense of making happy: bidhati, juḍati, śunti, pṛḍati, mṛḍati. pṛna is in the sense of pleasing: pṛnate. mṛn is in the sense of harming: mṛnati. druṇa is also in the sense of going: drunati. tuṇa is in the sense of crookedness: tunati. puṇa is in the sense of virtue: puṇati. puṇa is in the sense of making a promise: muṇati. kuṇa is in the sense of sound and of helping: kuṇate. ghuṇa and ghurṇṇa are in the sense of wandering: ghuṇati, ghurṇṇati.

praccha is in the sense of wishing to know. Because it belongs to grahi and the rest, there is saṃprasāraṇa: pṛcchati. By the rule "after a modification of ād, nu, in the sense of asking," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada endings: āpṛcchate. By the rule beginning "after saṃ, gam, ṛccha and pṛccha," it takes the ātmanepada endings: saṃpṛcchati. sṛja is in the sense of releasing: sṛjati, sasṛjati, utsijati, bisṛjati. ḍumasja is in the sense of purifying. By the rule "the dhaṭ letters become the third," the letter sa becomes the letter da. By the rule "the ta class joined with the ca and ṭa class," da becomes ja: majjati, nimajjata. rujo is in the sense of breaking: rujati. bhujo is in the sense of crookedness: bhujati, bibhujeti, udbhūjati. chupa and spṛśa are in the sense of touching all over: chupati, saṃspṛśati, upaspṛśati, spṛśati. ruśa and riśa are in the sense of harming: ruśati, riśate. liśa and biccha are in the sense of going: liśati, bicchati. biśa is in the sense of entering: biśati, prabiśati, upabiśati. Preceded by ni: by the rule "biśa after ni," it takes the ātmanepada endings: nibiśate. mṛśa is in the sense of being wholly angered: mṛṣati, āmṛśati. śadḷ is in the sense of decaying. By the rule "śadi before an," because it belongs to ruca and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada endings. By the rule "śadi becomes śīya," it changes to śīya: śīyate. ṣadli is in the sense of moving about. By the rule "sādi becomes sīda," it changes to sīda: sīdati. śura is in the sense of lordship and of blazing: surati. kura is in the sense of sound: kurati.

tṛhū, ṣṭihū and trinhū are in the sense of harming. The nasal is elided: tṛhati, strihati, tṛhati. iṣu is in the sense of desiring. By the rule "of gam, iṣu and yam, cha," ṣa becomes cha. It is doubled. Before an unvoiced letter it becomes the first: icchati. miṣa is in the sense of contending: miṣati. kila is in the sense of whiteness and of play: kilati. ila is in the sense of going: ilati. dila is in the sense of amorous gesture: hilati. śila, sila and uchi are in the sense of being high: śilati, silati. Because it has i as its indicatory letter, there is an augment: uñcati. tila is in the sense of oiliness: tilati. cila is in the sense of clothing: cilati. cala is in the sense of sporting: calati. bila is in the sense of splitting: bilati. ṇila is in the sense of obtaining: nilati. mila is in the sense of joining: milati. likha is in the sense of writing: likhati. kuṭa is in the sense of crookedness: kuṭati. puha and luṭa are in the sense of joining together: puṭati, luṭati. kunca is in the sense of contracting: kucati, saṃkucati, utkucati. byaca is in the sense of deceiving. By the sūtra "grahi, jya and the rest," there is saṃprasāraṇa: the letter ya becomes the letter a: bicate. guja is in the sense of sound: gujati. guḍa is in the sense of protecting: guḍati. ḍipa is in the sense of throwing: ḍipati. cuṇa, cuṭa, chuda and truṭ are in the sense of cutting: cuṇti, cuṭati, churati, bicchurati, truṭate. Forms made with yan are also heard.

sphuṭa is in the sense of opening out: sphuṭati. muṭa is in the sense of throwing about and of gaining: muṭati. ruṭa is in the sense of fighting: ruṭati. juḍa is in the sense of binding: juḍati. kaḍa is in the sense of being intoxicated: kaḍati. kṛḍa and ghaggha are in the sense of laughing: kṛḍite. kuḍi is also in the sense of what has been done: kuḍati. ghuṭa is in the sense of striking back: ghaṭiti. tuḍa is in the sense of tearing: tuḍati. thuḍa, sthuḍa, buḍa and bruḍa are in the sense of covering over: thuḍati, sthuḍati, buḍati, bruḍati. huḍa is in the sense of gathering: huḍahaṃ. sphura is in the sense of radiating: sphurati, basphurati. sphula is also in the sense of gathering: sphulati. ṇū is in the sense of praising. u changes to uva: nuvati. dhu is in the sense of shaking off:

dhubati. gu is in the sense of voiding excrement: gupati. dhū is in the sense of going and of stability: dhrūpati. These are the explained parasmaipada forms. guri is in the sense of effort: gurati, apagurati. In the sense of understanding it is elided: ungurate. bhrari. kuda is in the sense of sound: kubate. Here the subgroup ends. These are the thirty-five beginning with kuṇa.

srid is in the sense of exerting oneself. By the rule "i, where there is no guṇa before an," it is the letter a. By the rule "the letter ṛ becomes ra," it is ra. By the rule beginning "before the first vowel," it changes to aya: priyate. mṛda is in the sense of giving up life. By the rule "mriṅ also after the āśiṣ and the adyatanī," because it belongs to ruci and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada endings: mṛyate, anumṛyate. bharttari. driṅ is in the sense of disrespect: diyate, ādriyate. phiṅ is in the sense of remaining: dhiyate, abadhiyate. juṣī is in the sense of joy and of serving: juṣate. obijā is in the sense of fearing and of shaking: bijate, udrijate. olajī and opji are in the sense of being ashamed.

lajate. By the rule "the dhuṭ letters become the third," the letter sa becomes the letter da. By the rule beginning "the ta class, with the ca and ṭa class," the letter da becomes the letter ja: lajjate. With the statement "these are ātmanepada forms," the roots with the vikaraṇa an and without guṇa, tud and the rest, are complete.

Now rudha and the rest will be stated. rudhiṅ is in the sense of obstructing. When an would be obtained, by the rule "after the vowel of rudha and the rest, the sound na follows," the procedure for the sound na is carried out. By the rule beginning "after ra, ṣa and the letter ṛ," na becomes ṇa. By the rule "after gha, dha and bha, but not after dha, ta and tha become dha," ta and tha become dha. By the rule "the fourth letters of the dhuṭ become the third," the letter dha becomes the letter da: ruṇaddhi. By the rule "the final of the vikaraṇa of rudha and the rest is elided," the letter a of the sound na is elided. Then come the anusvāra and the final nasal of the class: runddhaḥ, runddhanti. Before an unvoiced letter it becomes the first: ruṇatsi, runddhaḥ, runddhaḥ, runadhmi, rundhvaḥ, rundhāḥ, runddhe, rundhāte, rundhe, ruṃtse, rundhāthe, ruṃddhe, rundhe, rundhāhe, rundhmahe.

bhidir is in the sense of splitting: bhinatti, bhinttaḥ, bhindanti, bhinatsi, bhinnāḥ, bhintthaḥ, bhinadmi, bhintaḥ, bhīndmaḥ, bhintte, bhindāte, bhindata, bhindse, bhindathe, bhinddhe, bhinde, bhindvahe, bhindmahe. chidir is in the sense of dividing in two: chinatti, chinttaḥ, chindanti, chinatsi, chintthaḥ, chinttha, chindmi, chindvaḥ, chindmaḥ, chindhe, chindāte, chinadate, ucchentti, ucchinde, bicchinatti, bicchintte, abacchanatti kṣatra, abacchintte, byabacchinatte, byabacchintti, paracchinatti, paracchintti, ācchintti, ācchintte. Before aṅ and mā the cha is always doubled.

ricir is in the sense of scattering. By the rule "before a letter not like the cha class, ki," it is ki: riṇakti, ridktaḥ, rañcinti, riṇikṣi, ridkthaḥ, ridktha, riṇacmi, riñcvaḥ, riñmaḥ, riṅñi, riñcāto, riñcate, phiṛṇakti. In the sense of binding the belly: barddakoṣaḥ, biriktte. bijir is in the sense of being separated: binakti, biṅktaḥ, biñjanti, binakṣi, bidkthaḥ, bidktha, binajmi, biñjvaḥ, binjmaḥ, bidkte, biñjāte, biñjate. kṣudir is in the sense of impurity: kṣuṇatti, kṣuṇattiḥ, kṣurdanti, kṣuṇatsi, kṣuntha, kṣuntha, kṣuntha, kṣunadmi, kṣundvaḥ, kṣundmaḥ, kṣuntto, kṣundāte, kṣuntate.

yujir is in the sense of joining: yunakti, yudkta, yuñdanti, yukṣi, yudkthaḥ, yudktha, yunājmo, yuñjvaḥ, yuñjaḥ, yudkṭe, yuñjāte, yuñjate. By the rule "yujira, after a prefix ending in a vowel and the rest, where it is not of yajñapātra," it takes the ātmanepada endings: prayudkṣe, abayudkte, niyudkte. In the context of ajñadātva this does not happen: yajñapratam prayunakti. ucchṛdir is in the sense of blazing and of playing: chriṇatti, chrinttaḥ, chrindanti, chriṇaṇsi, chrindaḥ, chrinttha, chrinttha, chriṇadmi, chrindveḥ, chrindmeḥ, chintte, chrindāte, chrindate. utṛdir is in the sense of harming and of disrespect: trinatti, tṛnttaḥ, trindanti, triṇans, tṛndthaḥ, tṛndtha, tṛnadmi, tṛndva, tṛndma, tṛndha, tṛndhāti. These are forms in both voices. kritī is in the sense of encircling: kṛṇatti, kṛnttaḥ, kṛndanti, kṛnatme, krintthaḥ, krinttha, kṛṇatmi, kṛntaḥ, kṛttmaḥ.

śiṣḷ is in the sense of going apart. It is preceded by vi. After ṣa it becomes the ṭa class: biśinaṣṭiḥ, biśiṣṭaṃ, biṣiṣaṃnti, biśinakṣi, biśiṣṭhaṃ, biśiṣṭhe, biśinaṣmi, biśiṣvaṃḥ, biśiṃṣmaḥ. biṣḷ is in the sense of grinding to powder: binaṣṭi, biṣṭaḥ, biṣaṃnati, binakṣi, biṣṭheḥ, biṣṭhaṃ, binaṣmi, biṣaṃ, briṣmaṃḥ. bhañjo is in the sense of crushing completely. There is the sound na. It is ki. By the rule "after the sound na and also after the vikaraṇa," the nasal (anuṣaṅga) is elided: bhanakti, bhadktaḥ, bhañjanti, bhanakśi, bhadkta, bhanijma, bhañḍmaḥ, bhañḍma. bhuja is in the sense of protecting and of eating: bhunakti, bhurktaḥ, bhuñjanti, bhunakṣi, bhudkthaḥ, bhudktha, bhunajmi, bhuñjvaḥ, bhuñjmaḥ. By the rule "bhuji in the sense of food," it takes the ātmanepada endings: bhudkte, bhuñjate, bhuñjate.

tṛha and sihasi are in the sense of harming. There is the sound na. By the rule "after tṛha, iṭ, before the vikaraṇa, severally," there is the augment iṭ. The letter ṭa serves to mark an augment. By the rule "ha becomes ḍha," it is dha. By the rule "after gha, ḍha, dha and bha, but not after dha, ta and tha become dha," it is dha. After ṣa, the ta class becomes the ṭa class. ḍha is elided before ḍha, and the penultimate is also lengthened. The letter a with the letter i becomes e, and what follows is also elided: tṛṇeḍhi, tṛṇḍhaḥ, tṛhantri, tṛṇekṣi, tṛndhaḥ, tṛṇḍha, tṛṇejmi, tṛhvaḥ, trijmaḥ. hisi: because it has i as its indicatory letter, there is an augment. There is the sound na. By the rule "after the sound na and after the vikaraṇa," the nasal is elided: hinasti, hisanti, hiṃsanti, hinassi, histhaṃḥ, hiṃstha, hinasmi, hiṃsvaḥ, hismaḥ. undi is in the sense of moistening. As before, na is elided: unatti, untāḥ, undanti, yunṣṣi, untthaḥ, unttha, unadmi, undvaḥ, ubhmaḥ. andu is in the sense of making clear, concealing and going. It is preceded by vi: byanakti, byadktaḥ, byeñjakti, byanakti, byadkthaḥ, byadktha, byanjmi, byañjmaḥ, byañjmaḥ. tancu is in the sense of contracting: tanakti, tadktaḥ, tañcanti. obijva is in the sense of fearing and of shaking: binakti, bidktaḥ, bañjanti, binakti, bidktha, bidktha, binajmi, biñjvaḥ, biñjmaḥ. pṛjā is in the sense of discarding: pṛnakti, pṛdktaḥ, priñjanti. pṛcī is in the sense of meeting: pṛṇakti, pṛdktaḥ, pṛñcanti. These are parasmaipada forms.

ñi indhī is in the sense of blazing. There is the sound na. It is elided as before: inddhe, inddhāte, indhate, indse, indhathe, indhāe, indhe, indhvete, indhmahe. khiṅ is in the sense of weakness: khintte, khindāte, khindate. bida is in the sense of discerning: bintte, bindāte, bindate. With the statement "these are ātmanepada forms," the roots with the vikaraṇa of the sound na, ru and the rest, are complete.

Now tan and the rest will be stated. tanu is in the sense of extending. When an would be obtained, by the rule "after tan and the rest, u," u is to be formed. By the rule beginning "in the singular forms, of those ending in a nāmin vowel," there is guṇa: tanoti, tanutaḥ, tanbante, tanoṣi, tanuthaḥ, tanutha, tanoni, tanubaḥ, tanumaḥ. By the rule "the letter u is optionally elided before va and ma," the letter u is elided.

tanvaḥ, tanmaḥ, tanute, tanvāte, tanate, tanuṣe, tanvāthe, tanudhve, tanve, tanubahe, tanumahe, tanvahe, tanvahe, setanati, setanute, bitanoti, bitanute, ātanoti, ātanute, byātanoti, byātanote. ṣuṇu is in the sense of giving: sanoti, sanutaḥ, sanvante, sanoṣi, sanuthaḥ, sanuthe, sanomi, sanubaḥ, sanumaḥ, sanvaḥ, sanmaḥ, sanute, sanvāte, sanvate. kṣaṇu and kṣiṇu are in the sense of harming: kṣaṇoti, kṣaṇutaḥ, kṣaṇvanti, kṣanoṣi, kṣaṇuthaḥ, kṣaṇutha, kṣaṇomi, kṣaṇubaḥ, kṣaṇumaḥ, kṣatute, kṣaṇvāte, kṣaṇvate. ṛṇu is in the sense of going: ṛṇoti, ṛṇutaḥ, ṛṇuntiḥ, ṛṇute, ṛṇvāte, ṛṇate. tṛṇu is in the sense of eating: tṛṇoti, tṛṇutaḥ, tṛṇvanti, tṛṇute, tṛṇvāte, tṛṇvate. ghṛṇu is in the sense of blazing: ghṛṇoti, ghṛṇuteḥ, ghṛṇvanti, ghṛṇute, ghṛṇvate, ghṛṇvete. Some say that, by the characteristic of being close to tan and the rest, the rule "of karoti" applies. By the rule "also of ṛṇu and the rest, as of karoti," there is guṇa: arṇṇote, arṇṇoti, tarṇṇati, tarṇṇuti, gharṇṇuti, gharṇṇuti.

ḍukṛña is in the sense of doing. The suffix is u. By the rule "of karoti," there is guṇa: karoti. By the rule "in all roots, where there is no guṇa, the a becomes the letter u," the letter a becomes the letter u: kurutaḥ. By the rule "the letter u becomes va," it is va: kurvanti, karoṣi, kuruthaḥ, kurutha, karomi. By the rule "always after karoti," the letter u is elided: kurvaḥ, kurmaḥ, kurute, kurvāte, kurvate, kuruṣe, kurvāthe, kurudhve, kurve, kurvahe, kurmahe. By the rule "kṛña after anu and pari," it takes the parasmaipada endings: anukaroti, parikaroti. By the rule "the suffix after the sound vi," it takes the ātmanepada endings: bikurute. By the rule "after a vowel, also when it has no object," it takes the ātmanepada endings: bikurute. These are the explained forms. vanu is in the sense of requesting: vanute. manu is in the sense of understanding: manute. These are ātmanepada forms. The roots with the vikaraṇa u, tan and the rest, are complete.

Now krī and the rest will be stated. ḍakṝña is in the sense of selling goods. When an would be obtained, by the rule "after krī and the rest, nā," nā is to be formed. Guṇa would be obtained by "also before a vikaraṇa," but by the restriction "only before an," it does not become guṇa: krīṇāti. By the rule "of both, before an initial consonant, where it is not dā, the letter ī," it is ī: kṝṇītaḥ. By the rule "of the vikaraṇa of krī and the rest," the letter i is elided: krīṇānti, krīṇasi, krīṇīthaḥ, krīṇītha, krīṇemi, krīṇībaḥ, krīṇīmaḥ, krīṇīte, krīṇāte, krīṇāte, krīṇīṣi, krīṇīthe, krīṇīdhve, krīṇve, krīṇībahe, krīṇīmahe. By the rule "krīña after pari, vi and ava," it takes the ātmanepada endings: barikrīṇīte, bikrāṇīte, apakrāṇīte. prīña is in the sense of satisfying, and also of beautifying: prīṇīte, prīṇīta, prīṇaṃnti, prīṇāte, priṇāta, prīṇati. śrīña is in the sense of cooking: śrīṇāti, śrīṇāte. skuña is in the sense of going everywhere: skuṇāti, skunīte. ṣiña and ṣuña are in the sense of binding: sinīta, sinīte, sunāti, sunīte. knuña is in the sense of sound: knunāti, knunīte. mīña and druña are in the sense of harming: mīnāti, mīnīti. By the rule "of henu, mīna and the rest," it is ṇa: pramaṇīto, pramiṇīti, druṇāti, druṇīte. pūña is in the sense of purifying. By the rule "pū and the rest are shortened," it is short: punāti, pūnīte, punanti, punīte. luña is in the sense of cutting: lunāti, lunīte. stṛña is in the sense of covering:

stṛnāti, stṛṇīte. kṛña is in the sense of harming: kṛnāti, kriṇīti. prīña is in the sense of obstructing: bṝṇatī, bṝṇīti. dhuña is in the sense of shaking: dhunāti, dhunīte. graha is in the sense of taking up. By the sūtra "grahi, jyā and the rest," there is saṃprasāraṇa: it is the letter ṛ. By the rule beginning "after ra, ṣa and the letter ṛ," na becomes ṇa: gṛhṇate, gṛhṇite. These are the explained forms.

śṝ and spri are in the sense of harming: śrīṇāte, spriṇete. pri is in the sense of protecting and of filling: pṛṇāti. blī and pri are in the sense of obstructing: bliṇāti, bṛtāte. bhṝ is in the sense of rebuking: bhṝṇāti. dṝ is in the sense of splitting: dṛnāti. jṝ is in the sense of the loss of youth: jṛṇāti. nṛ is in the sense of conduct: ṇṛṇāti. gṛ is in the sense of sound: gṛṇāti. jya is in the sense of the loss of youth. By the sūtra "grahī, jyā and the rest," there is saṃprasāraṇa. By the rule "of those ending in ma, it is lengthened," it is long. By the rule "pū and the rest are shortened," it is short: jināti. ṛ is in the sense of going: ṛṇāti. ṝ: ṛṇatī. lī is in the sense of joining: lyināti. lyi as well: lyināti. Here the subgroup ends. pū and the rest are twenty-two; lū and the rest are twenty-one.

brī is in the sense of obstructing: brīṇāti. bhrī is in the sense of filling: bhrīnāti. ṇabha, tubha and kṣiṣa are in the sense of harming: nibhnāti, tubhnāti, kṣiṣṇāti. ñjā is in the sense of understanding. By the rule "also of jñā," it changes to jā: jānāti. By the rule "jā in the sense of denying," it takes the ātmanepada endings: jānīti. By the rule "after saṃ and prati, when it is not in the sense of remembering," it takes the ātmanepada endings: saṃjānīti, pratijānīte. banda is in the sense of binding. The suffix is nī. The nasal (anuṣaṅga) is elided: badhnati. śanthi is in the sense of releasing and of delighting severally: śrāthnati, śarānā. mantha is in the sense of churning: mathnate, bramathanti. grantha is in the sense of stringing together: grathnāti. kuntha is in the sense of afflicting thoroughly: kuthnāti. mṛṅ is in the sense of being fine: mṛdnāti. mṛḍa is in the sense of happiness: mṛdnāti. gudha is in the sense of anger: gudhāti. kuṣa is in the sense of drawing out: kuṣṇāti, nikuṣṇāti. kṣubha is in the sense of being agitated all over. Because this too is mentioned, it is ṇa in ṣubhnā and the rest: kṣudbhāti. kliśu is in the sense of harming: kliśnāti. aśa is in the sense of eating: aśnāti. udhasa is in the sense of height: dhasnāti. iṣa is in the sense of repetition: iṣṇāti. biṣa is in the sense of separating: biṣṇāti. pruṣa and bluṣa are in the sense of moistening, washing and filling.

pruṣṇāti. puṣa is in the sense of flourishing: puṣṇāti. muṣa is in the sense of stealing: muṣṇāti. khaba is in the sense of springing up from decay: khabnāti.

By the rule "also in the fifth of che bdag, śa becomes uṭ," it is una. The letter ṭa serves to specify the rule "after the letter a, the vṛddhi of uṭ." By this very rule there is vṛddhi: the letter u becomes the letter o. By the rule "o with au, before the letter au," it is o, and what follows is also elided: khaunāti, khaunātiḥ, khonanti. These are parasmaipada forms. bṛd is in the sense of honoring properly: bṛṇīte. With the statement "this is an ātmanepada form," the roots with the vikaraṇa nā, krī and the rest, are complete.

By the statement "It should be explained that after stanbhu, stunbhu, skanbhu, skunbhu and sku there is also nu," there is the suffix nu, and also nā. The nasal (anuṣaṅga) is elided: stabhnāti, stabhnoti, stubhnāti, stubhnoti, skabhnāti, skabhnāoti, skubhnāti, skubhnāoti. These four, āḍhā, are roots that come from the sūtra. skuña is in the sense of instructing. It belongs to krāo and the rest: skunāti, skunoti, skunīti, skunuti. Krī and the rest are complete.

Now cura and the rest will be stated. cura is in the sense of stealing. By the rule "also after cura and the rest," there is the suffix in. The letter n serves to specify the rule "before in, ic and aṭ, the a of the penultimate is lengthened, and the nāmin vowels also take vṛddhi." The penultimate also takes its guṇa. By the rule "where cori stands, these are roots," it takes the designation of a root. There is yan. There is guṇa. It changes to aya: corayati, carayataḥ, corayanti. citi is in the sense of remembering. Because it has in as its indicatory letter, there is an augment: cintayati, cintayataḥ, cintayanti. yatri is in the sense of contracting: yantri, yati. sphuḍi is in the sense of jesting thoroughly: sphuṇḍayate. lakṣa is in the sense of viewing and of marking with signs: lakṣayati. bhakṣa is in the sense of eating: bhakṣayati. Because the penultimate is the penultimate of the penultimate, the letter a is not lengthened. kuṭi is in the sense of speaking untruth: koḍayati. laḍa is in the sense of attending closely. By the rule beginning "the a of the penultimate," it is lengthened, the letter ā: lāḍayati, ullāyati. By the rule "laḍi in the sense of rolling the tongue," it has m as its indicatory letter. By the rule "those with m as indicatory letter are shortened," it is short: the letter ā becomes the letter a: laḍayati. ñimadā is in the sense of moistening: medayati. olaḍi is in the sense of sowing: laṇḍayati. jala is in the sense of instructing definitely: jalayati, ujjalayati. bīḍa is in the sense of pressing together: bīḍayati. In the sense of one of the pair udmapa: bīdmapati, udbiḍayati, niṣbiḍayati, upapīḍayati, svaṭṭayati. ūrja is in the sense of strength and of giving life: ūrjjayati. cuṭa, cuṭa and kuṭṭa are in the sense of cutting: coṭayati, choṭiyati, ācchoṭayati, kuṭṭayati. puṭa is in the sense of becoming small: phoṭayati. muḍa is in the sense of grinding to powder: moṭayati. spiṭa and ṣuṭa are in the sense of disrespect: sbeṭayati, suṭṭayati. ghaṭṭa is in the sense of moving: ghaṭṭayati, uṭṭaṭṭeyate. chada and khaṭṭa are in the sense of covering over: chādayati, khaṭṭayati. śatha and śvātha are in the sense of refining and of going: śāthayati, śvāthayati. ṣaṭṭa, tuji, piji and basi are in the sense of living, strength, giving and dwelling: saṭṭayati, tuñjayati, piñjayati, pinsayati. śvalka and balka are in the sense of speaking: śvalkayati, balkayati. svatta, kabi and lathi are in the sense of going: svarttayiti, khamsayati, panthayati. kṣapi is in the sense of being beautiful: kṣamsayati. piccha is in the sense of striking: biccheyati. tāḍa is in the sense of beating all over: tāḍayate. khaḍa, khiḍi and kaḍi are in the sense of splitting: khāḍayati, khaṇḍayati, kaṭāyati. nakka, dhakka and pasi are in the sense of perishing: nakkayati, dhakkayati, baṃsayati. cakka and cukka are in the sense of afflicting: cakkayati, cukkayati. busta is in the sense of honoring and of dishonoring: pustayati. kṣala is in the sense of cleansing: kṣalayati. tala is in the sense of establishing firmly: dalayati. tula is in the sense of making mad: tolayati. dula is in the sense of hanging up: dolayati. cula is in the sense of sinking: colayati. kṣaji is in the sense of living by a group: kṣañjayati. māna is in the sense of worship: mānayati. cuda is in the sense of urging on properly: codayati. kala, pila and ḍipa are in the sense of throwing: kalayati, pilayati, ḍepayati. pala is in the sense of protecting: pālayati. lūṣa is in the sense of harming: lūṣayatai. śurṇa is in the sense of discarding: śurṇayati.

jñāpa: by the rule "it also has m as its indicatory letter," because it has m as its indicatory letter, it is shortened: jñāpayati. Otherwise: jñāpayati. jñā is only in the sense of understanding. By the rule "in, in the causative," and by the rule "of att, hrī, blī, rī, knu, īkṣma, ī and those ending in āt, the ending pa; pa is elided, and the nāmin vowels also take guṇa," it has the ending pa. By the rule "jñā in the senses of killing, delighting and sharpening," where it has the designation of having m as its indicatory letter, by the rule "those with m as indicatory letter are shortened," it is short. In the sense of killing: byadho mṛgān jñapayati. yama is also in the sense of serving. The letter ar signifies that it has m as its indicatory letter: yamayati. In a sense other than serving: yāmayati. byama is in the sense of exhaustion: byābayati. pūla, pasta and biḍa are in the sense of gathering: pūlayati, pustayati, paṇḍiyati. phunsa is in the sense of crushing manifestly: pusayati. ṭaki is in the sense of binding: ṭaṅkayati, niṭaṅkayati. dhūṣa is in the sense of adorning: dhūṣayati. kīṭa is in the sense of binding: kīṭayati. cūṇa is in the sense of contracting: cūṇayati.

pūja is in the sense of worship: pūjayate. arkka is in the sense of praising: arkkayati. śutha is in the sense of laziness: śothayati. śuthi is in the sense of drying: śuṇṭhayati. juḍa is in the sense of sending: joḍayati. garjja and mārjja are in the sense of sound: garjjayati, mārjjayati. baci is in the sense of speaking at length: prapañcayati. tija is in the sense of sharpening: tijayati. kṝta is in the sense of proclaiming. By the specific instruction "kti of kārtti and iṣa," and by the rule "the penultimate of ir and ur," it is long: kīrttayati. partta is in the sense of cutting and of completing: bardhayati. halapa is in the sense of speaking clearly: hlāpayati. cuṭi is in the sense of cutting: cuṇḍayati. ila is in the sense of faith: elayati. By the rule "the letter a of a prefix is elided before the it and ot of a root," the letter a is elided.

brelayati. jasu is in the sense of harming: jāsayati. tatri is in the sense of holding the womb: tantrayati. matri is in the sense of speaking in secret: mantrayati. basta and garbdha are in the sense of eating: bastayati, gandhayati. hikka is in the sense of harming: hikkayati. niṣka is in the sense of measuring: niṣkayati. lala is in the sense of desiring: lālayati. snuṇa is in the sense of contracting: hūṇayati. tūṇa is in the sense of filling up: tūṇayate. yakṣa is in the sense of worshipping: yakṣayati. kutsa is in the sense of reviling: kutsayati. kūṭa is in the sense of pressing hard: kūṭayati. carcca is in the sense of reading: carccayati. cukka is in the sense of holding: cukkayate. ama is in the sense of illness: āmayati. caṭa is in the sense of splitting: cāṭeyati, ucchāṭayati. ghuṣira is in the sense of proclaiming abroad: ghoṣayati. mokṣa is in the sense of eating: mokṣayati. rakka is in the sense of tasting: rākkayati.

Now the roots ending in a are to be stated. katha is in the sense of a continuous stream. The affix is in. By the rule "a too is elided," the letter a is elided. By the rule "a substitute for a vowel, conditioned by what follows, is treated as the original with respect to a preceding operation," the letter a is to be regarded as still standing in its place in the form. Therefore, because the penultimate remains the penultimate of a, the penultimate is not lengthened: kathayati. bara is in the sense of desiring: barayati. gaṇa is in the sense of counting: gaṇayati. śatha and śvatha are in the sense of explaining correctly: śathayati, śvathayati. phaṭa and paṭa are in the sense of tying a knot: paṭayati, baṭayati. raha is in the sense of abandoning: rahayati. stana, gada and ṅaba are in the sense of sound: stanayati, gadayati, debayati. bata is in the sense of going: patayati. paṣa applies where there is no prefix: paṣayati. svara is in the sense of censuring: svarayati. raca is in the sense of exerting oneself: racayati. kala is in the sense of going, and also of counting: kalayati. caha is in the sense of stirring up: cahayati. mahā is in the sense of worshipping: mahayati. śāri, kṛpa and śvatha are in the sense of weakness: śārayati, kṛbayati, śvathayati. spṛha is in the sense of wishing to obtain: spṛhayati. śūca is in the sense of slander: śūcayati. goma is in the sense of smearing: gomayati. kumāra is in the sense of playing: kumārayati. śīla is in the sense of practicing: śirayati, upaśīlayati, bariśīlayati. sāma is in the sense of conciliating: sāmayati. bela is in the sense of indicating the time: belayati. bata is in the sense of happiness and of serving: vātayate. gabeṣa is in the sense of seeking: gabeṣayati. bāsa is in the sense of attending upon: bāsayati. nebāsa is in the sense of covering over: nibāsayati. bhāja is in the sense of the act of separating: bhājayati. sabhāja is in the sense of joy and of serving: sabhājayati. ūna is in the sense of diminishing: ūnayati. dhāna is in the sense of sound: dhvanayati. kūṭa is in the sense of burning: kūṭayati. keta, śrāma, kuna and guṇa are in the sense of ease: ketayati, śrāmayati, kunayati, kuṇagati. tena is in the sense of theft: stenayati. These are parasmai forms. From ā garbha on, they are ātmane forms. pada is in the sense of going: padayate. grihe is in the sense of grasping: gṛhayate. mraga is in the sense of seeking: mṛgayati. kuha is in the sense of wonder: kuhayate. śūran is in the sense of being heroic and overpowering: śūrayate. thūla is in the sense of growing: thūlayate. artha is in the sense of requesting: arthalati, brarthayate. satra is in the sense of continual play: satrayate. garbba is in the sense of pride: gatbayarte. These are ātmane forms. sūtra is in the sense of releasing completely: sūtrayati. mūtra is in the sense of destroying utterly: mūtrayati. rūṣa is in the sense of roughness: rūṣaṃyati. pāra and tāri are in the sense of completing an action: bārayati, tīdāyati. sagrāma is in the sense of battle: saṅgrāmayati. In the same way, up to this point, these are the forms of the present tense (vartamānā) seen for the agent.

By the rule "the ātmane endings are for the state and the object," the ātmane endings also occur for the state and for the object. By the rule "also for the state and the object," stated generally, and by the rule "yaṇ after all roots," the affix yaṇ comes about. The letter ṇ serves the distinction made in the rule "not where there is an anubandha ṇ, nor before ce, kṛ and yita." Here, this holds up to the end of the affix āpaya. Where gopāya stands, yaṇ is added. By the rule "a too is elided," the letter a is elided: gopāyyate, dhūpāyyate, vicchabote, panāyyate, pānāyyate, ṛtībete.

Roots ending in ā: ḍudañ is in the sense of giving. dāna is in the sense of giving. deṅ is in the sense of protecting. do is in the sense of cutting into pieces. By the rule "for roots ending in a diphthong, ā, where there is no vikaraṇa," it becomes ā. By the rule "dā and dhā, other than dāp, are bā," it receives the name dā. By the rule "ī for dā, mā, gāyati, pibati, sthā, syati and jahāti before a consonant," it becomes ī: dīyate. Likewise ḍudhāñ and dhaṭa: dhīyate. Because dāp and dīp do not receive the name dā, they do not become ī: dāyate. meṅ is in the sense of giving in exchange. mā is in the sense of measuring: mīyate. kai, gai and rai are in the sense of sound: gīyate. pā is in the sense of drinking: pīyate. pā is in the sense of protecting: pāyate. sthā: sthīyate. ṣo is in the sense of bringing to an end: apasīyate. ohāk: hīyate. But from hād: hāyate; elsewhere it does not become ī. yā is in the sense of attaining: yāyate. bhā: bhāyate. snā: snāyate. glai, because it ends in a diphthong, becomes ā: glāyati. mlai: mlāyata. trai: trāyati. kai: kāyati. rai: rāyati. dhyai: dhyayati. hveñ becomes ā. By the sūtra "of svapi, vaci, yaji and so on," there is samprasāraṇa, and by the rule "of those ending in a nāmin vowel," it is lengthened: hūyate.

Roots ending in i: aciñ and the rest. The affix is yaṇ. By the rule "of those ending in a nāmin vowel," it is lengthened: cīyate. ji: jīyate. kṣa is in the sense of wasting away: kṣīyate. hi: hīyate. prābīyate. After kami, iṅ is the kārita. By the rule "kārita of kāmi is elided where there is no ām, iṭ or vikaraṇa," the kārita is elided: kāmyate.

Roots ending in ī: ṇeñ is in the sense of obtaining: nīyate. ḍī: ḍīyate, uḍīyate. śīd: by the rule "before ya, ī becomes aya," it is changed to aya: śabeta.

Roots ending in u: ṣuñ, because it ends in a nāmin vowel, is lengthened: sūyate. ṣṭuñ: stūyate. duñ: dūyate. Roots ending in u: bhū is in the sense of being: dhūyate, anudhūyate. lūñ: lūyate. pūñ: pūyate. Roots ending in ṛ: ḍukṛñ is in the sense of doing.

By the rule "before ya in yaṇ and āśiṣ," the letter i is an augment. By the rule "r of the letter ṛ," it becomes r: kṛyate. hṛñ: hriyate. dṛñ: ādṛate. bṛñ: ābriyate. ṛ is in the sense of going. smṛ and dhyai are in the sense of thinking. By the rule "guṇa of atri and of the first member of a reduplication," there is guṇa: aryate, smaryāte. jāgṛ: by the rule "before ya in yaṇ and āśiṣ," there is guṇa: jāgaryate.

Roots ending in ṝ: by the rule "ir for what ends in ṝ where there is no guṇa," it becomes ir. Before the r and v of a nāmin vowel, the penultimate is long. kṝ:

kṛryate. jṝ: jṛryate. gṝ: gṝryate. prā: biryate. śṝ: śriryate. tṝ: triryate. stṛ: stiryate. pṝ: by the rule "ur also for a labial penultimate," it becomes ur. Before r and v the penultimate is long: pūryata.

Roots ending in a consonant: śiṣyate, bhikṣyate, pacyate, gamyate. khanu is in the sense of digging through. ṣanu is in the sense of giving. jānī is in the sense of being born. dhāṭapa. By the rule "of khani, sani and jan," while it still applies, the explanation "optionally before ya" gives ā, not the fifth letter of the class: khāyate, khanyate, sāyate, sanyate, jāyate, janyate. By the rule "for tanoti too, before yaṇ, it is to be stated as optional," it optionally becomes ā: tāyate, tanyate. grahā: by the sūtra "grahi, jyā and so on," there is samprasāraṇa, that is, the letter ṛ in place of the r: gṛhyate. jyā: by the rule "of those ending in a nāmin vowel," it is lengthened: jīyate. vyadha: bidhate. From the prohibition "not where there is samprasāraṇa," where samprasāraṇa has been done, it does not undergo samprasāraṇa again. baśa: uśyate. byaca: micyate. praccha: pṛcchate. baścu: pṛṣcyate. bhrasja: bhṛjjyate. ñiṣapa: by the rule "of svapi, vaci, yaji and the rest, in yaṇ, parokṣā and āśiṣ," there is samprasāraṇa: supyate. bruñ: by the rule "vaci for brū," it is changed to vaci. vaca is in the sense of explaining: ucyate.

yajaḥ, bapaḥ and baha,
beñ and byeñ, and likewise hvaati,
bada and basa, and śvayati:
these are the nine, yaja and the rest.

yaja: ijyete. basa: upyate. baha: uhyate. beñ, because it ends in a diphthong, becomes ā. There is samprasāraṇa, and by the rule "of those ending in a nāmin vowel," it is lengthened: ūyata. byeñ: bīyate. hveñ: hūyate, āhūyate. badā: yuryate. basa: by the rule "also of śāsi, vasi and ghasi," it becomes ṣ: uṣyate. ṭuośvi: śūyate. as is in the sense of being. By the rule "bhū for asti," it is changed to bhū: bhūyate. cakṣi: cakṣiṅ is changed to khyāñ: khyāyate, ākhyāyate. aja: by the rule "bī for aji," it is changed to bī: bīyate. ūha is in the sense of conceptual thought, with saṃ before it. Some say, "it is short after a prefix of ūhi": samuhyate. Here it is in the sense of applying the naṃ of bahi. Because śransu and dhvansu do not have an it as anubandha, the anuṣaṅga is elided: śrabyate, dhasyate. kapi: bākambyate. madi: mantyate. baci is in the sense of speaking at length: prapañcate. śāsu is in the sense of instructing. By the rule "it for the penultimate of śāsi before an and before a consonant," it becomes ya. By the rule "also of śrāsi, vasi and ghasi," it becomes ṣ: śiṣyate. But from āśāsti, āśābyaste: the distinction is in the statement "only where the object is itself the agent." As it is said:

When the object, even as it is being acted upon, brings itself to completion
by its own qualities as object and agent, know that agent as the object-agent.

By the rule "the object-agent is treated like the object," it takes the object, and there are ātmane endings for the state and the object: pacyate odanaḥ, the rice cooks by itself alone; bhidhyate kuśūla, the granary splits by itself alone. The rule "the object-agent is treated like the object" blocks what it would otherwise receive by being treated like the object. For duha, the procedure of the ātmane endings is to be applied for the agent: dughe gauyayāmepa. Likewise, by the rule "praise and bowing, by itself," there are ātmane endings for the agent: prastuti gauḥ svayameba, namate daṇṭaḥ svayanamepa. kuṣa is in the sense of pulling out. rañja is in the sense of dyeing. By the rule "it should be stated that for kuṣa and raja there are parasmai endings only," there are parasmai endings: kuṣyahi pātaḥ svayameba, rajyate basti sva a ba me ba. Because ati is not an anubandha, the anuṣaṅga is elided. Here it is because yaṇ goes with the ātmane endings: kuṣyate padaḥ svayamepa, rajyata baste svayamega.

This concludes the first section, showing the domain of the vartamānā, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

Now the saptamī is to be stated. By the rule "the saptamī also for accomplishing and so on," the saptamī comes about. As before, there is an, and also guṇa and the change to aya. By the rule "of the sound yā too, in the saptamī," the place of the sound yā is changed to the letter i. Before the letter i, the letter a is also elided, with yeta following: jayata, jayete. By the rule "iyam and iyus for yām and yus," the yam and yus that follow the letter a become iyam and iyus: jayeyuḥ, jayeḥ, jayete, jayeta, jayebaya, jayeba, jayema. In the ātmane endings: bijaata, bijayeyātī, bijayerana, bijayethāḥ, bijayeyāṃthām, bijayedhām, bijayeya, bijayebahi, bijayemahi. It is the same everywhere. ad and the rest: adyāta, adyātām, adyuḥ, hanyātāṃ, hanyuḥ. In the ātmane endings: āghīha, aghrīyātām, āghrīrana. psāyāta. By the rule "also before the saptamī," there is no guṇa: bityata, saṃbidāti, syatā, syatā, syātam, syaḥ. Because the word "also" has a plural sense, it becomes ṣ: abhiṣyāta. mṛja: mṛjyāta. bacyāta, rudyāta, svabyāta, jagṛyāta, daritriyāta, cakṣasyāta, śiṣyāta. These are parasmai forms. cakṣiṅ: byācakṣita, samīrīta, iḍīta, iśīta, āsāṃta, āśīsīta, śayīta, adhiīta, nihūbīte. These are ātmane forms.

dīdvaṣyātā, dviṣyātāṃ, diṣyuṃḥ, dvaiṣīta, dviṣīyātām, paiṣīrana. duha: duhāti, duhātī, duhyuḥ, duhīta, duhīyātām, duhīran. diha: didyāti, dihyātai, dihyuḥ, dihīta, dīhīyātāṃ, dihīrimalaṃha, lihyāta, lihyātāṃ, lihyuḥ, lihīha, lihīāhāṃ, lihīrin. prorṇṇu: yāta, prortuyātām, prorṇṇuyuḥ, prorṇṇuyuṃ, prorṇṇutriyātī, prorṇṇubārina. stuyāta, stuyātī, stuyuḥ, stupītā, tubīyāti, stubīrina. brūyata, brūyātā, brūyuḥ, brūbītaṃ, brūbāṃyātāṃ, brūbīrina. These are the explained forms.

hu: juhuhuyata. bī: bibhīyata. From the statement "it is to be stated as optional for bhī," it optionally becomes i: bibhīyāta. jihrīyāta, piprīyāta. ohāk: where it would become i, by the rule "elision in the saptamī of jihāti," the letter ā is elided: johyuta, johyātā, jehyuṃḥraṃ. ispriyāta, samisprāta, dīdhīṣyāta, dādhanyātā, jajanyāta. These are parasmai forms. nenijyāta, nenijīta, pebijyāta, bebijyīta, bebiṣyāta, pebiṣīta. ḍudāñ: dabyatā, dadīta, dadhyatā, daṃdhāta, bibhrīyāta, bibhrīta. These are forms of both voices. mādamimīta. ohāṅ: jihīta. These are ātmane forms. The same holds for ad and the rest. dibu: bībyāta, sībyeta. ṣuñ: sunuyāta, sunīta, bṛṇuyāta, bṛṇīta. These are forms of both voices. ṭuṭu: ḍunuyāta, hinuyāta, āsnuyāta, dhinuyāta, kraṇuyāta, śṛṇuyāta. ḍutuda: tudeta. rudhari: rundhāta, rundhīta. tanu: tanuyāta, tanrīta. ḍukṛñ: by the rule "also before ya," the letter u is elided: kuryāta, kurbbita, kṛṇīyāta, kṛṇīta, coryata.

In the sense of inviting: iha bhuñjita. In the sense of calling upon: ehāsīta. In the sense of requesting: māṇapakaṃ madhyābayeta. In the sense of asking properly: kinnu khalu bhyo byākaraṇam adhīyīya, utacchindaḍa dhīyīya. In the sense of seeking: labhiya bhikṣī.

For the state and the object there are ātmane forms: jīyeta, adhāyeta, sthīyeta, sthīyeta, śabyeta, bathota, gamyeta, duhyeta. In the same way, the others too are to be seen.

This concludes the second section, showing the domain of the saptamī, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

Now the pañcamī is to be stated. By the rule "the pañcamī for permission," the pañcamī comes about. As before, there is an, together with guṇa and the change to aya. ja: atu. From the statement "in blessing, tātaṇ optionally for tu and hi," there is tātana. By the rule "not where there is an anubandha ṇ, nor before ca, krī and yita," there is no guṇa. Then: jayātāta, jayatām, jayantu. By the rule "of hi after a, but not after hanti," hi is elided: jayā, jānaṇa, jayatāt, jayatām, jayata, jayani, jayāpa, jayāma. In the ātmane endings: bikayatām. By the rule "after a, i for the first letter of ātām and āthām," it becomes the letter i. The letter a with the letter i becomes e, and what follows is also elided: bajiyatām, bijiyantām, bijayasva, bijayethām, bijayadhām, bijayai, bijayābahai, bijayamahai. It is the same everywhere.

ad: attu, tātaṇa, atatāta, attama, adantu. By the rule "dhi for hi after hu and a dhuṭ": addhi, tātaṇa, attata, attām, atta, adāni, adāba, adām. hana: hantu, tātaṇa. By the rule "not where there is an anubandha ṇ, nor before ca, kri and yita," there is no guṇa. By the rule "of hanti before a dhuṭ, in all the roots," na is elided: hatāt, hatām. The penultimate is also removed, and gha comes in: ghāntu. hanti. By the rule "ja before hi," it is changed to the letter ja. There, from the prohibition "but not after hanti," the hi is not elided: jahi, tātāṇa, hatāta, hate, hata, hanāni. By the rule "parasmai also in the dual and the plural," in the parasmai endings, because the later pañcamī endings have guṇa, the penultimate is not elided: hanāba, hanama. In the ātmane endings: āhatām, āghnatām, āghāntām, āhāsva, āghāthām, āhadhvam. By the rule "for all the roots, in the ātmane, where it is not the later pañcamī," there is the pañcamī in the ātmane endings. Because the later endings are not without guṇa, the penultimate is not elided: āhanai, āhanābahe, āhanāimahe.

dveṣa: dveṣṭu, tātaṇa, dveṣḍāta, dviṣṭām, dviṣantu. By the rule "also before hi," there is no guṇa. dhvi is the state. It becomes the third letter of the dhuṭ class, and also the ṭ class: dviḍḍhai, tātaṇa, dviṣṭata, dviṣṭama, dveṣāṇi, dveṣaba, dveṣāma, dveṣṭāpa, dveṣātama, dviṣātama, dvikṣā, dviṣāthami, dviṣḍhama, dveṣa, dveṣābahai, dveṣāmahai. duha: dogdhu, dugdhāma, duhanu, dugdhi, tātaṇa, dugdhāta, dugdhama, dugdha, dugdhāma, duhatāma, duhitāma, dukā. liha: liḍhu, tātaṇa. ḍh is elided and the penultimate is lengthened: līḍhāta, līḍhāma, līhantu, liḍhaṃ, tātaṇa, līḍha, lehīna, lehāba, lehāma, liḍhama, litātāma, lihātama, likṣva. diha: degdhu, tātana, digdhāta, digdhām, dihanutu, digdhi, tāhaṇa, dighata, digdhama, digdha, digdhama, dihātāma, dihatāma, dikṣvaṃ. cakṣiṅ: ācaṣṭama, ācakṣātāma, ācakṣatraṃ. īttama, īṭṭāma, īḍātama, īḍātāma, īḍaṣva. īśa: īṣḍāma, īśātāma, īśatāma, īśiṣva. āsa: āstāma, āsātāma, āsatāma, āssva. śāsa after āṅ: āśāstama, āśāsātāṃ, āśāsatā, āśāsspa. basa: bastam. ṣūṅ: prasutāma, prasubātāma, prasubatāma, prasūṣva, prasubāthāṃ, prasūdhvaṃ. By the rule "for sūti, before the pañcamī," there is no guṇa: prasubai, brasubābatai, brasubāmahe. dīdhīṅ: ādīdhītāma, ādīdhyātāma, ādīdhyātāma, ādīdhīṣva, ādīdhyāthāṃ, ādīdhīdhvama. By the rule "also of dīdhī and vevī," there is no guṇa.

īdīdhyai, īdīdhyābahai, īdīdhyāmahai. In the same way: ābebītāma, ābebyātāma, ābebyatāma, abebīṣva. yu: yautu, tātaṇa, yutāta, yutāma, yubantu, yuhi, hātaṇa, yutāta. iṇa: etu, tātaṇa, itāt, ētāma, yantu, ehi, tātaṇa, itāta. i: idhītām, adhīyātām, adhīmatāṃ, adhāṣva. ik: adhyetu, tātaṇa, adhītāt, idhātāṃ, adhīyantu. bī: bettu, tātaṇa, bītāt, bītām, bīyantu. bā: bātu, tātaṇa, bātāt, bātām, bāntu, bāhi, tātaṇa, bātāt. bida: bettu, bīdāṃ karotu, tātana, bittāna, bittāta, bittāma, bidantu, bidhī, tātaṇa, bīttāt, bittāma, bitta, bidāni.

as is in the sense of being: astu, tātaṇa, stāt, stāma, santu. By the rule "after asti," dhi comes about. By the rule "e for dā and asti, and elision of the reduplication too," the letter s becomes the letter e: edhi, tātaṇa, stāta, stam, sta, āsāni, āsāba, asāma.

mṛjū: mārṣṭu, tātaṇa, mṛṣṭata, mṛṣṭam, mṛjantu, mārjjantu. Because it belongs to bhīja and the rest, it becomes ṣ, and after ṣ it becomes the ṭ class: mṛḍḍhi, tātaṇa, mṛṣṭāta, mṛṣṭam, mṛṣṭa, mārjāni, mārjāba, mārjāma. baci: baktu, tātaṇa, bagtata, baktām, bacantu. The c class becomes k, and then the third letter: bagdhi, baktāta, baktam, bakta, bacāna, bācāka, bacāma. ruda: roditu, tātaṇa, ruditāta, ruditāma, rudantu. It also takes in: prāṇitu, tātaṇa, prānitāt, prāṇitama, prāṇantu. jakṣa: jikṣitu, tātaṇa, jakṣitāt, jakṣitāma, jakṣītu. jāgṛ: jāgrartu, tātaṇa, jagrihātāta, jāgrittama, jagratu. dirdrātu, tātaṇa, daridritāt, daridratām, daridratu. śāsu: śāstu, tātaṇa, śīṣṭata, śīṣṭām, śāsatu. By the rule "śā for śāsti," it becomes dhi, and is also changed to śā: śādhi.

hu: juhotu, tātaṇa, juhutāt, juhutāṃ, juhutu. By the rule "dha for hi after hu and a dhuṭ," dhi comes about: juhudhi. ohāk: jahātu, tātaṇa, jahītāta, jahītāma, jahetu. Before hi too, it is said to become ā and ī: jahāhi, jahīti, jahīti. ḍudāñ: ḍudātu, tātaṇa. By the rule "a of the reduplicated forms," the letter ā is elided, and it becomes the first letter: dattāt, dattāma, dadatu. By the rule "e for dā and asti, and elision of the reduplication too," it becomes e, and the reduplication is elided as well: dehi, tātaṇa, dattāta, dattam, datu. ḍudhāñ: dadhādu, tātaṇa, dhattāta. By the rule "of dadhāti" and so on, it becomes the fourth letter: dhāttam, dadhatu, dhihi, tātaṇa, dhattāta, dhattām, dhatu. ṇajari: ninaktu, tātaṇa, neṇiktāta, neniktaṃ, ninijotu, nenighi, tātaṇa, neniktata, neniktām, nenakti. By the rule "for the reduplicated too, before a vowel, where the penultimate nāmin of any root takes guṇa," the penultimate nāmin does not take guṇa: nenijāna, nenijāb, nenijāma.

dibu: dibyatu, tātaṇa, dībyatāta, dībyātām, dāphyantu. By the rule "of hi after ā, but not after hanta," hi is elided: dībya, tātaṇa, dībyatāta. ṣuñ: sunotu, tātaṇa, sunutāta, sunutām, sunvantu. By the rule "also after nu, from a vikaraṇa that is not reduplicated," hi is elided: sunu, tātaṇa, sunutāt, sunatam, sunuta, sunabāni, sunabāba, sunābāsa, sunutam, sunātām, sunvātāma. tuda: tudatu, tātaṇa, tudatāt, tudātam, tudetām, tudentum. rudhira: ruṇaddhu, tātaṇa, runddhata, rundhāma, rundhāntā, ruṃndhi, tātaṇa, rundhāta, rundhama, rundha. chidira: chinattu, tātaṇa, chintāṃ, chindhāma, chindantu, chindhī, tātaṇa, chindhāt. tanu: tanotu, tātaṇa, tanutāt, tanutām, tanvantu. By the rule "also after the letter u," hi is elided: tanu, tātaṇa, tanutāta, tanutāma, tanuta, tanutāṃma, tamātāma. kriñ: rotu, tātaṇa, kurutāta, kurutām, kurbbantu, kuru, tātaṇa, kurutāt, kurutām, kuruta, karbāma, karabāma, kurutām, kurbbātām, kurbbatāma. ṭukṛñ: krīnātu, krīṇītāt, krītītāma, krītīntā, krītīta, krīṇātāta, krīṇītām, krīṇīta.

bandha is in the sense of binding. The anuṣaṅga is elided: badhnātu, badhnitāta, badhnitāma, badhnantu. By the rule "ānā for hi after a consonant ending," after the consonant ending of krī and the rest, ānā, which bears the name vikaraṇa, comes after it, and hi is elided: badhāna, badhītāt. puṣa is in the sense of flourishing: puṣṇāsu, puṣṇītāt, budhātāṃ, puṣṇantu, buśāṇa, puṣṇutāt. curi takes in, and the light penultimate takes guṇa: corayatu, corayatāt, corayatām, corayantu, coraya, tātaṇa, corayatāt.

By the rule "for ability and for wishing," there is the pañcamī: samutram abiśoṣayāṇo, barbbatam abyutpaṭayāni. For wishing too: jībatu bhabān, nantatu bhabān. It is also used for urging and the rest: kaṭaṃ karotu, iha bhuṅkṣa bhabān, ehāstā bhabān, māṇabakam adhyāpayatu bhabān, kanuṃ khalu byākaraṇam adhyaye, utacchando ḍadhyayai, dehi me bhikṣāṃ.

For the state and the object there are ātmane forms. graha takes yaṇ. By the sūtra "grahi and the rest," there is samprasāraṇa: gṛhyītāṃ. jyā: jīyatām. byadha: bidhyatām. baśa: uṣyatām. byaca: bicyatām. pracCha: pricchatām. praścu: biścyatāma. bhasja: bhṛjjatām. ñiṣvasa: by the sūtra "svapi, vaci and the rest," there is samprasāraṇa: supyātām. paca: for brū too, vaci: ucyatām. yija: yijyatām. ṭupapa: ubyatām. paha: uhyatām. byeñ: saubīyatām. poha: uyatām. hveñ: hūyatām. bada: udyatām. basa: uṣyetām. ṭuoṣi: śūyatām. as: bhu for asti: bhuyatām. khyāñ for cakṣiṅ: ākhyāyatām. bhyi for aji: bīyatām.

This concludes the third section, showing the domain of the pañcamī, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

Now the hyastanī is to be stated. By the rule "also those that have the action of what has happened," there is the hyastanī. By the rule "aṭ at the beginning of the root for the hyastanī, the adyatanī and the kriyātipatti," aṭ comes as an augment.

The letter ṭ of aṭ serves the distinction made in the rule "aṭ of sunoti, suvati, syati, stauti and stobhati after a prefix, and in other cases too." The letter i serves the distinction made in the rule "of di and si after a consonant." The operations of the vikaraṇa an and the rest are as before: ajayatī, ajayatām, ajayan, ajayaḥ, ajayatām, ajayata. This is the procedure for a and a diphthong: ajayama, ajayāma. In the ātmane endings: byajayeta, byajayatām, byajayanta, byajayathāḥ, byajayathām, byajayadhvaṃ, byajaye, byajayābatī, byajayāmayi. It is the same everywhere.

aṅ: an is elided. By the rule "aṭ after aṅ," before the following di and si, the affix at comes in between. By the rule "ā, by exception to the augment aṭ," the letter a becomes the letter ā: ātat, ātām, ādan, adaḥ, āttāma, ātta, ādam, ādma, adma. baśa: by the rule "of di and si after a consonant," di and si are elided, and it becomes ṣ. By the rule "optionally at the end of a word," the letter ṣ becomes the letter ṭ: abaṭ. There is samprasāraṇa. By the rule "afterwards, vṛddhi of the first of the initial vowels," there is vṛddhi: auṣṭāma, auśana. hana is in the sense of harming and of going. an is elided, and there is aṭ. After a consonant, di and si are elided: ahan. By the rule "of hanti before a dhuṭ, where it is not of all the roots," na is elided: ahatām. The penultimate is removed, and gha comes in: aghān, anaṅhatam, ahata, ahanam, ahanva, ahanma. In the ātmane endings: āhata, āghātām, āghāta, āhathāḥ, aghatham, āhadhvam, āghni, āhanvahi, ahanmahi.

yu: there is vṛddhi of u: āyauta, ayutām, ayuban. an: there is vṛddhi of the initial vowels: aita, aitām. By the rule "also of en," it becomes ya. By the rule "before the ya of at," there is iṭ, and the letter a becomes the letter ā: āyan. ik behaves like iṇ, and so does ik: adhyaite, adhyaitām, adhyāyan. ā: ayāt, ayātām. By the rule "for an, after sic, the reduplicated and bid and the rest, but not after bhū," us takes the place of an. And because it belongs to bid and the rest, by the rule "not always when combined," it is optional: ayān. By the rule "the letter a before us," the letter a is elided: ayuḥ.

bida: by the rule "of di and si after a consonant," di and si are elided. By the rule "optionally at the end of a word," it becomes the first letter, and the letter d becomes the letter t: abad, abittām. By the rule "not always when combined," it is optional: abidana, abiduḥ. Before si at the end of a word, it becomes r, because it is stated for those that do not have r by nature as well:

abe, abeta. In the ātmane endings: samabitta, samabidātām. By the rule "it is to be stated as optional after vetti," it optionally becomes r: samabitvata, samabidata.

as: by the rule "after asti, before di and si," there is iṭ: āsīti. By the rule "of asti," the letter a becomes the letter ā: āstām, āsan, āsīḥ. mṛju: an is elided. marja becomes mārjji. Because it belongs to bhṛja and the rest, it becomes ṣ. By the rule "optionally at the end of a word," the letter ṣ becomes the letter ṭ: amārṣa, amṛṣṭam. Before a vowel without guṇa it is to be stated as optional: amṛjana, amarjan. paca: abak, abakttama, abacan. rudira: by the rule "also after ruṅ and the rest," there is iṭ after di and si: arodāti. Some also want aṭ for rud: arodata. By the rule "after rud and the rest, for all the roots," iṭ comes as an augment: aruditām, arudana, arodīḥ, arodaḥ. ñiṣvas: asvabīta, asvapata, asvabitām, asvapan, asvabṣiḥ, asvapaḥ. śvasa: aśvasvita, aśvasata, aśvasitām, aśvasan, aśvasvīḥ, aśvasaḥ. It also takes an: prāṇīta, prāṇata, prāṇitām, prāṇan, prāṇḍiḥ, prāṇaḥ. jakṣa: ajakṣiti, ajakṣitām. By the rule "jakṣa and the rest too," it receives the name "reduplicated." Because it is reduplicated, us takes the place of an: ajakṣuḥ, ajakṣiḥ, ajakṣaḥ. jigṛ: ajāgaḥ, ajāgṛtāma. Because it belongs to jakṣa and the rest, us takes the place of an. By the rule "of the reduplicated, before us," there is guṇa: ajajāgruḥ. daridrī: adaridrāt, adaridritām, adaridruḥ. By the rule "of the a of the reduplicated," the letter ā is elided. cakrāsṛ: by the rule "t for s before the di of the hyastanī," the letter s becomes the letter t: acakāt, acakāstām, acakāsuḥ. By the rule "it is to be stated as optional before the si of the hyastanī," it optionally becomes the letter t: acakāta, acakāḥ. śāsuṃ: āśāt, āśīṣṭāma, āśasuḥ.

cakṣiṅ: byācaṣṭa, byācakṣātā, byācakṣata, byācaṣṭaḥ, byācakṣathām, byācaddham. āṃḍi: by the rule "vṛddhi of the first of the initial vowels," there is vṛddhi: aitta, aiḍātām, aiḍata, aiḍṭhaḥ. iśa: aiṣṭa, aiśātām, aiśati, aiṣṭhāḥ, aiṣāthām, iśadhvam. āsa: āsta, āsātāṃ, āsata. śāsa after āṅ: āśāsta, īśāsātām, āśāsatā, āśāsthaḥ. basa: abasta, abasātām, abasatā. ṣūṅ: asnyuta, asubātām, asubata. śiṅ: aśeta, aśayatām, aśerata. iṅ: adhyaita, adhyayātām, adhyāyāt. dīdhīṅ: adīdhīta, adhīdhyātām, adīdhyata. hnuba: ahnuta, hnupātām, ahnubata. dviṣa: adveṭa, adiṣṭam. Because it belongs to bida and the rest, by the rule "not always when combined," it is optional: adveṣvana, adveṣu, advaṭa, adviṣṭam, adviṣṭa, adveṣam, adiṣva, adviṣma, adviṣṭa, adviṣātām, adviṣata, adviṣṭhaḥ. duha: by the rule "also when removed, before di and si," it becomes the fourth letter, and the letter d becomes the letter dh: adhok, adughām, aduhana, odhok, adugdham, adoham, aduhva, aduhma, adugdha, aduhātāma, aduhata, adugdhā, aduhāthām, adugdhām. diha: adhek, adigdhām, adihan, adigdha, adihatām, adihata. lihi: aleṭ. Before ḍh, ḍh is elided, and the penultimate is also lengthened: alīḍhām, aliḍhan, aliḍha, alihātaṃ, alihāta. By the rule "also in the hyastanī," from the exception to vṛddhi, there is always guṇa: brauṛṇuta, prauṛṇutām, prorṇuban, prauṛṇuḥ, prauṛṇuta, prauṛṇubātām, prauṛṇubata. bruñ: by the rule "īṭ in the first person after brū," there is īṭ.

abrabīt, abrūtām, abrūban, abrūta, abrūpātām, abrupata. tu: ajuhota, ajuhātām, ajuhabuḥ. ñibhī: abibheta, ābebhetāṃ, abhibhitām, abibheyuḥ. By the rule "of reduplicated stems, before us," there is guṇa. hrī: ajihreta, ajehrītām, ajihrayuḥ. pṛ: apibaḥ, abisṛtām, apibaruḥ. ohāk: ajihāt. "In all sārvadhātuka endings beginning with a consonant, i is optionally to be stated": ajahitām, ajahuḥ. ṛ: aiyaḥ, eyṛtām, eyaruḥ. ṇijir: anenik, āneniktām, anenijuḥ, anenikta, anenijātām, anenijata. bijir: abebek, abebiktām, abebijuḥ, abebikta, abebijātām, abebijata. biṣḷ: abebeṭā, abebeṣṭām, abebiṣuḥ, ababiṣṭa, abebiṣātāṃ, abebiṣata. ḍudāñ: adadāt, adattām, adaduḥ, adatta, adadātām, adadata. dhā: adādhāt. By the rule beginning "of dedhāti, also before t and th," there is the fourth letter: the letter d becomes the letter dh. adhāttām, adadhuḥ, adhatta, adadha tām, adadhata. ḍubhṛñ: abibhaḥ, abibhṛtām, abibharu, abibhṛt, abibhratām, abhibhrata. māṅ: amimīti, amimātāṃ, amimata. ohāṅ: ajihīta, ajihītām, ajihata. Likewise ad and the rest.

dibu: ādebyata, adībyatam, adībyan, adībyaḥ, adībyatam, adībyata, adībyam, adībyāba, adhībyāmaḥ. ṣuñ: asunota, asunutām, asunvan, asunoḥ, asunutam, asunuta, asunabam, asunama, asunam, usunva, asunma. tud: atudat.

rudhir: aruṇata, arunddham, arundhan. By the rule beginning "before si at the end of a word," there is also ṇ. aruṇaḥ, aruṇata, arundham, arundha, aruṇadhi, arundha, arundhā, arundhā, arundhātam, arundhāta. bhidir: abhinata, abhinattāṃ, abhindan. Optionally also: abhinaḥ. In the passive: bhinata, abhintā, abhinātām, abhindāta. tṛha: atriṇeta, atṛṇḍhām, atriṃhan.

tanu: ahanotam, atanutām, atenvan, atanoḥ, atanutām, atanuta, atanupama, atanuba, atanuma, atanu, atanma.

krī: akrīṇāt, akrīnītām, akrīṇan, akrītāḥ, akrīṇītām, akrīṇīta, akrīṇām, akrīṇība, akrīṇīma, akrīttita.

cur: acoryat, acoryātām, acorayan. In the impersonal and the passive there is the ātmanepada: ajīyata, ajīyātām, ajīyanta, adyata, idādyata, asūyata, atudyata, atudhyata, atāyata, atanyata, akrīyata, acormata. Likewise in all cases.

This is the fourth chapter, setting out the domain of the hyastanī, in the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown. Thus the sārvadhātuka is complete.

From here on is what is not sārvadhātuka. Here the adyatanī is to be stated. yā: in the sense of reaching. By the rule "and those that have a past action," the adyatanī. By the rule "at the beginning of the root, aṭ, before the hyastanī, the adyatanī, and the conditional," the augment aṭ comes at the beginning of the root. The letter ṭ of aṭ serves to distinguish it in the rule "after a preverb, of suniti, subati, syate, staute, and stobhati, also before aṭ and elsewhere." By the rule "before the adyatanī, sic," there is sic. The letter i and the letter c serve to distinguish it in the rule "of roots ending in a vowel, before sic in the parasmaipada." By the rule "after sic," there is aṭ before the s endings. By the rule beginning "yami, rami," iṭ also comes at the end of sic. By the rule "after iṭ, also before īṭ," sic is elided. There is lengthening of the like vowels, and what follows is also elided: ayāsīt, ayāsīṣṭām. By the rule "after sic, a reduplicated stem, and vid and the rest, but not after bhū, an becomes us," the ān that follows sic is changed into us. ayasiṣuḥ, ayāsīḥ, ayāsviṣṭaṃ, ayāsiṣṭa, ayāsviṣṭam, a yāsiṣmam. bā: abāsīt. bhā: abhāsit. ṣṇā: asnāsīt. glai: by the rule "for roots ending in a diphthong, ā, when not before a vikaraṇa," there is the letter ā: aglasīt. iṇ: by the rule "gā for iṇ," it is changed into gā. By the rule "after iṇ, sthā, dā, pibati, and bhū, before sic in the parasmaipada," sic disappears: agāt, āgātām. By the rule "of ā, before us," the letter ā is elided: aguḥ. ik: by the sūtra "for ik, as for iṇ," it is changed into gā: adhyagāt, adhyagātām, adhyaguḥ. stha: asthāta, asthātāma, asthaḥ. Those that bear its name, dāṇ, ḍudāñ and do: adāt, adātām, aduḥ. dheṭ: adhāta, adhātām, adhuḥ. pā, in the sense of drinking: apāt, apātām, apuḥ. gai, in the sense of sound. bā, in the sense of protecting. With these, sic does not disappear: aghāsīt, agāsīṣṭām, aghāsīṣuḥ, apāsīt, apāsiṣṭām, apāsiṣuḥ. By the explanation "for ghrā, śā, cchā, sā, and dheṭ, it is optionally to be stated," sic disappears: aghrāt, aghrāsīt. śo, in the sense of making thin: aśāt, aśāsīt. In the sense of cutting: acchat, acchāsīt. ṣo, in the sense of bringing to an end: asāt, asāsīt. dheṭ: adhāt, adhāsīt. By the explanation "for śva and dheṭ, it is optionally to be stated," there is caṇ. The letter ṇ serves to distinguish it in the rule "not with a ṇ marker, nor before ce and krīyita." The letter c serves to distinguish it in the rule "before caṇ, the parokṣā, the cākrīyita, and roots ending in san." By this very rule the root is reduplicated. By the rule "in what is not sārvadhātuka, ā is elided," the letter ā is elided: adabhat, addhatam, adan.

In the ātmanepada sic does not disappear. By the rule "for sthā and dā, before the adyatanī in the ātmanepada, i," there is the letter i. By the rule "after a short vowel also, when there is no iṭ," sic is elided. By the rule "and of sthā and dā," there is no guṇa: samasthāta, samasthaṣātām, samasthaṣata, samasthithāḥ, samasthiṣāthām. By the rule "after a root ending in a nāmin vowel, before the āśīḥ, the adyatanī, and the parokṣā, dh," there is ḍh: samasthiḍhvam, samasthiḍvi, samasthiṣvahi, samasthiṣmahi. adita, adiṣātām, adiṣata, adhita. cakṣeṅ: by the rule "khyāñ for cakṣiṅ," it is changed into khyāñ. asu: by the rule "after bāci, khyāti, mi, bi, si, ci, and hva, aṇ," there is the affix aṇ. The letter ṇ serves to distinguish it, as before. By the rule "in what is not sārvadhātuka, a is elided," the letter a is elided.

ākhyad, ākhyatam, ākhyan. In the ātmanepada: ākhyata, ākhyatām, akhyanta. hveñ: aṇ, as before. āhvata, āhvatām, āhān. Here, from the general rule that the arrangement is optional, by the rule "for lis and the rest, optionally in the ātmanepada," the affix aṇ is optional: āhvata, āhvetām, āhvanta, ahvāsta, āhvāsātam, āhasata.

ṅaridrā: because the augment together with iṭ is not invariable, it is only by the explanation. adaridrīta, adaridriṣḍām, adaridriṣuḥ, adaridrāsīt, adaridrāsiṣṭam, adaridrasiṣuḥ.

ciñ: by the rule "of roots ending in a vowel, before sic in the parasmaipada," there is vṛddhi: āciṣīt, acaiṣam, acaiṣuḥ. In the ātmanepada there is no vṛddhi: acaṣṭa, aceṣātam, aceṣata.

id: before the adyatanī and the conditional, the change into gī is to be accepted as optional: abhyagiṣṭe; in the other alternative: adhyeṣṭa. ji: ajeṣāt, byajeṣṭa, parājeṣṭa.

ṭuośvi: there is the augment it. The rule "guṇa for śvi and jāgṛ" gives guṇa as an exception to vṛddhi: aśvayāti, aśvayiṣṭām, aśvayiśutho. By the rule "for śvi and dheṭ, it is optionally to be stated," there is caṇ, and the root is reduplicated. It is changed into iy: aśiśviyat, aśiśiyatām, aśiyan. By the rule "also of jrā, śvi, standhu, mrucu, mlucu, and glu," the affix aṇ is optional. By the rule "for śvi, at is to be stated," the letter i is changed into the letter a. Then comes the procedure for a and the diphthong: aśvat, aśvatām, aśvan.

śviñ: by the rule "after śvi, pru, sru, gami, and roots ending in grāti, caṇ in the sense of the agent," there is the affix caṇ. The root is reduplicated: aśiśriyad.

Roots ending in ī. ṇīñ: aiṣita, anaiṣṭām, aneṣuḥ. ḍīṅ: aḍayiṣṭa. śīṅ: aśayiṣṭa. bhī: ābheṣīta. Joined with mā: by the rule "not when joined with mā and mā sma," the augment aṭ is prohibited. Some say that the teaching of the augment is not invariable. īṭ does not occur: mā bhaiḥ.

Roots ending in u. hu: ahauṣīta, ahauṣṭam, ahauṣuḥ. By the rule "after ṣṭuñ, su, and dhuñ, in the parasmaipada," there is iṭ: astābīt, asābīt, adhābīt. In the ātmanepada: astoṣṭa, asoṣṭa, adhoṣṭa. dhūñ, in the sense of shaking: madhābīt, adhābiṣṭuma. yu: ayābīta. ru: arābīta. urṇṇuñ: in the rule "also before the hyastanī," the word "also" here serves to include what is not stated. Therefore before iṭ there is optionally guṇa. u is changed into ab: prauṛṇubīt. In the guṇa alternative, by the explanation "optionally for urṇoti," there is vṛddhi: prorṇṇabīt, prauṛṇubīt. By the rule "after śri, dru, sru, kami, and roots ending in kāritaṃ, caṇ in the sense of the agent," there is caṇ in the sense of the agent: adudrubat, asusrubat.

Roots ending in ū. lūñ: alābīta. būñ: abābīt. In the ātmanepada: ilabiṣṭa, ababiṣṭa. bhū: by the sūtra "in, sthā, and the rest," sic disappears. By the rule "when the sic of bhū disappears," there is no guṇa. By the rule "after bhū, when sic disappears," there is no iṭ: abhūta, abhūtāṃ. Because of the prohibition "not after bhū," an does not become us. By the rule "for bhū, b, before the parokṣā and the adyatanī ending in ri," the letter b is the augment.

Roots ending in ṛ: ākārṣīt, āhāṣīt. In the ātmanepada, with "and before sic and the āśīḥ in the ātmanepada" carried over, by the rule "and of those ending in ṛ," there is no guṇa. By the rule "after a short vowel also, when there is no iṭ," sic is elided: akṛta, akṛṣrātām, akṛṣrata, akṛthāḥ, akṛṣāthām. By the rule beginning "after a root ending in a nāmin vowel, before the āśīḥ," there is ḍh: akṛḍhvama, akṛṣi, akṛṣvahi, akṛṣamahi, ahrit. mṛṅ: by the rule "mṛṅ also before the āśīḥ and the adyatanī," it takes the ātmanepada: amṛta. bṛñ: abārīt. From the rule "after ṛt, for bṛṅ and briñ, iṭ is optional before san," and "before sic and the āśīḥ, in the ātmanepada," and by the rule "what is denoted by ṛti after an initial conjunct and so on is not established when it has become external," the augment iṭ is optional: prābariṣṭa, prābriha. "After ṛt, also for bṛṅ and bṛñ, there is optionally a long vowel, that is, of iṭ, when not before the parokṣā and the āśīḥ." By the separate formulation "it is not prescribed before sic in the parasmaipada," the vowel is optionally long: prābarīṣṭa. By the rule "in the parasmaipada also, after puṣ and the rest, dyut and the rest, those with the marker ḷ, irta, sarti, and śāsti," there is the affix aṇ. By the rule "for arti and sarti, before aṇ," there is guṇa. ṛ: ārat. sṛ: asarat. jāgṛ: by the rule "guṇa for śvi and jāgṛ," guṇa replaces vṛddhi as an exception: ajāgārīt.

Roots ending in ṝ. stṝñ: astārṝt. By the rule "it is not prescribed before sic in the parasmaipada," the vowels are long: astāriṣṭām, astāriṣuḥ. In the ātmanepada, by the rule beginning "after ṛt, for bṛṅ and bṛñ," iṭ is optional: astariṣṭa, astarīṣātām, āstirīṣata. In the alternative without iṭ, guṇa is prohibited here by the rule "and of those ending in ṛt," because the letter ṛ is meant as an indicator of the class. By the rule "ir for a root ending in ṛt when there is no guṇa," there is ir. By the rule beginning "of a nāmin before r and v," the penultimate is lengthened: astīrṣṭa, astīrṣṭatām, astīrṣata. By the rule "also of jṝ, śvi, stanbhu, mrucu, mlucu, and glucu," the affix aṇ is optional. By the rule "for arti and sarti, before aṇ," there is guṇa, because the letter ṛ is meant as an indicator: ajarat, ajārīt.

Roots ending in a consonant. bac: the a is also lengthened: abākṣit. By the rule "after a dhuṭ, before a dhuṭ also," sic is elided: āpākhāma, ābākṣuḥ. In the ātmanepada: apañ, apakṣātām, apakṣeta. By the separate formulation "of a also, a long vowel," even a vowel that is not the penultimate is lengthened. bhañj: abhādhīta. bas: abāssīta. bah: by the rule "ḍh for h," there is ḍh. By the rule "k for ṣ and ḍh before s," there is k. Because of the conditioning factor, there is ṣ: abākṣita. When the lengthening has been made by the rule "of a also, a long vowel," there is ḍh by the rule "ḍh for h." By the rule "after a dhuṭ, before a dhuṭ also," sic is elided. By the rule "after gh, ḍh, dh, and bh, but not after dhā, dh for t and th," there is dh.

By the rule "after ṣ and the ṭ class, the ṭ class in place of the t class," the ṭ class is substituted. By the rule "for sahi and vaha, o in place of the letter a," ḍh is elided and the letter a also becomes o: aboḍhāma, abākṣuḥ, abākṣīḥ. In the ātmanepada: aboḍha, abakṣātam, abākṣata, aboḍhāḥ.

rudhir: by the rule "optionally after a root with the marker ir," the affix aṇ is optional in the parasmaipada: arudhat, akṣudata, abhidata, acchidata, atraṃdata, acchidata. When there is sic, by the rule "of roots ending in a consonant, when there is no iṭ," there is vṛddhi. By the rule "for the unvoiced, not before ṣiṭ, the first," the first letter of the class is substituted: arautsita, akṣautsita, abhaitsīta, acchaitsī, atāttsīta, acchattsīta. In the dual, by the rule "after a dhuṭ, before a dhuṭ also," sic is elided: arauddhāma, akṣaudhāma, abhaittāma, acchettāma, atārttām, acchattām. In the ātmanepada, by the rule "and before sic and the āśīḥ in the ātmanepada," there is no guṇa. By the rule "after a dhuṭ, before a dhuṭ also," sic is elided: aruddha, akṣatḍa, abhitta, acchitta, adṛtta, acchitta.

budh, in the sense of understanding: sic is elided: abuddha. By the rule "optionally after dīp, jan, budh, pūri, tāyi, and pyāyi," there is optionally ic: abodhi.

dibu: adebīt. kuṣ: akoṣīta. muṣ: amoṣīta. By the rule "optionally for pha, ṭha, and the rest beginning with a consonant, with iṭ, those not having the marker iṭ, those ending in gaṅ(?), kṣaṇ, and śvas," the vowel is optionally long: apāṭhīta, apathīta, akāṇīta, akaṇīta, arāṇīta, araṇīta. By the rule "and of vad, vraj, and those ending in r and l," the vowel is always long. vad: abādīt. braj: abrājīta. cari: acārīte. kṣar: akṣarīta. cal: acālīta. jval: ajrālīt. Because of the prohibition in the rule "not with the marker it, and of kṣaṇ and śvas," roots with the marker et and the rest are not lengthened. rage, in the sense of suspicion; lage, in the sense of attachment; ṣage; hrage: aragīta, alagīta, asagīta, ahragīta. hlage: ahlagīta. sthage: asthagīta, asthagiṣṭāma, asthagiṣuḥ. grah: agrahīta. ṭubam: abamīta. byay: abyayīta. kṣaṇā: akṣaṇīta. śvas: aśvasita.

anju: since it bears the marker ut, an option would apply; but by the rule "after añji, before sic," there is always iṭ: āñjāta. By the rule "and of yami, rami, and roots ending in āt, the end of si," there is iṭ and also the ending of si. After the augment there is anusvāra: ayaṃsvīt. By the rule "after vi, āṅ, and pari, before ra," it takes the parasmaipada: byaraṃsīta, āraṃsīta, paryaraṃsīta.

In the ātmanepada: "after hani, before sic, the ātmanepada is to be seen; also after yami in the sense of making manifest." This is stated only in the explanation, in the sense of giving away a bride. By the rule "after gami likewise, before sic and the āśīḥ," the fifth letter is elided. By the rule "after a short vowel also, when there is no iṭ," sic is elided: āyata, āyasātān, āyasata. In the sense of giving away a bride, it is stated only in the explanation: upāyaṃsta kanyāṃ chāttraḥ, upāyata kanyāṃ chāttraḥ.

kamu: by the explanation "for kamu, ay and the rest, optionally in what is not sārvadhātuka," in is elided. When it is without iniṅ, by the rule "after śrī, dru, sru, kami, and roots ending in kārita, caṇ in the sense of the agent," there is caṇ in the sense of the agent. By the rule "before caṇ, the parokṣā, the cekrīyita, and roots ending in san," the root is reduplicated: acakramata, acakrametām, acakamanta. When there is iniṅ, there is caṇ because it ends in kārita. By the rule beginning "before in, of the like," the vowel is short. Before caṇ the root is reduplicated. Because by the rule beginning "of the like, not effaced" it becomes as before san, there is i. By the rule "a long vowel for a light syllable," it is lengthened: acīkamata, acīkametām, acīkamanta.

han: by the rule "also before the adyatanī," it is changed into bardhi. Because it has not become a root ending in n, there is no prohibition of iṭ under the rule "after hani and manyati, after n." Because it does not end in n, there is iṭ. By the rule "optionally for those beginning with a consonant, with iṭ, not having the marker iṭ, ending in hmi, kāṇ, and śvas," it is optionally not lengthened, because the indicated i takes its own form: abadhīta, abadhīṣṭāma, abadhiṣuḥ. Here, from the rule that the arrangement is optional, by "smṛti(?)" it is optionally changed into badhi in the ātmanepada. By the rule beginning "after hani, before sic, the ātmanepada is to be seen," the fifth letter is elided: āhata, āhasātāma, āhasata, āpadhiṣṭa, abadhiṣātāma, āpadhiṣata.

Here, from the general rule that the arrangement is optional, by the explanation "optionally after spṛś, mṛś, kṛṣ, tṛp, and dṛp," there is sic: assārkṣāti, aspārṣṭama, aspārkṣuḥ, amārkṣuki, akārkṣate, atārssita, atārbtām, atārpsuḥ, adārpsāti. By the rule "everywhere, of roots ending in a consonant that have no iṭ," there is vṛddhi. When, by the rule "optionally for spṛś and the rest," the letter a is the augment: asprakṣīta, aspraṣṭāṃ, asprakṣuḥ, asprakṣīta, atrassīta, atrastāma, atrussuḥ, adrāssīta. In the other alternative, by the rule "saṇi after a root ending in ṣit, with no iṭ, having a nāmin penultimate, other than dṛś," there is saṇ: aspṛkṣata, amṛkṣata, akṛkṣata. For tṛbi and dṛpi, because they belong to puṣ and the rest, there is aṇ: atripata, atribtām, atripanā, adripata, adriptām, adripa.

By the rule "for sṛj and dṛś, the letter a is the augment after the vowel before a dhuṭ, when guṇa or vṛddhi would apply," the letter a is the augment. The a is also lengthened: asrākṣita, asvaṣṭām, asvākṣuḥ, adrākṣīta. For dṛśi, san is to be prohibited by the words "other than dṛś"; then there is sic. Otherwise, by the rule "optionally after a root with the marker ir," there is aṇ. By the rule "for arti and sarti, before aṇ," there is guṇa, because the letter ṛ is meant as an indicator: adārśat, adarśatām, adarśana.

biśi: there is saṇ: abikṣat, abikṣatām, abikṣana. śliṣ: by the words "in the sense of embracing," ṇ comes only in the sense of embracing: aślikṣat tanyāṃ chāttraḥ. Otherwise, because it belongs to puṣ and the rest, there is only aṇ: samāśliṣata. dviṣ: adbikṣata. druh: there is gh. The first becomes the fourth, that is, the letter dh.

By the rule "for the unvoiced, not before ṣiṭ, the first," the first letter is substituted, that is, the letter k. Because of the conditioning factor, there is ṣ:

adhukṣata. deh: adhikṣata. lih: there is ḍh: alikṣata. guh: there is ḍh: aghukṣata. With "the arrangement is optional" carried over, from the statement "for duh, dih, and lih, in the ātmanepada before the t class alone, in the alternative with saṇ, sic also does not occur," there is saṇ in one alternative: adugdha, adhukṣata, adigdha, adhikṣata, alīḍha, alikṣata, aguḍha, aghukṣata. By the rule "a is elided before a vowel, for saṇ, when not in the plural(?)," the letter a of saṇ is elided: aghukṣātam, aghukṣānta, aghuḍhāḥ, aghukṣāthaḥ, aghukṣāthām, aghuḍhama, aghuḍhvam, aghukṣi, aghukṣābahi, aghukṣamahi.

From dahi, because it does not have a nāmin penultimate, saṇ does not occur; there is sic: adhākṣāta, adāgdhami, adhākṣuḥ. By the rule "dh for the h of nah and nāh," there is dh. By the rule "for the unvoiced, not before ṣiṭ, the first," the first letter is substituted: anātsīta, anūddhūma, anātsuḥ.

asu: by the rule "after asu, baci, khyāti, li, si, ca, and hva, aṇ," there is the affix aṇ. By the rule "th at the end of asyati," the letter th is the augment: āstha, āsthatāṃ, āsthana. By the rule "after a preverb, for asyati and uhi, optionally," it takes the ātmanepada: samāsthatā, samāsthetām, samāsthanta.

baci for brū. paca, in the sense of explaining, optionally. There is aṇ. By the rule "before aṇ, o for the penultimate of baci," there is i: apacate. lip: alipata. sic: asicada. By the rule "for lip and the rest, optionally in the ātmanepada," there is aṇ: byalipta, byalipata, asikta, asicata.

By the sūtra of puṣ and the rest, there is aṇ in the form. puṣ and the rest are: gṛdhu, in the sense of longing, up to the end of the list. puṣ: apuṣat. śuṣ: aśuṣat. duṣ: aduṣat. śliṣ: these are the examples. svid: asridat. kṣudh: akṣudhat. śudh: aśudhat. ṣidhu: asidhat. radh: aradhat. tribi and tripi have been shown. amuhat, adruhat, asnuhata, asnihat. ṇaśu: naśu: "for naś and śami, before aṇ, e is to be stated": aneśāt, aśemata, adamata, atamata. śamu: aśramata, abhramat, akṣamat, akāmat, amadat. asu has been given as an example. yasu: ayasat, atasat, adasat. bhranśu: abhraśat. And so forth.

dyut and the rest: it is said that this very dyut and the rest also take the parasmaipada, so as to establish aṇ in the parasmaipada for dhut and the rest: adyutat, aśubhata, arucat, aśvitat, akṣubhat, abṛtat, asyadat. kṛpū: where r is heard, l is heard: aklipata. In the ātmanepada there is no an: byadyotiṣṭa, abartiṣṭa, abarttiṣṭa.

Those with the marker ḷiṭ: gamḷ: agamata. pṛsḷ: asibat. śakḷ: aśakata. mucḷ: amucat. By the rule "ghāsḷ for ad before san and the adyatanī," there is ghāsḷ:

aghasata. lusḷ: ulubata. bidḷ: abidat. By the rule beginning "after saṃ, gam, ṛcch," it takes the ātmanepada. By the rule "after gami likewise, before sic and the āśīḥ," the fifth letter is optionally elided: samagaṃta, samagaṃsta, samagasātāma, samagaṃsātām, samagasata, samagaṃsata. patḷ: by the rule "baste for pati," it is changed into basti: ababtat. arti and sarti have been shown.

śābu: by the rule "it for the penultimate of śāsi before aṇ and a consonant," there is i. By the rule "and of śasi, pisi, and ghasi," there is ṣ: aśiṣat. jṝ and śvi have been shown. stabhu is a root that comes from the sūtra. By the explanation "optionally for jṝ, śvi, stambhu, mrucu, and mlucu," there is aṇ. The anuṣaṅga is elided: astabhat. Preceded by vi: by the rule "also after brate(?), after stambhi," there is ṣ: byaṣṭabhat, byaṣṭabhatām, byaṣṭabhan. mrucu and mlucu have the sense of going: amrucat, amlucat. glucu means stealing, and it is also used for going: aglucat. When there is sic: astambhāti, amocīt, amlocīta, aglocīt. After gruñc there is always sic: agluñcīt.

By the rule "after kuṭ and the rest, except before in, ic, and aṭ," guṇa is prohibited: akuṭīta, aghuṭīt, and so on. pad, in the sense of going: by the rule "after padi, ic in the first person singular of the ātmanepada," there is ic. The letter c serves to distinguish it in the rule "before in, ic, and aṭ, the penultimate a is long, and there is vṛddhi also of the nāmins." By this very rule the vowel is lengthened. By the rule "after ic, t is elided," the following letter t is elided: udabādi. In the dual and the rest there is only sic: udabatsāta. By the rule "after a dhuṭ, before a dhuṭ also," sic is elided. Before the unvoiced, the first letter is substituted: udapatthāḥ.

After dīb, jan, budh, pūri, tāyi, and byāyi, the affix ic is optional: adībi, adīpiṣṭa, adīpiṣātām, adīpiṣata. By the rule "and of jani and badhi," there is a short vowel: ajani, ajaniṣṭa. budhrir: budh: abodhi, abuddha. By the rule beginning "of a root whose third is the first and which ends in gh, ḍh, dh, bh," the first becomes the fourth, that is, the letter b becomes the letter bh: abhutsātām, abhutsata, abuddhāḥ. astūri(?), apūri, apūriṣṭa. atāyi, atāyiṣṭa, atāyiṣātām, atāyiṣātām, atāyiṣata, atāyiṣṭāḥ. abyāyi, abyāyiṣṭa, abyāyiṣātāṃ, abyāyiṣata.

By the rule "also in the impersonal and the passive," there is ic. By the rule "for roots ending in āt, āyis before ic," there is āyis: ādāyi, adhāyi. In the dual and the rest there is only sic. By the rule "for sthā and dā, e before the adyatanī in the ātmanepada," there is i: adiṣātām, adiṣata, adithāḥ, adhiṣātām, adhiṣata. When, in the sense of the impersonal and the passive, before its sic, the āśīḥ, and the śvastanī, it becomes like ic, from the statement "for vowels, han, grah, and dṛśi, iṭ is optionally to be stated as like ic," then: adāyiṣātām, adāyiṣata, asthāyi, asthīṣātām, asthīṣata, asthāyiṣātām, asthāyiṣata, anāyi, aneṣātām, aneṣata. iṭ is like ic.

anāyiṣātām, anāyiṣata. śriñ: aśrāyi, aśrāyaṣītām, aśrāyiṣata. ayāyi, ayāyiṣātām, ayāyiṣata. anābi, alābi, abābi, akāri, ahāri.

han: the penultimate is lengthened. By the rule "gh for the h of hanti before in and ic," the letter h becomes the letter gh: aghīni. iṭ is like ic: aghīniṣātām, aghāniṣata. Here, because the general word "optionally" states an arrangement, in the ātmanepada it is optionally changed into badhi: abadhi, abadhiṣātām, abadhiṣata. By the rule beginning "after hani, before sic, the ātmanepada is to be seen," the fifth letter is elided: āhaṣātām, āhaṣātām, āha ṣata.

grah: agrāhaṃ, agrāhiṣātām, agrāhiṣata. dṛśir: aderśi, aderśiṣatām, aderśiṣaha. By the rule "and before sic and the āśīḥ in the ātmanepada," there is no guṇa: adṛkṣatām, adṛkṣata. duh: adohaṃ, adhuṣātām, adhukṣata.

śamu: by the rule "not for those with iṭ ending in am, except bakami and cam," treatment like ic is prohibited: aśami, aśamiṣātāṃ, aśamiṣata. From yami, rami, and nami, because they have no iṭ, the penultimate is lengthened: ayūmi, arāmi, anāmi.

bhaj: abhāja. By the rule "after añji, before sic," the augment iṭ comes: āñji, āñjiṣātām, āñjiṣata. bhañj: abhañji, abhadkṣātām, abhādkṣata. By the rule "for radhi and jabh, before a vowel," the letter n is also the augment: arandhi. By the rule "not for radhi before iṭ, unless in the parokṣā," the letter n does not become the augment: aradhiṣātā, aradhiṣata. jabh: the letter n is the augment: ajambhi, ajambhiṣātām, ajambhiṣata. By the rule "for rabhi and labhi, when not before a vikaraṇa or the parokṣā," the letter n is the augment: prārambhi, prārapsātām, prarapsata. ḍulabhaṣ: by the rule "after labhi without a preverb, it is to be stated as optional," the letter n is optionally the augment: alambhi, alābhi. With a preverb, the letter n is always the augment: brālambhi.

By the rule "the agent of an action is like the object," the agent of an action becomes like the object. By the rule "and before the adyatanī, for roots ending in a vowel, optionally," the impersonal is optionally like the object: alāpi kedāraḥ svayameba, alabiṣṭa kadāraḥ svayameba, apābi yabarāśiḥ svayameba, apabiṣāya barāśiḥ svayameba, atāri kaṭaḥ svayameba, akṛta kaṭaḥ svayameba, ahāri bhāraḥ svayameba, ahrita bhāraḥ svayameba. duh:

by the rule "before the adyatanī, for roots ending in a vowel, optionally," it is optionally like the object in the impersonal: adohi gauḥ svayameba. With saṇ: adhukṣata gauḥ svayameba. Because it belongs to kir and the rest, ic is prohibited after rudh: arudha gauḥ svayamiba. Because "the arrangement is optional" is a general rule, ic is prohibited by "not of tabi after anu."

Thus, in the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown, the fifth chapter, setting out the domain of the adyatanī.

The parokṣā is to be stated. By this rule, "the parokṣā," there is the parokṣā. By the rule "iṭ is the augment at the beginning of a non-sārvadhātuka ending that begins with a consonant other than y," iṭ is the augment. From the restriction in the rule "only after sṛ, bibhṛ, stu, dru, śru, and sru, before the parokṣā," because only after sṛ and the rest is there no iṭ before the parokṣā, it is said that elsewhere the ending takes iṭ. By the rule "before caṇ, the parokṣā, the cekrīyita, and roots ending in san," the root is reduplicated. The meaning of the rule "the first consonant of the reduplicated syllable is to be kept" is that it is to be preserved, and the first is not to be elided. By the rule "short," the vowel is shortened.

Roots ending in ā. yā, in the sense of reaching: by the rule "after the letter a, au for aṭ," aṭ becomes au. By the rule "and before a diphthong," the letter ā is elided: yayau. By the rule "in what is not sārvadhātuka, ā is elided," the letter ā is elided: yatuḥ, yayuḥ. "Always ā before dyatbatī(?). For roots ending in a vowel, and for sṛj and dṛś, iṭ is optional before thal." Although iṭ would always be absent before trica, by the rule "if bribye(?), ad, and the rest, always iṭ before thal," iṭ is optionally the augment: yayātha. By the rule "before iṭ," the letter ā is elided: yayītha, yayathuḥ, yaya, yayau, yayiba, yayima. For the object, in the ātmanepada: yaye, yayāte, yayira, yayiṣe, yayāthe, yayadhve. Here the meaning is that, because the rule "after the root" has the earlier term as its name, it is not invariable. Therefore, saying that for these, with iṭ, the explanation is established, there is optionally dh: yayiḍhvi, yaye, yayibahe, yayimahe.

bā: babau, babatuḥ, babuḥ, babātha, babitha.

sthā: the root is reduplicated. By the rule "the unvoiced after ṣiṭ," the unvoiced letter after ṣiṭ is kept; the meaning is that ṣiṭ is elided. By the rule "the first and third for the second and fourth," the letter th becomes the letter t: tasthau, tasthatuḥ, tasthuḥ, tasthātha, tasthitha.

glai: by the rule "for roots ending in a diphthong, ā, when not before a vikaraṇa," there is ā. The c class in place of the k class: jaglau, jaglatuḥ, jagluḥ. In the impersonal: jaglau. mlau: mamlau, mamlatuḥ, mamluḥ. In the ātmanepada: mamli.

ḍudāñ: dadau, dadatuḥ, daduḥ, dade. ḍudhāñ: ḍhau, dadhatuḥ, dadhuḥ, dadhe.

cakṣiṅ: by the rule "optionally before the parokṣā," it is optionally changed into khyāñ. The root is reduplicated. The c class in place of the k class; the first in place of the second: ācakhyau, ācakhyatuḥ, ācakhyuḥ, ācakhye, ācakhyāte, ācakhyīre. Because it bears the marker ñ, it takes the endings of both voices: acacikṣe, ācacakṣāte, ācacakṣire.

Roots ending in e. ji, in the sense of conquering: by the rule "gi for ji before san and the parokṣā," it is changed into gi. The root is reduplicated. By the rule beginning "of a, the penultimate," there is vṛddhi. By the rule "āy for ai," it is changed into ay: jigāya. By the rule "and before the parokṣā," there is no guṇa. By the rule "for the letter i, not of a former reduplicated syllable, before a, when not a single letter," there is the letter y: jigyatuḥ, jigyuḥ. Before thal, eṭ is optional. There is guṇa and the change into ay: jigyitha, jegetha, jegyathuḥ, jigya. Before the latter aṭ there is optionally vṛddhi: jigāya, jigala, jigyiba, jiglima. In the ātmanepada, by the rule "in the ātmanepada, before all," there is no guṇa.

bijigye, bijigyāte, bajigyire, parājigye.

Ciñ, in the sense of heaping up. By the rule "for ci, optionally ki," it is optionally changed into ki: cikāya, cigyātuḥ, cikyuḥ, ceketha, cikayitha, cikyathuḥ, cikya, cikama, cikaya, cikyiba, cikyima; cicāya, cicyatuḥ, cacyuḥ, cicetha, cicayitha, cacyathuḥ, cicya, cicāya, cicyiba, cicyima. In the ātmanepada: cikyi, cikyāte, cikyire; cicye, cecyāte, cicyere, cicyeṣe, cicyāthe, cicyidhve. In one view there is ḍh: cicyiḍhve.

Iṇ, in the sense of going. It is reduplicated. There is vṛddhi of the root and the change into āy. By the rule "of the reduplicated syllable, before a dissimilar letter," it is changed into iy: iyīya. By the rule "of īṇ also," there is y. By the rule "of iṇ, a long vowel before the parokṣā when there is no guṇa," it is lengthened: īyatuḥ, īyuḥ, īyayitha, īyaitha, īyathūḥ, īya, īyāya, iyayi, īyiba, īyima. In the passive: īye, īyate, īyere.

Iṅ, in the sense of studying. By the rule "of iṅ, before the parokṣā," it is changed into gā. The letter ā is elided: adhijage, adhijagāte, adhijagire, adhijigaṣe.

Ik, in the sense of remembering. As before, the reduplicated syllable is changed into iy: abhīyāya. As with iṇ, so also for ik: adhīyatuḥ, adhīyuḥ, adhīyayiḥ, adhīyatha, adhīyathuḥ, adhīya, adhīyāya, adhīyaya, adhīyipa, adhīyima.

Kṣi: cikṣaya, cikṣimatuḥ, cikṣiyuḥ; because the former is a conjunct, there is iy. Cikṣayitha, cikṣetha, cikṣeyathuḥ, cikṣaya, cikṣāye, cikṣiya, cikṣiyiba, cikṣiyima. In the passive: cikṣeye, cikṣiyāte, cikṣire.

Ṣmiṅ: siṣmiye, siṣmiyāte, siṣmiyire.

Roots ending in ī. Ṇīñ, in the sense of leading to: ināya. By the rule beginning "for the letter i, y," there is y: inyatuḥ, inyuḥ, inetha, inayitha, nanyathuḥ, inya, ināya, inaya; inyi, inyāte, nanyire. Ḍīṅ: ḍidye, ḍiḍyīre. Līṅ: lilyāte, lilyire. Ḍukrīñ: cikrāla. It is changed into iy: cikriyatuḥ, cikriyuḥ. Hri: jihrāya, jihriyatuḥ, jihriyuḥ, jihritha, jihrayitha. Priñ: piprāya, papriyatuḥ, pipriyuḥ, pipritha, pipriyitha.

Roots ending in u. Cyuṅ: cucyupe, cucyubire, cucyubiṣe, cucyubidhva, cucyubiḍhva. Pruṅ: prabrube, pruprubāte, puprure. Yu, in the sense of mixing: yuyāba, yuyubatuḥ, yuyubuḥ, yuyabitha. Rurāba, rurubatuḥ, rurubuḥ, rurubitha. Nunāba, nunubatuḥ, nunubuḥ. Snu: suṣṇuba, suṣṇubatuḥ, suṣṇubuḥ. Kṣu: cukṣapa, cukṣubatuḥ, cukṣubuḥ. Kṣṇu: cukṣṇuba, cukṣṇubatuḥ, cukṣṇubuḥ. Ku, in the sense of sound: cukāba, cukabatuḥ, cukubuḥ, cukotha, cukapitha.

Roots ending in ū. Vuñ: lulābi, lulubatuḥ, lulubuḥ, lulabitha. Bāñ: pupāba, pububatuḥ, pupubuḥ, luluba, bububе. Bhū, in the sense of being. By the rule "for the final of bhū, b before the parokṣā and the adyatanī," the letter b is an augment. It is reduplicated. By the rule "short," it is shortened. By the rule "a for bhavati," the letter u of the reduplicated syllable becomes a: babhuba, babhubatuḥ, babhubuḥ, babhubitha, babhūbathuḥ, babhūba, babhūba, babhūbiba, babhūbima. In the impersonal: pubhūbe. In the passive: anubudhūbe.

Roots ending in ṛ. Hṛñ, in the sense of seizing. It is reduplicated. By the rule "j for h," there is the letter j. There is vṛddhi of the nāmin vowel: jahāra. By the rule "r for ṛ," there is r: jahratuḥ, jahruḥ. By the rule "after ṛ, before thal," iṭ is prohibited. There is guṇa: jahartha, jahrathuḥ, jahra. By the rule "optionally before the latter aṭ," there is optionally vṛddhi: jahāra, jahara, jahiba, jahima. Jahre, jahrāte, jahire, jahiṣe.

Dīṅ, in the sense of wasting away. By the rule "for dīṅ, the letter y at the end, before an initial vowel, when there is no guṇa," there is the letter y: upadidīyi, upadidīyāte, upadidīyire.

Deṅ and treṅ, in the sense of protecting. By the rule "for tayati, before the parokṣā, digi," it is changed into digi, and the reduplicated syllable is also elided: digyi, digyāte, digyire.

Smṛ. By the rule "also for ṛt with an initial conjunct," there is guṇa: sasmrara, sasmaratuḥ, sasmaruḥ, sasmartha. In the passive: sasmare, sasmārate, sasmarire.

Bhvi: dadhāra, dadhvaratuḥ, dadhvaruḥ. In the passive: dadhvare, dadhvarāta, dadhvarire. Hvṝ, in the sense of crookedness: jahvara, jahvaratu, jahvaruḥ.

Roots ending in ṝ. Kṝ: cakāra. By the rule "also of those ending in ṝt," there is guṇa. By the rule "before the parokṣā, for an a standing between single consonants, whose initial is unchanged," e and the elision of the reduplicated syllable would also apply, as in śaśa and dada; but this is to be blocked by the rule "not for those with initial b and those having guṇa": cakaratuḥ, cakaruḥ, cakarithi, cakarathuḥ, cakara, cakāra, cakara, cakāripa, cakarima. In the passive: cakarāre, cakarāte, cakarira.

Grī: jagāratuḥ, jagaruḥ. By the rule "optionally before a vowel," there is l: jagāla, jagalatuḥ, jegaluḥ. In the passive: jagare, jagale.

Śrṝ, in the sense of harming: śaśarā, śaśaratuḥ, śaśaruḥ. Dṛ, in the sense of tearing apart: bidāra, bidadartuḥ, bidadaruḥ. Sṛ: nipāpāra, nipaparatuḥ, nipaparuḥ. Some say, "for śrṝ, dṝ and prṝ, optionally short": biśaśratuḥ, biśaśruḥ, bidadratuḥ, bidadruḥ, nipratuḥ, nipabruḥ. Here śrā, drā and prā are also used in the sense of śrṝ, dṝ and prṝ. Then, by the rule "ā is elided before what is not sārvadhātuka," the letter ā is elided.

Now those without iṭ before the parokṣā are to be stated. By the rule "before the parokṣā, only after sṛ, bṛ, bhṛ, stu, dru, śu and sru," there is no iṭ. Sṛ, in the sense of going: sasāra, sasratu, sasruḥ, sasartha, sasrathuḥ, sasra, sasāra, sasara, sasṛba, sasṛma. Bṛñ: babāra, bibratuḥ. Bṝ: by the rule "for vṛ and those ending in ṝ, always iṭ before thal," there is always iṭ: babaritha. Babre, babrāte, babire, babhṛṣe. Bhṛñ: babhāra, babhratuḥ, babhruḥ.

Ṣṭuñ. By the rule "an aghoṣa following a ṣiṭ," the ṣiṭ is elided. Because of the conditioning cause there is ṣ, and after ṣ there is the ṭ class.

tuṣṭuba, tuṣṭubatuḥ, tuṣṭubuḥ, tuṣṭotha. Dudrāba, dudrubatuḥ, dudrubuḥ, dutrotha. Śru: śuśrāba, śuśrubatuḥ, śuśrubuḥ, suśrotha. Sru: susrāba, susrubatuḥ, susrubuḥ, susrotha.

Ḍukṛñ. By the rule "after kṛñ, when without suṭ," there is no iṭ: cakāra, cakratuḥ, cakruḥ, cakartha, cakrāthuḥ, cakra, cakāri, cakṛba, cakṛma. Cakre, cakrāte, cakṛde, cakṛṣe, cakrāthe, cakṛḍhve, cakre, cekṛbahe, cakrimahe.

Roots ending in a consonant with a as the penultimate. Paca. By the rule beginning "of a penultimate a, a long vowel," it is lengthened: papāca. By the rule "before the parokṣā, for an a standing between single consonants, whose initial is unchanged," there is e and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable: pecatuḥ, pecuḥ. By the rule "nityātvatāṃ," iṭ is optional: papaktha. By the rule "also before thal when it has iṭ," there is e and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable: pecitha, pecithuḥ, peca, babāca, pabaca, peceba, baciba, pecima. Peca, pecāte, paciṣe.

Ḍulabhaṣ: lebhe, lebhāte, lebhire. Rabhe: ārebhe, ārebhāte, ārebhīre. Nanāma, nematuḥ, nemuḥ, ninantha, namitha. Ṣaha: sehe, sehāte, sehire. Rama: reme, remāte. Birarāma, birematuḥ, peremuḥ, perararantha, biremitha. Ṇaha: nanāhi, nehatuḥ, nehuḥ, nanaddha, nehithaḥ. Tanu: tatāna, tenatuḥ, tenuḥ, tenitha. Śamu: śaśāma, śematuḥ, śamuḥ. Because of the words "whose initial is unchanged," it does not become e.

Kaṇa: cakāṇa, cakaṇatuḥ, cakaṇuḥ, cakaṇitha. Here too, since the word "also" is a general provision, in some cases the long vowel is also to be accepted.

By the rule "after radh, in the sense of harming," there is e, and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable: apararādha, abaredhuḥ, aparedhitha. Because of the words "in the sense of harming," it does not happen otherwise: apararādha, apararādhatuḥ, apararādhuḥ.

By the rule "for rāji, bhraji, bhrāśi and bhūśi, it should be stated as optional," there is e and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable: rarāja, rejatuḥ, rejuḥ, rarājuḥ, rejitha, rarājitha. Bhreje, byejāte, bhrājire, babhrāje, babhrājāthe, babhrājire. Bhreśe, bhreśāte, bhriśir, babhrāśate, babhrāśire. Bhleśe, bhleśāte, bhleśire, babhlāśe, babhlāśāte, babhlāśare. It does not apply to others. Kāśṛ: cakāśe. It is likewise before thal when it has iṭ.

By the rule "also for tṝ, phala, bhaja, trapa, śrantha, granthi and danbhi," there is e and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable. Tṝ: tatāra, teratuḥ, teruḥ, teritha. Phaphāla, phelatuḥ, pheluḥ, phelitha. Bhaja: babhaja, bhajatuḥ, bhejuḥ, babhaktha, bhejitha. Trapa: trepe, trepāte, trepire, trepiṣe. Śrantha: śaśrantha. By the rule "for indhi, śranthi, granthi and danbhi, before the parokṣā when there is no guṇa," the anuṣaṅga is elided: śrethatuḥ, śrathuḥ. Danbhu: dadambha, debhutuḥ, debhaḥ.

Jṝ: jajāra. By the rule "for jṝ, bhamu, trasi, svana, paṇa and syāma, it should be stated as optional," there is e and also the elision of the reduplicated syllable: jeratuḥ, joruḥ, jajaratuḥ, jajaruḥ, joritha, jajaritha. Bhrama: babhrama, bhrematuḥ, bhramuḥ, babhramatuḥ, babhramuḥ, bhremitha, babhramitha. Trasī: tatrāsa, tresatuḥ, tresuḥ, tatrasatuḥ, tatresuḥ, tresitha, tatrasitha. Svana: sasvīna, svenatuḥ, svenuḥ, sasvanatuḥ, sasvanatuḥ, sasvanuḥ, svenatha, sasvanitha. Phaṇa: phaphāṇa, phaṇtuḥ, pheṇuḥ, paphaṇatuḥ, paphaṇuḥ, pheṇitha, phapheṇitha. Syama: sasyāma, syematuḥ, syemuḥ, sasyamatuḥ, sasyamuḥ, syemitha, sasyamitha.

Because in most cases they necessarily occur together with the anuṣaṅga, it does not apply to those having the anuṣaṅga: śaśraṃthitha, jagranthitha, dadambhitha.

Dhvana: dadhvana, dadhvanatuḥ, dadhvanuḥ. Śasu, in the sense of harming. Dada, in the sense of showing. Ṭubama, in the sense of vomiting. By the rule "not for śaśa, dada, those with initial b, and those having guṇa," neither e nor the elision of the reduplicated syllable takes place: biśaśāsa, biśaśasatuḥ, biśaśasuḥ. Dadado, dadedāte, dadadire. Babāma, babamatuḥ, babamuḥ, babamitha. Bana: babāna, babānatuḥ, babanuḥ, babanitha.

Roots with ā as the penultimate. Ṭuyāṃcṛ: yayāca, yayāce. These are forms of both voices. Ślāghṛ: śuślāghra.

Roots with i as the penultimate. Miha: mimeha, mimihatuḥ, mimetuḥ, mimehitha. Ṣica: ṣiṣoca. Roots with i as the penultimate. Krīḍī, in the sense of abiding: ciḍikriḍi, cikrīḍituḥ, cikrīḍuḥ, cikrīḍitha.

Roots with u as the penultimate. Rudhir: rurodha, rurudhatuḥ, rurudhu. Mucli: mumoca, mumucatuḥ, mumucuḥ, mumocitha. Ruci: ruruci, rurucāte, rurucire.

Roots with ū as the penultimate. Kūja: cukūja, cukūjatuḥ, cukūjuḥ, cukūcitha.

Roots with ṛ as the penultimate. Bṛtu, in the sense of occurring: babṛte, babṛtate, babṛtire. Bridhu: babṛdha, babṛdhāta, babṛdhire. Śrīdhu: śaśridhe, śaśṛdhere. Kṛpū: where r is heard, l is heard: caklipe, caklipāte, caklibiro. Ṭubepri: bipepṛ, bibepe, bibipīte, bibepire. Ḍhaukṛ: ḍuḍhaukāte, ḍuḍhaukīre. Traukṛ: tutrauke, tutrekāta, tutraukire.

Now the suffix ām is to be stated. Cakāsṛ, in the sense of shining. By the rule "before the parokṣā, ām after cikās, kās and those ending in a suffix," there is the suffix ām. By the rule "after ām, kṛñ is to be appended," kṛñ is appended. It is reduplicated: cakāsīcakāra, cakāsīcakratuḥ, cākāsāṃcakruḥ, cakāsāṃcakartha. Cakleśa here stands as an example of what is not monosyllabic; therefore: daridrāṃcakāra. Culumpa is a root that comes from the sūtra: culumpacakāra. Kāsvī: kāsīcakre, kāsīcakrāte, kāsīcakriṣe. By the rule "for ām and the rest, optionally before what is not sārvadhātuka," the suffix ām is optional. Where gopāya stands, because it ends in a suffix, there is ām, and the a is also elided: gopāyīcakāra, dhupāyāṃcaṃkāra, bicchāyāñcakāra, paṇāyīcekre, panālāṃcakre. After kami there is iniṅ. There is guṇa.

kāmayāṃcikre. After riti there is also ṇī: ritīyāṃcakra. When it does not take the suffix ām, then, because it does not end in a suffix, there is no ām: jugoba, jugupatuḥ, jugubuḥ, dudhuba, bibiccha, peṇa, pene, cakame.

For ṛ there is a, and for a there is ā. By the rule "of an initial a, in all cases," it is lengthened. By the rule "after that, before an initial vowel, if the final is a conjunct, the augment n," as it applies, and by the rule "also for ṛ," the letter n is an augment: ānattta, ānṛtatuḥ, ānatttitha, ānṛtathuḥ, ānṛtaṃ, ānatti, ānṛtipa, ānaṃtima.

Daya, in the sense of giving. Aya, paya, maya, taya, caya and raya, in the sense of going. Ās, in the sense of sitting near. By the rule "also after daya, aya and ās," there is the suffix ām: dayāṃcakre, dayāṃcakrāte, dayācakrare. With parā prefixed: by the rule "of a prefix, before āyati," there is l: balāyīcikre. Āsīcakre.

Īkrā, in the sense of seeing. Sveha, in the sense of doing. Uha, in the sense of conceiving. Ubha and unbha, in the sense of filling. Ujja, in the sense of abandoning. Upja, in the sense of the sky. By the rule beginning "for one with an initial nāmin vowel and having a heavy syllable, other than ṛccha," there is the suffix ām: īkṣīcaka, īhāṃcakre, ūhāṃcakre, umjhāṃcakāra, ujjhāṃcakāra, upjāṃcakāra. Because of the words "with an initial nāmin vowel," where there is no initial nāmin vowel it does not take the suffix ām. Takṣa and tvakṣā, in the sense of making thin. Ava and rakṣa, in the sense of protecting: tatakṣa, rarakṣa. Whatever root never comes to have a heavy syllable has no suffix ām.

Iṣu, in the sense of wishing. Uṣa, in the sense of burning. It is reduplicated. The reduplicated syllable is elided. There is guṇa of the light penultimate. By the rule "of the reduplicated syllable, before a dissimilar letter," there are the changes into iy and uv: eyeṣe. A homogeneous vowel is lengthened: īṣatuḥ, īṣu. Ūboṣa, ūṣatuḥ, ūṣuḥ.

Ṛccha, in the senses of going, the faculties, decay, and bodily form. Because of the exclusion "other than ṛccha," ṛccha does not take ām. It is reduplicated. For ṛ there is a. By the rule "of an initial a, in all cases," it is lengthened. From the general rule "after that, before an initial vowel, if the final is a conjunct, the augment n," by the rule "also for ṛ," the letter n is an augment. By the rule "of ṛccha, for ṛt," there is guṇa: ānarccha, ānarcchatuḥ, ānarcchuḥ, ānarcchitha.

Uṣa, in the sense of burning. Bida, in the sense of knowing. Jāgṛ, in the sense of waking. By the rule "optionally after uṣa, bida and jagṛ," there is ām: oṣāṃcakāra. Because of the restriction "before ām, only of bid," there is no guṇa of bid before ām: bidāñcakara. There is guṇa: jagarāṃcakāra. Also uboṣa, bibee and jajāgāra. By the rule "before the parokṣā when there is no guṇa," there is guṇa: jajāgaratuḥ, jajāgaruḥ, jajāgartha.

Ñibhā, in the sense of fearing. Hri, in the sense of feeling shame. Ḍudhāñ and ḍubhṛñ, in the senses of holding and nourishing. Hu, in the sense of giving. By the explanation "for bhī, hī, bhrī and hu, also as before ti," there is the suffix ām, and its operation also proceeds as before ti. It is reduplicated: bibhayīcakāri, jihrayāñcakāra. By the rule "for bhriñ, hīṅ and māṅ, it," there is i: bibārīcakāra, juhapīcakāra. When there is no ām, there are vṛddhi and the change into āy: bibhāya. By the rule beginning "for the letter i, y," there is y: bibhyatuḥ, bibhyuḥ, bibhetha, bibhayitha. Jihrāya; it is changed into iy: jihriyatuḥ, jihriyuḥ. Babhār, babhratuḥ, babhruḥ. Juhāba, juhubatuḥ, juhubuḥ.

Now those whose penultimate is dropped are to be stated. Gamla. The penultimate a is lengthened. It is reduplicated. For the k class there is the c class: jagāma. Before forms without guṇa, by the rule "of the penultimate of gam, han, jan, khan and ghas," the penultimate a is elided: jagmatuḥ, jagmuḥ, jagamitha, jagantha, jagmathuḥ, jagma, jagāma, jagma, jagmiba, jagmima.

Hana is reduplicated. For h there is j. By the rule "also from the reduplicated syllable," for h there is gh: jaghāna. The penultimate is elided. By the rule "also of one whose penultimate is dropped," there is gh: jaghnatuḥ, jaghnuḥ, jaghanitha, jaghantha. In the passive, in the ātmanepada: jaghā, jaghāte, jaghnire, jaghīṣe.

Janī: jajñi, jajñate, jajñire. By the rule "when a dental class letter is joined with the c class or n, the c and ṭ classes," for n there is ñ. Khana: cakhāna, cakhnatuḥ, cakhnuḥ, cakhanatha.

Āṅ. By the rule "optionally before the parokṣā," it is optionally changed into ghasla: jaghāsa. By the rule "before the voiceless, the first of those that are not ṣiṭ," for gh there is k. By the rule "also of śāsi, basi and ghasi," there is ṣ: jakṣatuḥ, jakṣuḥ, jaghasitha, jakṣathuḥ. When there is no change into ghasla: āda, ādatuḥ, āduḥ. By the rule "for bṛ, bye and ad, always iṭ before thal," the augment iṭ is always added: ādetha.

Aṭa: āṭa, āṭatuḥ, āṭuḥ. Anju, in the senses of making manifest, bearing and going. It is reduplicated. By the rule "of an initial a, in all cases," it is lengthened. By the rule "after that, before an initial vowel, if the final is a conjunct, an augment," there is the augment n: ānañja, ānañjatuḥ, ānañjuḥ, ānañjitha. Aśū, in the sense of pervading. By the rule "also of aśnoti," there is the augment n. It is preceded by bi. There is y: byānaśe, byānaśāte, byānaśire.

Now those that undergo saṃprasāraṇa are to be stated. Graha. The penultimate a is lengthened. It is reduplicated. The remaining consonant is elided. By the rule "of both kinds, of the reduplicated syllable, before the parokṣā," there is saṃprasāraṇa. For ṛ there is i. For the k class there is the c class: jagrāha. By the rule "also before the parokṣā," there is no guṇa. When there is no guṇa, by the sūtra beginning with grahi there is saṃprasāraṇa: jagṛhatuḥ, jagṛhuḥ, jegṛhitha. Jagṛhe, jagṛhāte, jagṛhire.

Jyā. By the rule "of both kinds, of the reduplicated syllable, before the parokṣā," there is saṃprasāraṇa: jijyau. By the sūtra beginning with grahi there is saṃprasāraṇa: jaijyatuḥ, jijuḥ. Before thal too there is iṭ. By the rule "also before iṭ," the a is elided: jijyatha, jijyātha. Jajye, jijyāte, jijyire.

Piṅ. By the rule "also of piṅ, bayi," it is changed into paya. There is saṃprasāraṇa: ubāya. A homogeneous vowel is lengthened.

ūyatuḥ, ūyuḥ, ubayitha, uya. Ūyāte, ūyire. When it is not changed into payi, then by the rule "for pā and śvi, not even when there is no guṇa," there is no saṃprasāraṇa: pagau, babatuḥ, babuḥ. Babe, babāte, babire.

Byadha, in the sense of piercing: bibyādha, bibidhatuḥ, bibidhuḥ, bibyadhitha. Bibidhāte, bibidhere. Paśa: upāśa, ūśatuḥ, ūśuḥ, ubaśitha. Byaca: bibyāce, bibicatuḥ, bibicuḥ.

Because of the exclusion "of pracch and the rest, before the parokṣā," there is no saṃprasāraṇa: papraccha, papracchatuḥ, papracchuḥ, papracchitha, paprașṭha, papracchathuḥ. Pracche, papracchire. Praśca: paprașca, paprașcatuḥ, paprașcuḥ, paprașcathaḥ. Babrașce, babrașcate, babrașcire.

Bhrasja. By the rule "the third of the dhuṭ letters," for s there is d. By the rule "when a dental class letter is joined with the c or ṭ class, the c and ṭ classes," for d there is j: babhajja, babhrajjatuḥ, babhrajjuḥ, babhrajjitha. Babhrajja, babhrajjāte, babhrijjare, babhrijajaṣe.

Ñiṣvapa, in the sense of sleeping. There is aṭ. It is reduplicated. The penultimate a is lengthened. The remaining consonant is elided. By the rule "of both kinds, of the reduplicated syllable, before the parokṣā," there is saṃprasāraṇa: suṣvāpa. By the rule beginning "svapi, baci," there is saṃprasāraṇa: suṣupatuḥ, suṣubuḥ, suṣvapitha, suṣvaptha.

Bruñ. By the rule "for bru, baci," it is changed into baci: ubāca. A homogeneous vowel is lengthened: ūciṃtuḥ, ūcuḥ, upacitha, ūcathuḥ, ūca, ūbaca, ūciba, ūcima. In the ātmanepada: ūca, ūcvāte, ācare.

Yaja, bapa, and baha, peñ and byeñ, hvayati likewise, bada and basa, and śvayati:
these nine are taught as the yaja group.

Yaja: īyāja, īјatuḥ, īјuḥ, īyajitha, īyaṣṭha. Ījе, īјāta, īјire, īјiṣe. Ṭubapa: upāba, upatuḥ, upuḥ, upapitha, ubaptha. Ūpe, ūpāte, ūpere, ūbiṣe. Baha: upāha, ūhatuḥ, ūhuḥ, ūbahitha. By the rule "ḍh for h," there is ḍh. For the dental class there is the ṭ class. By the rule "for sahi and baha, o for a," there is also o: upoḍha, ūhathuḥ. Ūheta, ūhāte, ūhire.

Beñ. Because it ends in a diphthong, ā would apply, but this is blocked by the rule "not before the parokṣā of byayati." There is vṛddhi of the nāmin vowel, that is, for e there is ai. It is changed into āy. There is saṃprasāraṇa: saṃbibyāya. Saṃprasāraṇa applies only from the yaja group. By the rule beginning "for the letter i, y," there is y: saṃbibyatuḥ, saṃbibyuḥ. By the rule "for bṛ, bye and ad, always iṭ before thal," there is always iṭ: saṃbibyāyitha. Saṃbibyad, saṃbibyāte, saṃbibyire.

Hveñ. There is ā. By the rule "also of the reduplicated," there is saṃprasāraṇa: juhāba, juhubatuḥ, juhubuḥ, juhabitha, juhotha. Juhupe.

Pada: ubādaḥ, udatuḥ, uduḥ, upaditha. Ude, udāte, udāre.

Basa, in the sense of dwelling. By the rule "also of śāsi, basi and ghasi," there is ṣ: ubāya, uṣatuḥ, ūṣuḥ, ubasitha, upasa. Ūṣe, ūṣāte, ūṣere.

Ṭuośvi. Where the exclusion "for bā and śvi, not even when there is no guṇa" would apply, by the rule "optionally for śvayati," the procedure of saṃprasāraṇa is optionally carried out: śuśāba, śuśubatuḥ, śuśubuḥ, śuṣabitha. Śuśubi, śuśubāte, śuśubire. When there is no saṃprasāraṇa: śiśāya, śiśayatuḥ, śiśviyuḥ. Śiśvaye, śiśvayāte, śiśviyire.

Byatha. By the rule "also of byathi," there is saṃprasāraṇa of the reduplicated syllable: bibyathe, bibyathāte, bibyathire. Obyāyī. By the rule "for byāya, before the parokṣā, pi," it is changed into pi: ābibye, ābibyāte, āpibyire. By the rule "of the reduplicated syllable of dhuta, dhute and svāpi," there is saṃprasāraṇa: didhute, dedhutāte, didhutire, dedhutiṣe.

This is the sixth section, teaching the domain of the parokṣā, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

Now the śvastanī is to be stated. By the rule "for the future, the bhaviṣyantī, the āśī and the śvastanī," there is the śvastanī. By the rule "before what is not sārvadhātuka and begins with a consonant other than y, the augment iṭ," there is the augment iṭ. Of these, some take iṭ. Some lack iṭ, because it is blocked by such rules as "after one ending in ā and monosyllabic, there is no iṭ": yātā, yātārau, yātāraḥ, yātāsi, yātāsthaḥ, yātāstha, yātāsmi, yātāspaḥ, yātāsmaḥ. In the passive, in the ātmanepada: yātā, yātārai, yātāraḥ, yātāse, yātāsāthe, yātādhve, ātāhe, yātāsvahe, yātāsmahe. It is the same for the other roots ending in ā: bhātā, lātā, śrātā, pātā, glātā.

Mīñ. By the rule "for mīnāti, minoti and dīṅ, where guṇa and vṛddhi stand," there is ā: mātā. Meñ: brāmātā. Dīṅ: dātā. Here, because of the words "from a monosyllabic root," iṭ occurs only after what is not monosyllabic. By the rule "of daridrāti, before what is not sārvadhātuka," the a is elided: daridrītā.

Roots ending in i. By the rule "after one ending in i, other than śri, śvi, ḍīṅ and śīṅ," iṭ is prohibited: bhetā, catā. With āṅ: adhyatā. Natā, kretā. Because of the exclusion "other than śri, śvi, ḍīṅ and śīṅ," iṭ does occur: śvayitā, śrayitā, ḍayitā, śāyitā.

Roots ending in u. By the rule "after one ending in u, other than yu, ru, ṇu, snu, kṣu and kṣṇu," iṭ is prohibited: hotā, svatā. Because of the exclusion "other than yu, ru, ṇu, snu, kṣu and kṣṇu," iṭ does occur: yabitā, rabitā, nabitā, snabitā, kṣabitā, kṣṇabitā. The roots ending in ū take iṭ. Bhū: bhabitā. Yūñ:

labitā. Būñ: papitā.

Roots ending in ṛ. By the rule "after one ending in ṛ, other than bṛṅ and bṛñ," iṭ is prohibited. Ḍukṛñ: karttā. Hṛñ: hadttā. Ḍudhṛñ: bharttā. Because "monosyllabic" is the general condition, iṭ does occur after a root ending in ṛ that is not monosyllabic; therefore: jagaritā. Because of the exclusion "other than bṛṅ and bṛñ," iṭ does occur: kharītā, prabarītā. By the rule "after ṝt, and after bṛṅ and bṛñ, the iṭ is optionally long, except before the parokṣā and the āśiṣ," and by splitting the rule "it is not prescribed before the sic of the parasmaipada," it is optionally long.

parītā. Prā: parītā. The roots ending in ṝ take iṭ. Stṝñ: āstīritā. Gṝ: by the rule "optionally before a vowel," there is l: nigaritā, nīgalitā. "After ṛt, and after bṛṅ and bṛñ, it is optionally long": āstarītā, nigarītā.

Śaki: after k, iṭ is prohibited: śakṣa. By the rule "after paci, baci, bici, sici, rici and muci, from c," iṭ is prohibited. Baca: baktā. Baci: paktā. Baci: baktā. Sica: sektā. Rica: rektā. Mucḷ: moktā. By the rule "after brañci, from cha," iṭ is prohibited. By the rule "also of cha and śa," there is ṣ. After ṣ there is the ṭ class: praṣṭa.

By the rule "after yuji, ruji, rañji, bhuji, bhaja, bhañji, dya, bhrasja, yama, rja, priji, niji, biji and ṣvañji, from j," iṭ is prohibited. Yujir: yokṣa. Rujo: roktā. Ranaje: radktta. Bhujo: poktā. Bhaja: bhaktā. Bhanjo: bhāṃktā. Sanja: saṃktā. Tyaja: tyaktā. Bhrisja: by the rule "of bhṛja and the rest, ṣ," there is ṣ. By the rule "the first of a conjunct, also at the end of k and the like," the letter s is elided: bhraṣṭā. Here bhriji for bhrasji is given as an example: since it is the intended domain of the particle, it is explained as applying elsewhere than in saṃprasāraṇa. Because of these words, bhrasja is changed into bṛji: bhārṣṭā. After yaja there is ś, and also the ṭ class: yaṣṭā.

Ṭumarjo. By the rule "of marji and naśa, before a dhuṭ," the letter n is an augment. By the rule "of braści and masji, before a dhuṭ," the final is elided: madkta. Pṛja. By the rule "of sṛje and driśa, before a dhuṭ following a vowel, where guṇa and vṛddhi stand, the augment a," the letter a is an augment. By the rule "r for ṛ," there is r. There is ṣ. There is the ṭ class: praṣṭa. Nija: nektā. Bijir: baktā. Svānja: svadktā.

By the rule "after adi, hudi, kṣudi, svībyati, bidyati, bintati, banitti, chidi, bhidi, hiri, śidis, debadi, skenti and khiri, from d," iṭ is prohibited. Ada: attā. Tuda: tottā. Ṇuda: nottā. Kṣudir: kṣottā. Svida: svettā. Pida, in the sense of existing. Bidḷ, in the sense of finding. Bida, in the sense of discerning: battā. Bida, in the sense of knowing, takes iṭ: beditā. Chidir: chettā. Bhidir: bhettā. Hada: hattā. Śadḷ, in the sense of decaying: śattā. Ṣadḷ, in the senses of wandering, going and wearying: sattā. Pada: sattra. Skantir: skanttā. Khida, in the sense of being weak. Khida, in the sense of crushing: khettā.

By the rule "after rādhi, rudhi, krudhi, krudhi, panti, sru, śudhi, sidhyati, budhyati, byadhi and sādhi, from dh," iṭ is prohibited. Rādha: rādhā. Rudhir: roddhā. Krudha: kroddhā. Kṣudha: kṣoddhā. Bandha: bandhā. Śudha: śoddhā. Sidhu: siddhā. Budha, in the sense of understanding: boddhā. Because of the specification "after budhyati," iṭ occurs after bodhati. Budhir: bodhītā. Yudha: yoddhā. Byadhā: byaddhā. Sādha: sāddhā.

By the rule "after hani and manyeti, from n," iṭ is prohibited. Hana: hantā. Mana, in the sense of knowing: mantā. Otherwise: manitā. Because of the qualification "from n," iṭ is not prohibited after what does not end in n.

By the rule "after ība, tapi, tīpi, ṣvapi, bapi, śapi, cchupi, kṣibi, libi and sṛbi, from p," iṭ is prohibited. Āblḷ: āptā. Tapa and dhūpa, in the sense of burning; tapa is optional in the sense of lordship: tābtā. Tīpṛ: tebta. Ñiṣvapa: sraptā. Ṭubaba: bastā. Śapa: śaptā. Chupa: choptā. Kṣipa: kṣeptā. Lipa: leptā. Luplḷ: loptā. Pṛplḷ: barptā.

By the rule "after yabhi, dabhi and labhi, from bh," iṭ is prohibited. Yabha: by the rule "after gh, ḍh, dh and bh, except dhā, dh for t and th," for t there is dh. By the rule "the third for the fourths of the dhuṭ letters," for bh there is b: yapbhā. Rabha: rapbhā. Labha: lapbhā.

By the rule "after yami, rami, nami and gami, from m," iṭ is prohibited. Yama: yantā. Rama: dantā. Nama: nanta. Gama: gaṭṭā.

By the rule "after riśi, ruśi, kruśi, liśi, piśi, diśi, driśi, yṛśi, mṛśi and danśi, from ś," iṭ is prohibited. Diśa and ruśa, in the sense of harming: reṣṭā, raṣṭā. Kruśa: kroṣṭā. Liśa, liśa: leṣṭā. Biśa: biṣṭā. Diśa: deṣṭā. By the rule "for bṛśiṅ, pṛji and dṛśa, before a dhuṭ following a vowel, where guṇa and vṛddhi stand, the augment a," the letter a is an augment: draṣṭa. Yṛśa: yāṣṭa, spaṣṭa. Mṛśa: mraṣṭa, maṣṭa. Dans: daṃṣṭa.

By the rule "after tviṣi, puṣyati, kṛṣi, śliṣyati, diṣi, piṣi, biṣi, śiṣi, tuṣi and duṣi, from ṣ," iṭ is prohibited. Tviṣa: tveṣṭā. Puṣyati: poṣū. Otherwise: poṣitā. Kṛṣa: by the rule "optionally for yṛśi and the rest," the letter a is optionally an augment: kraṣṭā, kraṣṭa. Śliṣyati: ślaiṣṭā. Dviṣa: dveṣṭā. Biṣḷ: beṣṭā. Biṣḷ: beṣṭā. Śīṣḷ: śaṣṭā. Śuṣa: śoṣṭa. Toṣṭa. Duṣa: daṣṭa.

By the rule "after pasati and ghasi, from s," iṭ is prohibited. Basa: bastā.

By the rule "after dehi, dihi, duhi, mihi, rihi, ruhi, lahi, luhi, nahi and bahi, from h," iṭ is prohibited. Daha: by the rule "gh for one with initial d," there is gh. By the rule "after gh, ḍh, dh and bh, except dhā, dh for t and th," there is dh. There is the third of the dhuṭ letters: dagdha. Dahi: degdha. Duha: dogdhā. Mihi: by the rule "ḍh for h," there is ḍh. There is the ṭ class. Before ḍh, ḍh is elided: meḍha. Riha: reḍhā. Ruha: roḍhā. Liha: leḍhā. Luhe: loḍhā. Rihi and luhi are roots that come from the sūtra; some do read them. By the rule "dh for nahi," there is dh. For t and th there is dh. There is the third of the dhuṭ letters. Naha: nadhā. Maha. By the rule "for sahi and baha, o for a," ḍh is elided and a also becomes o: poḍhā.

The others take iṭ. Phakka: phakketā. Śuca: śocatā. Rāji: rājitā. Bhrāja: bhrājitā. Aṇa: aṇitā. Raṇa: raṇitā. Kaṇa: kaṇitā. Dibu: debitā. Śibu: sebitā. Bṛtu: battītā. Bṛdhu: bardhitā. Graha: by the rule "after grahi, the iṭ is long, except before the parokṣā," it is long: grahvitā.

Now the optional iṭ is to be stated. Spṛ, in the senses of sound and affliction. Ṣu, in the sense of living beings giving birth from the womb. Ṣuṅ, in the sense of living beings being born. Those with an indicatory ū: gāhu, in the sense of stirring up. Takṣu and tvakṣu, in the sense of making thin.

By the rule "after svarati, sūti and sūyati, and after those with an indicatory u," the iṭ augment is optional. Svarttā, svāritā. Prasvatā, prasavitā. Sotā, savitā. Āvakāḍhā, avagāhitā. Taṣṭa, takyitā. Hvatā, tvakṣitā.

Guhū, in the sense of covering over. By "ha becomes ḍha," it becomes ḍha. It becomes dha. It becomes the ṭa class. Ḍha is elided before ḍha. With ni prefixed. By "the penultimate of gohi becomes ūṭ," the letter u becomes the letter ū. Nigoḍha, niguhatī.

Radha and the rest are to be stated. By "also after radha and the rest," the iṭ augment is optional. Radha is also in the sense of harming. Raddhā, radhitā. Ṇaśa, in the sense of not being seen. By "for masji and naśa, before a dhuṭ," the letter n is an augment. Naṃṣṭa, naśitā. Tṛpa: trabtā, tarptā, tarbitā. Dṛpa: draptā, darptā, darbitā. Druha, in the sense of wishing to do harm. By "see the explanation of druha, muha, snuha and sniha," it optionally becomes gha. Drogha. By "ha becomes ḍha," it becomes ḍha. It becomes ḍha. It becomes the ṭa class. Ḍha is elided before ḍha. Droḍhā, drohitā. Muha, in the sense of bewilderment. Mogdha, moḍhā, mohitā. Ṣṇaha, in the sense of vomiting. Snogdhā, snoḍhā, snohitā. Ṣṇiha, in the sense of joy. Snagdhā, sneḍhā, snehitā. Kuṣa, in the sense of drawing out. With nis prefixed. Because the word "also" has the sense of plurality, it becomes ṣa. From the exclusion "except for pati and niṣkuṣa," it follows that niṣkuṣa too optionally takes iṭ. Niṣkoṣṭā, niṣkoṣitā.

Iṣu, in the sense of desiring. Saha, in the sense of forbearance. Lubha, in the sense of attachment. Raṣa and riṣa, in the sense of harming. By "before ta, optionally, for iṣu, saha, lubha, ruṣa and riṣa," the iṭ augment is optional. Eṣṭa, iṣitā. By "the letter a of sahi and vahi becomes ot," ḍha is elided and it also becomes o. Sodhā, sahitā. Lobdhā, lobhitā. Roṣṭā, roṣitā. Reṣṭā, riṣitā.

Kṛ phū, in the sense of being able. Where it is not ātmanepada, there is no i before sya and san for vṛta and the rest. For the śvastanī forms too, it is only kṛbi that is excluded: from the wording "after kṛta and the rest, before sa, optionally, but not before sic," the iṭ is prohibited. It is so also in the parasmaipada. By "the r of kṛpi becomes l," it becomes l. Kalpā. In the ātmanepada: kalbitā. It is likewise in the impersonal and the passive.

When, in the sense of the impersonal and the passive, before sya, sic, āśiṣ and the śvastanī, by the rule "the iṭ of vowel-final roots and of hana, graha and dṛśa is optionally like ic," it becomes as though it were ic, there is the iṭ augment. Then there is the letter ā for those ending in āt, and vṛddhi for those ending in a nāmin vowel. The penultimate a becomes long. Dātā, dāyitā. Rātā, rāyitā. Sthātā, sthāyitā. Ciñ: cetā, cāyitā. Ṇīñ: netā, nāyitā. Hu: hotā, hāphitā. Ṣūṅ: sāvitā, savitā, sotā. Lūñ: lāvitā, lavitā. Kṛñ: kartta, karitā. Hṛñ: harttā, hāritā. Āṣṭaritā, āstāritā, āstāritā. Pṝ: paritā, vāritā. Śṝ: niśaritā, niśaritā, niśāritī, niśaritā, niśāritī. Hanta: by "the ha of hanti becomes gha before in and ic," it becomes gha. Ghānitā. Graha: grahītā, grāhitā. Dṛśi: draṣṭa, darśitā.

This is the seventh, the concise teaching on the domain of the śvastanī, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

The āśīḥ is to be stated. By "for the future: the bhaviṣyantī, the āśīḥ and the śvastanī," it becomes the āśīḥ ending. By "e before the āśiṣ," it is the letter e. Dā: deyatā. Dhā: dheyāta. Dhā: dheyāta. Mā: meyāt. Gai: because it ends in a diphthong, it becomes ā. Gaiyāta. Pā: peyāt. Sthā: stheyāt. Ṣo: avaseyāt. Hā: heyāta. Glai: by "it is to be stated: optionally, where it is not in the position of an initial conjunct," it optionally becomes e. Gleyāt, glayāt. Mlai: mlaiyāt, mlayāt. In the ātmanepada: dāsīṣṭā, dāsīyastām, dāsīran. Dhāsīṣṭa, dhāsīyāstām, dhāsīran.

By "also in the āśiṣ in the parasmaipada," there is no guṇa. By "for nāmin-final roots, before yaṇ, āyi, in, āśiṣ, cvi, ci and krīyita, there is length before ya," it becomes long. Jīyāt, yaṃyāstāṃ, jīyāsu. Ciñ: cīyāt. Ṣṭuñ: stuyāt. Aṇi, in the sense of going. By "of in that has no prefix," it is long. Īyāt, īyāstām, īyāsuḥ. With si prefixed: samiyāt, udiyāt. From the wording "that has no prefix," it does not become long. Vijaṣāṣṭi, ceṣāṣṭī, stoṣāṣṭi. Briñ: śrayiṣāṣṭi. Urṇṇañ, in the sense of covering all over. Prauṛṇṇuyāt. Or else, the guṇa of udṇṇota: prauṛṇṇaviṣāṣṭi.

Roots ending in ṛ: by "before yaṇ and the āśiṣ, before ya," there is the augment of i. Kṛyāt, hriyāt, bṛyāt. By "also of those ending in ṛt," there is no guṇa. Kriṣīṣṭa, hrīṣīṣṭa, pṛṣīṣṭa. Stṛñ: by "ir for those ending in ṛt, where there is no guṇa," it becomes ir. The penultimate of r and v is long. Āstiryāta. By "for ṛt, vṛṅ and vṛñ, iṭ is optional before san, and in the ātmanepada also before sic and the āśiṣ; for ṛt with an initial conjunct, the expression is not established when suṭ stands outside," the iṭ augment is optional. By "also after ṛt, vṛ and vṛñ it is optionally long, not before the parokṣā and the āśiṣ, of īn," it is so. Length would be obtained from the split rule "in the parasmaipada it is not prescribed before sic," but it is prohibited by the words "the parokṣā and the āśiṣ." Āpariṣīṣṭa, pravariṣīṣṭa, ānāstariṣīṣṭa.

Roots ending in consonants. Paca: vacyāta, pakṣīṣṭa. Hana: by "hanti becomes vadhi before the āśiṣ," it is changed to vadhi. Vadhyata, āvadhiśiṣṭa. The parasmaipada forms of those with samprasāraṇa are to be stated. Gṛhyādlajaiyāt, vidhyāta, uśyāta, pṛcchatā, priścyuta, bhrijhyātā, supyāta, ucyāta, ijyāta. In the ātmanepada: grahiṣīṣṭa. By "for those with a nāmin vowel as penultimate, before sic and the āśiṣ, also in the ātmanepada," there is no guṇa. Bhitasāṣṭi. Budha: bhutsāṣṭi. Sṛkṣāṣṭi, dṛkṣāṣṭi. Those with iṭ: virtttaṣīṣṭa, virddhaṣīṣṭa. It is likewise in the impersonal and the passive.

Dāsīṣṭa, dāyiṣīṣṭa. Dhāsīṣṭa, bhāyiṣīṣṭa. Ceṣīṣṭa, cāyiṣīṣṭa. Badhaṣīṣṭa, ghāniṣīṣṭa. Grāhiṣīṣṭa, grāhīṣīṣṭa. Darśiṣīṣṭa, dṛkṣāṣṭi. From the wording "before sya, sīc, the āśīḥ and the śvastanī, in the sense of the impersonal and the passive, the iṭ of vowel-final roots and of hana, graha and driśa is optionally like ic," there is iṭ. "It also becomes like ic."

Thus, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown, the eighth, the teaching on the domain of the āśīḥ.

The bhaviṣyantī is to be stated. By "for the future: the bhaviṣyantī, the āśīḥ and the śvastanī," it becomes the bhaviṣyantī ending. Roots ending in ā: yā, in the sense of attaining. Yāsyati, pāsyati. Dā: dāsyati. Dhā: dhāsyati. Roots ending in i: ceṣyati, niṣyeti. Roots ending in u: stoṣyati, lapiṣyati, lapiṣyati, paviṣyati, bhaviṣyati. Roots ending in ṛ: by "after han and those ending in riṭ, before sya," there is the iṭ augment. Kariṣyate. Śakli: because of the conditioning factor, it becomes ṣa. Śakṣyati. Paca: by "ki before a letter not homogeneous with the ca class," it becomes ki. Because of the conditioning factor, it becomes ṣa. Pakṣyati. Paca: pakṣyati. Praccha: by "also of cha and śa," it becomes ṣa. By "ka for ṣa and ḍha," it becomes ka. Because of the conditioning factor, it becomes ṣa. Prakṣyati. Daha: by "gha for initial da," it becomes gha. By "for the initial third consonant of roots ending in ghi, ḍha, dha and bha," and so on, the letter d becomes the letter dh. By "the first consonant, before voiceless sounds, for those that are not śiṭ," the letter gh becomes the letter k. It becomes ṣa. Dhakṣyati. Naha: by "dha for naha," it becomes dha. It becomes the first consonant: the letter dh becomes the letter t. Natsyāti. Sṛja: for sṛji and dṛśa, the letter a is an augment. Prakṣyati, drakṣyati. Budha: bhotsyati. For rabhi and labhi, the first consonant. Rapsyate, labsyate.

Those with optional iṭ are to be stated. Kṛtī, in the sense of encircling. Cvitī, also in the sense of harming. Ucchidir, in the senses of blazing and of playing. Utṛdir. Nṛti, in the sense of moving the body. Where it is not the ātmanepada, there is no iṭ before sya and san after pṛta and the rest. For the śvastanī it is only not after kṛpi. By "after kṛta and the rest, before sa, optionally, but not before sic," the iṭ augment is optional. Karttiṣyati, kartsyati. Certtiṣyati, certsyati. Chaddhiṣyatī, charttasyati. Tarddhiṣyati, nirttiti. Gama: by "after gaṃ, before sa, in the parasmaipada," there is the iṭ augment. Gamiṣyati. With saṃ prefixed: by "gaṃ after saṃ; ṛcchi, pracchi, spṛśu, vetti, artti and dṛśa," it takes the ātmanepada. Saṃgasyate. By "where it is not the ātmanepada, there is no iṭ before sya and san after pṛta and the rest," the iṭ is prohibited. It is so also in the parasmaipada. Vṛtu: varttsyati. Śridhu: śrartsyati. Syandu: santsyati. In the ātmanepada there is iṭ: varttiṣyati, varddhiṣyate, śarddhiṣryate, syandiṣyate. By "for the śvastanī it is only not after kṛphi," the iṭ is prohibited. It is so also in the parasmaipada. Kalapsyati. In the ātmanepada there is iṭ: kalbiṣyate. It is likewise in the impersonal and the passive.

When, by the rule "before sya, sic, the āśīḥ and the śvastanī, in the sense of the impersonal and the passive, the iṭ of vowel-final roots and of hana, graha and dreśa is optionally like ice," ice is made the affix, as though it were ice, then by "āyi for those ending in āt, before ic," it becomes āyi. Yāyiṣyate, yāsyate. Roots ending in i: jāyiṣyate, jeṣyate. Nālaṣyate, neṣyate. Roots ending in ū: hu: hāviṣyate, hoṣyate. Ghāniṣyate, haniṣyate. Graha: grāhiṣryate, grahīṣyate. Dṛśir: darśiṣyā, drakṣyate.

Thus, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown, the ninth, the concise teaching on the domain of the bhaviṣyantī.

The kriyātibatti is to be stated. By "also those that have a past action," it becomes the kṛyātibatti ending. Yā, in the sense of attaining. By "there is no iṭ after a single-vowel root ending in āt," the iṭ is prohibited. Ayāsyata. By "after the letter i, śvi," and so on, the iṭ is prohibited. Aceṣyata, ajyeṣyata, alavaṣyata, avaviṣyata. By "after han and those ending in ṛt, before sya," there is the iṭ augment. By "aṭ at the beginning of the root, before the hyastanī, the adyatanī and the conditional," there is the augment. Hana: ahaniṣyata. Akariṣyata. In the impersonal and the passive, the iṭ is treated like ic, as before. Angāyiṣyata, ayāyiṣyata, agrāhiṣyata, adarśiṣyata.

Thus, from the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown, the tenth, the concise teaching on the domain of the kṛyatibatti.

The san is to be stated. Guba, in the senses of hiding and of censure. Taji, in the sense of being sharp, and also in the sense of forbearance. Kit, in the sense of abiding, and also in the sense of curing illness. By "sana after gupti, ja and kita," it is in the sense of censure from hiding, and in the sense of forbearance from harming; likewise from tija. Also in the sense of doubt: in the manner of expression, san is explicitly stated after kati. The letter n serves to specify, in the rule "the letter i before san." Further, the root in general: the term "root" being applied, it means sārvadhātuka. Therefore, since it is not sārvadhātuka, the iṭ augment of the rule "the iṭ augment at the beginning of what begins with a consonant other than the letter y, when it is not sārvadhātuka" does not take place. By "also before a san that has no iṭ," there is no guṇa. By "before caṇ, the parokṣā, cekrīyita and san-final forms," there is reduplication. The initial consonant remains. By "the ca class for the ka class," the letter g becomes the letter j. Where jugupsa stands, titikṣa stands, and cikitsa stands, these are roots; since they bear the name "root," the suffix follows the root. By "vartamānā for the present," what is occurring is the vartamānā. Because they belong to ruca and the rest, the ātmanepada. A-n. The letter a and the procedure of sandhi. Jugupsahe, titikṣate. After kati, the parasmaipada forms: cikatsisti.

Māna, in the sense of worship. Badha, in the sense of binding. Dāna, in the sense of cutting up. Śānā, in the sense of sharpening. By "for māna, badha, dāna and śana, also the lengthening of the reduplicated syllable," there is sa. By "caṇ, the parokṣā," and so on, there is reduplication. The consonant remains. By "short," it becomes short. By "the letter i before san," it becomes a. After that, the reduplicated syllable becomes long.

Māna and badha take the ātmanepada endings: mimānate. By "for the root-initial third consonant of roots ending in gha, ḍha, dha and bha, the fourth, before dhra," the letter b becomes the letter bh. By "the first consonant, before voiceless sounds, for those that are not śiṭ," the letter dh becomes the letter t. Bībhassate. Dāna and śana take the endings of both voices. Dīdāṃsata, sādīṃsati. Śīśāṃsati, śīsañi, śīśaṃśāṃsaste.

Roots ending in āt. Pā, in the sense of protecting. By "after a root whose infinitive in tum is the object of desire, optionally, when the agent is the same," there is the suffix san. Pātumicchati: sisāsati. Sthātumicchati: taṣṭhāsati. Glai: because it ends in a diphthong, it becomes ā. Glātumicchati: jiglāsati. Mlai: maimlasati. Kai: cikāsati. Gai: jigāsati. By "before san, mi, mī, mā, dā," and so on, it is changed to is and the reduplicated syllable is also elided. By "ta for the s of sa, before what is not sārvadhātuka," it is the letter t. Mā, in the sense of measure. Med, in the sense of giving in return. Mitsati, sitsati. Dāṇa, in the sense of giving. Datsati. Do: ditsati. Deṅ and traiṅ, in the sense of protecting. Ditsati. Ṭudāñ, in the sense of giving. Ditsati, datsate. Cakṣiṅ, in the sense of speaking clearly. Cakṣiṅ becomes khañ. Ūkhyātumicchati: ācakhyāste.

From the wording "smṛ and dṛśi too, when they end in san; for ruca and the rest, śu, without āṅ and prati; and also of jña without anu, in the sense of cognition, as it is remembered," they take the ātmanepada. Jijñāsate, upajijñāsate. From the restriction in "of jñā without anu," when anu is prefixed it takes the parasmaipada. Anujijñāsati.

Hveñ: it becomes ā. By "also of the reduplicated," there is samprasāraṇa. By "for vowel-final roots, before san," it becomes long. Then there is reduplication. By "short," it becomes short. Juhusati. By "of dādi before san," it is the letter ā. Upadīdāste. Daridrā: by "the letter ī and ṛdhā," and so on, iṭ is optional. By "for daridrāti, before what is not sārvadhātuka," the letter ā is elided. Didariṣati. "Optionally" carries over like a leaping frog; and from the restriction "those earlier ones do not take place before a san without iṭ," the letter ā is not elided. Dadiridrāste.

Roots ending in i. Ji: by "gi for ji before san and the parokṣā," it is changed to gī. Jigīṣati, vijigīṣate. Ciñ: by "ki for ci, optionally," it is optionally changed to ki. Cikīṣati, cekīṣati, cicīṣati, cicīṣite. By "it should be stated: from he, when not before caṇ," it is changed to ghi. Jighīṣati. Ṭumiñ: by "before san, is for the vowel of mi, mī, mā, dā, rabha, śaka, bata and bara," it is changed to is. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. By "ta before sīsa, when not sārvadhātuka," the letter s becomes the letter t. Matsiti, matsiti. By "before the san of smiṅ, pūṅ, ri, la, añju, aśū, kṝ, gṝ, dṝ, dhī and pracch," there is the iṭ augment. Guṇa. Stismayiṣate. Śi, śri, tīṅ and śīṅ are those that take iṭ. Śiśvayiṣati. Śṛñ: by "optionally for the letter i, ṛ, bha, bhra, sja, danddhu, śri, yu, urṇṇu, bhara, jha, pisa, ni, tana, pati and daridā," the iṭ is optional. Śriśayiṣati, śiśīṣate, śeśrayiṣate. By "the letter i, and ridha," and so on, iṭ is optional before san. Jijñapayiṣati. Ṛ: by "īra and īt are to be stated for dhi and jñāpi," it becomes āti. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. Jñīpsati.

Roots ending in ī. Ḍīṅ: ḍiḍayiṣate. Śiṅ: śiśayiṣate. Ṇīñ: nanāṣiti. Ñibhī, in the sense of fearing. Bibhīṣati. Hrī, in the sense of shame. Jihrīṣati. Mid. Mīñ: optionally. By "before san, mi, mī," and so on, it is changed to is. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. The letter s becomes the letter t. Pramitsate, upamatsiti.

Roots ending in u. Hu, in the sense of giving. By "also after those ending in u," the iṭ is prohibited. Juhuṣate. By "for sunoti, before so and san," the change of the root's letter s to ṣa is prohibited. Susūṣati. Ru: dudūṣati. Yu, in the sense of mixing. By "optionally for the letter i, ṛdha, bhrasja, danbhu, śri, yu, ūrṇṇu, bharjña, visa, ni, tani and daridrā," the iṭ is optional. There is reduplication. By "for the letter u, before the letter a, when ja, a semivowel or the pa class follows," the u of the reduplicated syllable becomes i. Iyaviṣati, yuyūṣati, prorṇṇunaviṣati. Śru: from the wording "smṛ and dṛśi too, when they end in san; for ruca and the rest, śru, without ā and prati; and also of jñā without anu, in the sense of cognition, as it is remembered," it takes the ātmanepada. Śuśruṣate. From the restriction "without āṅ and brati," it does not take the ātmanepada. Āśuśruṣati, pratiśuśruṣati.

Roots ending in ūt. Bhū: bubhūṣate. Bū: by "smiṅ, pūṅ," and so on, there is iṭ. Pipaviṣate. But from būñ: pupūṣate, papūṣate.

Roots ending in ṛt. Kṛñ: by "wishing to do," there is sana. By "of those ending in a nāmin vowel that have no iṭ," there is no guṇa. By "for vowel-final roots, before san," it becomes long. By "ir for those ending in ṛt, where there is no guṇa," it becomes ir. By the penultimate of ra and pa, it is long. Cikīrṣati. Hṛñ: jihrirṣati. Cikirṣati, jihīrṣate. Ṛ, in the sense of going. By "smiṅ, pūṅ," and so on, there is iṭ. Guṇa. By "of the second, after an initial vowel," there is reduplication. Aririṣati. Dṛṅ, in the sense of respect. There is iṭ as before. Ādidariṣate. Dhriṅ, in the sense of perishing utterly. Didhariṣate. By "for ṛṅ, vṛṅ and vṛñ, iṭ is optional before san, and in the ātmanepada also before sic and the āśīḥ; for ṛt with an initial conjunct, the expression is not established when suṭ stands outside," the iṭ is optional. In the alternative without iṭ, by "for vowel-final roots, before san," it becomes long. By "ur also for a labial penultimate," it becomes ur. By the penultimate of ra and pa, it is long. Bubūrṣate, prābubūrṣati. When there is iṭ, there is guṇa. Vivarīṣate, pravivirāṣati, prāvivariṣate. Ṭubhañ: the iṭ is optional, as before.

Bibhariṣate, bubhurṣataṃ, bibhariṣate, bubhāṣate. By "smṛ and dṛśi," and so on, it takes the ātmanepada. Susmurāte.

Roots ending in ṝt. Kṝ, in the sense of scattering. By "smiṅ, pūṅ," and so on, there is īt. Cikariṣataṃ. Gṝ, in the sense of pressing down. Jaṃgaroṣate. By "optionally before a vowel," it optionally becomes l. Jaṃgalṣiti. These are the ones listed together with pracchi. Kṝ, gṝ, dṝ and dhī: these are the ones with initial āt. Kṛñ, in the sense of harming. Gṝ, in the sense of sound. By "for ṛt, vṛṅ and vṛñ," and so on, there is iṭ. Cikariṣiti, cikīrṣati. Jigariṣati, jigīrṣati. Prāṃ, in the senses of protecting and of filling. By "for ṛt, vṛṅ and vṛñ," and so on, the iṭ is optional. Bupūrṣati. Tṛ: titīrṣiti. When there is iṭ, there is guṇa. Pipariṣati, tatariṣati.

Roots ending in consonants. Vaca: vivakṣati. Yaje: yiyakṣati. By "after those ending in san, as before," the endings are as before. Pipakṣate, yiyakṣate. Vasa, in the sense of dwelling. Sana. By "ta for the s of sa, before what is not sārvadhātuka," the letter s becomes the letter t. Vipatbati. Budha: by "for the root-initial third consonant of roots ending in gha, ḍha, dha and bha, the fourth, before sa and dhva," the initial becomes the fourth: the letter b becomes the letter bh. It becomes the first: the letter dh becomes the letter t. Pubhutsati. Rabha, in the sense of beginning. By "before san, mi, mī," and so on, it is changed to is, and the reduplicated syllable is also elided. By "also at the end, for the s and k of an initial conjunct," the letter s is elided. It becomes the first. Āripsata. Ḍulabhaṣ, in the sense of obtaining. Ālipsate. Śaklṛ: śakṣiti. Vatlṛ: by "the letter i and ṛdha," and so on, iṭ is optional before san. Pitsiti, vivatiṣati. Pada, in the sense of going. Patsite.

By "optionally for the letter i, ṛdha, bhrasja, danbhyu, śri, yu, ūrṇṇu, bharajña, visa, ni, tani, pati and daridrā," the iṭ is optional. Divu, which has an indicatory i: deviṣate. In the alternative without iṭ, by "śa and ūṭ for chva, also before the fifth," there is ūṭ. The letter ṭ serves to specify, in the rule "vṛddhi of ūṭ after the letter a." It becomes ya. There is reduplication. The consonant remains. Dudyūṣati. Śivu: from the restriction "for stauti and those ending in in, before ṣan," it becomes ṣa. Siseviṣati, susyūṣati. Tiṣṭhivu: tiṣṭhṛviṣati, tuṣṇyūṣati. Ṛdhu: by "of the second, after an initial vowel," there is reduplication. By "na, ba, da and ra, as the first of a conjunct, are not reduplicated, except before ya," the repha is not to be reduplicated. Adhidhiṣati. In the alternative without iṭ, by "īr and īt are to be stated for ṛdhi and jñapi," there is īra before svan. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. Īrtsati. Bhrasja: bibhrajjiṣate, bibhrakāti. By "bhṛji is here implied for bhrasji," it is changed to bhṛja. Bibharkṣati, bibharjiṣati. Danbhyu: didambhaṣiti. In the alternative without iṭ, by "also the iṭ of danbha," it becomes i. From the letters "also," it is also long. From the "also" in "also before a san that has no iṭ," in some cases there is no guṇa of the nāmin vowel. For one that has no indicatory it, the anuṣaṅga is elided. The fourth of the first. It becomes the first. Dhapsiti, dhipsāti. Ṣaṇu, in the sense of giving. Sisaniṣaṭi. In the alternative without iṭ, by "before a dhuṭ, for khani, sani, sani and jana," it becomes ā. Siṣāsati. Tanu: titaniṣati. In the alternative without iṭ: titaṃsati. By "it should be stated that titisati is optional," the penultimate is optionally long. Titīsati.

Anju: by "before the san of smiṅ, pūṅ, ri, anju, yaśu, kṛ, gṛ, dhri and praccha," there is iṭ. Anjijiṣati. Aśu: aśiśiṣate. Praccha: by "praṣṭumicchati," there is san. By "before the san of grahi, svapi and pracche," there is samprasāraṇa. Vipracchiṣati. Graha: by "before the san of graha and guha," the iṭ is prohibited. By "before the san of grahi, svapi and pracche," there is samprasāraṇa. By "ha becomes ḍha," it becomes ḍha. The fourth of the first. By "ka for ṣa and ḍha before sa," it becomes ka. Jighr̄kṣate. Guhu: jughukṣati. Ñiṣvapa: by "grahi, svapi," there is samprasāraṇa. Suṣupsati. Jenī: jijaniṣaste. Yanu: yiyaṃsati. Ramu: riraṃsate. Nama: ninaṃsati. Gamne: by "after gama, before sa, in the parasmaipada," there is iṭ. Jigameṣati. By "gam after si, ṛcchi, pracchi," and so on, it takes the ātmanepada. From the wording "in the parasmaipada," there is no iṭ in the ātmanepada. Sajigisate. By "gami for iṇ and iṅ before san," it is changed to gami. Jigamiṣati, saṃjigaṃsate. If gamḷ is in the sense of understanding, it is not to be expressly stated with san. This one is likewise. I, in the sense of going. By "of the second, after an initial vowel," there is reduplication. By "for the letter a before san," it becomes i. Sarthānabratīṣiṣati. By "also of ik, like in," it is changed to gami. Adhijigamiṣati: iṅ is changed to gami. By "for the penultimate of hana and of the gama of iṅ," it becomes long. Adhijigāṃsate. Hana: the penultimate becomes long. By "also from the reduplicated syllable," it becomes gha. Jighāṃsatī. Aṅ: by "ghaslṛ for ad before san and the adyatanī," it is changed to ghaslṛ. The letter s becomes the letter t. Jighatsati. Daha: by "gha for initial da," it becomes gha. The first becomes the fourth, and it becomes ka. Diddhakṣati.

Vida, in the sense of investigating. Bada, in the sense of existing. Vidlṛ, in the sense of finding. Visitsati, vivitsati. Rudi, in the sense of shedding tears. By "before the san of ruda, vadi and muṣa," there is no guṇa. Rurudiṣati. Vid, in the sense of knowing. Divideṣati. Muṣa, in the sense of stealing. Mumuṣiṣate. By "of the reduplicated syllable of dyuti and svapi," there is samprasāraṇa. By "it should be stated: also san," guṇa is optional. Didyutiṣate, dedyotiṣate. Likewise: ruruciṣate, ruróciṣate. Liliṣiṣati, liloṣiṣati. Lulubhiṣati, lulobhiṣati. Śuśobhiṣati, śuśobhiṣate. Cukṣubhiṣate, cukṣobhiṣate. Opojī, in the senses of fearing and of trembling. By "of viji, before iṭ," there is no guṇa.

Vivijiṣate. By "for kuṭa and the rest, except before in, ic and aṭ," there is no guṇa. Ucchakuṭiṣati, utpupuṭiṣati. Muha: mumukṣati. Muca: mumukṣati. Because it belongs to kira and the rest, it takes the ātmanepada. By "it should be stated: optionally oṭ for muc when it has no object," it optionally becomes o. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. Mokṣate, mumukṣate.

Vṛtu, vṛdhu, śṛdhu and syandu: where these stand in what is not the ātmanepada, by "there is no iṭ before sya and san after pṛta and the rest; for the śvastanī it is only not after kṛbi; after kṛta and the rest, before sa, optionally, but not before sic," the iṭ is prohibited. It is so also in the parasmaipada. Vivṛtsati, śiśritsati, sisyastsati. In the ātmanepada there is iṭ: vivarttiṣate, vivarddhiṣate, śiśarddhiṣate, sisyandiṣate. Likewise kṛpū: ciklṛpsati, cikalpaṣite. Likewise krotī: cikṛtsati, cikarttiṣati. Cicritsati, cicarttiṣati. Cicchatsati, chicchardhiṣati. Tritritsati, tetardhiṣati. Nṛtī: ninṛtsati, ninirttaṣate.

Pṛja, dṛśir: sisṛkṣati. From the wording "smṛ and draśi too, when they end in san; after ruca and the rest, śru, without āṅ and prati; and also of jñā without anu, in the sense of cognition, as it is explained," it takes the ātmanepada. Dedṛkṣate. From the wording "where guṇa and vṛddhi stand," there is no augment of the letter a for sṛji and dṛśi.

Āslaṃ: by "of the second, after an initial vowel," there is reduplication. The ī of ābnoti. The reduplicated syllable is also elided. Āpsiti. Undi, in the sense of moistening. By "na, ba, da and ra, as the first of a conjunct, are not reduplicated, except before ya," it is not to be reduplicated. Undiṣati. Arḍa, in the sense of striving earnestly. Arḍiḍiṣati. Arccha, in the sense of worship. Arcchiciṣati. Ḍuyācvi: yiyīchiṣate. Smarddha, in the sense of true joy. Pisarbarddhiṣate. Krīḍī, in the sense of abiding. Cikrīḍiṣati. Kuja: cukūjiṣati. Ḍuvavṛ: vivebiṣate. Those with au as penultimate: ḍhaukṛ: ḍuḍhaukiṣate. Traukṛ: tutraukiṣate. Those with n as penultimate: sransu, dhvansu: sipṛ, siṣate; didhvisiṣate. Duha: dudhukṣāti, dudhukṣate. Liha: lalikṣate. Īśa: iśiśiṣate. Ās: āsisiṣate.

Likewise, in the impersonal and the passive there is yaṇ. The letter a is elided. Cikīrṣyate, jihīrṣyate. The others too are to be seen in the same way. Saptamī: cikīrṣeta. Pañcamī: cikīrṣatu. Hyastanī: acikārṣate. Adyatanī: acikīrṣita. Parokṣā: by "āma before the parokṣā, after cakāsa, kāsa and those ending in a suffix," there is āma. By "kṛñ is to be added after āma," kṛñ is to be added. Cikīrṣaṃcakara. Śvastanī: cikīrṣitī. Āśīḥ: cikīrṣita. Bhaviṣyantī: cikīrṣaṣati. Kriyātibatti: acikīrṣaṣyata. Thus it has been taught for all the domains.

The cekrīyita is to be stated. Yā, in the sense of attaining. When one wishes to express the sense of having attained in the past, or of attaining again and again, then by "the sound ya after a root, in the sense of the full repetition of an action, is the cekrīyita," there is the suffix ya. By "caṇ, the parokṣā," and so on, there is reduplication. By "short," it becomes short. By "long where there is no augment," it becomes long. Where lāyāya stands, these are roots, so they have the name "root." By "also after what ends in cekrīyita," it takes the ātmanepada. Yāyāyate. Vā: vāvāyate. Ḍudāñ: by "dā, mā, gā, yati," and so on, it becomes ī. By "guṇa before the cekrīyita," there is guṇa of the reduplicated syllable. Dedīyate. Likewise ḍudhāñ: dedhīyate. Mā: memīyate. Gai: it becomes ā. Jegviyate. Pā: bebīyate. Sthā: teṣṭhīyate. Ṣa, in the sense of ending. Seṣīyati. Ohāk: jehīyate. By "ī for ghrā and dhmā," it becomes ī. Jeghiyate, deddhiyate. Jyā: because it belongs to grahi and the rest, there is samprasāraṇa. Jejīyate. Byeñ: by "for svapi, syami and veñ, before the cekrīyita," there is samprasāraṇa. Bebīyate. Hveñ: by "also of the reduplicated," there is samprasāraṇa. Jehūyate. By "optionally for śvayati," there is samprasāraṇa. Śiśvīyate, śośūyate. By "for those ending in a nāmin vowel, before yaṇ, āyi," and so on, it becomes long. Cecīyate. Hi, in the sense of going. By "it should be stated: after hi, when not before caṇ," it is changed to ghi. Prajeghīyate.

Roots ending in i. Tīñ: nenīyate. Śīṅ: by "before ya, ī becomes aya," aya replaces the letter ī. Śaśayyate. Roots ending in u. Hu: jahūyate. Ṣṭuñ: toṣṭuyate. Yu: yoyūyate. Ru: rorūyate. Nu: nonūyate. Ūrṇṇūñ: from the general statement "of what has an initial consonant," the suffix ya does not extend to what has an initial vowel. By "also after ṛ and the rest," the suffix ya is to be established. Prorṇṇonūyate. Kuṅ, in the sense of sound. By "not for kavati before the cekrīyita," the change of the ka class to the ca class in the reduplicated syllable is prohibited. Krokūyate. From the specific statement "of kaveti," only the forms of kauṭṛ and kuvati take the ca class. Cakūyate. Luñ: lolūyate. Bopūyate.

Roots ending in ṛ. By "for ṛt, before cvi, the cekrīyita, yin and āyin, the ending īt," there is the augment of the letter ī. Cekrīyate, jehrīyate. Ṛ, in the sense of going. By "also after ṛ and the rest," there is the suffix ya. While "guṇa for arti and those with an initial conjunct" carries over, by "also before the cekrīyita," there is guṇa. Arāpyate. Roots ending in ṝ. Kṝ: ir for those ending in ṛt where there is no guṇa. The penultimate of r and v is long. Ceśīryate. Gṝ: with ni prefixed. By "for girati, before the cekrīyita," it becomes la. Nijigilyate. Pṝ: ur also for a labial penultimate. The penultimate of r and v is long.

Popūryate. Prī: popūryate.

Roots ending in consonants. Vac: vāvacyate. Yaj: yāyajyate. Paṭh: pāpaṭhyate. Vad: vāvadyate. Ñiṣvap: by "of svap, syam and vye, before the cekrīyita," there is samprasāraṇa, and it becomes ṣ. Soṣupyate. Sesimyate. Vaś, in the sense of being lovely. Since samprasāraṇa would apply by "grahi and the rest," by "of vaś, before the cekrīyita," samprasāraṇa is prohibited. Vāvaśyate. Cāyṛ: by "for cāy, kī before the cekrīyita," it is changed to kī. Cekīyate. Sphāyī and opyāyī, in the sense of growing. Pāsphāyyate. While "for cāy, kī before the cekrīyita" carries over, by "for pyāy, pī in the parokṣā," pyāy becomes pī. Pepīyate.

While "of khan, san and jan, before a dhuṭ" carries over, by what is explained as "optionally before ya," it becomes ā. Cākhāyate, sāsāyate, jājāyate. When there is no ā, then by "for those ending in a nasal, anusvāra at the end of the ā," there is the augment of anusvāra. Caṅkhanyate, saṃsanyate. Śamu: śaṃśamyate. Damu: dandamyate. Tamu: tantamyate. Gamḷ: jaṅgamyate. Ram: raṃramyate. Yam: yaṃyamyate. Nam: naṃnamyate. Han: jaṅghanyate.

By "it should be stated that for hani, in the sense of harming, there is optionally ghnī," it is changed to ghnī. Jeghnīyate.

By "from those meaning going, only in the sense of crookedness," there is the suffix ya. Kramu: kuṭilaṃ kramati, caṅkramyate. Dram: dandramyate. By "from lup and the rest, in the sense of contempt," there is the suffix ya. Garhitaṃ lumpati, lolupyate. Śadḷ: śāśadyate. By "for car and phal, also u for the following a," there is the augment of anusvāra, and the following letter a also becomes u. The penultimate of r and v is long. Cañcūryate, pamphulyate. By "also of jap and the rest," there is the augment of anusvāra. Jañjapyate, dandahyate, dandaśyate.

Bhañjo, in the sense of crushing. For those that do not have i as an indicatory letter, where there is no guṇa, the anuṣaṅga is deleted. Bambhajyate. Paś: a root that occurs in the sūtra. Pampaśyate. By "for vañci, sraṃsi, dhvaṃsi, bhraṃśi, kasi, pati, padi and skand, nī at the end," there is the augment nī, and the anuṣaṅga is deleted. Vanīvacyate, sanīsrasyate, danīdhvasyate, banībhraśyate, canīkasyate, panīpatyate, panīpadyate, canīskadyate.

Bhid: bebhidyate. Budh: bobudhyate. Vṛtu, vṛdhu: by "rī for those containing ṛ," there is the augment rī. Varīvṛtyate, varīvṛdhyate. Dṛśir: darīdṛśyate. Jarījṛmbhyate, sarīsṛpyate, narīnṛtyate, śarīśṛdhyate, jarīgṛdhyate, parīpṛśyate, parīpṛcchyate. Ḍhaukṛ: ḍoḍhaukyate. Traukṛ: totraukyate.

Sūc, sūtr, sūtr, mūtr: because they belong to the cur class, there is in. By "also after ṛ and the rest," there is the suffix ya. By "of the kārita, before what is not ām, iṭ or a vikaraṇa," the kārita is deleted. Sosūcyate, sosūtryate, momūtryate. Aś: aśāśyate. Aṭ: aṭāṭyate.

In the impersonal and the passive, there is yaṇ. By "deletion also of a," the letter a is deleted. By "of ya, where there is no an," the letter ya is deleted. Pāpaṭhyate, bebhidyate. It should be seen likewise in every case.

Saptamī: lolūyeta. Pañcamī: lolūyatām. Hyastanī: alolūyata. Adyatanī: alolūyiṣṭa. Parokṣā: the augment comes from the very end of the suffix. Lolūyāñcakre. Śvastanī: lolūyitā. Āśīḥ: lolūyiṣīṣṭa. Bhaviṣyantī: lolūyiṣyate. Kriyātipattiḥ: alolūyiṣyata. Thus the domain of the cekrīyita has been taught.

The deletion of the cekrīyita is now to be stated. By the separate rule "its deletion before ac," the cekrīyita is deleted. By "some say carkarītam also," there are parasmaipada endings. From ad and the rest, an is deleted. By "optionally after the carkarīta," before a sārvadhātuka that begins with a consonant and takes guṇa, there is optionally the augment īṭ. Lolavīti, loloti, lolūtaḥ. By "both are abhyasta," it is given the name abhyasta. By "after an abhyasta, the n of anti is deleted," n is deleted. Loluvati. Lolavīṣi, loloṣi, lolūthaḥ, lolūtha. Lolavīmi, lolomi, lolūvaḥ, lolūmaḥ.

Vad: vāvadīti, vāvatti, vāvattaḥ, vāvadati.

Kruś: by "also not for the penultimate of an abhyasta" and "before a vowel in a sārvadhātuka taking guṇa," guṇa is prohibited. Cokruśīti, cokruṣṭaḥ, cokruśati.

Mud, in the sense of joy. Momudīti, momotti, momuttaḥ, momudati. Saptamī: momudyāt. Pañcamī: momudītu, momottu, momuttāt, momuttām, momudatu. By "after hu and a dhuṭ, dhi for hi," there is dhi. Momuddhi, momuttāt, momuttam, momutta, momudāni, momudāva, momudāma. Hyastanī: amomudīt, amomot, amomuttām, amomuduḥ. Adyatanī: by "after iṭ, also before īṭ," sic is deleted. Amomodīt, amomodīt, amomodiṣṭām, amomodiṣuḥ, amomodīḥ. Khādṛ: acākhādiṣṭām, acākhādiṣuḥ, acākhādīḥ.

Gṛdhu, in the sense of longing. By "rī for those containing ṛ," there is the augment rī. Jarīgṛdhīti. By "ri and r also when the cekrīyita is deleted," it also becomes ri and r. Jarigṛdhīti, jargṛdhīti, jarīgardhi, jarigardhi, jargardhi. Hyastanī: ajarīgṛdhīd, ajarīgṛdhīt, ajarigṛdhīt, ajargṛdhīt, ajarīghart, ajarighart, ajarghart, ajarīgṛddhām, ajarigṛddhām, ajargṛddhām, ajarīgṛdhuḥ, ajarigṛdhuḥ, ajargṛdhuḥ. With s: there is guṇa. By "also when deleted, before d and s," the first becomes the fourth, the letter g becoming gh. Because this is expressed by "before s at the end of a word" and so on, it becomes r. The r before r is deleted, and the preceding vowel is lengthened. Ajarghāḥ. Spardh: apāspāḥ. Kurd: acokūḥ. Rādh and sādh, in the sense of accomplishment: arārāḥ. Nardh: anānāḥ. Such forms and others are to be looked into. Thus the domain of the deletion of the cekrīyita has been taught.

In is now to be stated.

Yā, in the sense of reaching. Where someone else prompts the one who goes (yāti), that one becomes its cause. By this, and by "also from a root, in the sense of the cause," there is the suffix in. The letter n serves to distinguish it in "of the penultimate a" and so on. By "arti, hrī, vlī, rī" and so on, the letter p is augmented. Yāpayati. Because it ends in in, there are endings of both voices. Yāpayate. Ḍudāñ: dāpayate. Ḍudhāñ: dhāpayatām, dhāpayati, dhāpayate, sannidhāpayati.

Śo, in the sense of making thin. Cho, in the sense of cutting. Ṣo, in the sense of bringing to an end. Hveñ, in the sense of rivalry. Vyeñ, in the sense of covering. Veñ, in the sense of weaving yarn. Dheṭ and pā, in the sense of drinking. Because these end in a diphthong, there is ā. Niśāyayati, avacchāyayati, sāyayati, hvāyayati, vyāyayati, vāyayati. By "for śā, chā, sā, hvā, vyā, ve and pā, before in, y," the ā is changed to āy.

Pā, in the sense of protecting. By "for pāti, l at the end," the consonant l is augmented. Pālayati.

Smiṅ, in the sense of smiling slightly. By "for smi, ji, krī and i, before in," there is ā, and the letter p is augmented. By "for bhī and smi, before in, when the causal agent is meant," there are ātmanepada endings. Vismāpayate. Because smiṅ is stated for fear that comes from the causal agent, here, where fear comes from an instrument, this does not happen: kuñcikayā vismāpayati.

Ji, in the sense of conquering. Ḍukrīñ, in the sense of trading goods. Iṅ, in the sense of reading. There is ā, and the letter p is augmented. Jāpayati, krāpayati, adhyāpayati.

The in-form of bhī applies also to fear that comes from the causal agent, and because of the rule on ruc and the rest, there are ātmanepada endings. Muṇḍo bhāpayate: by "for bhī and smi, before in, when the causal agent is meant," there are ātmanepada endings. Because it is said "bhiṣi cinti," bhī also has a final ṣ. Muṇḍo bhīṣayate. Otherwise there are parasmaipada endings, with vṛddhi and the change to āy. Kuñcikayā bhāyayati.

Sphur, in the sense of radiating, with vi prefixed. By "vispharati," in the sense of the state, there is ghañ, and guṇa. By "for sphuri and sphuli, ā for o before ghañ," there is ā. By "he makes that," there is in. When the cause is to be expressed, there is in again. By "of the kārita, before what is not ām, iṭ or a vikaraṇa," the kārita is deleted. Visphārayati. By "he prompts one who is radiating," there is in in the sense of the cause. Visphorayati.

Cap, in the sense of continuing, and also of gathering. Cāpayati. Ciñ: cāpayati. Ṭuvap, also in the sense of begetting. Puro vāto gāḥ pravāpayati: pravāpayati is in the sense of begetting; the meaning is "makes them conceive."

Rādh and sādh, in the sense of accomplishment. Where it does not concern the world beyond: grāmaṃ sādhayati, annaṃ sādhayati. Where it concerns the world beyond: tapaḥ sādhayati, dharmaṃ sādhayati. Ṣidhu, in the sense of going: annaṃ sedhayati, grāmaṃ sedhayati. Also of one who accomplishes:

tāpasas tapaḥ sedhayati.

Rā and lā, in the sense of taking. By "from lāti, also in the senses of deceiving and humiliating," there are ātmanepada endings. Kas tvām ullāpayate. Śyeno vartikām ullāpayati. This is because it is stated that, in the senses of deceiving and overpowering, lī is not used with the kārita.

Mīñ and druñ, in the sense of harming. Ḍumiñ, in the sense of throwing. Diṅ, in the sense of wasting away. By "for mā, mī, mi and dī, where guṇa or vṛddhi stands," there is ā, and the letter p is augmented. Māpayati, pramāpayati, upadāpayati.

Ṛ, in the sense of going. Hrī, in the sense of shame. Vlī, in the sense of covering. Rī, also in the sense of harming. Knūyī, in the sense of sound. Kṣmāyī, in the sense of trembling. By "for arti, hrī, vlī, rī, knūyī, kṣmāyī and those ending in ā, p at the end, with deletion of y and guṇa of the nāmin," the letter p is augmented. Deletion of y and guṇa of the nāmin also take place as is fitting. Arpayati, samarpayati, hrepayati, vlepayati, repayati, knopayati, kṣmāpayati.

Śṛñ: śrāpayati. Ṇīñ: nāpayati. Dhyañ, in the sense of moving. Prīñ, in the sense of satisfying. Dhūñ: by "for prīṇāti and dhūnoti, n," the letter n is augmented. Vidhūnayati, prīṇayati. Because it is specified as "prīṇāti and dhūnoti," here the letter n is not augmented: Dhū, in the sense of shaking; prīṅ, in the sense of joy. Vidhāvayati, prāvayati.

Vilīnaṃ karoti: from the in-ending, when the cause is to be expressed, there is in again, and the kārita is deleted. Ghṛtaṃ vilīnayati. Lal, in the sense of desiring: ghṛtaṃ vilālayati. Sneha, in the sense of melting: this is because it is stated that for lī the use with the kārita is optional.

Vaj, in the sense of going, and also of moving. In places, upavājayati. Or else, in the sense of moving, it does not take the kārita.

Du: dāvayati. Dru: drāvayati. Sru: srāvayati. Lūñ: lāvayati. Bhū: bhāvayati. Ṣṭuñ: stāvayati.

Roots ending in ṛ. Kṛñ: kārayati. Hṛñ: hārayati. Vṛñ: vārayati. Pṝ: pārayati. By "optionally before a vowel," it becomes l. Nigālayati.

Roots ending in consonants. Vācayati, pāṭhayati. Han: there is in. The penultimate a is long. By "t for hanti," the letter t. By "for the h of hanti, gh before in and ic," the letter h becomes gh. Ghātayati. Ñiṣvap: svāpayate.

Adi and psā, in the sense of eating. By "a prohibition should be stated for adi and khādi," the designation of object for the agent of the in-ending is prohibited. Ādayati, vādayati.

Bhidir: bhedayati. Chidir: chedayati. Yudh, in the sense of fighting: yodhayati. Vṛtu, in the sense of occurring: vartayati. Kṛpū: by "l for the r of kṛp," it becomes l. Kalpayati. Krīḍṛ: krīḍayati. Kūj: kūjayati. Ḍhaukṛ: ḍhaukayati. Sic: secayati. Dhvaṃsu: dhvaṃsayati.

Duṣa, in the sense of becoming corrupt. By "for duṣ, before the kārita," the letter o becomes ū. Dūṣayati. Optionally, where it means the mind's freedom from attachment: prajñāṃ dūṣayati, prajñāṃ doṣayati.

Sphāy: by "for sphāyi, change to v," the letter v. Sphāvayati.

Śadḷ, in the sense of decaying. By "for śadi, when not meaning going, t," it is changed to the letter t. Phalāni śātayati. Otherwise: gāḥ śādayati, which means "makes them go."

By "for ruh, p, also in the sense of growing": vrīhīn ropayati, kāryam adhyāropayati, artham samāropayati. But from ruhi: ārohayati hastī hastipakam.

The m-anubandha is now to be stated. Ghaṭ, in the sense of striving. Ghaṭ and the rest have m as an indicatory letter. The penultimate a is long, but for those with m as an indicatory letter it is short. Ghaṭayati. Vyath, in the sense of suffering, fear and trembling: vyathayati. Prath, in the sense of being proclaimed: prathayati. Mrad, in the sense of crushing: mradayati. Skhad, in the sense of eating: skhadayati. Kṣaji, in the sense of going and also of giving. Dakṣ, also in the sense of harming. On the strength of their being recited among ghaṭ and the rest, the penultimate is not lengthened either. Kṣañjayati, dakṣayati. Krap: krapayati. Kandayati, krandayati, kradayati, kladayati. Ñitvarā: tvarayati; otherwise, tvārayati. Jvar: jvarayati. Gaḍ: gaḍayati. Heḍ, in the sense of surrounding. By "the diphthongs change to short, e and u," the letter e becomes i. Hiḍayati. Paṭayati, bhaṭayati. Naṭ, in the sense of going: naṭayati; otherwise, nāṭayati. Ṣṭak, in the sense of resisting: stakayati. Cak, in the sense of being satisfied: cakayati. Kakhe, in the sense of laughing: kakhayati. Rage, in the sense of pleasing: ragayate. Lage, in the sense of clinging. Hrage, hlage, ṣage and sthage, in the sense of covering. Lagayati, hragayati, hlagayati, sagayati, sthagayati. Kage, whose meaning is not stated: kagayati. Ak and ag, in the sense of going crookedly: akayati, agayati. Kaṇ and raṇ, in the sense of going: kaṇayati, raṇayati. Caṇ, śaṇ and śraṇ, in the sense of giving: caṇayati, śaṇayati, śraṇayati. In a sense other than giving: vicāṇayati, śāṇayati, śrāṇayati. Sūth, kūth, krath and klath, meaning killing: suthayati, kuthayati, krathayati, klathayati. Can also: canayati. Vanu also, whose meaning is not stated: vanayati. Jval, in the sense of blazing: jvalayati. Hval and hmal, in the sense of shaking: hvalayate, hmalayate. Smṛ, in the sense of recollecting: smarayati; otherwise, vismārayati. Dṝ, in the sense of fear: darayate; in a sense other than fear, dārayati kāṣṭham. Nṝ, in the sense of leading: narayati. Śrā, in the sense of cooking: śrapayati; in a sense other than cooking, śrāpayati.

Jñā, in the senses of killing, pleasing and sharpening. For killing: saṃjñapayati paśūn, meaning "he kills them." For pleasing: jñapayati rājānam, meaning "he gratifies him." For sharpening: jñapayati śarān vyādhaḥ, meaning "he makes them sharp." Cali, for causing to move: calayati; otherwise, cālayati. Chadi, for giving strength: chadayati; otherwise, chādayati ghoṣān. Laḍi, for rolling the tongue: laḍayati; otherwise, lāḍayati. Madi, for joy and for falling ill: madayati; otherwise, mādayati.

By "also jani, jṝṣ, knasu, rañj and those ending in am," they have m as an indicatory letter, and those with m as an indicatory letter are short. Janayati, jarayati, knasayati. On the strength of this very m-anubandha, for rañji in the sense of hunting deer, the anuṣaṅga is deleted: rajayati mṛgān. Otherwise: rañjayati vastram. Those ending in am: śamayati, bhramayati, ramayati, gamayati. Gami: by "in the sense of patience," there are ātmanepada endings. Āgamayasva tāvat kiñcit kālam, meaning "please be patient."

By "optionally for jval, hval, hmal and nam without a prefix," the m-anubandha is optional. Jvalayati, jvālayati, hvalayati, hvālayati, hmalayati, hmālayati, namayati, nāmayati. With a prefix they always have m as an indicatory letter: prajvalayati, prahvalayati, prahmalayati, praṇamayati, pariṇamayati. By "also of glā, snā, vanu and vami," for those without a prefix the m-anubandha is optional. Glapayati, glāpayati, snapayati, snāpayati, vanayati, vānayati, vamayati, vāmayati. For those with a prefix, it is as it would otherwise apply: praglāpayati, prasnāpayati, upavanayati, udvamayati.

Not for kami, ami and cami: what would apply from their ending in am is prohibited. Kāmayati, āmayati, ācāmayati. For śam, when not about seeing: śamayati rogam. But about seeing: niśāmayati rūpam. For yam, when not about serving food: yamayati. Otherwise: yāmayati brāhmaṇān, meaning "he has them served food."

For skhad, also after apa and pari: apaskhadayati, pariskhadayati. Here there appears to be a contradiction between what comes before and what comes after; since the Indian manuscript reads just like this, it should be examined. So it appears as an annotation in the source copy. In another translation: praskhādayati, upaskhadayati. For the simple root: skhadayati.

Phaṇ, in the sense of going: phaṇayati; otherwise, phāṇayati phāṇṭam. By "seventy-five," these are the roots with m as an indicatory letter.

Iṇ, in the sense of going. By "gami for iṇ, when not meaning understanding," it is changed to gami. Gamayati. By "also of ik, as of in," it is changed to gami: adhigamayati, according to some. Here it is not established in the sense of understanding.

By "for gṛdhi and vañci in the sense of deceiving," there are ātmanepada endings. Śvānaṃ gardhayate, ahiṃ vañcayate. By "kṛñ, for a wrong repeated utterance," there are ātmanepada endings. Padaṃ mithyā kārayate. By "from budh, yudh, naś, jan, iṅ, pru, sru and dru, before in," there are parasmaipada endings. Bodhayati, yodhayati, nāśayati, janayati, adhyāpayati, prāvayati, srāvayati, drāvayati. By "from one that without ṇi takes no object and whose agent is conscious," there are parasmaipada endings. Ās, in the sense of sitting near: āsayati, pāsayati. By "not for pā, dam, āṅyam, āyas, parimuh, ruci, nṛti, pad and vas," the parasmaipada endings are prohibited, and from ruc and the rest there are ātmanepada endings. Pāyayate: dheṭ is to be supplied.

Dhāpayate, damayati, āyāmayati, āyāsayate, parimohayate, rocayate, nartayati, pādayate, vāsayate.

In the impersonal and the passive, there is yaṇ. By "of the kārita, before what is not ām, iṭ or a vikaraṇa," the kārita is deleted. Kāryate, hāryate. Under "the agent that is also the object is like the object," it does not become like the object, because it belongs to kir and the rest: kārayate kaṭaḥ svayam eva. Saptamī: kārayeta. Pañcamī: kārayatām. Hyastanī: akārayata.

Adyatanī: by "caṇ for the agent after śri, dru, sru, kami and those ending in the kārita," there is caṇ. The letter ṇ serves to distinguish it in "not for those with ṇ as an indicatory letter, or for the cekrīyita." The letter c serves to distinguish it in "before caṇ, the parokṣā, the cekrīyita and those ending in san." By this very statement, "whatever was done before in is as if still standing in all cases," there is reduplication. By "the penultimate is short before caṇ, where no homogeneous vowel before in has been deleted," it is short. By "where no homogeneous vowel has been deleted, before a light syllable followed by in and caṇ, it is like san," it becomes like san, and so there is i. By "a light syllable is lengthened," it is long. The kārita is deleted. Acīkarat. Likewise: ajīharat, apīpaṭhat, apīpacat, ajījayat, apīpavat, alīlalat, ayīyapat.

By "it should be stated: optionally for śru, sru, dru, pru, plu and cyuṅ," there is optionally i. Aśiśravat, aśuśravat, aśuśravat, asisravat, asusravat, adidravat, adudravat, apipravat, apupravat, apiplavat, apuplavat, acicyavat, acucyavat.

Ṭuośvi: while "optionally for śvayati" carries over, by "also before the kārita, before san and caṇ," there is optionally samprasāraṇa. Aśiśvayat, aśūśavat, aśūśavat. Hveñ: by "always for hvayati," there is samprasāraṇa. Ajūhavat.

By "also a for tvar and the rest," an exception to becoming like san, it is changed to a. Atatvarat, asasmarat, adadarat, apaprathat, amamradat, atastarat, apaspaśat. Veṣṭ, in the sense of wrapping. Ceṣṭ, in the sense of moving. By "optionally for veṣṭi and ceṣṭi," it is also changed to a. Aviveṣṭat, avaveṣṭat, aciceṣṭat, acaceṣṭat. Gaṇ, in the sense of counting. By "for gaṇ, ī also," the abhyāsa optionally has it. Ajīgaṇat, ajagaṇat. Where a homogeneous vowel has been deleted, it does not become like san: acakathat. Var, in the sense of wishing: avavarat.

Iṅ: some say that, as explained by "for in, before san and caṇ," it is changed to ga. Here, however, "for in, before san and caṇ" applies also to gāyati in the sense of reading: adhyajīgapat. Or else: adhyāpipat.

Aṭi: where "where no homogeneous vowel before in" and so on stands, it is short. By "of the second syllable of one beginning with a vowel," there is reduplication. Then the letter a becomes ā. Āṭiṭat. By the prohibition "not when joined with mā and mā sma," āṭ and the rest do not occur: mā bhavān aṭiṭat. By "not n, b, d or r when first in a conjunct," the letters n, y, b, ṅ and r are not reduplicated.

Undi, in the sense of moistening. By "vṛddhi of the first, for those beginning with a vowel," there is vṛddhi of the first. Aundidat. Ubj, in the sense of straightening: aubjijat. Aḍ, in the sense of applying oneself: āḍiḍat. Arc, in the sense of worship: ārcicat.

Vṛdhu, mṛjū, kṛpū, kṛt. Some say: "before in and caṇ, ṛt for ṛ." Here, however, because it is preceded by the name guṇa, and because "kt for kīrti and iṣ" is known not to be permanent, there is guṇa; or else it is changed to kīrti. Avīvṛdhat, avavardhat, amīmṛjat, amamārjat, acīkḷpat, acakalpat, acīkṛtat, acikīrtat.

Śās and those with ṛ as an indicatory letter: ṭuvasṛ, ṭuyācṛ. Where "the penultimate is short before caṇ, where no homogeneous vowel before in has been deleted" would apply, it is prohibited by "not for śās or those with ṛ as an indicatory letter." Aśaśāsat, apipepat, ayayācat. By "it should be stated: optionally for bhrāj and the rest," it is optionally short. Ababhrājat, abibhrajat, abībhasat, apībhasat, ababhāṣat, adidīpat, adīdipat, ajijīvat, ajījivat, amimīlat, amīmilat, apīpiḍat, apapīḍat, acakāṇat, acīkaṇat, ararāṇat, arīraṇat, apapāṇat, apīpaṇat. Śraṇ: aśaśrāṇat, aśiśraṇat. Heṭh: ajīheṭhat, ajiheṭhat. Lupḷ: alūlupat, alulopat. Here, however, bhrājanam, bhrājastam and acīkarat are established by the ending ghañ and so on.

The division of the vibhakti: by "also ā of the abhyāsa," the penultimate ā is deleted, and the abhyāsa also takes ī. Apīpyat, apīpyatām, apīpyan. By "i for tiṣṭhati," the penultimate of tiṣṭhati becomes i. Atiṣṭhipat, atiṣṭhipatām, atiṣṭhipan. By "optionally for jighrati," the penultimate of jighrati optionally becomes i. Ajighripat, ajījighrapat.

By "also in the impersonal and the passive," there is ic, and the kārita is deleted. Akāri. In the dual and the rest, sic occurs: akārayiṣātām, akārayiṣata. Ghaṭ: by "optionally before ic," the penultimate ā becomes a. Aghaṭi, aghāṭi. Because the agent that is also the object does not become like the object, the agent alone takes caṇ: acīkarata kaṭaḥ svayam eva.

Parokṣā: by "ām in the parokṣā after cakās, kās and those ending in a suffix," there is the suffix ām. Guṇa. It is changed to ay. Kārayāñcakāra. By "also as and bhū, in the parasmaipada," it becomes as and bhū. Kārayāmāsa, kārayāmāsa, kārayāmbabhūva. Śvastanī: kārayitā. Āśīḥ: kāryāt, kārayiṣīṣṭa. Bhaviṣyantī: kārayiṣyati. Kriyātipattiḥ: akārayiṣyat. Thus the domain of the in-ending has been taught.

The in-ending with the san-ending is now to be stated. Kārayitum icchati: san, and reduplication. By "i for a before san," there is i. Cikārayiṣati, jihārayiṣati, jighrāpayiṣati. By "for u before a following labial, semivowel or j," the abhyāsa takes i.

Lilāvayiṣati, pipāvayiṣati, bibhāvayiṣati.

While "optionally for śvayati" carries over, by "also before the kārita, before san and caṇ," there is samprasāraṇa. Śiśvāyayiṣati, śuśāvayiṣati. Hveñ: by "always for hvayati," there is samprasāraṇa. Juhāvayiṣati. Iṅ: some say that, as explained by "for in, before san and caṇ," it is changed to gā. Here, however, "for in, before san and caṇ" applies also to gāyati in the sense of reading: adhijigāpayiṣati. Iṅ: adhyāpipayiṣati. San comes also after the cekrīyita-ending: lolūyiṣate, popūyiṣate. From the wording "of what has no abhyāsa," what has already been reduplicated is not reduplicated again. Thus the domain of the san-ending has been taught.

Nominal roots are now to be stated. Putram icchati: by "yin after a noun, in the sense of wanting for oneself," there is the suffix yin. The letters i and n serve to distinguish it in "ī for a before yin." By "the case endings standing there are to be deleted," the case ending is deleted. When the case ending of any stem has been deleted, that stem takes on just the nature it had before. Then, by "ī for a before yin," the letter a becomes ī. Where putrīya stands, by "these are roots," it has the name root, and the suffix follows the root. By "the rest," there are parasmaipada endings for the agent, and for the agent there is an. Putrīyati, kuṭīyati, kambalīyati, prāvārīyati. Khaṭvām icchati: khaṭvīyati. By "also deletion of n," the letter n is deleted. Rājīyati, takṣīyati.

It is to be accepted that for aśva, kṣīra, vṛṣa and lavaṇa, in the sense of their own desire, there is the augment suk. For aśva and vṛṣa, in the sense of wanting to mate: aśvasyati vaḍavā, vṛṣasyati gauḥ. Otherwise: aśvīyati, vṛṣīyati. For milk and salt, in the sense of wanting to get them: kṣīrasyati bālaḥ, lavaṇasyati gauḥ. Otherwise: kṣīrīyati, lavaṇīyati.

After all nominal stems, in the sense of craving to eat, as is to be stated: dadhyasyati, madhvasyati. Because some accept it, su is to be stated: dadhisyati, madhusyati.

In the very expressions "one who wants food eats," "one who wants water drinks," and "one who wants wealth craves," aśanāya, udanya and dhanāya are known as set particles for hunger, thirst and greed. Thus, as is fitting, there is ā; the k optionally; and the deletion of a is also treated as a set particle. Aśanāyati, udanyati, dhanāyati. In other senses: one who wants food in order to give it, aśanīyati; one who wants water for bathing, udakīyati; one who wants wealth in order to give it, dhanīyati. Here, however, aśanāya is a root in the sense of hunger, udanya in the sense of thirst, and dhanāya in the sense of greed. In the very expressions "one who wants food eats" and so on, yan is to be stated.

By "also kāmya," it becomes the suffix kāmya, in the sense of wanting. Putram icchati, putrakāmyati. Idam icchati, idaṅkāmyati. Svar icchati, svaḥkāmyati.

By "from a standard of comparison, in the sense of behaving," there is the suffix yin. One who behaves as toward a son: putrīyati māṇavakam. By "āyi for the agent, and also deletion of s," there is the suffix āyi, and also deletion of s. One who behaves like a hawk: by "also after those ending in āyi," there are ātmanepada endings. Śyenāyate. Sārasa ivācarati: sārasāyate. The letter s is deleted: ojāyate, apsarāyate. From payas, as explained, the letter s is optionally deleted: payāyate, payasyate. Some say that, because of the meaning intended by the word "optionally" there, the y of āyi is deleted. One who behaves like a donkey: gardabhati, aśvati. Likewise it is said: "Always from ojas and apsaras; from payas, as explained. The deletion of āyi is also to be understood, and also yin for aśva and gardabha." Some say: "of galbha, klība and hoḍa, as explained." From ruc and the rest, there are ātmanepada endings. Galbhate, galbhāyate, klībate, klībāyate, hoḍate, hoḍāyate.

Likewise, by "in the sense of cvi, after bhṛśa and the rest, also deletion of t and s," there is the suffix ā, and also deletion of t, d and s. What is not abundant becomes abundant: bhṛśāyate, unmanāyate, durmanāyate. Vehat: vehāyate. Śaśvat: śaśvāyate. From the word "optionally," cvi also occurs: bhṛśībhavati.

Some say that by "ḍāc in the sense of cvi, after lohita and the rest," there is the suffix ā. Here, however, in the expression paṭatpaṭatkaroti, by "ḍāc for imitating an indistinct sound," there is reduplication in the domain of ḍāc. By "deletion of t is also accepted," t is deleted. Then, by "ḍāc after an imitation of indistinct sound that is not of one vowel, when not before iti," there is the suffix ḍāc. The letter c serves to distinguish it in "ḍāc for imitating an indistinct sound," and the letter ḍ serves to distinguish it in "where ḍ is an indicatory letter, deletion of the final vowel and what follows." By this very rule the final vowel and what follows are deleted.

"It behaves like cloth, like cloth": by "āyi for the agent, and also deletion of s," there is the suffix ā. Because it belongs to the ordinary group of yaj and the rest, there are endings of both voices. Paṭapaṭāyate. Chamaṭ: chamacchamāyati, chamacchamāyate. Ṛṇat: ṛṇaṛṇāyati, ṛṇaṛṇāyate. One who behaves like something red: lohitāyati, lohitāyate.

Kaṣṭāya kramaṇe kramate: kaṣṭāyate. Likewise pāpāyate, kakṣāyate, satrāyate, gahanāyate. This does not occur other than for engagement in evil: kaṣṭaṃ tapaḥ krāmati. Romanthaṃ vartayati gauḥ. One who makes vapor rise: bāṣpāyate; likewise ūṣmāyate, phenāyate. It is to be understood for pleasure and the rest: sukhāyate; likewise duḥkhāyate. One who makes sound and the rest: śabdāyate; likewise vairāyate, kalahāyate, abhrāyate, kaṇvāyate, meghāyate, sudināyate, durdināyate, nīhārāyate. From namas, tapas and varivas, there is yin.

One who pays homage: namasyati. Likewise tapasyati and varivasyati. Because of the restriction stated in the rule "and also elision of n," the final here does not become visarga.

Citaṅ: in the sense of wonder. The letter ṅ indicates the ātmanepada. One who makes a picture in wonder: citrīyate. From kaṇḍū and the rest there is yaṇ. Kaṇḍūñ: making an itch. The letter ñ indicates both voices. The letter ṇ indicates the absence of guṇa. Kaṇḍūyati, kaṇḍūyate. Maheṅ: mahīyate. These and the rest are to be followed accordingly.

For "he takes up a plough, a kali," the suffix in comes by the rule "in the sense of the root, in, and it is kārita." The letter n serves to distinguish it, as in the rule beginning "in, of the stem." Halayate, kalayate. Likewise kṛtayati, varṇayati, tvacayate. Tūstāni vihanti: vitustayati. Keśān vilīkaroti: this means "he loosens the sounds."

One who covers all over with cloth: saṃvastrayati. One who puts on armor: saṃvarmayati. One who crushes all over with powder: avacūrṇayate. By the rule "for doing that, and for saying it at that time," there is in. One who shaves the head: muṇḍayati. Likewise miśrayati, ślakṣṇayati, lavaṇayati, sūtrayati. From vrata, for food and also for its opposite, the suffix in occurs. Payo vratayati: this means "he consumes." Vṛṣalānnaṃ vratayati: this means "he does not eat."

By the rule "he passes beyond by means of it," there is in. One who passes beyond by means of a train of elephants: the preceding word ati is a particle. Atihastayati. In the sense of agent and instrument: one who sings beside it with a vīṇā: upavīṇayati. One who draws out with cotton: avatūlayati. One who praises with verses: upaślokayati. One who advances against with an army: by the rule beginning "sthā and seni" there is ṣ. Abhiṣeṇayati. In some cases, for seeing: rūpaṃ paśyati: rūpayati. Many of these are indeed seen.

Iniṅ: also for a limb that does not stay in place. In the sense of a limb not staying in place, the suffix iniṅ occurs. Hastau nirasyati: hastayate. Likewise pādayate. Because the word "also" in "also for not staying in place" has the sense of "many": for lifting the tail, puccham utkṣipati: utpucchayate. Likewise one who swishes the tail about: paripucchayate gauḥ. One who gathers vessels all together: saṃbhāṇḍayate. One who smooths or arranges the robe:

saṃcīvarayate bhikṣuḥ.

Of śvetāśva, aśvatara, galoḍita and āhvaraka there is also elision of aśva, tara, ita and ka. By the letter "also," in and iniṅ are meant to be included for the sense of the root. For speaking of a white horse: "he passes beyond by means of it." Or optionally. Elision of aśva: śvetayati. For speaking of a mule (aśvatara): elision of tara: aśvayate. For speaking of galoḍita: elision of ita: galoḍayate. For speaking of āhvaraka: elision of ka: āhvarayate. Because of the sense of "many," also with the suffix in: śvetayati, aśvayati, and so on.

Also for the elision of mantu, vantu and vin. Here aniṭ need not be stated again. Īśa: in supreme lordship. For īśana there is īṭ. From saṃpad and the rest there is kvip. By the statement "for the rest, mantu is desired" in the rule "īṭ when it exists in this," there is the suffix mantu. By the rule "for speaking of that which has it," when in is made in the sense of the root, mantu is elided. By the principle "when the cause is absent, what is caused is also absent," the stem remains fixed in its own form. Īśayati. For speaking of one possessed of cows: gavayati. For speaking of one possessed of a ladle: after a final dhuṭ, mantu is elided: srucayati. By the rule "vin comes after māyā, medhā and sraj": for speaking of one wearing a garland: srajayati.

Praśasya becomes śra. For praśasya, when in is made by the rule "for speaking," it is changed to śrā. By the rule "also of monosyllables ending in at," there is the augment āp. Śrāpayati. Vṛddha also becomes jya. By the letter "also," praśasya does too. For speaking of something increased, praśasya also optionally. In. It is changed to jya. As before, the augment āp. Jyāpayati.

Antika and bāḍha become neda and sādha. For speaking of something near: in. It is changed to neda. Nedayati. For speaking of something strong: in. It is changed to sādha. Sādhayati.

Yuvan and alpa optionally become kan. For speaking of one who is youthful: in. It is changed to kan. Kanayati. In one alternative, by the rule beginning "sthūla, dūra, yuvan and kṣipra," there is elision of the final and what follows it, and also guṇa. Yavayati. For speaking of something small: kanayati; in one alternative, alpayati.

Of sthūla, dūra, yuvan, kṣipra and kṣudra there is elision of the final and what follows it, and also guṇa. For speaking of something stout: in. Elision of the final and what follows it, and also guṇa of the nāmin vowel. Sthavayati. For speaking of something far: davayati. For speaking of one who is youthful: yavayati. For speaking of something quick: kṣepayati. For speaking of something minute: kṣodayati.

Of bahu, ya and the rest, and bhū also. By the rule "for speaking of many," there is the letter ya, ḍa, and in. Bahu too is changed to bhū. Bhūyayati.

Of priya, sthira, sphira, uru, guru, bahula, tṛpra, dīrgha, hrasva, vṛddha and vṛndāraka there are pra, stha, spha, vara, gara, baṃha, trapa, drāgha, hrasa, varṣa and vṛnda. For speaking of what is dear: in. It is changed to pra. There is also the augment āp. Prāpayati. Likewise, for speaking of something firm: sthāpayati. For speaking of something abundant: sphāpayati. For speaking of something broad: varayati. For speaking of something heavy: garayati. For speaking of something plentiful: baṃhayati. For speaking of something satisfied: trapayati. For speaking of something long: drāghayati. For speaking of something short: hrasayati. For speaking of something grown: varṣayati. For speaking of a multitude: vṛndayati.

After satya, artha and veda, the ending āpa is kārita. For speaking of what is true: in. By this, āpa.

Satyāpayati. Likewise arthāpayati and vedāpayati. By the rule "of monosyllables ending in at": śāpayati. Because of the statement "it is kārita," it does not occur here. Śreṣṭhaḥ, śremā, śreyān.

This completes the Clear Words composed by the master Joyful Renown.

This was translated into Tibetan from the Indian manuscript that was the personal copy of the Chal translator, Pal Chökyi Zangpo, by the Śākya monk Dharmaśrībhadra, through the kindness of the venerable great abbot and great translator Butön. The place of translation was the great Dharma center of Riphuk, blessed by the paṇḍita Dīpaṃkaraśrījñāna.

Translator's Notes

• This is a Sanskrit grammatical work in the Kātantra tradition (Kumāra, Śarvavarman, Durga and Trilocana are Kātantra authorities); the Tibetan reproduces the Sanskrit endings and tense names in Tibetan letters, and these are given as spelled, including their variant spellings. Here □□□□□ is taken as "work" rather than "tantra." The sentence about stems ending in the letter a "occurring as ones to be joined" is obscure and its rendering is tentative.
• In the rules on person, □□□□ and □□ are read as the evident □□□□ "you" and □□□ "we," as the explanation that follows shows. In this grammatical tradition the "first person" is the one used with nouns (our third person) and the "last person" is the one used with "we." The syllable □□ after the list of prefixes makes no sense in context and is left untranslated. The rendering of □□□□□ ("left aside") for the list of roots beginning with sṛ is tentative.
• This is a technical Sanskrit grammatical text (verb conjugation in the manner of the Kātantra); the Sanskrit roots and verb forms are given exactly as the Tibetan spells them, including evident irregularities. In "the letter ṅa serves the particular purpose of the rule 'always after āṅ and mā'" the Tibetan reads da (□), evidently a slip for ṅa (□), the marker of āṅ. In the gloss of spri, "sound" reads □□□ for the written □□□. "Those ending in the letter ṝ" renders a written □□□, evidently a corruption of the long ṛ vowel. In the rule on the ṇa-initial roots, the phrase "all such roots" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, whose □□ is unclear. In the gloss of hase, the Tibetan says "the letter a", though the marker relevant to the rule (Pāṇini's edit, "marked with e") is probably e; translated as written.

• A technical Sanskrit grammar of verb conjugation; roots and forms are given exactly as the Tibetan spells them, including many evident scribal irregularities. "Voiding excrement" for hada reads □□□□□ for the written □□□□□ ("explanation"). The rule rendered "a with i becomes e, and so too ..." is obscure as written (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ rendered literally and differ from the usual Sanskrit root meanings.

• The paradigm forms are romanized exactly as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupt. In the opening rule the Tibetan says the root's a becomes ā; the evident sense, ī replacing the root's ā, is translated. The Tibetan glosses of root meanings (for example "wishing to dedicate" among the senses of div, "disputing" for vrīḍ) are rendered as the Tibetan gives them, even where they differ from the usual Sanskrit sense; the gloss for ṣṇih reads dga' ba with a scribal slip and is rendered "joy."
• The paradigm forms are romanized exactly as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupt. The Tibetan glosses of root meanings are rendered as the Tibetan gives them, even where they differ from the usual Sanskrit sense (for example "listening" for rīṅ, "pressing out" for the Tibetan "bringing forth" of ṣuñ is the standard sense and is used here).
• This is a grammatical treatise listing verbal roots and their conjugated forms. The Sanskrit roots and verb forms are reproduced as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal variants (bra for pra, b for v, and similar), since the listener needs the forms as transmitted. In the list beginning tika and tiga, the Tibetan reads "living" (□□□□□), but the parallel root lists give the sense "harming," so the evident reading □□□□□ has been translated. The closing phrase rendered "declaring and affirming" (□□□□□

• The author's name, mkhan po dga' ba'i grags pa, has been translated literally as "the master Joyful Renown". The Sanskrit is probably a -kīrti name (Nandakīrti, Prītikīrti or Ānandakīrti), but the exact form could not be confirmed. In the rule "bī for aji," the Tibetan says the root "is changed to pā", but the rule and the resulting form bīyate both require bī, so bī is translated. The sentence about "the naṃ of bahi" is obscure and has been rendered literally. As in the preceding pieces, Sanskrit roots and forms are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, irregular spellings included.
• This piece is mostly paradigms of optative (saptamī) and imperative (pañcamī) forms. They are transliterated exactly as the Tibetan spells them, including many corrupt spellings. In the rule "ja before hi," the Tibetan has ti where hi is meant, and it is rendered as hi. The short glosses on the uses of the optative (inviting, calling upon, requesting, asking properly, seeking) render Tibetan equivalents of the standard Sanskrit categories: nimantraṇa, āmantraṇa, adhīṣṭa, sampraśna and prārthana.
• As in the preceding pieces, the paradigms are transliterated exactly as the Tibetan spells them, including many corrupt forms. In "before hi too, it is said to become ā and ī," the Tibetan reads "ī and ī". The forms that follow (jahāhi, jahīti) show that ā and ī are meant, so this is translated. The example sentences for the imperative are standard Sanskrit grammatical illustrations ("let me dry up even the ocean," "may your honor live long," "give me alms"). They are kept as Sanskrit, not translated, as the text cites them.
• This piece continues the imperfect (hyastanī) paradigms. The forms are transliterated exactly as the Tibetan spells them, irregular spellings included. "At the end of a word" translates the Tibetan rdzogs pa, which here stands for the grammatical sense of avasāna (pause).
• This is a section of a Sanskrit grammar (in the Kātantra tradition) giving paradigms of the imperfect (hyastanī) and then beginning the aorist (adyatanī). The Sanskrit verb forms and root names are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal irregularities (for example "tu" for hu, "ahanotam" for atanot, and "bā, in the sense of protecting" where the following forms show pā). Before "bhinata," the Tibetan has a stray syllable "las," taken here as "in the passive" (karman); the reading is uncertain.
• As in the preceding pieces, the Sanskrit roots, forms and rule wordings of this grammatical treatise are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal irregularities. In the rule on puṣ, dyut and the rest, the Tibetan reads "the letter m" as the marker; the standard Kātantra rule has the ḷ marker, which is followed here.
• As in the preceding pieces, the Sanskrit roots, forms, example sentences and rule wordings of this grammatical treatise are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal irregularities. The word rendered "smṛti" (Tibetan dran pa, "memory") in the passage on han appears to name a rule or authority; its exact reference is uncertain. In the rule on pha, ṭha and the rest, one item is uncertain in the Tibetan (rendered "gaṅ").
• As in the preceding pieces, the Sanskrit roots, forms and rule wordings of this grammatical treatise are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal irregularities. A few rule wordings are uncertain as transmitted (for example, the rule on eliding the a of saṇ, and "brate" in the rule on vi with stambh).
• As in the preceding pieces, the Sanskrit roots, forms, example sentences and rule wordings of this grammatical treatise are transliterated as the Tibetan spells them, including evident scribal irregularities. A few rule wordings near the start of the parokṣā section are uncertain as transmitted. The heading "Roots ending in e" precedes ji in the Tibetan, where "roots ending in i" would be expected.
• This piece is a paradigm list of perfect (parokṣā) forms from a Sanskrit grammatical manual; the Sanskrit forms are given as the Tibetan spells them, including evident slips. Three root headings are read by their evident sense: □□ as ik (remembering), □□ as yu (mixing, as the forms show), and □□□□□□□□□□ as "ending in ū" (the roots listed are ū-final). In the kṣi paragraph, □□□□□ is read as the change to iy. The rule named "□□□□□□" is uncertain; it is rendered as "vṛ and those ending in ṝ".

• This piece continues the paradigms of perfect (parokṣā) forms; the Sanskrit forms are given as the Tibetan spells them. Two vowels in the rule statements are read by their evident sense: □□ after śamu ("it does not become e") and □ in the rāji rule ("there is e"), since the substitution under discussion throughout is e.
• The Sanskrit forms are given as the Tibetan spells them. The sense given for upja, □□□□□ "sky", does not fit a known root meaning and may be a scribal slip; it is rendered as written. In the uṣa paragraph the sense is read as "burning" (□□□□ "life" for □□□□), matching the earlier entry for the same root. The rule cited before ādetha names bṛ, bye and ad; this clarifies the rule rendered more conjecturally in the previous piece as "vṛ and those ending in ṝ".
• The Sanskrit forms are given as the Tibetan spells them. Two headings are read by their evident sense: □□□□□□□□□ in the i-final rule as "ending in i", and the second □□□□□□□□□□ heading as "ending in ū", since bhū, yūñ and būñ follow. □□□□□ in the last sentence is read as the aorist suffix sic.
• The Sanskrit forms and the lists of roots inside the rules are given as the Tibetan spells them, including evident slips; several list items in the rules on final d and final p are uncertain in this spelling.
• This is a Sanskrit grammatical manual (in the Kātantra tradition) on verbal derivation. The roots, rule citations and derived forms are given in Tibetan transcription, which is often corrupt; they are romanized here as the Tibetan spells them rather than restored. "The ṭa class" is the retroflex consonant class. The rule cited for glai ("not in the position of an initial conjunct") reads as written, although the expected sense is that roots beginning with a conjunct optionally take e. "The letter ā for those ending in āt" follows the Tibetan; the expected operation is the insertion of y after ā-final roots.
• A Sanskrit grammatical manual in the Kātantra tradition; roots, rule citations and derived forms are given in often corrupt Tibetan transcription and are romanized as written rather than restored. The "kriyātibatti" (kriyātipatti) is the conditional; "the reduplicated syllable" renders abhyāsa. The phrase rendered "there is sa" after the rule on māna, badha and so on may stand for "san". Near the end, "it becomes a" follows the Tibetan, though the cited rule would lead one to expect i.
• A Sanskrit grammatical manual in the Kātantra tradition, here treating the desiderative (san). Roots, rule citations and derived forms are given in often corrupt Tibetan transcription and are romanized as written rather than restored. "Optionally carries over like a leaping frog" renders the grammarians' maṇḍūkapluti, the skipping continuation of a word from an earlier rule. "Ra and pa" in the lengthening rule evidently stands for r and v.
• A Sanskrit grammatical manual in the Kātantra tradition, continuing the treatment of the desiderative (san). Roots, rule citations and derived forms are given in often corrupt Tibetan transcription and are romanized as written rather than restored. "Chva" renders the Tibetan □□□□, which here stands for the Sanskrit rule term for cha and va rather than the Tibetan word "great." The anuṣaṅga is the root's penultimate nasal.
• A Sanskrit grammatical manual in the Kātantra tradition, finishing the desiderative (san) and beginning the intensive (cekrīyita). Roots, rule citations and derived forms are given in often corrupt Tibetan transcription and are romanized as written rather than restored. The meanings attached to some roots follow the Tibetan glosses as they stand (for example, smarddha "in the sense of true joy" and krīḍī "in the sense of abiding").
• This is a Kātantra-school grammatical treatment of the intensive (cekrīyita, Pāṇinian yaṅ) and its deleted form (carkarīta, yaṅluk). The Tibetan transcriptions of the Sanskrit example forms are often defective (missing anusvāras, confused letters such as b/v/p and y/j, short for long vowels); the forms are given here in their evident correct Sanskrit shape. The rule on bhañj reads literally "for those having iṭ as an indicatory letter"; the sense requires "not having i as an indicatory letter," and that reading is translated. "Vaś, in the sense of being lovely" follows the Tibetan, which renders Sanskrit kānti (desire, loveliness) by its "beauty" sense. Several rule citations are quoted in compressed Tibetan form and are rendered literally.

• This piece treats the causative (in, Pāṇinian ṇic) in the Kātantra system. The Tibetan transcriptions of the Sanskrit forms are frequently defective; forms are given in their evident correct shape where clear, and otherwise as written (for example "vādayati" among the adi examples, and "vidhāvayati, prāvayati"). Several Tibetan words appear to be copyists' slips and are translated by their evident reading: "fear" (Tibetan reads "destruction") in the rules on bhī and smi, which reflect the Sanskrit "fear from the causal agent"; "harming" (Tibetan reads "living") for mīñ; "moving" (Tibetan reads "neck") for dhyañ and vaj. The sense given for cap ("continuing, gathering") follows the Tibetan literally and is uncertain. Rule citations are often compressed in the Tibetan and are rendered literally.

• This piece treats the roots with m as indicatory letter (mit) and the voice of causatives in the Kātantra system. The Tibetan transcriptions of the Sanskrit forms are often defective; forms are given in their evident correct shape where clear and otherwise as written. A few Tibetan glosses look like copyists' slips and are translated by their evident sense: "killing" for the roots sūth and the rest (Tibetan reads a form of "dying"), "deceiving" for gṛdhi and vañci (Tibetan reads "aiming"), and "e becomes i" for heḍ (Tibetan repeats e). The sentence about a contradiction in the Indian manuscript is an editor's annotation transmitted within the Tibetan text and is translated as it stands.

• This piece covers the passive and reduplicated aorist (caṇ) of causatives and the causative desiderative, in the Kātantra system. The Tibetan transcriptions of the Sanskrit forms are often defective; forms are given in their evident correct shape where clear and otherwise close to what is written (for example apipepat, alīlalat, ayīyapat). The sense "wrapping" for veṣṭ reads Tibetan bkra shis ("auspicious") as an evident slip for bkris ("wrapped"). The sentence on vṛdhu, mṛjū, kṛpū and kṛt is compressed and obscure in the Tibetan and is rendered literally. Several rule citations are likewise compressed and are given literally.

• This piece completes the causative desiderative and treats denominative verbs (nāmadhātu) in the Kātantra system. The Tibetan transcriptions of the Sanskrit forms are often defective; forms are given in their evident correct shape where clear (for example dadhyasyati, kṣīrasyati, unmanāyate, hoḍate, kaṇvāyate), and otherwise close to what is written. "Hveñ" reads Tibetan "tveñ" as a slip, since the rule cited is for hvayati. "Yan" in the sentence on aśanāya and the rest is given as written, though the suffix yin may be meant. Several rule citations are compressed in the Tibetan and are rendered literally.

• This is a Sanskrit grammatical treatise on denominative verbs; the Sanskrit forms are given in normalized romanization rather than as the Tibetan transcriptions spell them, which are often irregular (for example the Tibetan writes "kaṇhu" for kaṇḍū, "sphathayati" for sphāpayati, "kṣipayati" and "kṣopayati" for kṣepayati and kṣodayati, "parṣayanti" for varṣayati, "pṛdha" for vṛddha). In "Keśān vilīkaroti: this means he loosens the sounds," the Tibetan has "sounds" (sgra), apparently a misunderstanding of keśān ("hairs"); translated as it stands. The Tibetan "supreme horse" here renders the grammatical term aśvatara, "mule," not the deity Paramāśva, so the glossary entry for Hayagrīva does not apply. Kārita is the Kātantra term for the causative suffix.

• The Sanskrit forms are given in normalized romanization; the Tibetan transcriptions are irregular (for example "arpabayati" for arthāpayati and "śābayati"). The sense of the brief clause "it does not occur here" is elliptical in the Tibetan and is translated as it stands.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.