The Jewel Garland of Synonyms, in Which a Single Word Applies to Many Meanings

Toh 4454 · Derge Tengyur

སྒྲ་དངོ་གཅིག་གིས་དོན་དུ་མར་འཇུག་པའི་མིང་ནོར་བུའི་ཕྲེང་བ་ཞེས་བ

The Jewel Garland of Synonyms, in Which a Single Word Applies to Many Meanings, known in Tibetan as Skad dod gcig gis don du mar 'jug pa'i mngon brjod nor bu'i phreng ba, is a Sanskrit lexicon of homonyms, a dictionary of words that each carry several meanings, composed in verse in the tradition of Indian works on many-meaning words. After a homage to the Buddha, it sets out its entries in the order of the Sanskrit alphabet, giving for each word, such as kaḥ, which may mean Brahmā, wind, the sun or fire, the full range of senses it can bear, and it closes with a long list of indeclinable particles and verbal prefixes. It is Toh 4454 in the Tengyur, where it belongs to the section on language and lexicography, the treatises that served Tibetan translators as tools for reading Sanskrit. According to its colophon, the Indian work was copied in Nepal and later rendered into Tibetan and edited by the Zhalu translator Dharmapālabhadra, who drew on earlier translations such as the Amarakośa and kept Sanskrit words where no Tibetan equivalent could be found.

Herein is The Jewel Garland of Synonyms, in Which a Single Word Applies to Many Meanings.

Homage to the Buddha.

Following the order of the vowels and of ka and the rest,
the words ending in ka and the rest are set out;
the letter may also stand in the second syllable.
In definite order, beginning with ka:

kaḥ means Brahmā, wind, the sun,
fire, Yama himself,
light, and going.
kai means the head, water, and happiness.
The word ku means the earth and what is bad.
aka means suffering and sin.
arka means a line, night,
a sign, a characteristic,
a section of a dance and the like, a chapter,

the lap, and one who has form.
antaka means a tangled line,
a mantra, a place, and ornaments.
arka means the sun, the leaf of the arka plant, Śakra (Indra), crystal, and copper.
eka means chief, a friend, and whatever is not the other.
śaṃkā means a kind of bird, Antaka (Death), a door panel, and the twice-born.
karka means the jewel karketa, fire, a white horse, a mirror, and a vase.
kalka means sin and excrement;
kiṣṭa means a flaw and deceit, likewise the dregs of sesame oil, evil intent, and batura.
kāka means a crow, a seat, a snake,
the head, the face, what is bad, pride, an island, and a tree.
kākā means crow's shank,
a crow, a row, and the crow tree.
kāka also means the peacock and the destroyer of stains;
it should be looked for under the rocky one as well.
kākaṃ means a flock of crows,
and also what binds deceit.
kuṣku means a span and a cubit,
a storehouse, and contempt.
koka means the wheel bird, the wolf,
a chief, the date palm,
the frog, and Viṣṇu.
cchaka means attachment to the home,
various wild animals, birds,
a city, and what is crooked.
ṭika means a tool that breaks stone,
a stone wall as a synonym, pride, a particular, a monkey's dwelling,
the thigh, the scabbard of a sword, anger, and digging.

tarka means doubt and conceptual thought,
the snake, action, and the divisions of the śātri.
tośaṃ means a line of sons and a son,
a line, and the three supports.
trikā means the rim of a well,
that which has a second, and the crow's store.
nāka means heaven and the sky.
nāku means an anthill, the hare,
and a particular kind of sage.
niṣka means gold, a coin, a measure of weight,
a hundred and eight pieces of gold,
a breast ornament, and a measure of gold.
nyadku means a deer and a kind of sage.
paṅka means mud and sin.
pāka means ripening and a child.
bāka means old, fully ripened,
the very end, and weariness.
baga means Antaka (Death), what is calm,
a kind of rākṣasa, and Kubera.
baṅga means carrying off water and the like,
baryāna, a share,
and, as an adjective, one who is defeated.
paṅka also means bark, husk, and pebble.
dhūka means a hole and time.
bheka means the frog and the cloud.
muṣka means the scrotum, a heap,
one who is liberated, and one with branches.
rūka means speechless and inferior.
raṅka means a horse and a wall.
rākā means a girl who has seen her first flow,
a river,
the full and complete moon,
and it should also be looked for under the itching disease.
reka means narrow.
parika means last, and it is adjectival.
rokai means a hole, and taking back after giving.
A mountain, ka, and beauty.

laṅgā means the city of the rākṣasas, a branch, kulaṣṭa, and śākidī.
āloka is said to mean light.
loka means the world and people.
śaṃkā means fear and conceptual thought.
śaṃku means a particular number,
what is calm, a peg, a foot,
and also a particular weapon.
śalke means scales and bark split off.
śāka means power, a tree, an ox,
and a particular lord of men.
śāśaṃ means green leaves, flowers, fruits, and the like.
śuka means the scatterer, the son of Vyāsa,
the one who echoes sounds, and praise.
śukaṅ means grajreparṇa, śirīṣa, and the red tree.
śulke means a toll and the like,
and whatever is the price paid for a mother.
śrika; śuṅga means affection.
śorka means a flock of parrots,
and also a particular act of women.
ślauka means verse and fame.
sreka means wind and having blue lotuses.
stoka means small and the cātaka bird that waits for rain.
anukā means few and learned.
raṇarka means battle and affliction.
aṇaka means lineage and character.
abyuka means the sprouting of iron garlic.
adhiki means the sun and the hearth.
arñikā means frost and medicine.
aṇḍizhukā is also explained as grass,
and is well known as the elder sister.
adīka means fearless,
one who drools, one full of desire, and a poet;
for these it is adjectival.
ambikā means one with water, and also those born among people.

White mustard seed and kyetaba, and also for what is accomplished, asmṛṅuka.
ambikā means cukrika,
sour, likewise tibyeḍikā,
and should also be looked for under the group of sour things.
abhauka means a fish and a child,
a fool, byuṇa, and also a wall.
alaka means the city of Kubera,
a lock of hair, and powder: alaka.
alana means the white sun,
a yogin, an instigator, and a dog.
alilduka means a lie,
one who is unfriendly, and also the daytime.
aśoka means taking what is soft,
pride, and a tree.
aśokai means granting the supreme.
aśokā means heat,
rohibhā, and śokabyaka.
ādhaka means a kind of pride, instruction, and orjeka.
ātaṅga means sickness and torment, saṅgā, and the sound of a clay drum.
ānaka means a small drum,
a drum, a round drum, and the sound of thunder.
āloka means looking,
clarity, and speaking plainly.
āsnaśaṃ means the daytime,
the renunciant, abandoning, and a constant duty.
ikṣuku means sugarcane,
a servant, food, and the kings of the solar lineage.
udarka means a seeker,
the fruit of the black plant, and intoxicating liquor.
uphruka means an owl,
a plant, and quarreling with harsh sounds. uṣṭaka means scorching,
mere heat, what hastens,

and the learned.
uṣṭikā means clay, a cow elephant, and an intoxicating rock.
urmikā means a wave,
a finger ring, the buzzing of bees,
a worn-out garment, and turmoil above.
saṃśukai means fine cloth,
any cloth, and an upper garment.
kañcuka means armor,
a covering that is cast off and shed,
and a garment of the body that gives delight.
kañcukī means a particular medicine.
kaṭākai means a mountainside,
a mountain slope, a royal palace,
a bracelet, sea salt,
an ornament, and an elephant's tusk.
kaṇaka means a hot red thing,
a hot fire, and molasses.
kabyeka means bad character, ruṅdharṣa, and a snake.

kālikā means explanation,
going far, the real thing, and the churning of fire.
kaṇḍaka means a limb of a tree,
a place of the body, and faults,
body hair and trifles;
it should also be looked for under the killer.
kanaka means gold and the refiner of gold, nāgagesar, caspaka,
kiśuka, a golden spoke,
and some also hold it to be the koli fruit.
kāraka means a skull cup,
a ewer, a sky-goer,
a certain shrub, the pomegranate, and the hand;
the stone of the clouds, hail, is karakā.
karaṃka means a crop,
truth, the shell of the nārikela, and heads. kartekā means an earring, an islet, a goad and whip, the one with a hand, a fingertip, a share,

the middle finger of the hand, and the seed pod of the lotus;
some also call it kuṭani.
kavaṃka means a mark,
black, a flaw, and slander.
sāṭhaka means the ruddy goose,
the yellow-headed one, and koka.
kāmuka is explained as the radiant one,
the aśoka tree, and the atimukta.
kāraka is to be known as the agent;
the first of an action is held to be the agent.
kārikā means verse,
and an extensive commentary composed upon it.
karikā means a dance and a cow elephant, nāsita and the like, and an artisan.
karmukaṃ means bamboo and a bow;
as an adjective, one capable in action.
kālikā means a fetter,
a particular yoginī,
setting, price,
a particular crooked tree, batobyel,
a line of body hair, the smoky one,
and ink. kātī means sin, the winged one, the cloud-strong one, power, the divisions of smoke,
and the cloud ground; it is adjectival.
kipāka means the great black fruit and a fool. tīcaka means the resounding one, bamboo, an asura, wind, dry bamboo, and a particular tree.
tīṭaka means a kind of insect;
for what is harsh and what has hūṃ it is adjectival.
kulaka means the chief of a lineage,
an anthill, a crow, and what is very ka.
kulake means verses joined together,

a metrical composition, and what has chapters.
kulika means a particular nāga,
the chief of a lineage, and a particular tree.
kuśika means a kind of sage,
the myrobalan tree, the eye of the wood,
and the dregs of sesame oil.
kuśaka means one who torments others,
a monkey, and great light.
kucikā means a particular tip,
and a transformation of milk.
tūlikyu. kuñcika means kuṭmala.
kyupaka means the mast,
a vessel for sesame oil, and a drink of water.
kukurjara means one who has died.
kabikā is a stone in water.
An anthill and a stupa are kulaka.
kulaśaṃ means a shore.
Plowing a field with the plowshare is kṛṣaka.
kiñcaka means a little,
and the blood of another's child.
koraśaṃ means an opening bud, a skilled one,
the root of the lotus, and kakko.
mataṅgajvani means a grain, sugarcane, and a particular insect.
kauśuśaṃ means a spectacle,
a festival, longing, the joy of play, meeting together, the auspicious samāyāra, extensive conversation, taking a bride, and also the time of enjoying the objects of the senses.
kauśika means guggulu, the owl, the monkey, the snake charmer, Indra, Viśvāmitra,
a sage, and one who knows the treasury.
For a fierce woman and a particular river
the word is kauśitī.
kramuka means a fruit used as medicine.
gubāka is the tree of Brahmā.

piṭṭakā means a bowmaker, lodhra, and cotton. kharbheka means the buffalo and frothy milk, and also what is called śonika.
khanaka means one who knows that very thing,
a boundary, a thief, and a destroyer.
muṣika means a mouse,
small, inferior, and last.
kholaka means ripened,
an anthill, a husk of wood,
a storehouse, and a covering for the head.
ganaka means an astrologer,
an accountant, and a merchant woman.
gaṇika means a woman of the crowd,
a woman of fancies, and a cow elephant.
gaṇḍaka means the rhinoceros,
a number, a division of learning, and a particular kind of discernment.
A particular river is gaṇḍatī.
gāṇḍika means a good fragrance.
lekaka means one who sets down conventions.
guṇḍaka means dust,
an expression of parts, and a vessel for oil.
guhraka means hiding,
a vessel given to the secret one,
and what has been examined in mixture.
giriki means a particular mineral,
minerals in general, and gold.
goraṃka means a kind of bird, naguka, and sāṭhaka.
golaka means one with a jewel,
the way of the wind, and a jar.
grajreka means karīra,
one who knows the gods, and a series of guggulu;
grajrebarṇa means a friend's son and the root of the pipili.
grahaka means appearance,

a sky-goer, and another of the planets.
caṭaka means kalajika,
and its female, its mate.
catuṅgā means maśaka,
a bamboo shoot, the seizer, a sacrificial post, and a kind of house.
caluka means scattering and kinds of vessels.
caṣaka means a vessel for liquor, liquor, and the kinds of liquor.
cāraka means a guardian and one bound in prison.
citrakai means a tilaka mark.
citraka is a name of fire, eraṇḍa, the water tree, a child,
and, among beasts of prey, the tiger.
ciraka means one who elaborates;
for letters too it is adjectival.
cirikā means the bee.
cumbaka means the magnet,
a cheat, one who lives by learning, and one full of desire. culuka means scattering and a particular vessel.
culutī means a killer of children,
a division of vessels, a part, and a particular.
cūḍaka means a crest,
an elixir, the front of a monkey, and the tree kaspruta.
cūyikā means the body of a drama,
the root of the ear, and the elephant.
jatuka means the leather-winged one,
a machine, vermilion, and the eyes.
janaka means the father who begets,
a royal sage, and a particular cause.
jambuka means the jackal,
the inferior, and the lord of the west.
jālakai means an agent,
the kinds of deceit,
one with a net, and fruit.

jālakā means a net,
going according to lineage, and a pleasure lake.
jālikā means a fisherman
and a cheat; a many-storied house is jhalikai.
jālikā means a kind of cloth,
one with a net, fruit,
the heart of a mountain, a dwelling of water,
the stones of what has been lost,
a thick body, and a rākṣasī.
jāhaka means ghobye,
a cat's couch, and karuṇḍi.
jrebaka means a particular tree,
one who is alive, the snake charmer,
one who wears down the yellow fence,
and one who serves for the livelihood of the old.
jrebikā means a livelihood like that of a king.
jhailike means the bee,
ointment, and dirt;
jhairukā means giving and beauty.
ṭukluka means a perfumed chamber and a temple without a roof.
ṭuṇḍaka means red,
a little, and a tīrthika; it is also said of anger.
ḍiṇḍika means nagruka,
a thief, and one devoted to pleasure.

ḍimbikā means a reflection in water,
one who is proud, and one full of desire.
taṇḍaka means a pile of wood,
a compilation of many expressions,
the beam of a house, foam,
a cripple, and a deceiver.
takṣaka means a particular nāga,
one who flourishes, and a particular tree.
tāraka means an asura,
one who holds the wind, and one who frees by sight;
a star, and kanī nika.

tārakaṃ means a rescuer.
tilaka means a tree and a disease,
a mole, and a particular horse.
tīlakaṃ means saubarca, weariness, and saliva.
tilakā means multicolored.
tunakā means a section,
one with curds, and the birth of the feathered.
turuṣka means the incense sihla,
the Garlok,
a particular barbarian people, and the abode of glory.
What is called tūlikā
is the one with which bright designs and lines are drawn.
tūla and talpa mean bedding.
triśaṃku means powder, what is flat, and śalabha,
a kind of lord of men, and an ox.
darśaka means offering,
the counsel of the forefathers, and prapiṇa.
dāraka means one who opens,
a line of sons, and the duties of a bride.
dīpaka means an ornament of speech, and making a lamp burn.
dībyakaṃ means a crest, ajamoda, and yabānī.
druṣikā means the dirt of the eye, and tūlikā. drabaka means a kind of stone and what is burnt, and the melodious one, the counted lute.
dhanika means good and glorious.
dhanikā means running.
dhvabaka means one covered in dust,
the procession of a king, yoga, delight in medicine, and a virtuous woman.
dhanuka means a cow for riding,
and a cow elephant that has given birth.
dhenukaṃ means what is done by women, and a group of young women.

nasnaka means a naked ascetic,
one who goes without clothes, without a knot.
nisnakā means a naked woman.
nandaka means a seizer, khabja, a delighter, and a guardian of the lineage.
naraka means hell,
and a particular asura.
brtaka means dance and play,
conduct, and phoṭagalaka;
a coquettish woman and a cow elephant are nartatī.
nāyaka means a leader, a chief,
one worthy of worship, and the central gem.
The mud-born and the unknowing are nālika.
An arrow and a dart are nālīka.
The lake-born and the lotus stalk are nāliśaṃ.
bipāka means preparing,
dust, the fruit of karma,
and the side of a boat.
nirmoka means the sky,
armor, liberation, and the shed skin of a snake.
bāraka means a horse, a great minister,
an elephant, and a conch.
nīka and dīlikā mean
indigo and a fine disease, and have the meaning of śephalika.
patākā means victory,
good fortune, the ripening of signs, and a banner.
padmakaṃ means the lotus tree,
a cow elephant with knowledge, and the mud-born.
parīka means a religious observance,
a sword, the cross-legged posture, the talba couch,
and a cow elephant: paryatikā; and pigment.
pakṣaka means a side, a flank, a wing,
the door at the side, and what has sides,
a particular kaṭaka,
those called pāṭaka,
looking with the eyes and the like, a root substance,

what is gathered together, kūla, mahākiṣku, music, and the teaching;
it should also be looked for under a division of a village.
bārtaka means a precipice,
a fall, a guardian, and the water elephant.
pālaṅka means a particular branch, and śakhrutīta means a bird.
pābaka means one who never acts constantly, bhallataga, byedoṅka,
citraka, the churning of fire,
and things that purify.
pisgyuka means kaṅga,
vermilion, sehla, and the dregs of sesame.
sināka means the seizer's staff,
a spear, and good rainfall.
siṣṭak means camasa,
a sprout of barley, and a stye on the eye.
putraka means śarabha,
a son, the fruit of a hardwood tree, a tree,
a cheat, and a particular mountain.
putrikā means a doll,
yābaka, and tūka.
pulaka means a particular insect,
a flaw in a jewel, a particular stone,
an elephant's fodder, the bristling of the hair, galvarka, and descent.
pukhāka means chaff and husks,
what is compressed, and the dregs of food.
dutpake means the celestial mansion of Kubera, and jewel dust, a disease of the eye, the burning of the flesh, the ragan, the juice of eye medicine,
a round drum, rasakaṭī,
iron, and a staff.
thrathuka means a child and flattened grain.
pūdāku means a tiny creature. bṛdāku means a scorpion's bristle,

a tiger, and also what is striped.
becaka means the owl,
and the root and tip of an elephant's tail.
peṭaka means a box
for books, and what forms a group.
pratīka means what is contrary, one-sided, reversed,
and a part. prabeka means bathing and one who has died.
pāṇaka means a kind of sentient being,
polaka, and the life-giving tree.
priyaka means kadja,
alicitra, Kubera,
dṛyaṃku, greenish yellow,
saffron, and a delighter.
phalaka means a bright arrangement,
a hanging silk banner, and the divisions of the body.
parāka is adjectival:
the wolf, after-play, and saṅkara.
basuka means the wrestler of peace,
the leaf of the arka, the hairy one,
the sun, the one with frogs, dātruha, and a well.
bāraka means a particular horse,
the gait of a horse, and prohibition.
bārṅhakaṃ means a group of elders,
old age itself, and the deeds of the old.
bālaka means an ignorant child, hair, a horse, an elephant;
it should be looked for under those with sound.
bālaka also means shame,
bāriharya, and a finger ring.
bālikā means sand and a child.
bolakā means an ornament.
bālukā means sand.
bāluka means the sand of the ela.
bṛṣcika means the scorpion,

a tree, a house, and likewise a medicine.
bhasmaka means the ash disease,
the byi, the ga, and the treasure of parts.
tālāṃka means red,
a particular blue, the tortoise,
the seizer complete with the great marks,
and the palm of a man's hand.
bhūtiśaṃ means bhūninba,
the kindler, one who cuts camphor, one possessing earth, and the taking hold of a particular arrangement of the earth.
jumaka means the jackal,
a cheat, a halo round the sun, and a particular stone.
maṇḍūka means the frog,
a kind of binding, and red;
for leaves too it is maṇḍūka.
maṇḍūtī means one with honey,
and is also called the sweetwood,
a hand, a particular direction,
and also the leaf of the sweetwood.
millaka and mallikā
mean a particular king of geese.
millakā means an upper vein,
a fish, and earthen vessels.
mapaka means a tiny creature,
and a particular kind of being.
mātrokā means the mātṛkās, Brāhmī and the rest, and also goddesses,
a nurse, and also an agent.
māmaka is said to mean a maternal uncle.
māsakai means one possessing equality,
a garland and a necklace,
a pearl necklace and a garland of flowers,
the garuḍa, and a particular river.
mecaka means dark blue,
the eye of a peacock's feather, and darkness.
mecaśaṃ follows what it qualifies, and comes to mean the color black.

mocaka means the fruit of the plantain,
what is produced from it, and the pomegranate.
nirmocaka means one free of attachment.
modaka means a particular kind of sweet food,
and "gladdening," which follows the other word.
yamaśaṃ means perfect restraint,
an ornament of sound, and twin-born.
jāgaka means a manner of going,
a royal elephant, and one who performs worship.
yājhaika means sacrifice,
kuśa grass, and the implements of sacrifice.
sutaśaṃ means being abroad,
summa, the tip of the foot, doubt,
a kind of garment, the fluttering of a maiden's dress, and in the sense of "possessed of" it follows what it qualifies.
muthika means desire,
a herd, health, and a certain flower.
raktaka means one who is ill,
one who befriends, a red garment, and attachment to things.
rajaka means running,
a male parrot, and a dyer.
rasbokā means possessing essence,
gold, and a girdle.
rājikā means a letter,
a fisherman, mustard seed, and white mustard seed.
rātrika means a house of the noble class,
and the passing of the year.
rātrokai means a mare and the night.
rucarka means a necklace,
viḍaṅga, auspicious substances, excrement, the middle of a garland,
a bone ornament, bezoar, deodar, sour juice, the citron,
and coins of gold and the like.
ruṇḍikā means fighting,

a door, a compendium, and a female messenger.
reṇakā means a she-elephant,
and the beloved wife of Jamadagni. lambuka means a country and an ornamental garment.
lāsaka means play,
a performer of graceful charms, and what is incomplete.
phrunaka means the lowest of livestock.
locaka means the pupil of the eye,
a gathered lump of flesh,
a lady, a child's ornament, smoke mixed with blue-black,
a bowstring, the eyebrow, slack skin,
the plantain, an ear ornament,
and those of fixed understanding.
ṅañcaka means one set loose,
a cheat, a household animal,
a kind of horse, and the jackal.
bandhaka means exchange.
bandhakī means a deceitful woman.
bantukai means one who lives off his kin.
bantuka means yellow-faced.
bartaka means round,
a particular bird, and a horse's hoof.
barṇaka and barṇaśaṃ mean salutation, conduct, a poet, ointment, a painter,
letters, and sandalwood.
ṅarjakādī means hard,
a calf, and a reed pen.
ballīka means an anthill,
a sage, and a particular disease.
bīrṣakaṃ means protecting;
for the rainy season it follows the other word.
bāsgoka means one possessing fire,
a particular country, and a horse.
bādṅgha means one possessing fire,
a hero, and groves.

betarka means doubt,
and some hold it to mean conception and investigation.
bisāka means transformation, dust, tasting, and the lower realms.
bebeka means discernment,
a water vessel, and solitude.
thraṣāṅka means Śaṃkara (Śiva), iron, the marking-nut tree,
and a great foundation.
bijakaiśaṃ means the kernel of a grain, a cause,
and a sprout just drawn forth.
byālīśaṃ means an improper act,
what lacks a basis, torment,
and a city.
śaṃkhaka means a disease of the head.
śaṃkhakaṃ means a conch-shell bracelet.
śaṃpūkā means a particular asura,
a sonorous shell, and the rim of an elephant's frontal globe.
śaṃbuka means a freshwater mussel.
śakhākā means an arrow itself,
a thorn, the ribs of a parasol,
a spindle, cotton, a porcupine, intoxication,
and also things not obtained.
śāllakī means a dog and a bird.
śāyaka means a sword and an arrow.
śākarka means a lump of śārkara sugar,
and the froth of milk.
śiśuka means a sojourner,
a slayer of children, and a child's words.
śītaka means dwelling at ease,
the cold season, and seeing what is yet to come.
śikaka means summer grain and quicksilver.
sasthāki means made into a garland,
a royal line, and tarkudhṛṣṭa.
saṃbarka means the strength of training, bustle, and contact.

baraka means incomplete,
a road, a row, a lake,
the drink sīdhu, and a vessel for sīdhu.
sasyeka means paṭa and the like,
essence, a sword, and a jewel.
sūcaka means wicked,
a crow, a needle, a dog, and an indicator.
srutakai means birth.
srutakai means quicksilver.
sredāku means a forest,
the sun's reflection, a vajra, wind,
a washer, a cloud, and pecaka.
sepaka means balmakī,
the utmost limit, a crooked tree, and one who lives as a follower.
sthāka means conduct,
phara and the like, and a bubble.
subyākā means indigo.
sumbikā means an anthill and trees.
svasteka means an auspicious substance, joy, a particular kind of house,
a particular design in powder,
and a delightful sweet sound.
hāraka means a deceitful one,
a robber, a verse, and a kind of consciousness.
duṭuka means a kind of cymbal,
the chatter of the drunk, and the dātyuha bird.
heruka means a particular buddha,
and likewise the host of Mahākāla.
kṣāraka means one with a net,
and a net for birds, fish and the like.
kṣuraka means the cuckoo's-eye plant,
a cow's hoof, and a bulbous tree.
aṅgarka means charcoal, the planet Mars,
the Earth-born, and kaṇḍaka.
igārika means sugarcane, an arrow,
and the bud of the kiṃśuka.
āmalaka means a frog,

a bee, a lotus, and a filament.
alibaka means a row,
and a certain female dear to the cuckoo.
asmantakaṃ means urṅhāna, māluka, and destruction.
āpalpaka means darkness, delusion, a knot, hanging, joy,
and entering.
ākhanika means a mouse,
a thief, and a pig.
ākṣepaka means a wind disorder, disease, and reviling.
uṅkalika means a playful person,
craning the neck, and many-streamed water.
eḍamūka means deceitful,
and one deprived of speech and hearing.
kathillaka means basil,
and kārabella, the sword-leaf. kanika means the little finger and the pupil of the eye.
kapartaka means bound matted locks, joṭirga, and the navel.
karkotake means a pointed fruit,
and a particular kind of song.
kalabiṅka means the village bird,
and the kuliṅgaka.
kākarūka means an owl, a horse,
one skilled in winning, one clad in the sky, fear, and poverty.
kāyaṭika means one who knows another's vital points,
a parasol, time, and place.
kurpaka means desire, siṇḍikā, and a particular inner thing.
kṛkabāku means a rooster,
a charmer, and a peacock.
koṣātaka means sound,
the luminous one, and a red cloud that thunders.
kaukkuṭi means a wicked deceiver,

one urged on from afar, and one without leisure, and the greatly lustful, and hīlīna.

khārālika means the chief of a village,
a steward, an iron arrow, and a deposit.
guṇanikā means repeated practice,
a cipher, a list for recitation,
and fullness.
śākaṇḍaka means a limb of a cow,
dirt, the well-arisen,
a dry place, and also a corpse.
gakulika means squint-eyed,
a dweller in mud, a cow, and a partisan.
gaumedka means a yellow gem, kākola, and also a bird.
gharghārikā is held to mean a little bell and a particular musical instrument, likewise one holding parched grain,
a particular river,
and a musician's stick.
caṇḍālikā means a particular medicine.
gorīka means a kinnara.
jaṭaruka means the nāga tree,
the anūka of the water, one with matted hair, likewise a branch, a stealer, and tulāṅhaṭa.
jarjjarika means many lines,
and what has become tattered.
jībantikā is explained as living,
a branch, salutation, and guḍūcī.
jibatrika means the hare-marked moon,
the long-lived, a divine substance, and a medicine of the fields.
tarturīka means what has become supreme;
tarturīkaṃ means a vessel.
tuktaśāka means Varuṇa,
the khadira tree, a path, and beauty.
triparṇakaṃ means the three hot spices,

the three fruits, and gzem.
ṅantaśrika means a serpent, and comes to mean a yakṣa. Next,
āṭaka means the self-born, nāgakesara, the froth of sesame,
kunda, śirīṣa, the answer to a question,
wind, a moat, a great deliverer, red ochre, a she-elephant's ear,
fire, a mass of sparks,
a measure of grain, and a heap of tasks.
dāseraka means the son of a slave woman,
an elephant calf, and a fisherman.
niyāmaka means a pilot of boats,
a teacher, the wise, one who holds the sail,
and a maker of machines.
nirgranthaka means a gambler, one without a share, one without clothing, one without conduct, wind, independence, and the end of defecation.
pañjulaṃkā means a garment, a girl,
and a particular kind of song.
paṇḍītaka means incense and pride, froth, a lump, and the substance of the breast.
bisbalika means a eunuch, sībana, and one with silk.
puṇḍarīka means fire, the elephant of a quarter,
a tiger, and a particular kind of firewood.
puṇḍarikaṃ means a white parasol,
a white lotus, and a medicine.
puṣkalaka means musk,
a peg, and a kṣapaṇaka mendicant.
pūrṇapaka means a full vessel,
and the body of a paṭaha drum.
potīnakaṃ and potakī
mean trembling and potāṅhana.
prakīrṇakaṃ means a kind of knot,
an auspicious yak-tail fan, and a horse.
pracalīka means an archer,

a peacock, a yakṣa, and a serpent.
pharkarīka means a slap;
pharkarikaṃ means a marsh.
bageruka means a kind of crooked bird, windlessness, and a slender shoot.
kapardaka means the pupils of the eyes,
a gambler, a seed, a treasury, and the navel.
baraṇḍaka means an elephant's howdah,
the pimples of youth,
and likewise round on every side.
bartarūka means a kind of river,
jalebaḍa, a crow's nest,
and is also held to mean a place of eggs.
barbārīka means Mahākāla,
an arrangement of the hair, and a branch.
balāhāka means a cloud,
and is known as a particular nāga and asura.
pāṇijaga means the mark of a merchant,
the mark of a wild animal, and a woman full of desire.
ḍaurbaṅa means words of affection.
brindāraka is held to mean a god, a chief,
the pleasing, and an assembly.
brihahikā means one possessing tigers,
and a particular kind of garment.
bhaṭṭāraka means a god,
a king, an ascetic, and a wealthy man.
bhayānaka means a tiger,
a lion, and the terrifying.
bhāryāṭika means a wife,
a sure victor, and a particular kind of thief.
bhramaraka means a cloud, mead, ajjāna, powder,
and what is called the spear-holder.
maṇḍodakaṃ means attachment of mind,
and smearing all over.
maṇḍalakaṃ means form,
a kind of leprosy, and pride.

baidehaka means a merchant, and the son of the sacred-thread caste by the merchant caste.
bainā́śika means momentary, dependent on another, and the spider.
śatānika means a particular sage,
an old man, a tree trunk, a wolf, a dog,
a jackal, and a monkey.
śilāṭaka means oil and fierce.
śriṅgaṭaka means the turret of a gate,
and a crossroads.
saṃghāṭikā means the outer robe,
the nose, a water vessel, and a procuress.
santanika means a lake of cream, and a cobweb.
saṃdaṃśika means tongs,
and a particular kind of iron machine.
apratīka means the powerful,
the elephant of a quarter, and the form of a god.
śrigalika means a female jackal, fright, and flight.
śaikatikaṃ means a mother's vessel,
an auspicious thread,
its arrangement, and doubt.
mayūraka means an abandoned woman,
and the apāmārga plant.
marubaka means an intoxicant,
a kind of flower, froth, and blue.
bāṇabaka means a kind of necklace,
a child, a base man, and a scholar.
mṛṣṭairuka means a talkative woman,
one who eats fine food, and an enemy of guests.
ratardhikaṃ means a pleasant bath,
the eight auspicious things, and the day.
rā means pigment; dharaṅka means obedience to elders, the bringer of good fortune, and the stone of the clouds.
latālika means a mango shoot,
and is also held to mean a vajra fist.

lālāṭika means one patient in his tasks,
a particular kind of embrace,
one who watches his master's brow,
and is also said to mean the unseeing.
lekṣairaka means a carrier of letters, and the letter of keyaśca.
lekhīlaka means a letter from another's hand,
and a letter in one's own hand.
bitunnakaṃ means the glorious one,
and also jhaṭamala.
bidūṣaka means a learned man,
one who speaks of others, and one who performs rites.
bināyaka means the Victor, a protector,
the garuḍa, Viṣṇu, the obstructor, and a teacher.
bimānaki means empty through pride, intent, a vehicle of the gods,
and a house of seven stories.
biśeṣaka means a forehead mark,
and making distinctions.
baitalika means a drawing that makes known,
fame, ḍitāla, a son,
a second powder, a second garland,
and one who rouses.
saikatika means a fragrant chamber,
the ocean, and bathing;
one whose own wife lives with another;
one who is unable to accomplish anything;
and food that makes him hungry merely by being set before him.
somabalka means bark,
and the white khadira.
saugandhika means a beam,
padmarāga, a cutter,
the fragrant, the scented, and sobhārgyā.
What is called bada tasta sthī aneyo na ḍamūka means bīdhayituḥśakṣama, kitaba, and one devoid of speech and hearing.
What is called mātreṇa kṣubha ācchurtagṛta bhojana ritaka means evening and a particular kind of scratch with the nails.

What is called upakārikā means the enclosure for the king's mounts, a flour cake made with sugarcane, making a mat into leather, vessels for bindings,
increase through torma, and the jackal.

What is called kakṣupekṣuka means steady,
the limit of purity,
one who tends a garden,
washing, caṅgā, a livelihood, and guarding the gate.
What is called kṛmikaṇḍakaṃ means a drawing, reviling, and viḍaṅga.
What is called śojagariko means one who speaks blessings, and one who tends the hearth.
What is called cilimbilikā means a particular creature with a neck, the light of the sky, and lightning.
What is called jalakuñjaka means a turret, a water house, and praśī.
What is called jalatāyika means illīśa and kākāci, which are fish, and it is also held to mean a medicine.
What is called nabakaraṅka means the fruit of the cane, and a cloud.
What is called nabaphalikā means a conch, a raft,
a boat, the newly born,
and a woman's first fresh flow.
What is called nāgapārikaṃ means an elephant born of the king's she-elephant, the garuḍa, the place of a digit,
and a figured girdle.
What is called byabahārikā means what is to be purified, vermilion, and worldly convention.
What is called brīhirājika means krāmanī and foreign rice.

śatasarbikā means dūrbā grass.
The word śītacambaka means the satisfier of Yama, and a lamp.
sugasantakaṃ means spring,
and also comes to mean one who utters proud speech.
hemapuṣpeka and what is called hemapuṣpaka mean a heap of campaka flowers.
grāmamaṅkurikā means a turret,
and is also seen to mean a village brawl.
maṅnanaṇālākā means
a snake, and the arising of desire.
mātulasutraka means
one born of a maternal uncle, and the thorn-apple fruit.
latāmarkāṭaka means
a girl, a flower, and a monkey.
barṇabiloḍaka means
one who steals the shadow of verses, and a thief.
sindūratilaka means
a nāga, and a mark of sindūra.
snātācekitsaka means
the observance of the fourth month.
snātacikitsakaṃ means austerity, a woman, and a flower.
Thus, from the Viśvalocana, also called the Muktāvalī, composed by the master poet, the paṇḍita, the glorious Śrīdharasena: the section of words ending in ka, with ka and its vowels.

kha means the sky, heaven, a district,
the above, true knowledge, a town,
the empty, a dot, a sense faculty, a field,
and the fruit of the kuṇāhala.
nag means a nail, and gaṇḍal.
nakhī and nakhā mean a perfume substance.
oṃkha means pleasant speech, the pleasing, pleasant speech, and the six syllables with oṃ.
phreṅkhā means wandering,

dance, gait, and the gait of a horse.
siṅkhā means a particular gait,
dance, and sṛkaśikya.
mukhaṃ means the mouth, the door of going forth,
a means, and a beginning.
lekha means a letter and an asura.
lekhā means a line, a row, and writing.
śaṃkha means a conch and the frontal bone.
nakhī means a particular treasure.
sākhā means a branch, a great Veda, what has an edge, the arm, and the space between the directions.
śikhā means a branch, a topknot, a peak,
a crest, a flame, and a tail.
sākha means a friend and companion.
sukhaṃ means happiness and heaven.
sukhā means a town and earnest thought.
gomukha means a small mouth,
a musical instrument, plaster, and triśīdriśākhābhekathallako.
biśīkha means a great arrow,
an arrow, a digger, a chariot, and a stalk.
biśigāo means what brings about the month of Vaiśākha, and churning.
bramukha means first, the chief,
radiance, blazing, illness, and the hand.
biśākhā means the drier, and investigation.
agnimukha means a god,
a brahmin, and a name of the wind.
What is called agnimukhī, or by some agnimukha,
means the ballāṃtaka tree.
agniśikhā means one with a tail;
agniśikhaṃ is said to mean saffron.
indralekhā means a digit of the moon.
latāsukha means the essence of the moon.
agninakha means a tortoise,
and for some an elephant, cattle and the like.

bardhāyekhā means expulsion.
bardhāśikha means a child.
mahāsaṃkha means a human bone,
a treasure, and a particular kind of conch.
byāghranakha means kanda,
a particular perfume substance.
What is called parbajamukhaṃ means the sky and a road.
What is called sarbatemukhā means the knower of the field, and fierce rites.
From the Viśvalocana: the section of words ending in kha.

gaḥ means a gandharva, and Gaṇapati himself.
gaṃ means song; gā means a singer.
go means an ox, heaven,
the sky, light, a vajra, jlapari,
a cow, the earth, a direction, the eye, speech, an arrow, and water; in these it is masculine.
aga means the immobile, a tree, a mountain,
the sun, and a serpent.
aṅga means a particular kind of liquor.
agaṃ means the body, the principal,
a means, a rival, near,
and having limbs.
aṅga means calling out,
and is masculine in number;
a gulp, the sense of repetition, and great joy.
iṅga means a corner, knowledge, going, and the wondrous.
khaga means a bird, an arrow,
the sun, a god, and a planet.
khaṅga means a sword, a thorn,
the horned one, and a particular kind of victor.
gāṅgā means Ṣaṇmukha and Bhīṣma.
gaṃgā, meaning what arises from it, follows what it qualifies.
caṅga means beautiful, skilled,
attached, and graceful.

ṭaṅga means a particular weapon,
the shank, and a digger.
tyāga means giving and relinquishing.
tuṅga, meaning high, follows what it qualifies.
tuṃgaṃ means the nāga tree and a mountain.
tuṃgi means sound and the night.
durga means hard to traverse; durgā means the Fierce Goddess (Caṇḍī), and indigo.
naga means a mountain, a tree, the immobile,
the sun, and a serpent.
naga means a nāga, the nāga tree, nāgakesara, a tooth,
an elephant, a rain cloud, turbulence,
and, from turbulence, a particular wind of the body;
the chief itself, a supreme place, lead, a weapon, and a particular thing that brings about the death of women.
siṅga means reddish yellow; siṅga means māsī; siṅga means the maned one.
siṅgā means ramatha, a vein, Umā, and bezoar.
pūga means kurumba,
and the kramuka tree.
phalgu means impurity and fruitless.
bhagaṃ means wisdom, the womb, desire, fame, the self, life, liberation, lordship, diligence, dispassion, Dharma, glory, effort, and the sun.
bhaṅga means a wave, a particular goddess of the inner body, division, victory, and reversal of order.
bhriṃga means the crop of hemp.
bhāga means a part, division,
one side, and a share.
bhṛgu means Venus, Pināki̇n (Śiva),
a precipice, and Jamadagni.
bhṛṅga means budga, ṣaṅga, and a whirl of smoke. bhṛṅgi means the king of hair, and the peel of sugarcane.

bhoga means pleasure, a snake's hood, the body,
looking on a gathering, a woman,
food, protection, and wealth.
mārga means the first month of the year, cymbals, and tracking.
mṛga means a deer, livestock, an elephant, desire, obstruction, and a particular lunar mansion.
mṛgī means seeking, the gait of a deer,
and a particular kind of leader.
yuga means a yoke-pin and sīrāṅga;
yugaṃ means the ages, the Kṛta age and the rest,
an extended square, a name, and a medicine.
yoga means putting on armor, joining, meditative concentration, action, extent and the like, the substance of a thread,
the supreme all-conqueror, gaining what one had not before, medicine, means, and reasoning.
roga means spoiled medicine, and disease.
laṃga means beautiful, and bilga.

liṃgaṃ means a sign, inference, turbulence, scattering, number,
and kuprakṛti.
baṅga means a particular country,
bhaṇṭatakī, and cotton;
baṅgaṃ is also to be seen as meaning a weapon.
byaṅga means a frog, and one of deficient body.
byaṅge follows the other word, and is neuter.
śāḍgaṃ means a bow.
śāḍga means the bow of Viṣṇu.
śṛṅgaṃ means a horn, a peak,
the chief, high, and peaceful,
and likewise bad.
śṛṅga means a stream falling from a peak,
a sign, and the son-in-law of the earth.

śṛṅgā means a horn, the leader of the herd,
a fish, and a particular kind of gold.
sbarga means intrinsic nature, definite liberation, certainty, blending, seeing,
delusion, and chapters.
siṅgā means the nyagrodha and the plakṣa,
and yellow.
aniga is held to mean the mind-churner,
the bodiless, the sky, and the mind.
anaṃgaṃ means one of deficient body, and the reversal of the body's arising.
asāṅgaṃ means a defective body,
the outer corner of the eye, and a forehead mark.
ayoga means exertion, stacked rows, separation, hardness, and a pleasure garden.
ābhoga means all-pervading effort,
a parasol, earnest thought, fullness, applying scent and offering garlands, exertion, and obscuring.
āśuga means an arrow and the wind.
utparga means casting off, giving up,
the general rule, and giving back.
urbaga means weariness,
and having a great many.
urbagaṃ means going far,
and the fruit of the kramukī.
kaliṅga means a rotten nail,
a whirl of smoke, a particular kind of trade,
a particular country, skilled,
burnt, and the fruit of the koḍaka.
kaligā means a queen.
kāliṃgā means a kumbhāṇḍa,
an elephant, and a snake.
kaliṃkī means a frog's fat.
cakrāṃga means a bird.
cakraṃgī means the kuḍu fish.
jihmaga means a snake, and one of many windings.

tāḍaka means a river,
and a heap of leaves. tāḍagu means thulutāta and a fertile girl.
turagī means a mare.
turagā means a horse and the mind.
trībarga is well known to mean,
when they are named together,
the group of Dharma, desire and wealth,
the three greatnesses,
the combination of the three, sattva, rajas and tamas,
and increase, stability and decline.
dhārāṅga means a sacred ford and a sword.
naraṅga means the male organ.
baraṇḍaga means a round peg.
nāraṅga means a weapon of lead, excrement, a person, the twin-born,
and the juice of bisbili.
niṣaṃga means a quiver and a friend.
nisaṃga means moral discipline, and a chapter.
nilaṅga means a worm,
bhaṃbharaṇī, and having essence.
pataṃga means a butterfly,
the sun, a bird, and a particular kind of rice.
sabaṅga means the essence of flavor.
batrāṅga means red sandalwood, birch bark, and juniper.
bannaga means a snake and the padma tree.
parāga means the pollen of flowers, bath powder and the like, and dust;
it is also explained as close attachment, sandalwood,
and a particular mountain.
sunnāga means an eminent man,
a particular tree, the white utpala,
and jātiphala,
and is also to be seen as meaning a pale snake.
brayaga means a particular ford,
the descent of the arga, and pervasive power.

payoga means the application of an action, and what is shown by it. praṃyaṃgu means kaṃguṃ, rājikā,
the fruit-bearing, and bispilī.
slabaga means a monkey,
a frog, a flame, and a charioteer.
bhūjaṃga means a snake, and ṣilga.
mātaṃga means a dog-cooker, and an elephant.
mṛtaṃga means a drum, a melody,
the red-bodied, and a life-giving medicine.
raktaṃga means auspicious, steady, loving, and the subduer.
rāthāga means the non-dual,
a wheel, the felloe of a wheel,
and the parts of a chariot.
paraṅga means the place where hair grows on the head,
the peel of sugarcane, and an elephant.
bātiga means one whose elixir has ripened,
a transformer, one who turns things into gold.
biḍaṃga means the destroyer of worms,
and nāgara. pihaga
means a sky-goer, and one who goes to the summit.
bisarga means inferior,
giving, casting off impurities, discarding, release,
light, and a particular kind of removal.
saṃbhoga means joy,
enjoyment, and the teaching of the Victor.
sarbagaṃ means water.
sarbagaḥ means the all-pervading lord, and Śaṃkara.
sāraṃga means a deer,
an elephant, a particular kind of small bird,
a bee, and the variegated.
hemāṅga means the garuḍa and Brahmā.
anuṣaṅga means undertaking,
and some also hold it to mean compassion.
abarga means liberation,

and a task completed with its fruit.
abhiṣaṃga means bustle,
an oath, joining, a treasury,
a deceiver, a wolf,
and a particular kind of human form.
aparāga means the appearance of heaven,
an eclipse, having flowers,
and also dulū, the eared planet,
and censure.
upasarga means a particular disease,
and approaching.
kaḍabhaṃga means crops,
cutting the nails, and bṛyatyaya.
indrabhaṃga means moon-born, independent, and the nose of a king.
dīrghadhvaka is said to mean an elephant,
and a carrier of letters.
mallanāga means a white elephant,
the son of Vatsa, and a sage.
rājaśrīṃga means a golden staff, and maṅgura.
samāyogaṃ means full union, gathering, and purpose.
saṃprayoga means great joy,
action, and following.
What is called kathāprasaṅga is said to mean a mass of wind, and a physician who treats the illness of poison.
What is called nāḍītaraṃgā means kāko, the water crow,
hiṇḍaka, and ratahiṇḍaka.
The section of words ending in ga.

gha means the lord of bells.
ghā means a small bell, and a destroyer.
ghu means the sound of a woman.
aghaṃ means sin, suffering, and want.

aṃghṛ means a foot, and the root of a tree.
argha means an offering of worship, and price.
udgha means the joined palms,
a wind of the body, and ripening.
ogha means running to and fro, swiftness, instruction in dance,
a multitude, a way, and a torrent.
maghī means a particular medicine.
maghā means the tenth lunar mansion.
megha means a cloud, and musta.
mogha means fruitless and inferior.
moghā means a tree, and the pale and tall.
laghu means pleasing, without essence,
aguru, sṛkkā,
black aguru, and instantly.
ślāghā means high praise, honor,
and longing.

anaghā means empty of sin,
stainless, and gladdened in mind.
amogha means fruitful.
amoghā means full explanation, beneficial, and viḍaṅga.
ullāghā means free of illness, skilled, clean, and joyful.
kārtsigha means gold,
viḍaṅga, and a perfectly clear maṇḍala.
nidrāgha means the hot season, burning fever, and the water of dust.
sarigha means a hammer,
a particular kind of yoga, a holder of limbs, destroying, a vessel for bindings,
a pot, and a cattle village.
pratigha means resentment and anger.
mahārgha means of great price, priceless, and the lābaka quail.
sarbogha means a teacher,

the implied sense, armor, and the lord of all aims.
The section of words ending in gha.

ṅa means the terrifier, and an object.
The section of words ending in ṅa.

ca means a thief and the moon.
aca means worship and an image.
uccha means great and high.
kaca means hair, a teacher,
fluid, and a dry scab;
kaca means a she-elephant.
kāca means a jewel, a net,
a disease of the eye, and a particular kind of soil.
kāsbyi means a girdle, a cluster, guñja, and a particular Brahmā.
kūrca means the space between the eyebrows,
what is to be accomplished, the beard, and false praise.
kruñca means a particular bird,
and a particular mountain and continent.
cañca means an effigy, reeds and the like.
cañcā means a man of straw.
cañcu means sorlātroṭī,
a vein of a cow, and kilīñca.
carcā means a place, losmasi, conception, conduct,
and reflection;
skin, bark,
a crane, mere skin, and the peel of sugarcane.
nīca means sāmara, sloping,
a dwarf, the downward direction, low, entirely soft, cotton,
kuṣṭha, a particular asura,
fear from the fields, and a particular other.
prāce means time, direction, and place.
moca means an excellent eye medicine.
moca means śāllali and the plantain.
ruci means beauty, light, desire, attachment, and excellence.

baca means a parrot; bāca is said to mean scent and the mynah.
bāca means Sarasvatī, speech,
very small waves,
an opportunity, and happiness.
sacī means the queen, the consort of Śakra;
śuci means close attendance, purity,
a mantra adept, water, a peacock, charm, the hot season,
white, and the unimpaired.
sūci means a gesture of the hands and the like,
oil, and a point.
sūcī means those with boundaries,
and a particular way of speaking and acting.
abīca means a hell,
a wave of water, and bahara.
udūci means water and direction, and for place and time it follows what it qualifies.
kanici means flowering,
a creeper, guñja, and a cart.
kabaca means a shield,
a signal, a cup, and an egg.
krakaca means a saw,
the knotted, and the earth-born.
namuci means one who inspires longing, separation, an asura, a nāga, water, and an elephant.
nārāca means an iron arrow.
nārācī means a particular kind of fastening.
pratīci means direction, time, and place.
prapañca means vast,
accumulation, and conceptual elaboration.
marici means blazing,
a sage, and kṛpaṇa,
which applies to three: a horse, a sword, and a miser.
mārāci means a sacrificer,
an elephant, kakkola,

and a particular rākṣasa.
māricī means a particular goddess.
bikaca means fully opened.
bipañci means shameful,
play, a lute with a sound box, and a planet.
saṃkoca means binding,
and a particular kind of fish.
saṃkocam means saffron,
and a true and good friend.
kākāciñci means a thread, a seed,
a water insect, and dilira. jalasūci means a water worm,
the horned one, and a slayer of children.
kaṃkatroḍi means jhaka.
malimūca means a thief.
The word taranārūca means a dog,
a delightful branch,
an excellent woman, and an action
that has arisen from a full undertaking.
The section of words ending in ca.

cha means cutting and a crow.
chā means cutting, desire,
a sign, and clarity.
acche means inexhaustible,
a bear, crystal, and facing toward.
accha means very clear.
kaccha means the edge of a cliff and the like,
a part of a boat, naka,
the not-mother, the self, a dwelling place,
and a particular kind of moving.
kacchā means cairikā,
and is also to be seen as meaning a sow.
guccha means a cluster, a kind of necklace,
a stem, and a collection.
biccha means a tail; biccha means wound about with śalmali, dust, the sheath of the pūgacchaṭa,

the front hall of māba, and a garland.
puccha means one separated from people.
bicca means the hind part.
mleccha means unclear speech,
a particular caste, and one who delights in sin.
mahākaccha means the lord of rivers,
and also the lord of the waters.
The section of words ending in cha.

ja means swift-going. What is called jā means a bhūta, birth, a conqueror, and victory.
jū means a rāga, a melody, praise,
a piśāca, and swiftness.
aja means the Dark One, Smara (Kāma),
a vajra, Rāhu, and the son of Raghu.
abja means a particular bow,
the moon, a lotus, nicula,
a tree, and a conch. aji means level ground and battle.
urja means enthusiasm, and an agent.
ūrjā means diligence and strength.
kañja means hair and Brahmā.
kañji means nectar and a lotus.
kuji means hell and charcoal.
kuñja means a monkey, a trunk,
an elephant, and also a tooth.
kuñja means hunchbacked, crooked, and a particular tree.
barju means a particular kind of tree, itching, and a worm.
gañja means a temple, a tent, khari,
and a treasury. garjā means churning.
garja means prahasta.
guñja means kākamaciri,
a paṭaha drum, and a portion of sound.
dvija means a brahmin and the egg-born.
dvijā means the remover of evil, and fine pollen.
dhvaja means an emblem, the leg of a seat,

a banner, a sign, and a distiller.
nija means an owner, and the marked.
nyubjana is said to mean a child, and hearing.
nyubbaṃ comes to mean the work of weapons, a medicine of the Mon, and nu.
kubja means facing downward.
piñja means harm; piñji means moving.
bersā means cotton and a canal.
pañja, meaning agitated, follows what it qualifies.
prajā means lineage and the world.
prajā means beings, an assembly, chābaka, and a road.
bhuja and bhuja
mean the upper arm and the hand, in both the feminine and the masculine.
marju means a washerman,
bathing, and purity.
rarjju means a braided cord, a quality,
a row, a garland, and a wall.
ruca means disease, and uṅga.
lañja means dara, and the edge.
lājā means holding, and parched rice;
lāja means moistened rice.
lāji is said to mean pushel-tse.
bāja also comes to mean a wing, sound, a particular sage, weaving, and a cliff.
baṃjaṃ means the object of sacrifice,
and ghee. bīji means lineage,
the material cause, and semen.
byāja means fully grasping,
deceit itself, and not showing.
barju means a merchant, and reading.
sajja means armored, and fully arisen.
sañja means Śambhu, and a merchant.
svaja means dust, the self-born, blood, and likewise a son.

aṅgajaṃ means sound and joy,
a son, and pride born of comfort,
the limb-holder, and the elephant.
aṅgaja means blood.
aṇḍaja means bird and fish,
lizard, snake, and musk,
and all the egg-born.
ambuje means the lake-born, nicula, and the water willow.
kombija means a land and an elephant,
and is taught for kinds of śaṃga.
karaja means the hand-born,
the tiger's claw, and the nail.
kāṃpoja means the moon's rind,
the conch, the nāga tree, and horses.
kaṃbojī means the leaf of a bean,
and is held to mean the leaves of all trees.
kāruja means the artisan, drawing, self-arising oil,
the anthill, red ochre, foam,
the elephant calf, and nāgakeśara.
kuṭaja means a kind of tree, great buckwheat, and the pot-born.
girija means the son of the mountain,
the maternal uncle, and khorudāhṛdā.
girijaṃ means the thistle,
iron, bitumen, and fragrance.
jalajaṃ means the mud-born,
the water-born, the lotus, costus, and the conch.
parañja means the sesame press,
the sword, foam, and the blade that is hurled.
pāṇijya means a merchant and a particular way of making a living.
balajā means trade and merchandise,
and a woman of fine complexion.
balajaṃ means the earth and the field, crops, a land, and a cowshed.
bhūmijā means a snake and Jānakī.

Hell and the base-born are bhūmija.
The leaf of murga is vanajā.
khanaja means elephant and tiger.
The mud-born and the forest-arisen are vanajaṃ.
bahuja is said to be the kṣatriya.
A drop and semen are spayaṃjā.
sahaja means one without companion;
one bearing another's mark is sahajā.
sāmaja means arisen from melodious speech,
and the elephant bearing the mark of what is named.
himajā and himaja
mean the mountain's daughter, the lady of fine speech, and likewise Maināka.
ahibhuja means the son of Vinatā (Garuḍa),
and the one who sports after the thunder.
kāsmira means white dabong, costus, saffron, and the lotus.
graharāja means the moon and the sun.
What is called jaghanyaja means a younger brother and the śūdra caste.
dvijarājā means the protector of the Great Mother,
the tamer, and a particular self-born one.
dharmarāja means Yama,
the Sugata, the garuḍa, the peacock,
and the one steadfast in battle (Yudhiṣṭhira).
bharadhvaja means the guru's son,
a pack of tigers, and a sage.
bhāradvāja means a measure and a particular kind of cotton.
bhṛgarāja means the honey-drinker,
the sbreu plant, and a kind of bird.
yakṣarāja means the friend of the Three-Eyed One.
rājarāja means Kubera,
the lord of all the earth, and the deer-marked moon.
kṣirābdhijaṃ means the hare-marked moon.
kṣīrābdhijā means Śrī.
kṣārābdhijaṃ means cuttlefish bone and the salt of the ocean.

The word ṛṣabharadhājva means Śaṃkara (Śiva), a particular offering, and skyega.
Then munibhaiṣaji
means a sage, the mountain rat, the myrobalan, and stepping over. This is the section of words ending in ja.

jha means conduct and wind;
some hold it also means what is destroyed.
jhaṃjha means a kind of sound.
jhai means ice and rain.
This is the section of words ending in jha.

ña means the sound of splitting,
and some explain it as a singer.
jñā means learned and intellect.
The word vidha means one of deluded mind.
prājñā means intellect; prajañā means learned.
saṃjñā means a name and a singer, intention, a sage, a woman,
and a sign made, as for the blind,
with the hand, the head, and the eyes.
kṛtajña means one who knows what has been done, possessing essence, the measurable, the expressible,
and the gaze of women.
daivajña means the astrologer.
sarvajña means the Sugata and Śambhu.
kṣetrajñā means the self and a city.
This is the section of words ending in ña.

ṭā means the earth; ṭa means sound;
ṭaṃ comes to mean a ladle.
aṭṭaṃ means a kind of house, flax, what is dry, and food.
iṣṭa means dreaming, sacrifice, formations, and the action of yoga and sacrifice, worship, the most beloved, and praised.
iṣṭi means sacrifice, worship, and desire,
a compilation with its words, and threads.

kaṭa means the waist, śaka,
the sense of "very," the navel,
an elephant's temple, a pledge,
a kind of bird, and a wonder.
kaṭī, kaṭiṃ, ākadhi.
kaḍhkā is to be understood as refutation,
priyaṃgu, mustard seed,
aśoka, red, and heat.
kaṭu means essence, fondness for avarice, fragrance, and pungency.
kaṣṭaṃ means dense, and hardship.
kuṭa means a pot, a stone trough, koṭa, and a dog.
koṭī means milk, a servant woman, beer,
drawing, and a cluster (gucchaka).
kūṭa means a heap and the east,
a spoke, hypocrisy, illusion, dance, chaff, a trident, sīrāṃga,
a contraption, an iron ball, and the immovable.
kṛṣṭi means realization, a person, and summoning.
koṭi means a particular number,
supreme, utmost excellence,
a tip, and the finest part of a bow.
kruṣṭaṃ means weeping and crying out.
khaṭaṃ means phlegm, a slap, darkness, and a well.
khāṭi means sabaratha,
kṛṇa eka, and graha.
keṭa means reviling and fondness for wealth.
kapha means a kind of town.
kṛṣṭa means a kind of medicine and akaprasabandha.
ghaṭa means a pot, an elephant's temple,
a particular samādhi,
a cattle pen, and doing.
ghaṭā also means a pot and an elephant's temple.
ghṛṣṭi means a boar, proclaiming everywhere,

Viṣṇu's subduing, proclaiming, and producing phlegm.
gyoṇḍā means the areca palm, pūga.
caṭu and cāṭu mean the belly (piciṇḍa),
a kind of seat, and an ascetic vow.
jaṭā means the roots of the hair worn by the naked, and spikenard. jaṭī means the body, a hermitage, a bower, the cleansing of a wound, and a forest grove.
truṭi means setting down, a part,
cardamom, torment,
and a measure of time. troṭi means kaṭphala, water, and fish.
tvaṣṭa means increase, an arrow of words,
an artisan, and sharp.
diṣṭi means a fist and full measurement.
diṣṭa means time and indication.
dṛṣṭaṃ means fortune. triṣṭi means the eye, view, and intellect.
dhaṭa means a balance for weighing.
dhaṭī means a piece and cloth.
nataṅ means removing; ṭī means a graceful play of the hands.
naṭa means shol and śailūṣa, the actor.
phaṭa means fine cloth and the keeper of goods.
paṭu means eloquent, healthy,
keen, skilled, and clear.
paṭola, cruel, and proclaiming.
paṭū means powder, stone,
a panel, a crossroads, the binding of wounds and the like,
the ways of kings, and a kind of seat.
patā means an ear ornament, an ornament, lac, and making impressions.
baṭṭi means a kind of cloth,
the leading of speech, the lukkhurma plant, and the pot-bearing tree.
puṣṭi means increase and nourishing.
paṭa means a serpent's hood, pretense, and a bank; for having rested
it is pāṇṭaṃ. Then vaṭa is held to mean the nyagrodha and barīṭa, varti, cogakā, and maṭī.

bhaṭa means a kind of pāmara, and a hero. bhaṭi means going forth itself.
What is called bhṛṣṭa means roasting and an empty vāṭikā.
muṣṭi means fruit and the clenched fist. mliṣṭa means indistinct speech;
for speaking of illness it is mliṣṭaṃ.

yaṣṭi means an arrow and a kind of weapon,
a supreme necklace and a great necklace,
a creeper, a banner, a staff, and bhārgī. riṣṭi means prosperity and a sword.
riṣṭaṃ means well-being, the inauspicious, and nonexistence.
laṭa means a sword, the greatly intoxicated, and a fault.
lāṭa means a land and garments.
vāṭa means a path and a manner.
vāḍī means a house and niṣkuṭa.
viṭa means ṣilga, salt,
a number, a mouse, an arrow, and a snake.
viṣṭi means a good worker, petana, and being dispatched.
khruṣṭi means day and dawn,
and fruit, and a complete fast.
bluṣṭi means prosperity and reasoning, certainty and the like, and fruit.
śaṭā means matted locks and the lion's mane.
briṅṭaṃ means emanated and joined,
ascertained, and produced.
bṛṣṭi means emanation and a chapter.
sphuṭa means clear, expanded, and pervading.
sphuṭi means clear, a female frog, and a foot chain. hṛṣṭa means bristling hair, the delighted, and the struck.

avaṭa means that which has a hole,
a well, a remainder, and a pit.
baṭu means a pit and a well,
a pot, yamakuṭa,
an iron chain, and binding.
ariṣṭa means the hairy one,
the drooping, the crow, and the heron (kaṃka).
ariṣṭaṃ means the lying-in chamber, buttermilk (takra), and the sign of good and ill.
utkaṭa means excessive,
flourishing, abundant, and arrogant.
karaṭa means a base livelihood,
the wood-eater, the eleventh day,
the crow, a kind of cymbal,
a bad brahmin, safflower,
the hard to tame, and an elephant's temples.
karkaṭa means an act of women,
a particular house,
a frog, and a bird.
karkaṭī means the hairy woman and the fruit of the śālmali.
kartaṭa means mud,
and the mud-rib known as karahāṭa.
kārbaṭa means cotton and lac. kīkaṭa
means measuring and cooking, the poor, and a horse.
kurkkuṭa means Magadha,
the copper-crested one,
a mat, a thread, washing,
kukubha, and the stony one.
kukkuṭī means the center of an ear ornament,
a finger-snap, a kind of base pleasure,
the copper-crested hen,
and a woman who behaves wantonly.
śālabhañji means kuruṇḍī.
A kind of jñiñjikā is kuṇḍa.
kṛsīṭa means joy,

water, a mass of sound, a source,
and thieves. cakrāṭa means the base, the deceitful, and the woman who removes poison.
carbaṭa means pervading,
vast, a slap,
and sarbaṭa. carbaṭī
comes to mean a kind of flour.
cibiṭa means flat-nosed,
pug-nosed, and risrita.
ciriṇṭī means a woman well settled,
a woman in her second youth, conduct, and a poor flower.
jakuṭī means jakuṭī,
a mountain, and a house. jakūṭaṃ means the salt of the ocean.
trikūṭa means a good time.
tripuṭa means attachment,
and also comes to mean satīnaga.
tripuṭā means a kind of flower, cardamom, and the purging root.
traṃgo means a kind of net,
and is also held to mean bhautāñcalīma.
trohāṭa is held to mean a hunter and a variety of verse.
vāraṭi means a horse, the cataka bird,
a vetāla, and one who keeps an ascetic vow.
nirtaṭa means pitiless,
another's vessel, blood, and fruitless.
nirkuṭa means a garden, a house,
a fisherman, and a door panel.
parbaṭa means a preparation of flour, and a kind of medicine.
pariṣṭa means veneration,
the very clear, and seeking.
barkaṭī means the plakṣa
and the sākali tree.
pātraṭa means the cotton field.

picchaṭa means the eye; kiṭī means dust.
picchaṭaṃ means lead and the like.
baraṭā means nourishing faith.
paraṭā means gandholī.
parbaṭi means the merchant class and grain.
bārbaṭa means a sea monster.
bāruṇḍa means a child.
bhākūṭa means a fish and a rock.
bhārluṭa means one who lives by the drum, lust, and union with one's own wife.
bhāvāṭa means the lustful,
the good, attire, the body, and dance.
markaṭa means a monkey and a spider,
and an act of women.
markaṭī means a female monkey,
a female spider, a parrot, a net,
and kinds of hand and nail.
mārkaṭa means a seed,
the Victor of karkaṭa, cina,
the emblic myrobalan, a cow,
and is also to be seen as the fruit of dhuka.
mocaṭa means sandalwood, that which lives by the Dark One, the core of the plantain, and bringing near.
morati means a root,
and aṃkoṭi means a flower.
moraṭa means seven days,
the finest milk, and mūrvikā.
ballāṭa means a singer,
the lustful, drawing, and one who lives by the hoe.
vikaṭa means grimacing,
broad, beautiful, and supreme.
vekaṭa means the very beautiful,
a fish, and fresh youth.
beraṭa means mixed and base,
and the fruit of the areca.
śaimāṭa means the abode of gods,

a lion's mane, a star, and the land of the Mon.
saṃsṛṣṭa means vānti and the like,
the well purified, and the associated.
harmaṭa means soma,
a mansion, baṃgaṃ, and a tortoise.
ucchiṅga means a kind of fish and one who makes a man angry.
garahāṭa means the lotus root, śalya, dru, and a kind of flower.
kāmakūṭa means the courtesan, wandering, and the courtesan's lover.
karppapuṇa means shameless, mad, and making blind.
kaṭaṃ and naṭaṃ mean a fisherman, nut grass, and red.
kuṇḍakīṭa means the blind,
speech, clairvoyance, moving,
the brahmin woman of the paramour-born,
a son, a servant woman, and the lustful.
baṭkarīṭa means a panel,
a sword's edge, and practicing an ascetic vow.
gāḍhamuṣṭi means a miser,
a sword, a dagger, and the like.
cakravāṭa means kraya,
the boundary of the water's breadth, and the crest tree.
catuḥṣaṣṭi means a portion of many numbers.
nārakiṭa means the son of a stone,
the well given, śabi, and hantṛ.
barabuṣṭa means one who holds another, one nourished by another, and merchandise.
pratikṛṣṭaṃ means secret,
and the second plowing of a field.
What is called pratiśiṣṭaṃ means explained one by one, and praised.
parkārāṭa means a sidelong glance,
the young sun, blazing light,
a dwarf, a cloud, a lap,

kāntadatta, and a damaged nail.
śibaviṣṭa means the bad, bad skin, the Great Lord (Maheśvara), and prāñcaloha.
śrutikaṭa means many minds and a snake.
What is called siṃhacchaṭa means the nāga tree and keśara.
What is called daśanocchiṣṭa means a kiss and the ground of a sigh.
What is called pātācampaṭa means iron, bronze, a round signal, fighting, the waist, jewel fragments,
wind, a great drum, and the areca.
This is the section of words ending in ṭa.

ṭha means the disc of the moon, empty, Śaṃkara (Śiva), and a loud sound.
kaṭha means a sage, a kind of etymology, and above all one who reads it, one who knows it, and a god.
kaṇṭha means the throat, the flank,
the destroying of thorns, and sound.
kāṇṭhā means a direction, a place of excellence,
a measure of time, a boundary, and the pine. kāṣṭhaṃ means firewood. kuṇṭha means dull and inactive.
kuṣṭhaṃ means disease and that which marks a disease.
goṣṭha means the inside, the belly, a house,
kūśūl, a shovel,
kuśul, and one's own cow.

goṣṭhi means a place of assembly and a place of conversation.
goṣṭhaṃ is held to mean a cowshed.
jyaṣṭha means a particular month,
the chief, and the elder.
What is called jyeṣṭha means a star,
a pestle, and a particular finger.
duṣṭhu means the weak and the lowest.
niṣṭhā means certain attainment, completion, decline, the end, excellence, begging, and affliction.

yāṣā means the mother's place. pāṭha means reading.
pṛṣṭhaṃ means the back of the body, and later.
phraṣṭha means one who goes before, and the chief.
prāṣṭha means Caṇḍī and medicine.
baṇṭhaṃsa means one who has gained all that is done,
the end of a beam, and a dwarf.
śaṭha means the bad, the deceitful, and one who stands in between.
śāṭha means the lazy and the dull.
śreṣṭha means the supreme and Kubera.
ṣaṣṭi means the completion of the sixes, and the queen of the Seizer.
haṭha means an act of force and pāripali.
apraṣṭha means time and a child.
abaṣṭha means the son of a vaiśya, a twice-born, and a region.
ambaṣṭhā means the Gaṅgā-born,
the mother's place, and an assembly.
kaniṣṭha means the small,
nogona, the younger, the weak,
the little finger, and a finger.
kamaṭha means a tortoise.
kamaṭhaṃ means a kind of vessel.
jaraṭha is said to mean hard,
pale, and gravel.
narmaṭha means cūcuka
and a city. brakoṣṭha
means one who increases, the ground of cotton, and the king's register.
pratiṣṭha is held to mean respect,
the performance of sacrifice, a foundation,
and letters and verse.
bariṣṭha means the very supreme and the beautiful, and the tamarind. bariṣṭhaṃ means naleśaṃ and copper.

makuṣṭha means churning,
grain, and going beyond.
laghiṣṭha means the very small, and cloth.
bekuṣṭha means the long-haired one and Śakra (Indra). śrīkaṇṭha means the lord of the mountain's daughter, a harsh sound, and also comes to mean the remover of poison.
sādhiṣṭha means the noble and the very firm.
kalakaṇṭha means the cuckoo (pika),
the pigeon, a sweet sound,
the heron (kaṃka), and a kind of deer.
kālapṛṣṭha means the bow of Karṇa.
dantaśatha means a sour juice,
the wood-apple (kapittha), the work of weapons,
nārāṅga, and caccakrika.
nīlakaṇṭha means the gallinule, gyolpo, the trembling,
kinikala, piṃka,
and that which has a yellow core;
it is used like kālakaṇṭha.
pūtikāṣṭhaṃ means the pine,
the deodar, and the earth-born.
sūtrakaṇṭha means the pigeon,
the twice-born, and the wagtail (khañjarīṭa).
hārikaṇṭha means the cuckoo and a throat with a necklace.
This is the section of words ending in ṭha.

ḍa is to be seen as the lord of the mountains and the sound of fear.
aṇḍa means a bird, a store of fish and the like,
the testicle, and vīrya.
īḍā means understanding and daughters;
like ilā, it means the earth and a cow.
kāṇḍa means a great section, an arrow, a matter,
a stalk, an occasion, water, a staff,

a boundary, kutbā, a trunk, robbery, the lower part, a woman with a husband,
a son, and jārāta.
kuṇḍi means a ladle. kuṇḍaṃ means the ground of the net of the gods, and is also held to mean father and mother.
krīḍā means play, reviling, and contempt, and jest. kroḍa means
the slow and the boar.
kroḍaṃ means the boar and the breast.
khaṇḍa means half, a preparation of sugarcane, and a flaw in a jewel.
gaḍa means a fish and going to the far side.
guḍu means a hunchback and buraṃ.
gaṇḍa means a measure, a kind of conjunction,
the rhinoceros, the burden of a load,
the supreme, the very heroic, a sign,
a horse, an ornament, and a river.
guḍa means an elephant's armor and a preparation of molasses and sugarcane.
guḍa is also held to mean gutī, rilu, and madhvāna.
goṇḍa means a kind of pāmara,
and is said of an old man's navel.
caṇḍa means fierce, a kind of asura,
a subject of Yama, and the very wrathful.
caṇḍa also means the woman who robs wealth and that which has conch flowers.
ciṇḍī means the daughter of the mountain,
a harmful queen, and the wrathful woman.
cūḍā means a kind of bracelet,
a crest, and baḍabhū.
cauḍa means a land and a kind of cloth.
jaḍa means dull, mute, and afflicted by cold.
kuṇḍu means a medicine. bhāḍa means the fist and the like, exact measurement, and striking hard with roots and the like.

tāḍī means the palm of the hand and a tree.
daṇḍa means a portion of Caṇḍī, encircling, an army, a kind of troop,
a kind of pride, the tamer of Yama, manifest pride, the churning stick, a horse,
a corner staff, a boundary,
a planetary graha, a king, a parasol, and is held to mean laguḍa.
nāḍī means a tube, a vein, and of wounds gaṇḍa and turbba,
the time of six instants,
conduct, and kuhana.
niḍaṃ means an abode, going according to kind,
the near, and the earlier.
baṇḍa means the pure-minded, and baṇḍā;
baṇḍa means the lord of kadhī, and white.
biṇḍi means a part of the body, speech,
a place, and sihlaka.
piṇḍa means what is born of barley,
and things made into a lump.
piṇḍi means continuity, the strong one,
the part of a shovel, and livelihood.
piṇḍi means the gourd (ālābu),
the drago, and a kind of incense.
pīḍā means crushing, compassion,
the pine, and a garland for the head.
caṇḍā means an assembly of castes.
caṇḍa means the casting off of hands and the like.
bhaṇḍa means a vessel, the wealth of one whose root is cut off, an ornament, and a horse's ornament;
some also hold it to mean a river vessel.
kuṇḍa means the kumbhāṇḍa and a female frog.
maṇḍa means essence, the tail end, raṇḍa, and ornaments.
maṇḍā means the mother; ṇḍaṃ
also means a kind of commoner.
muṇḍa means Rāhu, the head, and a kind of asura.

raṇḍā means the leaf of byaba,
a medicine, and a widow.
vyāḍa means one who harms cattle, and a snake.
śuṇḍa means intoxicated, and haste.
buṇḍa means beer, a vaiśya,
a stalk, and an elephant's trunk.
śuṇḍā means a water elephant.
śauṇḍa denotes the intoxicated.
śoṇḍi means a fragment, and cavikā.
ṣaḍa means a particular drink and a grove of lotuses and the like.
ṣaṇḍa means a terrace, a lord, and the like.
kṣeḍa means a sound, kara, ringing in the ears, rough,
and crooked. kṣeḍā means a she-elephant,
the lion's roar of heroes,
and also a thorn in the back.
dākṣveḍaṃ means the fruit of the red arka, melody, and the flower durasaṅ.
karaṇaṇi means that which has resin.
pāsikaraṇḍa means a cow
and the bird dalāṭaka.
kuṣmaṇḍa means a kind of host,
the insect karkāru, and many.
kuṣmāṇḍi means Caṇḍī and a medicine.
kodaṇḍa means the eyebrow and the bow, and also a particular land.
gāruḍi means a treatise, poison, and the emerald (marakata).
taraṇḍa means the oily,
saliva, a tied thread,
a thing, and the accomplished.
tintiḍa means a kind of asura.
tintiḍi means a servant of Yama,
a kind of tree, and the mucacañca tree.
drabaiḍa means a kind of door,

a particular nest, and the sky.
nirguṇḍā means traṇikā,
the sign of blue, the small,
holding, and karhāṭaka.

piciṇḍa means hard,
and also a limb of cattle.
puṭyaṇḍa means a snake, musk,
and gandhakīṭaka.
prakaṇḍa means the auspicious,
the trunk between root and branches,
and also a cluster of branches.
pracaṇḍa means intense torment,
a bad descent, a custom, and a hero's hand.
baraṇḍa means cut off,
a handle, gaṇḍaka,
and the face in between.
bārtaṇḍa means a fanged bird.
pāruṇḍi means the piṇḍa of a door.
bāruṇḍa means a means, and the dirt of the eye.
gaṇḍi means the king of sta,
a bathing vessel, and thaba.
bheruṇḍā means a female bird,
a kind of goddess, and the fearsome woman.
mārtaṇḍa means the fierce-rayed sun and the boar. maraṇḍa means a snake, a path, and a circle of cow dung.
vicaṇḍā means a mountain ledge,
a young sword, and entering an abode.
vitaṇḍa means a kind of wind, karavīrī, a name of stone, kacchi, and sākasājñe.
śikhaṇḍa means the peacock's crest.
sapiṇḍa means a share,
that which has lumps, and the breast.
saraṇḍa means saraṭa,
the deceitful, and a kind of ornament.

apogaṇḍa means one who has a child,
one whose body is not full grown, and the very fearsome.
cakrapāḍa means a kind of mountain.
cakrapāḍāṃ means round.
jagaraṇḍa means one who turns water, spray, and a snake.
devatārā means the sun of the gods,
heaven, the ridge-maker, and the melodious woman.
vātāḥ khuḍa means a gale.
batyā means an iron chain and that which has a tail,
and is also to be seen as a mere abode.
This is the section of words ending in ḍa.

ḍha means a signal, the one without qualities, and the sound of the inexhaustible.
ghūḍha means solitary, secret, and covered.
kāḍha means biting and desire.
dṛḍha means stout and strong;
so too dṛḍhaṃ, bāḍha, braba, and ḍha.
māḍhi means the destroying of leaves and the like,
wealth, the weak, and the clear.
mūḍha means the lazy and the deluded.
rāḍha means Brahmā, the good, and the beautiful.
baḍhi means the gentle and a vow.
dauḍha means the expanded and the born.
khyubhā means the vast, an array, and an assembly.
ṣaṇḍhā means covering, rain, and a bound man.
soḍha means patience and capability.
śozva also means patience.
azluzva means the lord.
azluṭvā means a queen
and kṛtapābanhya.
āṣāḍha means the staff
of an ascetic vow, a month, and begging for dirt.
abūḍha means a heap and the swollen.
ubaḍha means an array and an assembly.
pragīḍha means firm and joyful.

pramīḍhaṇi means thick urine.
prarūḍha means bound at the root, hard, and a tent.
bārūḍha means pride and fire,
clothing, moving, and a door panel.
vighūḍha means the low and the hidden.
virūḍha means producing charcoal.
samūdā means sarba
and bhugna, approaching, and made into a heap. saṃrūḍha means the prime of youth and a sprout.
adhyarūḍha means mounted and superior, in all three genders.
The section of words ending in ḍha is complete.

ṇa means determined and knowing.
ṇu means subtle and a kind of brahmin.
aṇi means the supremely learned,
a linchpin, a boundary, and a corner.
uṣṇa means cut off, torment, burned, and learned.
ūrṇa means the curl between the brows, and the wool of sheep and the like.
kaṇa means a particle, fragments, and a part of barley.
kaṇā means cumin, long pepper (bispali),
a sea monster, and the fly (makṣikā).
karṇa means the ear, the son of Pṛthā,
a fine color, and looking.
kāṇa means maukṛ, lāva,
and looking. kiṇa means a scar and a sign.
prano means a wound and a quality.
kīrṇaṃ means covered and fully pervaded, and denotes harm.
kuṇi means a dog and the tormented.
kṛṣṇa means Viṣṇu, the accomplisher of existence, a monkey, and Vyāsa. kṛṣṇi means
naleśaṃ and iron.
kṛṣu means Draupadī,

a cow, dhūrā, and long pepper.
koṇa means tears, a staff,
a kind of music, the karka-born,
the technique of playing the lute and the like,
one side, and houses.
gaṇa means an assembly, a gathering, a number,
and a division of an army.
guṇa means form and the rest, courage and the rest, knowledge and the rest, green and the rest, desire, what is secondary, boundaries and the like, a rope, the bowstring (maurvī),
and the belly of a wolf.
geṣṇu means a dancer and a singer.
ghṛṇā means compassion and contempt.
ghāṇaṃ means the nose and ghāta.
cūrṇaṃ means that which has become powder.
cūrṇa means kṣoda and a kind of transformer.
curṇā means a compound of perfumes.
jerṇa means a tree, a part, the moon, and a treasure.
jiṣṇa means the earth, Indra, a man, and the victor. jīrṇaṃ means ripe, old, and very aged.
riṇi means būga, a malevolent god,
what is heard, and hard.
tīkṣā means changing, the very sharp,
the nature of sharpness, and the like.
tīkṣṇaṃ means iron, poison,
ocean salt, fighting,
the tip of barley, and svokaka.
tūṇi means the blue woman; tūṇa means attachment.
triṣṇa means craving and desire.
tāṇaṃ means protection and churning, guarding and protecting.
rīrṇaṃ means destroyed and fear.
deṣṇu means the destroyer and the hard to tame.
druṇa means the scorpion and the bee.
druṇī means a female tortoise and also a female water frog.

druṇaṃ also means a sword.
droṇa means the crow, the lord of Kṛpī,
a valley, a crossroads, and a pasture.
droṇī means a tree, a flow,
a cattle trough, the earth,
wood, a house, a mountain, a boundary,
and also a kind of trade.
dharṇa means gold and sacrifice.
paṇa means merchandise, wages, a stake,
eighty, barāṭa,
the kārṣāpaṇa coin, and wealth;
it is also to be remembered for trade, a cart wheel,
and convention, and also for the clenched fist.
parṇa means green and the kiṃśuka.
parṇaṃ means a petal and a leaf.
What is called sārṣṇi means the rear part,
the rear of an army, the underground, and madness.
prārṇa means sufficient and full.
prāṇā means an abode, and prāṇa means the supreme wind, wind, and motion.
prāṇaṃ means poetry, livelihood,
pola, and full.
pha means making buraṃ.
pāṇi means an arrangement and speech.
pāṇi means a cloud and a price.
bhūṇa means a woman's womb and a child.
maṇi means a jewel, the tip of the sign,
a horn, the throat, the breast,
the water jar (aliñjara), pearls, and the like.
moṇa means paṭa, kutsaka,
a forest, the crocodile kumbhīra, makṣika, the heel of the foot, the snake-eater, and matog.
raṇa means a corner, sound, and battle.
raṇa means dust, the Dark One,
and barpaṭa. parpaṇi
means praise, form, animal, fame, quality, passion, the brahmin and the other castes, white and the other colors, beauty, variegated wool, a vow, melody,

a tree, attire, color, and the eye.
bāṇa means the son of the earth, a horse,
a horse's body, the solitary, luster, and one who has jhiṇḍa.

viṣṇu means Nārāyaṇa, the sun,
blin, a kind of Vasu god,
the lute, and lightning.
pṛṣṇa means a Yādava and a sheep, sāṣaṇḍi, and the fierce.
beṇi means a river, a drawing,
a particular way of binding the hair, and also the gods and the like.
beṇu means the bamboo and a kind of king.
śāṇa means a half-lifter, farm work, harm, a saw,
and a kind of protection against cold.
śāṇī means sediment, the small,
and the thoroughly muddied.
śoṇa means joy, the red river,
the goose, the variegated bird, the peacock, and the red horse. śrāṇā means the porridge of kāchoma, an answer, and that which has something to be said.
śrāṇaṃ means cooking. śreṇi means a row and a bath.
sthāṇu means a guild of craftsmen,
the Seizer, the firm, and the certain.
sthuṇā means an iron image and pillars. kṣaṇa means a festival, a division of time, an occasion, and a joint.
abhīkṣṇa means certainty and the sense of "very." aruṇa means the dawn and the sun, costus, indistinct red,

the red of twilight, the watery,
and a mixture of red and tawny.
aruṇā means the purging root, aconite, pale blue, and safflower.
araṇi means what is not churned and the stick used for churning.
indrāṇi means the lady of bliss and the like, a medicine,
and that which makes sinduvār.
byāraṇaṃ means empty of mātṛkās.
īkṣaṇaṃ means seeing and looking.
uṣaṇā means a fragment.
uṣaṇaṃ means a medicine and naleśaṃ.
eṣāṇi means a wound, a path,
following, and a kind of balance.
eṣaṇi means an iron arrow, searching, and that which has earlier traces.
kaṃkaṇaṃ means a bracelet,
a thread on the hand, and a skull.
kartrini means a kind of grass, and also a water leaf.
karaṇaṇi means the scribal caste,
the śūdra caste, and the later-born.
karaṇi means the supreme accomplisher,
the body, the abode of the body, action,
a deed, a sense faculty, a field,
a child's speech, the body of melody,
a necklace, the all-entering,
and is also held to mean a particular act.
karuṇa and karuṇā
mean compassion, lacking flavor, and a tree.
karuṇa means power,
looking, and a she-elephant.
kalyāṇa means virtue,
gold, the auspicious, and the inexhaustible.
kākaṇī means a quarter,
a balance, and a measuring staff.

kākaṇi means the guñja berry,
a mere paṭa, and a kind of leprosy.
kāraṇaṃ means striking and killing, tormenting, and the act of harming.
kāraṇā means effort.
karmaṇaṃ means an act of harm,
the knowledge of entering another's body,
and the application of mantra and tantra.
kurbāṇa means not making an ox.
kṛpaṇa means reviling and a worm.
kṛpāṇa means a sword.
kṛpāṇi means a mark and an agent.
koṅgaṇa means a particular land.
koṅkaṇaṃ means a particular weapon.
kokarṇa means a mule,
a snake, a kind of deer,
a kind of troop, the thumb,
the ring finger, a measure, and the medicine mūrvikā.
grahaṇa means a king's obtaining,
making one's own, and doing, eating, close gathering, prostration,
and also condition and respect.
grāmaṇī means nāsita,
the chief, the lord, the wealthy,
the leader of a troop, the village headman, and the ranks.
caraṇaṃ means abarku,
gait, price, the foot, and lineage.
cāraṇaṃ means saṃsāra,
the boundary, moving, eating,
cumin, gosnyö, vermilion,
and is held to mean sauvarcala.
tāraṇi means the sun that ferries across,
a young girl, and a boatman.
taruṇa means young,
new, the crooked flower,
and the great jackal.
dakṣiṇa means the pine,

the right as opposed to the left, deference to others, and compliance, and is held to mean what comes from apācī.
dakṣiṇā means the sacrificial fee, a gift, consecration, and apācī.
durbarṇa means sandy,
and is also said of what is held and of a bad color.
daurbāṇaṃ means the leaf of mṛṣṭi and also the juice of dūrvā grass.
drughaṇa means attained,
para, sūdha, and harming.
draviṇaṃ means overpowering others,
and also gold and prosperity.
dharaṇaṃ means holding and a kind of pride.
dharaṇī means the earth.
dharuṇi means water,
heaven, and abiding in the supreme.
dharmāṇa means a kind of snake
and also a kind of tree.
dharṣaṇī means a woman who gathers lineages.
dharṣaṇaṃ means a treasury and the pure.
dhāraṇī means the speech of the Buddha,
a kind of mantra, and drama.
dhiṣaṇa means the teacher of the gods.
dhiṣaṇā means intellect and sleep.
nirmāṇaṃ means emanation, essence, arrangement,
and what is called samañjapa.
niryāṇi means renunciation and liberation,
a treasury, a, pāṅka, and binding.
nirvāṇi means nirvāṇa and liberation, setting, an elephant, and a holy person.
niḥśreṇi means a ladder
and the drago tree.
batrorṇi means refined silk.
battrorṇa means the śāna tree.
bakṣiṇī means the all-goer,

the present, that which has day and night,
the end of a fortnight, the full moon,
and a kind of branching tree.
purāṇa means the kārṣāpaṇa coin.
purāṇaṃ means that with five characteristics, and is said of a thing long aged.
pūraṇa means completing and a kind of flour for filling.
pūraṇī means the śalmali tree,
cloth, composition, and a kind of thread.
phraghaṇa means a copper pot, alinda, and an iron hammer.
bramaṇa means a speaker of truth, reason, logical proof, a treatise, iron, one who protects the one, the measuring of a fence, and the expression "so much is the reason."
prabaṇa means thoroughly refined, calling, a gradual slope, the earth, an instant, and a crossroads. prabe means mixed and rotten.
prokṣaṇi means bathing and binding.
baraṇa means a fence.
baruṇa means a manner.
baruṇaṃ means a kind of tree,
a leaf, snow, the lord of waters,
the sun, and water.
bāraṇa is said to mean an elephant.
bāraṇaṃ means prohibition.
bāruṇī means the west,
maireya liquor, and durbātri.
prāhmaṇī means the woman who supports,
the wife of a twice-born, the twice-born woman,
and pṛkkā. prāhmaṇa,
and likewise what is called prāhmaṇi, mean the mantra lineage and the assembly of the twice-born.
bharaṇi means red and holy.
bharaṇāṃ means lineage and the high.

bhīṣaṇa means the one with terrible fangs.
bhīṣaṇaṃ means the essence of śallaṣi.
bhramaṇi means a thorn,
the Lord's play, and moving.
matkuṇa means the bedbug, a man cast out by all,
the tuskless elephant,
the tall, and beta.
masṛṇa means karkaśa,
oily, and smooth.
masriṇā means kṣumā.
mārgaṇi means begging,
an arrow, a sentient being, and ṣacya.
yantraṇaṃ means certainty, binding, and guarding, and the root of paṭola.
rapaṇaṃ means do; ramaṇa means joy and rough.
rapaṇaṃ means the sound of proclaiming.
roṣaṇa means one who angers, one who imputes faults to others, and the rubbing of gold.

rohiṇī means a star,
a kind of ear disease,
red, the soma bla,
and kaṭurohiṇī.
lavaṇaṃ means a kind of elephant.
lavaṇa means taste, essence, and guarding,
a kind of ocean, beautiful, and clear.
lakṣaṇaṃ means a name and a sign.
lakṣaṇaṃ means one who delights, and an ally.
lakṣmaṇaṃ means the moon and power.
laghrakhaṃ means what makes names and signs.
laghraṇa means the Lake-Born (Lakṣmī),
the Radiant, and the Glorious.
vipaṇaṃ means a shop and wares.
āpaṇa means merchandise.
viṣāṇi means the horn of cattle,

a fang, a trunk, and teeth.
viṣāṇi means the ram-horned plant.
śaraṇaṃ means protecting and binding.
saraṇaṃ means the lean-to of a house.
saṃghaṇaṃ means the mucus of the nose.
śiṃghāṇaṃ means the rust of iron,
and is also to be seen as a glass vessel.
śramaṇa means a kind of one earnest in restraint,
one of despised livelihood, Sudarśanā, ink, a woman who sells liquor, and a nun.
śravaṇa means a lunar mansion.
śramaṇaṃ means the ear and hearing.
śrāvaṇaṇi means māsī,
saṣḍa, and dadhyālī.
śrīvarṇī means the one with a vase, gambhari, the lotus, and the fire-churning stick.
saṃkārṇi means mixed and impure. paraṇi means a garland and a path.
sāraṇa means a minister who summons and proclaims,
and a disease from liquor.
sāraṇī means a small stream and flowing forth.
suvarṇṇi means a crest, gold,
the garuḍa bird, and a garland.
suvarṇā means the one with lotuses, and the mother of the garuḍa birds.
suvarṇa means the golden woman,
and a kind of black aloewood, sog po.
suvarṇaṃ means color, gold, and a zho weight.
suṣeṇa means a lion,
Sugrīva, knowledge, and the hand itself.
haraṇaṃ means the goods of a boat,
the necklace of the body, the hand, and the heart.
hariṇa means a deer.
hiraṇi means green,
a doe, and a kind of woman of common conduct.

harṣaṇa means the form of piercing pain, great joy, a kind of stomach disease,
and what arises from faith in the gods.
heruṇu means a class of women,
the menses of women, and śatī.
hiraṇa and tiraṇya
mean the navel, gold, and semen.
kṣepaṇī means the pole of a boat,
and also a particular kind of net.
aṅgāriṇī and hasantī
mean the sun and what is cast off.
ātarbaṇaṇaṃ means satisfaction, and also anointing all over.
āthabyaṇa means one who knows how to guard existence,
a brahmin, and a household priest.
ārohaṇaṃ means a ladder,
climbing up fully, and ascending.
utkṣepa means a fan,
a winnower of grain, and things, vomiting, uprooting, removing,
leading upward, and is held to mean taking out.
kāmeguṇa means attachment, enjoyments, and also sense objects.
kārṣapaṇā means essence,
and also one who digs.
hrīrṇaparṇa means the 'bra go tree
and the vicumarda tree.
cūḍamaṇi means the jewel of the head,
a crow's beak, and a fruit.
juhupāṇa means fire, fruit, and gu.
taṇḍurīṇa means an insect,
the land of Yama, and a barbarian.
tailaparṇi means mountain-born, siṃha, and the abode of glory.
dākṣāya means the Hard to Reach (Durgā),
the asterism Rohiṇī, and the tree Tārā.
What is called devamaṇi means Śiva, the jewel Kaustubha, and the curl coiled on the neck of a king.

nārleyaṇa means the Undecaying (Viṣṇu), and the Terrible White Goddess, Nārāyaṇī. nigaraṇa means food and swallowing.
nirūpaṇi means examination, appearance, and view.
nistiraṇaṃ means rescue,
skillful means, and going forth definitively.
niḥsaraṇi means a door and liberation, renunciation, skillful means, and death.
barīraṇa means a tortoise,
a staff, paṭa, and blaṭaka.
sarbarlaṇa means a stone slab, mada, the lord of the pass,
the juice of leaf powder,
white, and masses of fragrance.
parapaṇi means explanation,
the giving of the Dharma, and a calf.
parāyaṇaṃ means devotion,
longing, and a support.
pārāmaṇi means going to the far shore, perfect and complete attachment, la bar ba,
vīlu, varṇā, mūrbra,
form, and a kind of medicine.
puṣkari means the lake-born lotus,
the elephant, and a basin of water.
pratipaṇa means formation,
taking up, and desire.
pravāraṇaṃ means cessation,
granting what is desired, and obscuration.
pārabāṇaya means imitation,
and also every kind of armor.
mīnāmīṇa means a lame person and the slough of a snake.
rakṣaratu's lri,
the pollen of the palāśa flower:

rāgacūṇḍa means Smara (Kāma), blood, and bya ma so rgyug pa.
rerehāṇa means the Lord of Beasts (Śiva) and the sky.
lambakarṇara means
aṅkotha and a tree.
pidāraṇi means fighting,
purifying, and reviling.
What is called vaiterāṇī means the river of the pretas and the mother of the rākṣasas.
śirapāṇi means the groove of an arrow, and sāye is the livelihood of common folk.
silariṇi means a kind of conduct and a kind of takri,
a jewel and mallikā,
and it is also said of a garland of cow hair.
samīraṇa means the wind and the priva flower bam.
saṃparaṇaṃ means saṃsāra,
going again, a cattle village,
a highway, starting a fight, mingling, and confusion.
hastikarṇa means salāba, eraṇḍa, and a kind of troop.
What is called avagrahaṇaṃ means the start of the new year and not undertaking.
It is called avahāraṇe:
bringing down a bhūta, and the añcala offering.
What is called apatāraṇā means a part of an explanation and a mass of offerings.
What is called paribhāṣaṇaṃ means reviling, close focus, and speaking.
What is called brabirlaraṇa means the earth and turmoil.
moṇḍākabarṇa means the pa tree,
kaśyanka, arāli,
and kabātara.
What is called maṇḍūkapirṇi means madder, Brāhmī, and also the tongue.

What is called mattanārarṇa means a drunken elephant hard to tame, a mansion, a baraṇḍa of full measure,
an outer support, and the paruka tree.
ramaharlaṇaṃ means bu leng.
pātarāyati means mad,
stacking, and seeking,
the gait of a goose, the placing of the hand,
and doing nothing at all.
dehadalakṣaṇaṃ means
the threshold of age and the womb.
yaubayalambaṇaṃ means
the breast and the wish to be beautiful.
From the Viśvalocana, the section of words ending in ṇa.

tā means one who protects, a guardian.
ta means all the teeth and the tail of a pig.
aṃka means pure and pervading.
anta means destruction, captivating, and intrinsic nature. ana means the utmost limit and the full moon.
arti means torment, a bow, and a tip.
asta means the western mountain.
asta means thrown and gone.
āsta means taking a seat in an assembly hall.
ābhi means restraint and attaining.
ataṃ means learned and realized.
ītī means the six beginning with excessive rain, ḍisba, and srabāsa.
usti means speech and a single syllable, and wish. What is called ūti means one who protects, and sthuti.

ritanu means a fish, a stone, and water.
riti means truth, going,
blazing, and worship.
rati means going, despised,

competing, and auspiciousness.
ninī means born of time, appearance, spring and the other seasons, and stable.
kanta means going, the bold one,
pleasing, joy,
and a stone. kāntānaṃ means priyaṅku
and the wilderness.
kānti means beauty and longing.
kīrti means fame, arranging,
a mansion, and vastness.
kuntubrāsa means one who milks cows, intrinsic nature, and a small creature.
kunti means the queen of Pāṇḍu.
kṛtraṃ means the guggula tree,
śallakī, truth, a pair,
fruitless, attaining a category,
done, and fully beneficial.
kṛti means binding and doing.
kṛti means jila and an abode.
kṛti is declared to mean a tortoise, an ant,
and one who has done something.
ketu means a kind of planet, going upward, light, a sign,
a banner, and sound.
kratu means a sacrifice, a sage, and bhelu.
gati means perception and austerity.
gati means ten, a destiny, wisdom, the path, an acceptance,
the running of a wound from a vein,
a distinction among people, and the belly.
gartta means a pit, a kind of three,
kukundura, and a chasm in the earth.
gārutri means circling and hanging,
one who angers, and the male cuckoo.
giti means a kind of meter and song.
gītaṃ means song and sound.
gupta means guarded and hidden,

the caste of commoners, and one with the former moon.
gunti means the house of letters, a pit,
a cowherd, a guard, and Yama.
grasti means eaten and done.
lupta means color, a foot, and arising.
bhāta means struck and a thorn.
gharaṃtaṃ means clear, appearance, and water.
citi means a collection and accumulated.
citi means gathered, an assembly,
an occasion, and also a hearth-stone.
jacaṃ means a group of the born, and birth.
jati means the universal, one wearing a garland,
a kind of meter, caste, and birth.
jāti also means phala,
going, moving, and also a hearth-stone.
jñāti means one of good family.
tata means the wind.
tataṃ means music,
of the lute and the like.
prapta means spread out.
tāta means compassionate and the begetter.
kikta means taste and fragrance.
tiktā means kuṭurohiṇī.
tiktaṃ is held to mean parba.
tretā means an age and three persons.
dattaṃ means viśrāvita
and avita. danta
means a tooth and an elephant.
danti means a kind of medicine.
dānta means austerity, bearing afflictions,
and also become tamed.
diti means giving and a fragment.
dīpta means blazing, burnt,
and also comes to mean thoroughly clear.
tṛti means a sewn skin, and a fish.
gripta means unobscured and capable.
rluti means blazing and beauty.

drutaṃ means swift, moving apart, shrunken, and going swiftly.
dhāru means Brahmā, the protector,
the aim of an action, semen, phlegm and the other humors, blood and the other constituents, the elements and the rest, earth and the rest, orpiment and the other minerals, kolāhva,
a particular red ochre, and the eyes.
dhuti means clear and discarded.
dhita means shaken and contrived.
dhūdhaṃ means a lump of salt, wicked, and deceitful.
dhṛ means holding, contentment, steadfastness, and a kind of yoga.
nata means the tigara tree, crooked, and a reed.
nāti means manner and attainment.
nṛtu means an insect and a dancer.
bakti means serving and respect.
piṅkā means a row, the number ten,
and the meter of ten syllables.
pati means the all-pervading lord, a root, and going. batti
means a foot soldier, a hero, and a kind of army unit.
pati means falling and protecting.
bīti means yellow, yācānta, protecting, and turmeric.
pītā means a drink and a horse.
pītī means bowed down.
pistaṃ means consciousness and a written book.
būtaṃ means purifying, śaṭita, filled, covered, and winnowed.
pūrti means cold, and works such as moats.
pota means a child and a boat.
prāti means full and one side.
brāpti means arising greatly and attainment.

prābtaṃ means attained and born together.
prīti means a kind of yoga, Smara (Kāma), a son, joy, and delight.
prīti means joy and play.
prata means a corpse and a kind of bhūta.
piti means cloth, threaded into a garland.
pluta means three morae.
blutaṃ means a swift gait,
and going by swimming in water.
bhakti means division and devotion.
bhartā means a lord and a sustainer.
bhitti means a wall, division,
an opening, a portion, and one-sidedness.
bhitaṃ means fear and the fearful.
bhīti means sādhva and bakṛmba.
bhūta means a kind of birthplace of the gods,
one possessed of gods,
and also attained and conduct.
bhātaṃ means fitting, true, meeting closely, and the earth and the other elements,
and it is also to be said of a piśāca.
bhūti means the grace of an elephant, wealth, ashes, and birth.
bhiti means holding, attaining, and wages.
bhranti means error, a wrong idea, not abiding, and a hero. mata means worship and following.
miti means intellect, memory, and desire.
manta means a human and the supreme abode.
mātā means kha lang tshang ma and the like,
with a poet,
the White One, and the earth.
Furthermore, the lord of the abyss, māpāka, and the very fierce.
miti means complete and practiced throughout.
kuktu means freedom and liberation.
mukta means set free and discarded.

muktā means the pearl itself.
mūrtaṃ means possessed of hardness.
mūrccha means delusion, fainting, and hardness.
murti means body and hardness.
mṛrtā means death and intelligence.
mṛtaṃ means begged food and dead.
yati means the pause in reading, an ascetic, and ascertaining. yantā means a thread and staying.
yukti means joining and reasoning.
yuta means fully endowed,
and yutaṃ also means a measure of four spans.
raktaṃ means blood, attached,
red, and trade,
the western myrobalan,
saffron, and also copper.
ratī means gold, a forest, attachment,
and the consort of Manmatha (Kāma).
rati means great joy and the secret.
ratū means a river and a path.
raktaṃ means empty and a forest.
rīti means words and a path.
rīti means a horse, excellent conduct,
the rust of iron, and not lasting.
sātā means the honey-born, a creeper,
a branch, bṛkā, and priyaṅku.
latā means the Radiant One,
musk, and dūrvā grass.
luptaṃ means rich,
poison, liquor, and loot.
lūtā means the creature, the spider,
an ant, and a kind of river.
lotaṃ means plundered by thieves, steam,
a speaker, one skilled in speech, and a learned person.

basta means an abode, a pond,
the body, a lamp, the tenth,

a wick of medicine, an emanation,
the eye, eye ointment, and writing.
barti means the body and anointing.
bartaṃ means free of illness and without essence.
bārtā means the end of conduct, farming and the like,
a farm woman, and conduct.
mata means a way of conduct, rug,
and urbati. bittaṃ
is properly held to mean wealth, and it is also said of deciding,
of knowing, and of attaining,
and also of known, found, and arising.
bītaṃ means without essence,
an elephant, a horse, discarded, abiding in the body, and action.
biti means setting, going, blazing, worship, running, and eating.
bṛtta means a commentary,
a lake bird, the consort of Śakra (Indra), and the like.
bṛtta means round, past,
dead, steady, and conduct.
bṛttaṃ means poor, a meter, and entering.
bṛti means holding, a vow, and an enclosure.
bṛtaṃ means covered, trickling, binding,
the tip of the breast, and holding a vase.
byaktaṃ means clear and wise.
byastaṃ means pervaded and completely agitated.
byāstaṃ means explained and truly inferior.
byāsti means pervading and finding.
śakta means stout and relying.
śakti means might and the like, and power.
śastaṃ means happiness and auspiciousness.
śata means thin and sharp.
śātāṃ means happiness. śānta means worn away.
dānta and śintu mean liberated.
śānti means peace and virtue.
śāsta means the Teacher, the Buddha.

śiti means black, white, and birch bark.
śitaṃ means thin and sharp.
śita means cold water and a large retinue.
śītaṃ means caṇḍa, born of snow,
frozen, cold, and lazy.
śukti means a conch, a mouth,
an oyster shell, and a small conch.
mukti means a pearl, a long treasury,
a horse stable, a skull cup, and kakola.
An oyster; sour, rough, and rotten.
śrutaṃ means holding the treatises.
śruti means the ear, the Veda, talk, and the work of the ear.
śvetaṃ means form and white.
śveta means a continent and a kind of mountain.
śvetā means she whose navel is like a conch,
and a kind of tree;
good and existing,
auspicious, and worship.
stātī means the good woman and the fierce.
sattu means truth. sāsti means giving.
pitaṃ means white and complete,
and also known and bound.
sitā means sugar.
śītā means the Ganges of the sky,
the mother, and the beautiful path.
suta means born of a king, and a son.
supti means the destruction of steadiness of mind,
sleep, and knowing touch.
sūta means a charioteer,
one who pays homage, depositing semen,
the son of a kṣatriya by a brahmin woman, born, and driven.
sūti means going and a path.
setu means water and a bee.
sthita means abiding,
certain, bound by a vow,

motionless, and bound.
sthiti means the growing of slender trees,
the established law,
abiding everywhere, and boundaries.
smṛti means a treatise on the Dharma, memory, intellect, and desire.
syūtpi means cause and sībana.
syūtā means ūta and deeply respectful.
svāntaṃ means one's own inner self and a clouded mind.
hasta means a lunar mansion, an elephant,
the trunk of a she-elephant, doing, making a grid, and a mass of fine hair.
hitiṃ means going, holding, and benefit.
hehi means blazing, the sun, splendor, and a weapon.
kṣartti means a charioteer,
one who dwells in two, one who holds two,
a bhu-holder, one born of kṣa, a close attendant,
and the son of a śūdra and a kṣatriya woman.
kṣiti means the earth, a mere dwelling,
an abode, and also exhaustion.
agasti means a hare
and the destroyer of the hosts of Vaṅga. āhuti means fire, Brahmā, and the fire offering.
acyuta means steadfast, the belly of a rope,
and Viṣṇu. ajita means the Victor.
aditi means the mother of the gods.
anrita means falsehood and farming.
ananta means Viṣṇu and the nāga Śeṣa.
anante means the sky,
the infinite, and the boundless.
anāntā means the earth,
dūrvā grass, the Beautiful One, the daughter of the mountain, sāribā, gluḍūci,
the shore of the ocean, and the vast.
amṛtaṃ means nectar, water, liberation, and what truly delights the heart,

what is unbegged, the remains of a sacrifice, abundant, and very beautiful.
amṛta means good words,
and it is held to mean dhvananti.
amṛtā is held to mean gaḍūcī, myrobalan, beneficial,
and āgatī.
amati means the moon,
time, an arhat, a victor, and one worthy of worship.
ardita means a wind disease, fallen, and destroyed.
arbatī means a female subject,
a dwarf woman, a horse, worship, and the wicked.
ābyakta means the Seizer,
a vajra, deluded, and unclear speech.
mahāta means the first lord.
asvanta means death and bad,
the sgyeng bu tree, and without interval.
akṣataṃ means unhusked grain,
the third nature, and free of wounds.
ākṛti means the body and form,
and likewise also the universal.
akhyātaṃ means fully explained,
and it is said of a word ending in tiṅ.
āghvataṃ means smelled and cooked.
acitaṃ means gathered, covered, and held.
ācita means a chariot,
lord over all, and one without siblings.
ādṛta means honored, respectful, and attained.
ādhāna means a wind disease, fixed, a resounding sound, and virtue.
ānarta means a place of dance,
a kind of region, and born of sound.
ābatti means attainment and a fault.
ābati is held to mean falling,
and also high. āpluta means just bathed and one who bathes.

ābatti means moist,
the law, white, and the abode of strength.
ayati means true restraint,
long, might, and a later time.
ayastanaṃ means sharp and a subject, angry, afflicted, and also struck.
abārta means mind and entering,
and also a whirlpool of water.
āsphota means the leaf of the arka,
and the bursting forth of the pārijāta tree.
āspotā means a forest flower, and also girikarṇī.
ābatti means going everywhere and attaining.
āhataṃ means the sense of enduring,
new cloth and a new garment, nānaka, struck, and multiplied.
idgataṃ means wound and a gait.
ucitaṃ means knowing equally.
abhyasta means knowing equally.
abhyāsta means accompanying,
a seed, and thoroughly skilled.
ucchirtaṃ means a grown enclosure, fully born, and raised up.
uttaptaṃ means dried meat, completely tormented, and fully victorious.
utthitaṃ means arising,
rising up, and growing.
uditaṃ means risen and attained, wholly exalted, and declared.
utgāta means a hammer.
atyādhā means approaching,
going astray, a butterfly, and those with vases. udantaṃ means news and a holy person.
udanta means suppressing,
and an elephant not in rut.
udata means a kind of accent,

and an ornament of poetry.

udanta means a giver,
and what flows to the heart of one who desires greatness.
udhitaṃ means lita,
eaten, drawn out, and lifted up,
and nectar. unna means
rising, old, and noble,
and the wife of the son of the Pleiades.
unmatta means one who is mad,
the dan pa, and mucukunda.
uṣitaṃ means dwelt and burned,
a horse, placed, and burning.
edhatu means a person,
wrongdoing, giving, and illness.
kapota means a pigeon.
kavakākhya means a bird.
kalitaṃ means understood and known.
kāpotaṃ means a flock of pigeons, explanation, eye ointment, and stvajā.
kairata means one of small body,
a barbarian, the nimba of the earth,
one who beats, and a script of the gods.
kirati means a bad place,
a hired man, and a worker.
kṛtānta means a friend,
a philosophical tenet, what is carved in the heavens, and virtuous action.
kanditaṃ means weeping and calling out.
gabha means light, the sun,
fire, and one who moves.
garjiti means the sound of clouds.
garjita means an elephant in rut,
the garuḍa bird, gold, and a branch.
godhanti means wool,
gaśita, and putting on armor.
gopati means a king,
a eunuch, the sun, the sky, and a peak.

gātitaṃ means increased,
pressed down, and harmed.
caullāta means unmoving,
the cila of the Ganges, and long-lived.
jaganti means the wind, the earth, and moving.
jagatā means by moving,
a kind of meter, and water.
jayanta means the son of Śakra (Indra), and Śambhu. jayantī
means a kind of tree, a banner, Gaurī, and the daughter of Indra.
jamātā means the husband of a daughter,
the halo of the sun, and dayita.
jaimūta means Śakra (Indra), a cloud,
the water of the gods, melodious, holding, and living.
jivanti means food and a lake,
and a life-giving medicine.
jivanti means she who sustains life,
a tree, zhi ma, homage,
and nectar. jimbhitaṃ
means a doer, the conduct of women, and clear.
jvalitaṃ means blazing and burned.
tānita means clear and cloth,
a musical instrument, and a quality.
tṛṇata means a bow and grass.
dodkra means a particular number and a kind of trade. traṃgartā means a small bell and one with a hollow.
tvarataṃ means very quick and swift.
A bad destiny,
hell, cast away, and also poor. durjataṃ means ill-born and destitute.
tṛṣṭanta means a treatise, and an illustrative example. daṃśitaṃ means armored,
and bitten by teeth.

trabanti means a kind of stream, and a medicine. Then drijāti means the twice-born, a bird, a wise one,
the lord of speech, steadfast, and intelligent.
nitṛtaṃ means fully attained, inferior, and devoid of intrinsic nature.
nikṛti means conduct and discarding, wicked deceit, and the deceitful.
nimitta means a characteristic, a cause,
a reason, and a word.
aganta means the realm of the gods.
niyataṃ means a region and accomplishing.
nirsta means commissioned and possessed, cast off entirely, swift, born, clear, and destroyed one by one.
nidṅhati means not approaching,
a guardian of a direction, Karṇa, and the Dark One.
nirviti means dwelling well, happiness, nirvāṇa, and the time of setting.
nirmukti means having abandoned those who are not friends, what follows a slough, and ballaga.
nibāta means free of wind,
a dwelling, and firm armor.
niśanta means peaceful.
niśantaṃ means existing and a dwelling.
pañcatā means just dead,
the state of five, and fivefoldness itself.
paṇḍita means white and steady, going, one who moves, and a bird.
baddhati means a path and a row.
bereta means a corpse and a kind of bhūta.
barbata means good rain and a mountain.
paryāpta means an elephant, satisfied, whatever is wished, capable, and attaining;
destruction, a staff, hardship, and a fault.
baryabye means intense desire, attaining, and guarding completely.

baryasta means fallen, a subject, and struck.
palita means white hair,
mud, heat, and born of a mountain.
bakāti means the first day of the month,
the root of the fortnight, and the opening day.
bārpatī means Drobadī,
rdzong ma, 'tsho ma, and śallakī.
paṇḍita means transformed and gathered,
an army on the march, and a bird.
piśitā means bala.
pīḍītaṃ means the action of a woman,
a machine, and playing music.
puṭītaṃ means an elephant, joined and the like, plutā, and pāṭito.
priṣata means a mixture,
a mere drop, a deer, a horse,
red, and white-spotted.
prakṛti means sattva, rajas, tamas, measure,
nature, intellect, a town,
a sign, a birthplace, and self.
pṛtita means highly praised,
well made, and abiding in its own nature.
pracita means a chariot,
much exchanged, and without siblings.
praṇīta means familiar and fire, bringing down, conditioned, perfected, and definitely increased.
pratīta means respectful, explained,
glad, seen, learned,
and also a sheep and known.
pratati means arisen from a vow, and tati. Then prapāta means the sound of water, a precipice, and avaṭa.
prabyeta means the ri ba and pābye. Then prambita means departed and dead.

prabṛtti means a commentary,
the end of conduct, carrying forth, and engaging.
prasūti means offspring,
birth, and a daughter among the leaves.
prasūti means a flower,
a creeper, and birth.
prasūtā means creatures,
the last, and giving birth.
prasṛha means the joining of the palms upward, going forth, entering, and gentle.
prahati means kṣuṇṇa and high.
prarthitvaṃ means begging,
holding back enemies, and destroyed.
prokṣiti means destroyed.
bardhiti means filled,
covered, increased, and old rice.
pṛhīhtī means mahātī,
kaṇḍakārī, the one with a vase,
śu, a short story,
a kind of meter, and a neck ornament.
bharata means born of festivity,
dance, and the treatise on dance.
syūni means a hunter,
and it is explained at length as a weaver.
bāpatī means pure and an arrow,
a bird, a particular, and a kind of conduct.
In the text of the sage Vyāsa, Jambudvīpa is called dhārtatu.
bhāvitaṃ means abiding and attained, considered and produced.
bhāsanta means appearance,
a bird, beauty,
light, clear, the sun,
a mountain, and pṛbaga.
mathitaṃ means churned and stirred,
waterless, and basrita.
What is called maruti

means a god, the wind, and a great kingdom.
manatī means the lute
of Nārada, and the earth.

mālatī means jāti,
a young woman, yotsnā, nikṣu,
and a kind of river.
muṣitaṃ means the tip of a flame.
kākamācī means a piece and the heart.
mūrcchitaṃ means become deluded, raised up, and relying.
rajataṃ means silver, a necklace,
reverend, and expanded.
ramati means leading to the higher realms.
rasiti means a cloud and sound, and inlaid with gold and the like.
revatī means a mātṛkā,
a particular star, and the fruitful one.
raivata means a particular mountain,
a garland of gold, and one bearing a spear.
rohitaṃ means the pine tree, steady in a region, and blood.
rohitānī means the first,
and a kind of fish and of deer.
rohiṇi and rohita
mean the sun and a kind of khri tree.
laliti means beautiful, faith, and desire,
and a particular necklace.
lohitaṃ means red sandalwood,
the finest earth, saffron,
blood, and the color red.
lohita means the leaf of the earth,
and also a particular river.
panitā means a mother,
deeply attached, and a woman.
banitaṃ means begged and served.
basati means night, a house,

dwelling everywhere, worship, and rest.
bahatu means a bull and a path.
basti means an ox and picība.
bibataṃ means the twice-born,
done, and a part of the head.
basanta means the cuckoo,
a pulse, maṅga, a calf, attaining, and a twig.
bāsantī means one with meadows, a herd,
and also the tree sky nar.
basitā means an elephant and a woman. bāsitaṃ
means the cry of birds,
known, wrapped in cloth,
and perfumed.
vikṛti means frightful,
sick, unconditioned,
reviling, and illness.
pikriti means separated, not coming, and going.
bicitti means bodily desire, intoxication, and flirtation.
bijātā means well fashioned, transformed, and produced.
bitataṃ is said to mean pervasive and vast.
birluta means the light of lightning, twilight, and the lightless.
biditaṃ means known and meaning.
bidhātā means Brahmā and Smara (Kāma).
pinata means bowing deeply,
declined, and slack.
binatā means the mother of the garuḍa,
and also a particular father.
benītaṃ means disciplined,
a well-trained horse, the senses subdued, brought near, led,
held firmly, and born pure.

binetā means a king, one who has a realm, come, and begging. dipatti means illness and trouble. biprṛtā;
biprṛtāṃ means clear.
bibatti means conduct,
entering fully, and dance.
bibiktaṃ means devoid of people, rotten, free of bustle, and solitary.
biśrutaṃ means known,
learned, and wholly glad.
biśbastā means accomplishing.
biśvasta means held gently,
and also thoroughly purified.
bihasta means pale,
terrified, and handless.
bṛttanta is held to mean existence, history, a particular,
a chapter, an occasion,
and some hold that it also means one end.
bellitaṃ means moving,
rolling a wheel, and a gait.
beṣṭaṃtaṃ means the conduct of a woman, charm and dalliance.
byāghāta means an obstacle,
a kind of yoga, and seizing.
byāyati means great and long,
a doer, and lying down.
śakunta means a bird,
a kind of bird, light, and the happy side.
śudhānta is said to mean a border town,
a grid, and the secret quarters.
śrībatin means the white-lotus-eyed,
the lord of Śrī and the lord of the earth,
the glorious, an oily tree,
the Lord, and the captivating.
saṃghāta means an assembly, crushing, and a wilderness of men.

saṃghata means a companion and a friend.
pannati means bowing and sound.
bannati means a lineage and a son,
a family, the vast, a row,
and also handing down from one to another.
samasti means respect and joy.
saṃmiti means permission and longing.
samiti means suppressing,
equal, a wish, company,
right knowledge, honest,
a vow, conduct, and knowing.
sambitti means without dispute, and people who understand each thing.
sambarta means the end of an eon,
a year, and the tree of strife.
sikatā means gravelly,
a region, a particular illness,
sand, and molasses.
sukṛtaṃ means virtue,
merit, and good deeds.
sunīti means a good manner,
good policy, gentle, and a matron.
supratā means happiness,
a herd of cattle, and a good vow.
surastaṃ means a forest,
godhood, and great joy.
suhita means satisfied,
spoken, and well beneficial.
sunritaṃ means auspicious,
true, and speaking evenly.
saṃskṛta means characteristic, endowed, diligent, conditioned,
and also an ornament and auspicious.
saṃhastaṃ means company and steady,
skhali, eaten,
error, and moving.
stimitaṃ means motionless,

become like a mountain.
sthasati means a kind of craftsman,
one in armor, a thread,
one who desires a livelihood, and a sacrifice.
sthāpiti means arranged and certain.
srabanti means a river,
a reed given, and a kind of medicine.
haritā means round,
green, colorful,
a horse, color, and a direction,
and also a kind of grass.
harmitaṃ means increased and burned.
hapanti means charcoal,
barley, a flower,
and a kind of branching plant.
hārīta means one who scatters ornaments,
a bird, and a kind of sage.
hriṣitaṃ means smiling,
obstructed, joy, the hair standing on end, and bowing.
kṣārita means dripping, changed, and abiśapta.
aṃgaritaṃ means scorched,
and the leaves of the palāśa.
atimukta means spring and a tree, tinipa, and partless.
atyāhitaṃ means great danger,
and a deed done with no regard for one's life.
atikṣibha means changed into another,
and a wish. anahati
means new cloth and a new garment.
anumati means the moon on the day of the full moon,
full, and permission.
antargata means the middle and inside, attained, and forgotten.
apaciti means worship,
gentle, exhausted, and declined.
apābṛta means covered

and independent. abhijāta means laughing, fitting, kulīna, and also an attained form.
abhiyugta means aversion, restraint, striving earnestly, and devotion.
abhinīta means fitting,
conditioned, and patience.

abhiśasti means reproach by the world, begging, and thorough training.
arthapati means a lord of the earth,
the lord of the kiṃnaras, and melody.
avagītaṃ means widely spoken of,
looked at again and again, and reviled.
avadhasta means thoroughly washed, despised, and ground completely to powder.
evadātaṃ means white and yellow, pure and supreme,
and also known and prevented.
avasitaṃ means going and end, life, endowed, a kind of yoga,
and living long.
ujjrimbhita means expanded activity.
uṅasthita means victorious in conduct, an aspiration, and a doorkeeper.
adgrahita means set near,
bound, and seized.
upākṛta means an animal to be slain
at a sacrifice, and helpful.
upacita means set in equipoise, accumulated, and perfect abundance.
upāhita means fire, produced, and fastened all around.
uparakṣa means pervaded by darkness,
a kind of deprivation of the moon and the sun,
and it should also be seen as Rāhu.
upabatti means relying,

making understood one by one,
and association. ullilitaṃ means scattered everywhere and made thin;
as the sages say, displaying pride,
and a kind of swaying of crests and lattices.
airāvata means the white elephant,
a lofty hooded serpent, and the orange tree (nāraṅga).
airāvataṃ means long,
the pine tree, and Indra's bow.
airāvatī means radiant lightning,
a kind of cloud, the sun,
the leaf of the sāla tree, and radiant.
kaladhauta means sounding a clamor,
and also gold and silver.
kumurbatī means having night lilies, night-lily butter, and full of night lilies.
kuharitaṃ means sound,
and is also held to mean a leaf of kuśa grass.
Precious gold, one with a host,
black powder, pale and oblong,
and also the leaf of the māṣa bean.
gandhavatī means liquor and earth,
a town, and a scent mixed with water.
garutmanta means a bird, the garuḍa bird.
gṛhapati means a householder, ratyādhāna, and patriṇa.
cakrāhutī means long-armed,
a circle, and a full burnt offering.
candrakanta means a kind of jewel,
the moon, moonstone, and the white water lily (kairava).
carmanātī means a kind of river and the plantain tree.
What is called cātudratā means a particular water and mountain,
the river called kāratī,
and is said of the moon dwelling near.
citragupta means the staff bearer (Yama) and his scribe.

devākīrti means a fierce one,
a barber (nāpita), and the cry of a crow.
divābita means the owl,
the source of night lilies, and a sea monster.
dvībapanta means a lake and water.
dvīpabatī means a mountain and the earth.
dhāmagetu means the great sun, birth, and a kind of planet.
nāgadanta means an elephant's tusk and the wooden peg that juts out in a house.
nāgadantī means a vase,
and should also be seen as the plant called Śrī's hand.
nadīkanta means the treasury of waters,
the encircling ocean, and flowing water.
nidākantā means the jambu tree,
the crow-shank plant,
and well renowned.
nandyābarta means a kind of house and the tabara tree.
nirāgṛtī means without recitation,
renouncing one by one, and interweaving.
nistuṣitaṃ means made fine, abandoned, and an empty skin.
niḥkasita means certainly gone forth, made bad, and helpful from above.
As a supplement: pañcagupta means a tortoise and the view of the Cārvākas.
parigataṃ means known and encircled, reaching a precipice, and found.
parighāta means utter destruction and battle.
paribarta means grain and exchange, the king of tortoises, and fleeing.
pallabetaṃ means spread out, entering into it, and red lac.
pārābata means a dove,
mountain born, a monkey, and the tinduka tree.

sārābati means a protector of the earth, melody, beautiful, and fruit.
pārijāta means wholly excellent,
the mandāra, and the tree of the gods.
pāśupata means a son of the god,
the Lord of Beasts (Śiva), and having paka flowers.
puraskṛtaṃ means placed in front, honored with offerings, and delight;
weapons that have been washed, seized by enemies,
and also made one's own.
puṣpadanta means a particular vidyādhara,
an elephant, and the elephant of a direction.
prajāpati means a lord of the earth, Brahmā, and the lord of creatures.
praṇihitaṃ means explained and arranged, attained, and meditative equipoise.
pratihata means an enemy,
confused one by one, and blocked.
pratibatti means the path and mind, making clothing, making a dwelling, entering, attaining,
the field of activity, full realization, right awareness, and a portion.
pratikṛti means a remedy,
an image, and worship.
pratikṣipā means obstructed one by one,
dispatched, and removed.
pradhūpita means afflicted,
and the direction toward which the sun travels.
prabrajita means the end of austerity, the spikenard medicine, and round-headed.
bhagavānta means Gaurī,
a woman, the Victor, one worthy of offerings, drama, and dance.
bhogabanta means one possessed of wealth.
bhogavatī means the city of the nāgas, and is also held to mean a nāga and a river.
raṅgamatā means lac,

and should also be seen as the stacked one.
lakṣmīpate means a lord of men, Viṣṇu, the clove, and the areca nut.
banasāti means any tree at all,
and a tree that bears fruit without flowers.
vijrimbhitaṃ means opening wide,
and exalted conduct.
vinipāta means the misfortune of gods and others,
and falling down below.
vivasvāta means bābasu, cena, and the Lord.
bavakṣiti means wishing to speak, and excellent.
vijayanta means a banner, Śakra's palace, and the Reed-born (Skanda).
vaijāyantī means a flag,
victory-making, and the fire-churning stick.
byatibata means a kind of yoga,
a great occurrence, and repayment.
śatidhṛti means destroyer of the ripened,
and is also held to mean the one seated on a lotus.
śubadāntī means an elephant, the wind,
a she-elephant, and a woman with fine teeth.
saṃkhyābanta means learned and numerous.
sadāgati means the scent-bearer (the wind),
the eternal Lord, and nirvāṇa.
samudrānta means limitless,
cotton, Śakra, and spṛkā.
samurdhatā means distracted all around,
untamed, and wild.
samāghāta means killing and conflict, abiding in concentration, meditative equipoise, arranged, a vow, well accomplished,
and self-possessed.
samāhitaṃ means holding fully,
arranged, and meditative equipoise.
sarasvanta means having lakes,
the ocean, and a river.

svarasvatī means a kind of river,
the river goddess, the earth, speech,
and the mountains of the gods.
sudhāsūti means beautiful, Kubera, and another.
sūryabhakta means the sun god and the bandhujīva flower.

senābati means a leader of troops,
a general of the army, and the Drier (Skanda).
hemabatī means fire and the sun, slala, and the enemy of snow, yellow, and the arura myrobalan, golden milk, and white sweet flag.
abyābitaṃ means born,
going, and miraculous activity.
What is called aparānijitaṃ means Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva), the son of the stubborn woman, and kinds of sacrifice.
What is called aparāṃjita means the victory-maker and the daughter of the mountain, the viṣṇukrāntā plants,
the White One, and defeated.
What is called avalokitaṃ means looking, explained, the protector of the world, and Avalokiteśvara.
What is called upadhubati means near to death and tormented.
What is called gaṇādhipati means the Lord and a vināyaka.
What is called pipatiṣanta means wishing to fall, and a sky-goer.
What is called pṛthībīpati means a lord of the earth, and the ṛṣabha medicine.
What is called mūrdhābhiṣikta means a protector of the earth, a kṣatriya, and a counselor (mantrin).
What is called yātapāṃpati means the lord of waters and the sun.

What is called basanaddūta means the mākanda, the pika cuckoo, and the passion of the fifth note.
The word basanaddūtāṃ means having pale, possessing pearls, sowing the other half, having neck markings,
the tittiri partridge, fresh butter of the lake, nectar, and the treasury of nectar.
From the Viśvalocana, this is the section of words ending in ta.

tha means piled up stones.
thu means protecting from fear, and auspicious.
artha means purpose and wealth, cause, the things of many children,
the object expressed by a word, application, and kinds.
āsthā means focus, without dependence, and should be seen as effort and abiding.
kānthā means earth and a wall, and a particular kind of head.
kutha means color, a blanket,
and a peacock. kotha means a kind of eye disease,
cloth, and accomplishing.
kvātha means poverty, a substance thoroughly boiled, and suffering. gāthā
means a verse and a kind of speech.
grantha means a compilation,
and a fixed count of thirty-two syllables.
granthi means a joint and a knot,
and a kind of disease.
tīrthaṃ means a kind of crooked binding,
a treatise and an entry,
a field of merit and a great vessel,
a means, a preceptor, a view, resorted to by sages, water, and sacrifice,
the knee, and tā, a seasonal offering.

tuttha means spikenard and cardamom.
tutthaṃ means eye medicine; tutthā means fire.
duḥstha means a lower realm and delusion.
sarthaka means kakubha, and accomplishing existence.
pītha means the sun; bāthaṃ means water.
pṛthu means a lord of men, black cumin,
a pond, and is said of the great.
prastha means a mountainside, a measure,
and a thing made small.
prothartha means churned curd and buttermilk,
the path, the waist, and the essence.
pīthī means the heart of a house,
a row, a form of drama, and a path.
mantha means a churner, a churning staff,
the lord of the twelve (the sun), and roasted barley flour, and also an eye disease. prithaṃ means a herd of animals and an assembly.
prathī means of churned curd,
a kind of flower hard to equal,
and kuruṇṭaka. ratha
means a chariot, the body, and betasa, as a word. sārthā means merchants, and should also be seen as gathered and any group.
sikthaṃ means indigo and beeswax, and also what comes from food.
saṃsthā means destruction and abiding,
clear, and seeing it.
sthiti means abiding, how many there are in number,
permission, conduct,
and nijarāṣṭra.
atithi means reviling,
anger, and the son of Kuśa.
abyatha means weakened by disease, helpful, free of disease, and yunuka.
aśottha means full,
garda, the bhāṇḍa tree, and bispali.
udatha means great power,

great desire, and the one with the copper crest.
unmatha means layered petals, causing to go, and destroying.
upastha means the lap,
the womb, and the anus.
kayastha means a particular caste of men,
a tree, and the supreme self.
gāyasthā means one of mature age, helpful,
the domestic fowl, and the shape of the body.
gograsthi means a cow's tongue, a cowshed, cow dung, and a medicine.
damatha means tamed,
a staff, naked, a direction,
without wealth, and one whose hair lies flat.
niśītha means midnight and simply night. pramatha means the host of Śaṃkara (Śiva), helpful, and likewise also destroying.
bayasthā means the śalmalī tree, helpful, kākolī, and emblic myrobalan.
payastha means a youth, Brāhmī, truṭi, and kuḍūcī.
manmatha means desirous thought,
the god of desire, and the kapittha tree.
bamathu means vomiting,
an elephant, and controlling.
barūtha means the cover of a chariot;
barūthaṃ means a house of hides.
bidatha means a yogin
and kaḍina. śamatha
means peace and a minister.
ṣaṭganthā means sweet flag and śaṭī.
ṣaṭgrantha means a kind of nail perfume.
samartha means able,
binding what escaped, meaning, and helpful.
What is called siddhārtha means Sarvārthasiddha and white mustard seed.

kṣapathu means opened,
sneezing, and perfect.
anikaṣṭha means a bad fight,
a sign, paṭa, destroying,
the king's guard, a highway,
an assembly, and the learned.
itiruthā means village talk and the dharma of prabhaṣṭa.
What is called pātikathā means the words of a lord of the earth, and faithless.
udarathi means the sun and a lake.
cetuṣpatha means the road at a crossroads, going rightly, and the twice-born.
citriratha means a vidyādhara and a particular gandharva.
daśamīstha means the sun,
an elder, and one whose desire is exhausted.
banaprastha means the abode of honey,
the third stage of life, and the kiṃśuka tree.
What is called apratiratha means a hero, a spectacle, poetry, and auspicious.
This is the section of words ending in the letter tha.

da means pure, and calling.
dā means a nurse, cutting, and giving.
andu means a kind of ornament,
and a thing that binds.
inda means a year and a cloud,
a book, and a kind of mountain.
kanda means the root of a tree,
a cloud, a breast, and sūraṇa.
kundaṃ means māghya, a turning wheel, nibi, and an enemy of the gods.
gada means the brother of Viṣṇu, and inside.
gāda means a kind of weapon.
idā means a petal and a wing,

a knotted leaf, and the tamāla tree.
inda means entering into an intention.
pīdā means a girl and desirable.
nadī means a river; nada means a lake,
red and so forth, and sound.
nandi means a worshipper of Śiva, joy, and playing at dice.
nandā means the excellence of jewels.
nandi means a vessel and honoring.
badaṃ means a word and a place.

byada means conduct and reviling.
bāda, the word denoted by it, means protecting, a sign, a thing, the foot that walks, a root,
a quarter, a ray of light,
the edge of a mountain, and a mountain.
bidā means knowing and desire,
a wealthy one, destroying, and white.
debi means the three ways of going,
a signet ring and seal, intelligence,
well made, and the floor of the ground.
bantaṃ means a village chief and virtuous.
bheta means twofold and distinction.
bidā means grinding and speaking near.
madī means farm work and a thing.
madā means intoxicating, an elephant's ichor, giving, a hammer, and the supreme.
manda means bad self-will,
delighting in slowness, dull, joining others,
the planet Saturn, unfortunate,
and a particular breed of elephant.
mṛdu means blunt and soft.
rada means a tooth and a sprout.
śada means mire, and śaṣyaṃ.
sūda means a quality that brings out flavor.
svādu means tasty and pleasing.

sbeda means dust and a merchant.
hṛdi means the heart. kṣoda means powder and fine.
aṃgada means a pale one and a son.
aṃgadaṃ means an armlet.
aṃgadā means the she-elephant of the elephant of the south.
arbuda means a particular number,
a fleshy growth, and a mountain.
ardhandu means the half moon,
and a mark made by a fingernail.
ākrānda means crying out with an unbearable sound, weeping, a friend, and a kinsman.
amoda means holding fragrance, and joy.
āspadaṃ means a deed and a place.
kakuda means the body of a bull,
its hump, and an insignia of a king.
kapatda means a hero,
and Śambhu's mass of matted locks, a horn, and a chief. karkanda means with letters, a branch, a net of water, going into a cave,
and lifting upward.
karṇandu means an ear-loop.
kāmadā means a young female,
and the one who yields what is desired.
kumuda means an elephant of a direction,
a nāga, a particular asura, and heaven. kumudaṃ
should be seen as the kairava lily.
kumudaṃ means the white lotus.
kumudā means the one with a vase,
and the gambhārī tree.
kumudaṃ means the joy of the earth,
an arrow, and a sword.
kūsida means one who is lazy.
kusīdaṃ means living by interest.

kaumuda means the month of the Pleiades.
kaumudī means possessing the moon.
krabyāda means an eater of corpses,
a piśāca, and a rākṣasa.
govinda means Upendra,
a cow's eye, and the lord of melody.
goṣbadaṃ means a cow's hoofprint, a precipice, the track of cows, and a pasture. goṣpada
means firm, and the earth.
A cloud, mustā, and jala,
a balance, a physician, jīpa,
the goose that swims, ura,
a cloud, masta, and toya;
and toya is held to mean butter.
darada means fear, a precipice,
the neck, knowing, and sons.
dārada means mercury,
the ocean, vermilion, and a kind of poison.
triśa, finely ground,
warm, a hanging silk banner, and a village chief.
A giver, Śrīda, and dhana.
narmada means playful.
narmadā means she who yields play,
and likewise also Revatī.
naladi means giving sea monsters, having spikenard, and puśeltse.
norpīda means disputing,
and speaking conclusively.
niṣāda means a kind of note,
and also one who cooks dog meat.
praṇāda means a kind of disease and an exceedingly loud sound.
pamada means a lustful woman, intoxicated.
bramada means haughtiness and joy.
prapada means excellent,
a particular ornament of poetry,

great faith, and kindness,
the asura Prahlāda, and prahā.
prāsāda means gods and humans,
and the procession of the gods.
marada means a girl, peaceful.
barada means excellent.
bhasada means time and conduct,
flesh, and brightness.
maryādā means a place and a boundary,
law, and conduct.
makanda means holding the essence of flavor,
mākandhī, and the emblic fruit.
menāda means the wild cat,
and the one who sports in answer to thunder.
batandi means parkara,
a wooden railing, and a platform.
biśada means a person's complexion,
clear, and sarata,
a reed, and a year.
śāradī means the water bispalī and the seven-leaved tree. śara means śāli rice and yellow mudga.
barpa means a year, accomplishing, and dispatching.
sampad means praise of good qualities, wealth, a necklace, and fine distinction.
sambid means a promise and a convention, wisdom, conduct, a name,
water, kinds of action,
battle, and true explanation.
saṃbheda means divided,
and the joining with the ocean.
sunandā means craving, and a woman.
kṣaṇada means having a host,
and giving a feast. kṣaṇadam means water. kṣaṇadā means night.
apapāda means reviling,
a command, and trust.

abhisyanda means increase,
dripping, and also the eye.
abhimadha means sound and a churning stick.
aṣṭāpadā means the fruit of śāri,
the śarabha, a monkey,
and also a garland of moons.
ekapadam means time and a path,
and one foot. Then,
kaṭukanda means a scorpion,
and the juice of śigru.
kurubinda means mustā,
pulmāṣa, and a kind of grain.
kurubandi means a hammer,
the padmarāga ruby, and vermilion.
kokanada means the red lotus and the red kairava lily.
cakracunda means a mass of light, and a kind of horned fish.
catuṣpadā means horses, oxen and so on,
and a particular act of women.
janapada means a country and a region.
tamonuta means the dispeller of darkness,
the moon, the sun, and fire.
parībāda means reviling,
and the thing with which the lute is struck.
pīṭhamadda means adhiṣṭi,
dance, a leader, and joy.
puṭabhe means a river house,
a city, and a palace,
a path, the first day of the month,
and is also remembered as right awareness.
priyambada means a sky-goer,
and speaking pleasantly.
mahānāda means a great sound,
the rainy season, a great serpent, and an elephant.
mucukunda means a sage,
an asura, and a kind of tree.

meghanāda means the sun,
and the son of Daśagrīva of Laṅkā.
viśārada means learned,
confident, and fearless.
viṣṇupada means the ocean,
the sky, and the lotus.
viṣṇupadī means a door panel,
and also kinds of skill.
śatahvāda means the cloud that bears lightning,
and the hundred-peaked.
sūkapadaṃ means elaboration,
a heap of tips, and grass;
near the ground,
and possessed of law.
What is called sahasrabāda means the sun, a basket,
the Dharma, a secret, restraining,
tamed, a side house, and giving the best.
This is the section of words ending in the letter da.

dha means wealth and the lord of wealth.
dhā means holding, and the nature of reality.
andhaṃ means impaired by seeing dimly, and is the designation for the blind.

andhi means the treasury of waters, the supreme lake.
ardhaṃ means an equal part, a half, and a piece.
ādhi means the mind and torment, unwanted binding,
poverty, and an abode.
biddha means tormented all over, and blazing.
ṛdhaṃ means wealth and connection.
gandha means fragrant, close connection,
a portion, desire, joy, and haughtiness.
gādha means a place and so forth, and desire.
goddhā means the bottom, and hāka.
dagdha means a place, the sun, and a tree.
daghaṃ also means burned.

dadhi means śrīveṣṭa resin and curd,
the abode of Śrī, and a place.
digdhaṃ means time, biśiṣa,
and also that which has the sense of nipta.
dugdhaṃ means milk, and fully milked.
dogdha means a calf, a cowherd,
one who lives close by, and a poet.
dandhaṃ means drawn out and bound.
ādhi means binding, manner, and a kinsman.
pandhū means a brother and relatives,
one who has kin, and also a tree.
bādhā means suffering and negation.
buddha means the Sugata, the teaching, peace,
and those endowed with intelligence.
buddha means learned, at peace, realized, ripened, and the Tathāgata.
buddhi means increase, wealth, medicine,
and a particular portion of joy.
bṛddha means born, a poet, and aged and frail. bṛddhaṃ also means born from a mountain.
bodhi means a kind of samādhi,
the realization of awakening, and the earth-born tree.
madhu means the essence of flowers,
the bee-born, liquor, water, milk,
sweet, honeyed, fragrant,
a design, a particular asura, livelihood, and also a branch.
midhaṃ means some, a friend,
an intention turned toward, beautiful, and a place.
medha means sacrifice, intelligence, and pure.
mebhi means bad and unbearable.
rādhā means a kind of creeper,
a kind of design, an archer,
the lunar mansion Viśākhā, lightning, the viṣṇukrāntā plant, and the fruits of victory.
rādhā also means born under Viśākhā.

lupdha means a hunter and greedy.
badhū means a girl and a wife,
a queen, a new daughter-in-law, cloth, and the incense ri skegs.
bidhi means such as that, thrown, and inserted.
bidhi means a maker, a rite, time, and certainty.
badha means kinds, miraculous power,
an elephant's food, attaining, and accomplishing.
bidhu means the one marked by the hare, Viṣṇu, camphor, and a kind of rākṣasa.
byādhi means disease and pervading, struck, a hunter, and vicious.
śuddha means only, and pure.
śraddha means faith itself, and desire.
śrāddhaṃ means abiding with certainty.
śrāddha means one endowed with faith.
sandhā means a place and a vow,
and also holding fully.
sindhi means a division, a good indication,
an opening, and right conduct.
sādhu means good, beautiful, and a holy person.
sedha means permanent and complete,
renowned, and the gods, accomplished, holding fully,
and also accomplishing and application.
sindhu means the ocean, a river, a country, one in rut, and flowing water.
sudhā means nectar. chūdhā means dūrbā grass, sguhi, and the place gaṃgara.
sridhu means intelligence and molasses.
skandha means the body and an occasion,
the root of the shoulder, a group, and gathered,
and the assembled host of kings, men, elephants, and horses.
snigbha means pleased, gentle, and excellent,
and is the designation for cikkaṇa.

ssardhā means true joy and equal, rivalry, rank, and high on every side.
aṃgādha means not touching the bottom.
abadhi means holding fully,
a boundary, a time, a hole, and a place.
anaddhaṃ means bound,
fully bound, and clay drums and the like.
ābandha means the ornament of a beloved woman, and is also said of something firmly bound.
āviddha means struck hard,
crooked, refuted, the body held upright, deceitful, and a wheel.
upadhi means grasping closely,
special, playing at dice, a thought of the Dharma,
and also the duties toward wife and children.
kabandha means dara,
Rāhu, and a kind of rākṣasa.
kabandha means water and going,
the crown of the head, and the body.
dūrbidha means suffering and low.
narodha means cessation and thought.
nikhadha means a mountain and a country,
its king, and hard.
nyagrodha means the bhaṭa tree,
and the measure of a man's outstretched arms.
nyagrodhi means a poison leaf,
the stupefier, and bhidhra.
baradhi means the conduct of sacrifice,
the halo encircling the sun,
a branch, and also sacrificial wood.
prasiddha means renowned and ornament.
māgadhā means arising from the central land, born of a kṣatriya and a vaiśya,
and those who live by paying homage.
māgadhā means a cluster of pepper.
bibadha means eating up,
going around on the path, and bībadhi.

bibudha means learned and a god, purified, and the certain self.
biśraddha means calm,
liberating all, and heroic.
sannaddha means clad in armor,
a branch, goling, and born.
sannidha means holding fully,
and the range of the senses of men and women.
samādhi means meditative concentration, silence, certainty, and capacity.
sambādha means śaṃkaṭa,
the womb, fragrance, and śaṃgara.
saṃrodha means a desired scent, cardamom-born, thrown, and blocking.
saṃsiddhi means desire,
a woman within bounds, and established by intrinsic nature.
aniruddha means the son of Smara (Kāma), conduct, and born of the bodiless one.
anubandha means following a chief,
permanent, generating faults, giving intrinsic nature, engaging, and engaging definitely.
anubindhi means a hiccup,
and should also be seen as craving.
abharodha means the pure limit,
a royal palace (rājagṛha), and antardhi.
abaṣḍabdhaṃ means pressed down, long, and hanging.
ābandha means relief,
the dwelling of monkeys, and latticed.
ikṣugandā means a razor,
the lungs, anger, and the caltrop.
ugragandha means sweet flag, jamani, and a medicine that causes sneezing.
upalabdhi means attaining,
intellect, wisdom, and characteristic.
kālakandha means the tamāla tree, cinduka, and the life-giving tree.

bhīkṣṇagandha means sweet flag, mustard seed, mata, and śligru.
tṛṇaṃgodhā means citraka,
lac, and the lizard.
baribyadha means having few desires,
and the uttala tree.
brahmabandhu means one who greatly abandons,
one who teaches definitively, and the supreme twice-born.
mahauraṣa means poison and ginger.
śṛṅgabara means the essence of flavor.
samunnaddha means arising everywhere,
conceited about learning, and satisfied.
yojanagandha means an elephant's ichor,
the one from whom Vyāsa sprang, and also cool.
This is the section of words ending in dha.

nī means leading, and a boat.
na means victory and worship.
nau means a boat and born.
nu means praise and emptying.
annaṃ is the word for food.
ina means a lord of the earth, the sun, and a lord.
unni means a country and moving.
ūnaṃ means sound, a pleasure garden, and deficient. kṛṣṇa
means all, the belly, and water.
ghuṇaṃ means the striking of a bell-metal gong, cymbals, and the middle dance.
ghana means a cloud, mustā, vast, an iron hammer,
solid, hard, and moist.

citnaṃ means any banner at all,
a sign, and a flag.
cīna means a country, cloth, and a grain,
a particular deer, and a class of tantra.
channaṃ means covered and secret.
chinnaṃ means divided. chinnā means gi, shi g.yo, the palm, and sāmara.

jana means the world and the great world,
and should also be seen as another world.
jānī means a girl and a woman within bounds.
jani means arising. jina means an arhat, a buddha, and very old;
kinglike, subtle,
a cat, and something merely small.
dānaṃ means giving, an elephant's ichor, cutting, purity, and protection.
dānu means a giver and a conqueror.
dīnā means a mouse and a queen.
dīna means a lower realm, and kātara.
rlumnā means wealth and overcoming others.
dhanu means a bow and a net,
and also a kind of house.
dhanaṃ means riches and prosperity.
dhānā means bhṛṣṭa yava,
a tooth, a sprout, and the ocean.
dhena means milking, and a river.
nagna means naked and unclothed,
a Kṣapaṇaka, and one worthy of offerings.
yūnaṃ means low and reviling.
bānī means a drink and protection.
banaṃ means a forest and water,
a feast, and consecration.
biṣnaṃ means cloth and price, wages, and substance.
badha means sitā and the powerful one.
dhānu means the sun and blazing light.
bhīnni means destroyed, a friend, and clear.
māni means measure, the bre and other measures, weighing, the mind, holding,
and honor. What is called mīna means a fish and a kind of house.
muni means one who has cut off speech, a buddha,
a wild cat, and the kiṃśuka tree.

aṅgudī, mṛtsna,
tupari, and earth.
yanaṃ means outside, and going.
yoni means the source and the female organ.
ratnaṃ means a jewel and the chief.
raṣna means a medicine and fierce.
raṣnā means snake-eye, and Elāpattra.
lagnaṃ means the holding of the houses, attached, holy, and victory.
bāni means dried fruit,
and the dried grape. myāni means surunga, a wave, fragrant, kaṭa, and going.
binnaṃ means known, a place, and obtained.
śīna means asleep and dull.
śyena means white and a kind of bird,
a horn, learned, and a path.
bana means a creeper, and bātya.
sūnu means the sun and a younger brother.
sūnaṃ means accompanied, and fully born.
sūna means white muccha.
sūnyā means a girl and a place of binding, and is also held to mean galaśuṇḍi.
styāna means laziness and smoke,
oil, prati, and śrudya.
sthāni means a place and such as that,
entering definitely, an occasion,
the sense of reason, and the purpose of an act.
sruna means the sun and rays of light.
svasna means sleeping, and seeing with a distracted mind.
hagu means the jaw and a limb,
death, a weapon, a club,
the time of the market, and a coquette.
hīnaṃ means despised and inferior.
aṅganaṃ means the finest of limbs,
a vehicle, and the body.
nāpaṃ means a particular kāyaṃ.

añjana means the lord of a quarter.
añjanaṃ means the essence of eye ointment.
sudkī means smoke, separate pīr,
and also a kind of tree.
añjana means a kind of elder,
the wind, and sālī. añjanā means an ointment and a queen.
sthāna means time and a path,
the totally afflicted aggregates, and time.
apāna means the anus, and the wind.
asānaṃ is held to mean the anus.
amnāna means great, and a friend.
ayana means a path and the sun, traveling to the south and to the north.
naratni means the fruit of the kaṭa, taṅgula, and latticed.
arjuna means a lord of the earth,
the kakubha tree, one who exerts diligence, half a crest, and white.
arjunī means the place of cows,
a small bag, and a branch of a river.
arjuni means an eye disease.
Meaning, begging, a yakṣa,
teaching, disputing,
the water element, reviling, a horse, an ox, Karṇa, and great power.
arśoghī means the leaf of the palm, destroying pustules, and making heroic.
avanaṃ means a protector,
a scorpion, a bee, and alā, joy.
aśani is held to mean the vajra, lightning, and the thunderbolt.
abiknī means a river,
dispatched, the end, and an aged queen.
Self, Brahmā, mind and body, intrinsic nature, firm, and intellect.
ādānaṃ means self, and mad, struck hard, and the ornament of a king.

ābanna means one who has become destitute.
āsani means an elephant,
the shoulder, a seat, and sitting on a seat.
asanī means merchandise.
āsana means the swift tree.
uttānaṃ means lying on the back, asleep, and deep.
utthānaṃ means rising,
tantra, joy in a garden, attaining,
the excellent body, living by labor,
the strength of a wrestler, and a book.
udānaṃ means the wind of the throat,
a coil of juniper, and a kind of wind.
uddānaṃ means a hearth,
and likewise going upward.
udānaṃ means a garden,
a playground, and delight in it.
kaṭhinā means a vessel,
and a lump of molasses or sugar.
kaṭhināṃ means a turban wrapping.
kathinaṃ means hasty.
kadanaṃ is held to mean conflict and evil.
kāmana means desire, sorrowless, desirous, and handsome.
kampanaṃ means trembling, moving, pervading, and action.
kartanaṃ means cutting,
cotton thread, and the work of queens.
kalpanaṃ means cutting and capacity.
kalpanā means a fine elephant.
kākinī means merchandise,
and a quarter of a measuring stick.
kañcana means the nāga tree,
nāgakesara, and cajaka,
udumbāra, and kāñjanā.
kāñcanāṃ means turmeric.

kāñcanaṃ means a stamen and gold.
kānanāṃ means a forest, a house, and the faces of the four-faced one.
kānīna means Vyāsa, Karṇa, and the sons of a maiden.
kāminī means fear and homage.
kāmani means mere desire, kaka, and a dove. kunnānaṃ
means a container for bindings, and a kind of pot.
kuhanā means deceitful conduct,
envy, and hypocrisy.
kritina means learned and fitting.
ketanaṃ means a sign and a house,
a banner, work, and an invitation, beautiful, and a single country. kaubini means reviling, evil deeds, killing, and battle.
kulīna means essence, going on the hands,
and also cattle and birds.
krandaoṃ means calling out,
tears, and liberation.
khaṅgān means the rhinoceros hide, the rhinoceros,
and also the weapon of the sword.
gandānaṃ means indicating,
harming, delight, and very clear.
garjani means anger and sound,
and a cloud without sound.
gahane means a forest,
suffering, a thicket, and the age of strife.
The flesh of an animal burned with poison wood.

guñjanaṃ means one who bears a mark.
gomīn means a lord of the earth,
the Seizer, and a great layman.
gaustanī means a tangled necklace,
a kind of necklace, and a cow's udder.
grābān means a stone,
a mountain stream, and fondness.

ghattanā means moving,
and engaging all around; the wheel-bearer is the Seizer, a snake, and kulāla, the potter.
koka means a village network, and a kind of frog. candana is the sandalwood born in Malaya; candanī is a kind of river.
carmlin means one clad in hide, a fruit tree, the hand of fruit, and soft skin, bhṛṅga, and rīṭa.
calanaṃ means moving and shaking,
and also the moving ground.
camanī means cloth and ghaṇṭarāṃ, and is also seen as a kind of cābī.
cetana means mind and knowing,
and those of true understanding.
cchedanaṃ means a leaf, an umbrella,
a house, moving, kavas, number,
and also a debt. cchedana means a vessel, hanging, and vomiting.
cchadanaṃ means opening and cutting, beings, people, and śuṣmaṇa.
jaghanaṃ means a woman,
a girdle, the front part,
and kaṭīdaka.
jāyanaṃ means victory, and the armor of horses, elephants and the like.
jabana means somewhat quick, exceedingly quick, and swift-going,
a kind of country, turulka, and also wide open.
jabanī means a kind of medicine,
jī, a garland, phannī, and bodece.
jībinaṃ also means somewhat quick, abiding, and also water.
jibanā is held to mean fat.
jibanī is the life-giving tree.

jñānīna means one who knows the gods, one who has wisdom, and those endowed with wisdom.
tapaṇa means the sun,
burning all around, bhablāta,
and a kind of hell.
tamoghna means the moon, the sun, fire, intellect, Śrīkaṇṭha, and Viṣṇu.
talini means a cat,
small, clear, and deep.
taluna is a youth in the bloom of life;
talunī is a young woman.
temanā means moist cooked greens;
temanī is a kind of hearthstone.
todanaṃ means tormenting and striking.
damana means letting go and subduing,
a giver, a flower, and a hero.
darnśaṃ means seeing, a mirror,
a dream, pi, a treatise,
the Dharma, and perception.
daśana means a point;
daśani means armor.
dahana means cruel conduct,
warmth, bhallāta, and fire.
dṛśāna means the lord of the planets;
dṛśānaṃ is said to mean a star.
debana means the Noose-Bearer (Varuṇa).
debanaṃ means the wish to speak,
play, and worldly convention.
daśanaṃ means a tooth and armor.
rlubān means the protector of the day and going forth. adhvanni means a wilderness, a bow, and a spear.
dhanḍīn means an archer, ṣilga, and the arjuna tree. dhamana means fire, and knitting the brows in agitation.
dhamanī means moving,
turmeric, and the head.

dhābani means joining, rays of light,
a house, the body, power, an abode, birth and running,
pure, a question, and a leaf, cleansed, moving, a dyer, and a weaver.
The dhva-holder means a twice-born, a chariot,
a mountain-born horse, and a snake.
nandarmāpeni means joy and a son.
nandarṇa means the Mingled Grove.
nandadī means play, setting in motion, and playful joy.
nandi means the lord of joy,
a tree, the nyagrodha, and a rounded stone.
nalinī means the Lake-Born (Lakṣmī),
the lake-born lotus, the finest lake,
the Ganges of the sky, and a stream.
nalina means water and the water-born.
nāṃdānaṃ means illness, and thereby the first cause, and its seat.
A young one and a garland are dtanaṃ.
And this bhanaṃ means the breaking of a pot. batvīna means an arrow, a bird, a hawk,
a mountain, a tree, a chariot, and a charioteer.
padminīna means a lotus,
a lotus pond, and a kind of woman.
sarban means a festival, the juncture of the seasons,
the equinox, an eclipse, seeing the first day of the month, a section,
and a particular kind of characteristic.
babana means the potter's kiln, the wind, and freedom from conceptual thought.
bakṣmana means eye medicine,
hair, and fine strands, threads and the like.
bācanaṃ means water, a channel,
a place of cooking, and a learned person.
pāṣīna means destroying,
the many-colored,
a destroyer, a reader, and the guggulu tree.
pācana means sihāma;

pācanaṃ means that which cooks.
pāpanaṃ means thinking a great deal.
pābanī means the myrobalan,
the Noose-Bearer, and the holder of the noose.
biśuna means wicked,
a slanderer, and nāra.
biśunaṃ means saffron.
piśunā means pṛkkā.
pītana means kapicūta.
bitanaṃ means the pine,
saffron, and bab.
pūnanā means a kind of rākṣasī.
Benefit means anīkinī,
a division of an army, a troop, and an army.
prajñānaṃ means knowing the signs, and intellect. Then pradhanaṃ means a destroyer and number.
pradhānaṃ means the supreme, the self-nature,
the knower of the field, intellect, the great mother, oneness, the highest, and the permanent.
prasūnaṃ means born;
prasūnaṃ means flower and fruit.
prasannā means madirā, liquor,
together with what is utterly clear.
pretvan means laughter and the wind.
preman means radiance and amorous play.
phalgunā means austerity, accomplishment, and the arjuna tree.
phalguna means born of a river.
phālgunī means a kind of month.
bhandhani means killing and binding.
bardhanā means the bounty of water.
bardhanaṃ means cutting and increase.
basinaṃ means a covering and a garment.
banā means intoxicated, learned, and a dancing woman.
basanaṃ means a garment and a seat,
a retinue, knowing, and an umbrella.

bāhinī means a kind of army, anīkinī, a river,
and cow dung. buddhāna
means realization and a learned person.
bodhanī means awakening and long pepper. bodhanaṃ means incense and a lamp.
byonman means the path of the gods,
and is also to be called vāriṇi.
brahman means Brahmā, a brahmin,
a seasonal offering, the conjunction of moon and sun, learning, illness, and austerity.
bhaṭṭinī means a queen,
an actress, and the chief of queens, Brāhmī, the Invincible, and one clad in armor.
bhaṇḍanaṃ means wrongdoing.
bharman means gold, song and dance, and a burden.
bhabanaṃ means a house and the body.
bhājanaṃ means a vessel and fitting.
bhāganāṃ means meditative concentration and anointing.
bhubanaṃ means the world, water,
the sky, and beings.
bhogin means one with a hood,
a snake, a village headman, a king, and nāsitā.
bhoginī means the consecrated queen,
a woman of one's own caste,
and the consorts of a king.
maṇḍanaṃ means an ornament and adorning.
madanaṃ means Smara (Kāma), wickedness, spring, a tree, and wax.
malana means an iron garment;
malanaṃ means crushing.
malinī means one who has flowers;
malinaṃ means joy and black.
mārjjanaṃ is held to mean a cat;
marjjana means the lac tree.
mālinī means a kind of verse meter,

bhāṃgā, a garlanded queen,
the White One, and the city of Campā.
mithunā means a household.

mithunaṃ means husband and wife,
a wife, a village, and things connected.
muṇḍa means a shaven head and guarding the mind.
mehanaṃ means urine,
and the penis. maithunaṃ means nidhubana. methunaṃ means true union. yamanaṃ means supreme, binding, and a pair.
yābanaṃ is held to mean the time of entering,
and also bringing down hail.
yujana means a brahmin
and śāratha. yuban
means a youth, a chief, sure rejection, strength, and wide.
yojanaṃ means four krośas, yoga, and the supreme self.
rājāṃnī means turmeric,
lac, a reed, and night.
rañjana means arousing passion, dye, sweet, and sandalwood.
rañjanī means indigo, guṇḍā, madder, and clear.
jahvan means gold, the knower of taste,
the tongue, and tasting.
svadanāṃ means falsehood,
the wind of blowing, and the wind in a hollow.
rājan means the moon, a lord of men, Śakra (Indra), a kṣatriya, and the chief of the yakṣas.
dāgīn means desirous and passionate.
rādhanaṃ means accomplishing, obtaining, and pleasing.
rocanī means a purgative and ginger.
rocani means the toothed one,
and the dark woman. rocana means the trunk of the śālmali tree, raktaka, and what is called hlāra.

rocanā means bezoar,
auspicious, and beautiful.
rodanaṃ means smoke,
and also mere welling of tears.
rohani means the big-nosed, rohita,
the tree of awakening, and the nyagrodha.
lamghanaṃ means a step,
going beyond, doing, falling, and swimming.
lalana means a woman,
the tongue, and a particular channel.
lakṣan means a sign and the chief.
lāñcanaṃ means a name and a mark.
lekhane means setting down in writing, measure, and wheat.
śudag means a brahmin and harsh words.
bapanaṃ means shaving the head and a place.
bamanaṃ means vomiting, shape, and begging.
brjranaṃ means abandoning and harming;
brjranaṃ means a forest, livelihood, and a cotton thread.
bartana means understanding and being condensed;
bartanā means a road.
parṇina means a painter,
one who practices celibacy, and a scribe.
bartan means the body and the very beautiful, and kinds of measure.
bāgmin means the lord of speech and woolen cloth.
bājin means a horse, a bird, and an arrow.
bāmana means a form of Viṣṇu, oṃkoṭha, yāmye,
a dwarf, the elephant of a quarter,
rotten, unmoving,
dregs, old, and decrepit.
bicchenna means wholly obtained, divided, and crooked.

bijñānaṃ means action and knowledge.
bitānaṃ means giving, leisure,
the upward eye, a canopy, a sacrificial rite, a kind of verse meter, an instant, an occasion, and turmoil.
bibanna means going on the hands, pipaṅgata, and destroyed.
bimana means a palace in the sky,
seven-storied, and also a tree.
bilagna means the waist,
clinging, and a conjunction of times.
biṣaghna means śirīṣa,
guḍūcida, and a purgative.
bṛjinaṃ means turbidity,
crooked, and hair.
bṛṣan means Karṇa and the lord of the gods.
badanaṃ means knowing and a lion.
beṣṭanaṃ means the ear,
śaṣkulī, the crown,
a diadem, and leading.
byañjanaṃ means a seasoning,
a beard, a sexual sign,
what has limbs and the like,
and what is made independent.
odhvonaṃ means obstructing conduct.
byasanaṃ means nonvirtue and evil, drinking, hunting and the like,
the unwanted fruit of fate,
loss of power, and fruitlessness.
śakunaṃ means an auspicious omen, desire, and a reason.
śakun means a bird.
śakuni means a bird,
the son of Subala, and a kind of karaṇa.
śaṃkhinī means a mass of conches,
a snake, a type of woman,
white, and the cora flower.
śataghnī means a kind of weapon,

karañja, and evil.
śamaśa means Yama,
beautiful, and a killer.
śimanaṃ is held to be the same.
śamanaṃ means a bed,
sleep, and also great delight.
śakhin means a tree, the Veda, Turuṣka, and people.
śasanaṃ means a treatise, difficult,
what is granted by a king, great,
a teaching, and a document.
śikhin means the banner planet (Ketu), fire,
a peacock, a rooster, an arrow,
an ox, a crane, a tree,
and those who wear a crest.
śilpin means a carpenter.
śilpini means the woman with a nose.
śraṅgin means a nāga, a bull,
a mountain, a tree, beautiful, and kinds of yoga.
śrighana means the Sugata and a monk. śrīghani means curd and rda.
śleṣmaghanni means mallikā,
the moving one, and the foam-born.
śāsana means wind and breath, and the intoxicating tree. sajjana means good. sajjanā means thought.
sajjanaṃ means equipping.
sadanaṃ means a stable, water,
the body, a house, a drink, and a home.
santāna means a continuum and a family,
a father, and the tree of the gods.
saṃdhānaṃ means manifest arising,
and also setting right.
sandhini is known as the body, beautiful,
a season, and a milch cow.

samani means not going forth, samadeka, and equal.
sampanna means perfect,
endowed, and accomplished.
saṃbyānaṃ means an upper robe and a covering.
saṃpanaṃ is held to mean worship,
the moon, and certain destruction.
sādīna means a chariot and a horseman, and likewise a mat.
sādhānaṃ means a tail,
moon-born, completed, thoroughly accomplished, doing and preparing,
the rites for the dead, killing, Brahmā who sets in motion,
a means, engaging in giving, and a forest.
sādhāna means a sacrifice,
the conclusion of an action, the sacrificer, deep thought, legal custom, a boundary, a field,
a vase, and a place.
sūcam means manner, dṛṣka, scent, and also striking.
secanaṃ means a bathing basin,
and also bathing and changing.
senānī means a general and the reed-born. secanāṃ means bathing and teaching.
saṃsthānaṃ means shape,
a house, a tree, and a crossroads.
stananaṃ means thunder,
mere sound, and gaṃchaṃna.
sthābanaṃ means a forest, meditative absorption, and entrusting.
sparśanaṃ means touch and a son.
sandarṇa means dripping and water, tiniba, and a chariot.
svamin means the pervading lord and Viśākhā.
talin means a plowman and strength.

hasani means charcoal
and a guard. hasanaṃ means laughter.
hastini means a kind of chief woman, and a female elephant.
hāyana means a year,
and a kind of grain.
hiṇḍanaṃ means delight and play.
hrādinaṃ means the vajra and lightning.
atharba means guarding existence,
and a class of brahmin.

adhiṣṭhana means power and a town, presiding, and a wheel.
anucana means tamed,
companionship, one learned in the Veda,
a bent tip, and also manhood.
anāsanaṃ means teaching,
arranging cloth, and a nearby seat.
abācinaṃ means reversed,
the south, the face of a quarter, and certain birth.
abhijena means famed for one's family, and the banner of a family.
abhipanna means accomplishing, being slain, eaten, and declined,
the belly, and what is done by oneself.
abhimāna means a man's pride, knowing, praṇaya, and harm;
the mover, the sun, the food of the sun,
and the god of the ancestors.
abadāni means those deeds,
such things as happened, a section of avadāna, the body, breath, and conjunction;
it is said to mean union.
ākala means doubt,
counting up, and binding.
ācchadanaṃ means a lid,
cloth, and covering.

ātanaṃ means abiding separately, causing to run, and is held to mean going.
ātmayoni is said to mean the emanator and the one born from the mind.
ābaśanaṃ means a workshop,
the abode of the bhūtas, and entering.
āyodhano is held to mean conflict, killing, and fighting.
āradhanaṃ means worship,
and also cooking and fighting.
askanda means the unmanifest, drying up all around, and sound.
utpatanaṃ means arising,
occurring, and going upward.
utpada means drawn all around,
entering well, and having the purpose of arising.
What is called udayan means the king of Vatsa and the pot-born.
udbartanaṃ means arising,
engaging, and drawing.
ubyeha means a vehicle,
drawing upward, and dvisītya.
upadhānaṃ means a pillow, distinction, and praṇaya.
ubāsanaṃ means habitual passing,
the wish to listen, and harming.
kañcuki means a well-trained man,
a snake, and the red-yellow mover.
kapīta means śirīṣa,
the mango, a special place,
and the gardhabhaṇḍa tree.
kaladhva means the chatterer,
the pigeon, the parrot, and the peacock.
kalasin means a bird, a tree,
and one who dances amorously after the thunder.
kātyāyana means Vararuci;
and the White One, Kātya's daughter,

and an elderly woman in saffron robes.
kucandarṇa means red sandalwood,
a leaf, the mountain body, and a kind of tree.
kuṇḍalinma means Varuṇa himself, a peacock, a deer, a snake, and an earring.
The pot-born means the Mountain Rat,
the arjuna, and Jupiter.
keśaran means a lion, a nāga,
the nāgakesara, and horses.
krośadanaṃ means ghiñculī;
cintotaka means the root of the lotus.
khakāmanī means certainly firm,
a woman who enjoys, and a young woman.
khaḍgadhenu means a girl's knife, and likewise one with a trunk.
godayidgu means a speaker, desire, and the desirous.
gabādanaṃ means the lord of Varuṇa, and the embodied support of melody.
ghanāghana means a rain cloud,
Śakra (Indra), and an elephant in rut.
What is called ghoṣayitgu means a parrot and a brahmin.
citrabhānu means a bird and fire.
colkin means lead,
lamba, and the joint of kiṣku.
jalāṭana means entering,
kraṃka, kaṃka, and a stream of blood.
jalaṭa means a water wheel;
jalāṭa means a watering place.
nalamīna means a kind of fish, iñcāka, and a child-killer.
tapasvi means an ascetic,
austerity, and following in play.
tabo, of cattle;
dhana means austerity,
the ink-stained, and the arising of heat.

tabodhana means a shaven-headed woman,
the woman of the inner house, and heroic.
durbāman means the mother-of-pearl of the mud, and a lentil.
debse means the army of the gods,
an abode, and understanding.
dvijanman means a tooth, a bird, a brahmin,
an elephant, a hammer, the nāga tree, and a nāga.
nidhūbanaṃ means shaking and delight, killing, Antaka, and a grove.
nirbāsa means homeless,
harm, and the place of contagion.
nirghatsa means an evildoer,
and what is called alaktaka.
niryātanaṃ means giving,
arranging, scattering, and sound.
nibama means heard and seen.
naśāma means looking and seeing.
payasva means a milch cow,
the dark woman, and a cloud.
barijran means a sacrificer,
the work of sacrifice, and completing.
puṇyajana means a rākṣasa,
the sālāśa tree,
protection, and men to be honored.
pṛthagjan means deluded and lowly.
prajana means a place of birth, birth, and going forth.
paṇidhānaṃ means great effort,
engaging fully, and meditative equipoise.
pratimānaṃ means an image,
speech, and the space between an elephant's tusks.
brtiban means a vow,
consciousness, and having entered.
pratiyatna means formation, grasping individually, and desire.
pratyarthin means the sign of what is to be expressed,

and one who argues point by point.
prayojanaṃ means purpose and cause.
prabaca means good,
and also speaking of intrinsic nature.
prasphotranaṃ means the sun, blooming open, and striking.
prasādhanī means accomplished,
and what is called kakatikā.
prasādhani means causing to descend.
prahasanaṃ means destroying,
loud laughter, and agitating.
phalakin means fruit-bearing,
and what is called illiśi.
bardhamāna means a reed,
undiminished, eraṇḍa,
and kinds of riddles.
bāḍaginni means hatred,
a road, living on leaves,
and kinds of horses.
bārāśanaṃ means destroying beings,
a conch, and a doorkeeper.
bhātatmana means Brahmā and a person. madayidgu means liquor and the drink of sīdhu.
madhadhanaṃ means great nectar,
fine cloth, and sihla.
mahāmuni means the Mountain Rat, glory, and the son of the Mountain Rat.
mahāsena means Viśākhā
and a great general.
mātulānī means bhādgā,
going in portions, and a maternal uncle.
māludhānaka means a striped snake and a great lotus.
māludhānī means a kind of creeper,
the intelligent, and one endowed with intelligence.
medhaponī means a brahmin woman.

rasāyana means a garuḍa.
rasāyani means the myrobalan,
the disease-removing poison, and phyidongka.
rājad means the self-holding tree,
the milky one, and kaṃśuka.
lalāla and lalāman mean
a sign, delightful, an ornament, a horn, the chief, a tail,
power, a banner, and horses.
laṃgalinna means the puṇḍa tree, betaśa, and the plough-weapon.
banaśca means a jackal,
jambuka, a tiger,
a bear, and a cat.

birocana means the sun, fire,
the moon, great bliss, and joy.
biṣayin means a sense faculty,
a subject, the mind-born, and burning,
the object-born, a lord of men, blazing, and the independent.
biṣāṇi means the horned and destroying.
bilapanī means tarālā,
lasaddha, and gāṃganā.
bilasin is to be seen as a hooded one and venomous snakes.
baiśraksenā means the Undecaying (Viṣṇu);
biśraksenā means a fruit-bearing tree.
bibajrana means relinquishing, giving, radiance, and killing.
bismāsa means a city of the gandharvas,
the one with openings, and Smara (Kāma).
bihana means destroying,
biñjana, and carding cotton.
biheṭha means harming and destroying.
bṛkṣādanī means what grows on trees, destroying, and scents.

bṛkṣādanaṃ means a fan,
a battle-axe, and the aśvattha.
bairocana means a particular sugata, the sun, and the son of the Mighty One.
byabāyin means the desirous,
and is said of a kind of substance.
śikhaṇḍina means a kind of arrow, fearless sound, and a flock of peacocks.
śikhaṇḍinā means guñja,
a herd, and a branch.
śikharin means a mountain peak, prosody, and the apāmārga plant.
śrīdgārin means the well-wrapped,
the lustful, and an elephant.
śleṣaghanā means mallī, katakī, and the essence of tikta.
sadādana means a white elephant,
the abode of hala, and the fragrant elephant.
sanātana means the Seizer, Viṣṇu, the Grandsire, a guest, firm, and permanent. samapannaṃ means secret, obtained, rotten, and complete.
samāsanaṃ means wholly obtained, cutting off, equipoise, and grasping.
sāmadānaṃ means concord,
holding, and the regular rites.
samutthunaṃ means the onset of illness and total stopping. samurcchanaṃ means pervading, true desire, and delusion.
sambāhanaṃ means carrying burdens and the like,
leading, and massaging the limbs.
sambadanāṃ means view,
deceiving, and bringing under control.
sarojinī means having lotuses,
the lake-born, and the finest lake.
sāmayoni means meditative absorption, an elephant, and the supreme abode.

samādhi means a definite statement, and the count of wood for performing a fire offering.
sārasanāṃ means gold.
tanutrinaṃ means protection from cold.
sukarman means a kind of yoga,
good food, and the craftsman of the gods.
sudarśa means a city of the gods and the discus of Viṣṇu.
sudarṣanā means a command,
the jambu of Meru, a kind of medicine, and what delights the eye.
sūdāminni means a cloud and a mountain.
sudhanvan means firm,
an archer, and Viśvakarman.
subarban means the Thirty,
bamboo, an arrow, and the joint of smoke.
suyāmuna means Viṣṇu, illness, the king of Vatsa,
and those born with good intelligence.
saurāmani means a kind of lightning, and a special, radiant lotus.
saṃyamanī means the city of Yama, ascetic discipline, and complete restraint.
stanayidgu means a cloud, thunder, death, and a staff.
harṣayitku means a son and gold.
agrajanmana means Brahmā,
an elder brother, and a brahmin;
killing, giving, and releasing.
What is called anubāsan means anointing with oil and fumigation.
andabāśin means fierce,
a disciple, and an attendant.
What is called apabarjani means relinquishing and nirvāṇa, and what is called biśrāṇana.
What is called abasarjanaṃ means giving and abandoning.

abhiniṣṭana means a letter and directing.
upasparlanaṃ means touching,
and also bathing and rinsing the mouth.
upasambannaṃ means done,
and well compounded.
kāmacarina means a sparrow,
the lustful, and the self-willed.
kārandhami means a bronze-smith,
and is also to be seen as an alchemist.
kiṣkubarban means bamboo,
the silkworm, and fire.
kriṣṇabartman means the burning eater,
the wicked, and Rāhu.
What is called kharabhājanaṃ means soft, bronze, solla, and entering. Then gandhamāṃdhana means a kind of man, a bee, and the fragrant woman.
gandhamādanī means liquor,
a creeper, and a kind of deer.
cakracārin means a child,
the wealthy, and one with a network of villages.
cirajībin means long-lived, Viṣṇu, and the co-born.
tiktabarban means guḍūci,
licorice, and hilamocī.
The word dhāmaketana means fire and a long-tailed comet.
padmalāñcana means the sun, Lokeśvara, Kubera, and Brahmā.
padmalāñcana means Tārā, Sarasvatī, and Padmā.
What is called sīdacandanaṃ means the one with the dark woman, and turmeric.
pṛṣṭhaśṛdgin means śaṇḍha,

the one with ten fears, and the wolf-bellied.
pracalākin means the road-goer,
and the one who dances amorously after the thunder.
pratipāda means giving,
anger, and making understood.
banamālin means the raiser of sound;
banamāli means a sow.
pabarṇinī means the fruit-bearing,
a jewel among women, the woman who indicates, craving, and turmeric.
barcandajva means the tree of the gods,
and is also to be seen as the one with the dark woman.
byomacārin means a sky-goer,
a god, and a vidyādhara.
madūsūdana means a sow,
and is to be understood as hair-cutting.
What is called mahārajanaṃ means a pot and the hundred pots.
mṛtyuprañcana means the bilva fruit, kākola, and the one clad in a leopard skin.
bighṇakārin means the frightful-looking and the destroyer.
biśvakarman means the craftsman of the gods, mārtaṇḍa, and a kind of sage.
bṛṣāsarban means the Seizer,
an asura, the charming one, and gro ma.
What is called śakulādanī means the fleshy one, the water bispali, ghiñculāṃ, and the one with Brahmā.
The word śālaṃkṣayana means a kind of stone and a gladdener.
śepakirtana means the lustful;
btriṅgiriti means Padmā.
śvetabāhana means Arjuna,
and the maker of nectar.
śvetabān means the maker of nectar,
the foam of the ocean, and the heart of a cloud.

What is called ṣaṣṭhahāyana means a kind of rice and sindhura.
saṃprayogin means playing in part,
the lustful, and joining.
haricandana means the finest cow,
the tree of the gods, the Radiant One,
saffron, and the ruby.
What is called haribāhana means the maker of day and the rider of the clouds.
antāpaśāyin means a cooker of dogs, nābite, and a kind of sage.
What is called kālānumādin means kalaviṃka, rolamba, and kabañjila.
What is called jāyānujībina means extensive, tamer of evil destinies, and great.
What is called sahasradedhin means the gladdener, destroying, and the transmuting tree.
The section of words ending in na is complete.
kha means wind, dokū, and the purifier;
pā means drinking and protecting.
kalpa means a day and night of Brahmā, reasoning, fear, a treatise, and a rite.
kūpa means the bank of a body of water, and the pit where the dead are cleansed.
kṛpā is explained as compassion.

klṛpa is used also for Vyāsa, and for a man of the Bhāratas.
khaṣpa means acting by force,
and is also known to mean anger.
goba means a branch, a cowpen, and also the lord of villages and the like.
gobī means the protector of the earth, the earth-holder, a guard, and one with essence.
chupa means touch, kṣupa, battle, and a gale.

talpaṃ means a wife, a bed,
and a tower. tāpa
means torment and dabathu.
tābī means a kind of water.
trapā means shame and knowing.
trapu means lead and a weapon.
darbu means pride and arrogance,
and also the musk of the deer.
nīpa means blunt, and becomes a group.
pañcala means an ancient bow.
buṣpe means a flower, a woman's flow, expanded, and in bloom.
rūpaṃ means form, beautiful, intrinsic nature,
verse, nānaka,
dancers and the like, faith, a deer, a spear, conduct, cattle, and a word.
reba means a vessel and turmoil.
ropa means an arrow and fastening.
lepa means anointing, nectar, and jemana. pabā
means a hole and a seam.
patpa means tears and vapor.
śaṣpa means young grass and separate food.
śāpa means an oath and an imprecation.
sūba means making, and a kind of offering.
svāba means sleep and ignorance itself,
and has the sense of not feeling touch.
kṣipa means obstructing and arranging.
kure means throwing and holding,
and also anointing and leveling.
arṇapaṇi means sairibha,
and the churning of the waters.
ākalpa means a mere house,
and also imagining.
ābāba means desire and ripening,
abandoning, ala, and bāla.
akṣepa means reviling and releasing, summoning, and an ornament of poetry.

aḍupa means the moon and cloth.
ulaba means a kind of grass.
alabaṃ is held to mean equipping.
kacchaba means a turtle,
and a particular wrestler's hold.
kacchabī means a female turtle,
a kind of skin disease,
and a kind of bark.
kalāpa means a collection, a peacock,
gold, tuṇīra, food,
cloth, kasisūra,
and both kauhi.
kāśyapī means the earth and a fish.
kṣaśyipa means a kind of sage.
kuṭapa means a kind of pride, niṣkuṭa, a sage,
and also baṭsīrikā.
kuṇapa means the stench of a rotting corpse.
kutapa means a granddaughter,
the eighth part of the day, tshadpara, laba, kuśa, and music.
jihvāba means a dog, a cat,
a tiger, and the striped one.
bādapa means a tree, brikang, and a shoe.
bātāba means splendor and dust.
raktaba means the night-goer.
raktabā means the lotus,
the confusion of concepts, and the quarters.
biṭapa means the trunk of a tree, ṣilga, the vast, and a branch.
apalāba means speaking ill and dispelling trust.
abhirūpa means what is to be understood, pleasing, and form fully attained.
abaleba means a fault, leveling, anointing, and going rightly.

upatāba means speaking and torment, and is held to have the sense of swift.
upajama means distinction,
division, and destruction.
jalakūbī means coarse,
the core of a well, and pleasing.
nāgapuṣpa means the nāga tree, nāgakesara, and campaka.
parikampa means fear,
shaking, and agitation.
parībāba means a pool,
attainment, and covering all around.
biṇḍapuṣpa means the aśoka,
the java flower, and the mud-born lotus.
bahurūpa means Smara (Kāma),
the vajra, the self-born, a quiver, and moving.
meghāpuṣpa means lhangtsher gong,
water, and the water-born.
bibralāba means contradictory speech, and words devoid of meaning.
bajapuṣpa means the intoxicant, and likewise marubaka.
brikadhūpa means yellow wood,
and artificial incense.
pṛṣāka means the Great God (Śiva), the kindler, and the Dark One.
hemapuṣpa means the aśoka,
the java flower, and campaka.
camarapuṣpa means clear,
cūta, and keka.
The section of words ending in pa.
phu means a mantra; phe means sound, innumerable. spā means old and increase.
spha means the wind of ghañja, and pervading.
sphu means blowing, the nature of balgu.
gumpha means an armlet, a phrase,
a style, and an expression.

repha means the letter ra, and speaking in reproach.
baphe means the hoof of cattle and the like,
and the word for trees and the like.
śiṅphā means matted hair, a river,
the fleshy one, and a nurse.
The section of words ending in pha.
ba means Varuṇa, meeting, and a substance.
kambi means khajākā,
and a section of bamboo. kaṃbu means an elephant, a bracelet, a conch, a small conch, the neck, and the sheathed.
bārā means a short form and a particular number.
cārbī means beauty and intellect.
jambu means a mountain, a river, a continent, and a kind of tree.
ḍimbi means clamor and fear,
the lungs, the liver, spreading, and eraṇḍa. darbī
means khajākā and fruit.
dvī means yellow wood, turmeric,
the deodar, the earth-holder, and the elder-born.
pūrbā means before, earlier, and a peak.
tumbī means tiktalambā and Śrī.
bimpa means the embodied, fruit,
a disk, and a reflection.
śamba means virtue, broad,
the iron-cored tip of a pestle, and vajras. stamba
means grass, props, and trees.
kadambaṃ means white mustard,
nikurumba, and nīpa.
A stalk and a branch are kalambī.
kalambi means a stalk, an arrow, and nīsa. kādamba
means the first group and an arrow.
gajāhvā means an elephant, biṣpala's,
the rival of the elephant, and the city of elephants.

gandharbba means a kind of deer,
a singer, a sky-farer,
a being of the intermediate state,
the cuckoo, the horse, an adept of the elixir, and the singers of the gods.
guḍumba means the heart and fruit, printa, and cattle fodder.
dvijihrā means a snake, a slanderer, and kaṭirka. nitaṃpa
means a summit, the shoulder, and the body.
bralama means hanging,
an asura, a shoot of the palm,
and a branch. prālcampa means a form of Viṣṇu, the threefold expansion, and one who holds milk. bhūjambu means the fruit of the vikaṃkata, and goḍūmba. heramba
means a buffalo, the pot-bellied, a hero, and pride.
jarajambū means the jambū opener,
and the fruit of the dra go.
lalajīhā means harming,
going in stages, and a house.
śatabarbā means durbā,
bad grass, and a queen.
gorakṣajambu means wheat,
and likewise earth-protected rice.
dhūlīkadamba means a tree,
the tiniśa, the kadamba,
and is to be seen as the chula tree.
What is called śrīgālajambū is goḍumba; some hold it to be the juniper berry.
The section of words ending in ba.
bha means a bee and attachment,
and also has the sense of white and expansion.
bhā means blazing and mere abode.
bhaṃ means fortune; bhī means fear.

bhū means the earth and mere abode,
and what brings forth.
bho means calling and inexhaustible.

kumbha means a pot and one of the houses of the zodiac,
a paramour, a part of an elephant's head,
and also the son of Kumbhakarṇa.
kumbhī means the pāṭalā tree and a water-leaf plant, and the viṭharakata fruit.
kumbha means the guggulu tree and the purging plant.
garbha means the womb and a child,
the dark side, a sign, and the thorn of the jackfruit.
jambha means a tooth, a transmuting elixir,
a kind of asura, and eating.
jṛmbha means opening the mouth and yawning.
ḍimbha means a fool and a child.
dambha means the crested one and bark.
dṛgbhū means a snake and a lord.
nābhi means a lunar mansion, a wheel-turning monarch,
a chief, the hub of a wheel,
a part of a living creature's body, and musk.
nibha means resembling and a pretext.
rambha means a bamboo staff.
rambha means the plantain and the water-born nymph (apsaras).
vibhu means the one of threefold play, the mighty, the all-pervading, and the lord.
śambhu means the Lord, Brahmā, one worthy of offerings, and the one with locks of hair.
śubha means accomplished; śubhaṃ means well-being.
śobhā means beauty and shade.
sabhā means an assembly, a cattle pen,
a gambling hall, and a horse yard.
stambha means stupor and a pillar.
sabhū means Viṣṇu and Brahmā.
aśubha means an omen of death, evil,
the undesired; with aṃ, the good; and the sinful.
ātmabhū means the god of love and Brahmā.

ārambha means a pleasure garden, pride, haste, and killing.
ṛṣabha means a bull, a chief,
one of the eight groups and a particular medicinal plant, a particular musical note, a boar's tail,
and the opening of the ear.
ṛṣabhā means a type of human,
a woman of many forms, and a queen;
a peak, a cat, the supreme, an abode, and the chief.
kakubha means the arjuna tree,
a kind of rāga (musical mode), the neck of the lute,
a beautiful quarter of the sky, a treatise, and a garland of campaka flowers.
karabha means the wrist,
the part of the hand toward the little finger, and going in stages.
śarabha means the eight-legged creature and a particular kind of deer.
kusumbha means safflower, the great,
and a monk's water pot.
gardabha means a donkey, a kind of scent, kivarṇa, and the white water lily.
gardabhī means a minor disease and a particular kind of creature.
dundubhi means a great kettledrum,
a dānava, and the dot made by Indra.
durlabha means hard to obtain,
dear, the earth, scabies, and the sick.
nikumbha means the toothed plant,
and is also known as the son of Kumbhakarṇa.
vallabha means the knowing,
the loving, and a master.
varṣābhū means the punarnavā plant,
the kañcili, and a frog.
viṣkambha means a kind of conjunction,
extent, binding each part separately,
a part of a drama, separate effort,
a kind of binding, and a yogin.

viṣṭambha means binding each separately, expanding and expansion.
visrambha means amorous play,
a quarrel, reassurance, leading, and killing.
vṛṣabha means a bull,
white seminal fluid, and also the best of men.
vaidarbha means crooked speech itself,
and a particular kind of boundary.
śarabha means a kind of lion,
the eight-legged creature, and karabha.
sanābhi means one of the same birth.
surabhi means the campaka,
the variegated, spring, and the fragrant,
gold, nutmeg,
the pleasing, and the sweet-smelling.
śarbhi means the śallakī tree and a kind of mātṛkā.
anuṣṭubha is known to mean an arrow and a kind of metre.
apaṣṭambha means gold,
and also a difficult undertaking.
śātakumbhaṃ means gold;
śātakumbha means the horse-killer (oleander).
The section of words ending in bha.

ma means Śiva; mā means the moon, Rāhu, a mātṛkā,
joy, pride, binding,
and negation, and it is inexhaustible.
me and maṃ also have that meaning.
āma means disease and its kinds.
iṣma means desire and spring.
umā means Gaurī, turmeric, beauty, fame, and joy.
ūma means a town and doing.
ūrmi means a wave, a billow, entering, clarity,

a fold of cloth, a wall,
raising the neck, and squeezing.
kāma means Smara (Kāma) and shade.
kamaṃ means what is to be desired, gladly, and the surely wished for.
āma means assent.
kāmī means desire and a noble woman.
kāmi becomes a man full of desire.
The pronoun called kaṃ means doubt, a question,
rejection, reproach, and manner.
kimi means gold, a girl,
a garland, and ābhālā.
krimi means a worm, an insect,
lac, and the chief of insects.
The double ma means setting, price, moving, and stirring.
kharma means a particular kind of zerna.
gama means the unconsidered, a road, and a particular game of dice.
gulma means a shrub, an army,
a guard, a troop, and a kind of liver disease.
gulmī means the āmalaka,
a curtain, and a cloth house.
grāma means a musical scale, a dwelling,
a collection, and is preceded by sound and the like.
gharma means heat, torment, summer, warmth, and the water of dust.
jālma means pāmara, bathing,
and she who makes right view.
jihma means crooked, the tagara, slow, and a wheel,
and also turmeric and green.
tokma and tokmaṃ mean earwax.
dama means formations, the rod, taming, and also plaster.
dasma is known to mean a man, a thief,
and the pride of people.

druma means a tree, the pārijāta,
a kind of incense, and the lord of the kiṃnaras.
dharma means non-harming, merit, reasoning, sacrifice, intrinsic nature,
example, vow, conduct,
the end of the Vedas, the bow, the ear, wealth,
the drink of the peaceful, medicine, the self,
the root of scent, coolness,
the name of the Vinaya, and praise of others.
nami means the rim of a well;
the tiniśa tree, and the rim of a wheel.
nema means time, a boundary, casting off,
an enclosure, and fraud.
padma means a lotus, a mass of lotuses, the lotus battle array, a particular number,
a treasure, and the kind of nāga called Padmaka.
padmā means bhāśīra and Śrī. brāhmī means Sarasvatī, the lotus-faced,
the power of Brahmā, the pañjikā,
the soma creeper, and a kind of branch.
bhāma means anger, sound, and light.
bhīma means Śambhu, Wolf-Belly (Vṛkodara),
the amlavetasa tree,
the fierce, and the terrifying.
bhīṣma means the Seizer, the one born of Gaṅgā, a rākṣasa, and the terrifying woman.
bhūmi means the earth and mere abode.
bhauma means hell and the earth-born.
bhrama means error, a lathe, exhaustion, and a channel for water.
yama means Yama, the king of Dharma,
a pair, restraint, a crow,
one born a twin, the body, accomplishing,
and the independent, any pure deed.
yāma means a weapon and restraint.
yāmi means a planet, a rākṣasī, and a class of women.
yudhma means a bow and a warrior.

rayā means the honey asura and a wife.
rama means the Mind-Churner (Kāma), the beautiful, and the earth-born aśoka tree.
raśmi means a ray, a horse's bridle,
and the eyelashes.

rāma means the son of Raghu,
the sage Jamadagni,
the Plough-Bearer (Balarāma), a kind of cattle, and the very pleasing.
rāmā means a woman and asafoetida.
rāmaṃ means the vāstuka herb and costus.
rukma means gold and iron,
and masvacalcaṇākare.
rumā means Sugrīva and beauty.
lakṣmī means Śrī and prosperity,
the lotus, the priyaṅgu, and beauty.
vami means one who is sick and vomiting.
vāma means the left, the Seizer, desire, a cloud, and the contrary.
vāmaṃ means the cutter; vāmā means the beautiful.
śami means flour, fruit,
a pod, and equal speech.
śuṣmi means the lord of the day;
śuṣmaṃ is held to mean splendor.
śyāma means green, the dark one,
the banyan tree of Prayāga,
a frog, a cloud, a child, and the old.
śyāmā means the color green,
dark blue, the cāgrāli,
a woman who has not given birth,
the moon creeper, the purging plant,
the sārivā, the guṇḍā,
a dark night, and the priyaṅgu.
śyāmama means a kind of salt and naleśaṃ. śrāma means a sage, time, not earlier, slowness, and dispelling.

mālā means bending, the similar,
and all people.
sīmā means a boundary, time,
a field, a division, and an abode.
srama means the sky and milk.
srasmaṃ is the word for small.
sriṣma means fine and inner.
sūkṣma means the subtle and the exemplar.
soma means the white light, what goes into a hollow,
the Grandsire, and the gods.
syāma means the medicine of the gods, the gri tree,
a kind of wealth, the wind, and a monkey.
himaṃ means snow and frost, sandalwood, and cold.
homi means clarified liquid and butter.
kṣama means the earth and patience.
kṣama means one possessed of patience.
kṣama means flax and the garlanded.
kṣema means gain, protection,
good fortune, and a thief.
kṣaimā means the fierce one and the Seizer.
kṣaumi means linen cloth and dukūla cloth.
adhama means lower and inferior.
āgama means a treatise and scripture.
āśrama means the stages of life such as celibacy,
the dwelling of sages, and an assembly hall.
uttama and uttamaṃ
mean the supreme and the excellent.
kalama means the śāli rice plant,
what is to be engraved, rice, and the essence of lac.
kusumaṃ means a flower, a fruit,
what is born in season, and an eye disease.
kṛtrimaṃ means salt,
sihlaka incense, and the artificial.
godhūma means a kind of grain,

the orange, and a kind of medicine.
gomimi means white dūrvā grass, and also a retinue and orris.
gautama means a kind of sage,
the Lion of the Śākyas. gaudhamī means the hard to traverse and the clear.
tanimaṃ means a cushion,
a canopy, and plaster.
kraḍima means the pomegranate,
karaka, and cardamom.
nigama means a marketplace, pūrbidakaṭaluṇṭī, and a merchant; nigamana means binding, a promise, a machine, and protection.
nirgama means going out from there, and the mind, excellence, and low birth.
nigama means the end of the gods,
a trading town, and nāsita.
pañcama means a kind of rāga (musical mode),
the fives, completing,
the skilled, and also understanding.
pañcame means refuge and a lion cub.
vara means the best among men, the chief,
and appearance. varam means making the sound "o", consent, and the innumerable.
prakrama means occasion and sequence, near sequence, and stage.
pratāba means following,
the tooth-binding plant, and the toothed plant.
prathama means first and chief.
prāharma means a mansion,
a pot, and the top of a mountain.
madhyama means the central country, the supreme, the middle, and what is born in the middle.
madhyamā means the empty sky,
a woman who has seen her menses,
the one with ears, and in metres of three,
the middle one.

vikrama means overcoming, beauty, craft, power, and excellence.
vidruma means the jewel tree, coral, and a sprout.
vibhrama means coquetry,
confusion, and flirtatious acts.
viloma means reversed order,
the hand-goer, a dog, and a noose.
vilomīna means abiding in age, reversing, and killing.
vyāyāma means the hard to traverse,
conduct, restraint, and manly vigor.
saṃkrama means what makes one go,
and the device by which one crosses over water.
sattama means the most venerable,
and also the supreme and the good.
sambhrama means respect,
and also protecting and the good.
suṣamaṃ means beautiful and gathered.
suṣamā means clear,
and also manifest.
suṣima means a kind of snake.
suṣīma means a breeze,
the beautiful, and the cold.
anupama is held to mean the beautiful, praise, and the female elephant of the quarter of the rākṣasas.
abhyāgama means Antaka,
a butcher, an opponent, an admission, and a weapon.
upakrama means restoration, mere approach, and overcoming.
upakrama means going apart and making something one's own.
jalagama means a ball of water,
a crossroads of water, and rus sal.
daṇḍayāna means the day,
the pot-born, and kaunāsa.

parākrama means power,
overcoming, and effort.
plavaṅgama means a frog and a monkey.
nahāpadma means the proud one.
mahāpadma means a number and a treasure, and is also held to be a kind of nāga.
māttavāma means spoiled, wholly consumed, and burnt.
sārvabhauma means one of the elephants of the quarters, and is also held to mean a ruler of the whole earth.
The section of words ending in ma.

ya means the wind and fame,
what attains, bestowing, and what makes go.
yā means the earth, a mātṛkā, fire, a yak-tail whisk, the mūrvā, and murbbahlā.
dyo means the abode of the gods, the Thirty,
and the path.
anu means the incomparable, a kind,
becoming other, and the last.
arthya means the intelligent, knowledge, and bitumen. arghyaṃ means value, meaning, worship, and the worthy;
arghya also means mere application.
arya means a lord and the merchant caste.
āḍhyā means an abode and a chief.
āsyaṃ means the face, the center, and what comes from the mouth.
ihyavāma means desire and giving,
worship, association, and an abode.
ibhya means one who has become rich.
ibhyā means a female elephant and the śallakī tree.
kanyā means a young woman,
a maiden, one of the houses of the zodiac,
and a kind of medicine.
kalyaṃ means dawn and appearance;
kalye, of the day, means healthy and skilled.

kakhyā means the best of men and the bearer of virtue.
kabyaṃ means broken, deserving the whip,
the middle, and irons.
kakṣya means great and gold,
a girdle, and an elephant's girth.
kaṃsyaṃ means the compartments of a mansion and the like, a drinking vessel, what is born of splendor, a kind of substance, and also a kind of musical instrument.
kāya means the body, intrinsic nature, an aggregate,
a hundred thousand, and what arises from the gods.
kāryaṃ means a cause and a purpose.
kāvya means the planet Venus.

kavya means purifying and intelligence.
kāvyaṃ means a particular kind of composition.
kuṭyaṃ means a wall and plastering.
kulya, mātya, means one born of a good family,
one very beneficial to the family, flesh, the sun, a bathing tub, and bone. kulyā means
a small, artificial river, a stream,
a living rattle, and Prahlāda.
kṛtyā means action, the gods,
what is to be divided, such as wealth, and acts of increase; this kṛtya is said of forms such as tavya.
kriyā means karma, action, doing, grasping, skillful means,
undertaking, training, worship, healing, and ascertaining.
gavyaṃ means the bowstring, the milk and other products of the cow, and the substance of a sacrifice.
gavya means of the cow's kind and beneficial.
guhyaṃ means the secret, the private parts,
what is to be hidden, a husband, and a tortoise.
guhyā means a village among branches, a cave,

the nests of birds and wild animals,
the anus, the dependent, and a side.
geya means a singer, a song, and melody.
gohyi means virtue, giving, and a son.
grāmyā means a midwife and a woman.
grāmyaṃ means what is bound up with pleasure, and aślā.
caya means torment, a collection,
and binding at the root.
cavya means the solitary; cavyā means the great and the finest of scents.
citā means the mouth of a corpse pyre, and a mother.
cityaṃ means a shrine of the dead.
caityaṃ means a dwelling place; cityā means a temple and also a mound.
citya means an image of the Buddha, and also a tree much resorted to.
caitya means a question and the wondrous.
cātya means what is to be spoken, and in the manner of cola, the abode of Śrī. chāyā means free of heat, honor,
the closely drawn in, beauty,
a reflection, the sunstone, and keeping in rows.
janī means a mother and a daughter-in-law,
a friend, a servant, joy, benefit, and she who gives birth. janyaṃ means union, reproach, and a time of trade.
janyā means a mother, a female friend, and joy.
jantu means a living creature, fire, and the supreme abode.
jaya means the victorious and victory.
jayā means a kind of dharma, a disease,
the victorious goddess, friend of Umā,
the beneficial, and the unguarded.
jātyaṃ means the well-born and the chief.
tārkṣya is held to mean a bird, the garuḍa,
the charioteer of the sun,
a chariot, a horse, the horse-ear tree, and the like.
takṣyaṃ means the liquid of an eye salve.

tiṣya means a flower, a portion,
and holding. trayī means the three Vedas, the third, and is rightly held to mean completeness.
dasyu means an enemy and a thief.
dāya means sarcasm, explanation, wealth such as a dowry, a gift,
a share and the like, a price, and a thing of cattle.
divyaṃ means with a path, the clove, and a flower. divyā means the myrobalan. divyaṃ means wealth such as color.
dāthyā means a tent and clothing.
daitya means an asura; daityā means liquor, the fierce one, and also a physician.
dravyaṃ means coral and wealth,
the transformation of wood, producing,
medicine, earth and the like, destroying, and taming.
dhanya means rice and the myrobalan.
dhanya means one possessed of merit.
dhānaṃ means grain and barley.
dhiṣṇyaṃ means a lunar mansion and a house.
naya means power, an abode, a mother,
a system, and a particular kind of messenger.
nāṭyaṃ means the threefold art of music, and coquetry.
nityaṃ means the permanent and the certain.
pathyā is held to mean the myrobalan;
pathyaṃ means the beneficial itself.
vadya means the common caste; padyaṃ means a verse; padyā means the path of men.
padya means complete transformation, and the vitingi. yāṃyaṃ means reproach and a drink.
pīyu means the sun, an owl, and time.
puṇyaṃ means a good deed, Dharma,
one possessed of merit, and the pleasing.
pūjye means one worthy of homage.

peyaṃ means what is to be drunk, and a gruel.
peyā means what is to be cooked and a calf's heart.
prāya means mostly, many, and the alike,
a bed, and the lord of death.
priya means joy, swift, and an old medicine.
vanyaṃ means what comes from the forest.
vanye means a multitude and forest water.
vandhyaṃ means a barren woman.
vandhya means the victorious and a tree without fruit.
balyaṃ means the chief, what gives strength, and holding.
barlu means the one with the best, and the fifth lake.
vindhyā means the cutter and the beautiful.
vindhya means oil and refuting.
bīṅgi means might, seminal fluid, splendor, and power.
vaśyā means a woman with a following.
vaiśyaṃ means the merchant caste and ketana.
bha means real fear and individual fear, great confidence, bending, crookedness, joy, action, and the dye tree.
bhavya means the good and making fortunate.
bhavye means the true, virtue,
the fitting, and the one with essence.
bhāgyaṃ means the nature of virtue, accomplishing, and virtuous and nonvirtuous karma.
bhṛtyā means a subject and a hired man.
matsya means a fish and a kind of fish, and also the king of trees.
madhyaṃ means what joins and what is wholly joined,
a caste, an occasion, and the last.
manyu means an asura, a sacrifice, and anger.
maya means the craftsman asura,
an elephant, and a horse.
mayu means a wild animal and a kiṃnara.
māyā means one in new clothing and a god-man.
māya means deceit, compassion, sāṃbarī magic, and intelligence.

mālyaṃ means a garland of flowers.
mūlyaṃ means a price and a thing.
mṛtyu means a kinsman and the gods.
medhyaṃ means medura.
medhyā means food and orris.
vārya means the pure; medhyaṃ means a support.
vāyu means a horse and a sacrificial horse.
yāmyā means ripening and expansion.
yāmyā means the Mountain Rat and sandalwood.
yagya means a lute and the supreme.
gārdhya means power and the sinful.
yogya means smasa and the sunstone.
yogya means wealth and medicine.
rathyā means crooked, a crossroads,
a road, and chariots.
rathya means a horse that draws a chariot.
ramyaṃ means delighting the mind; ramyā means what is supremely considered.
ramya means the campaka tree.
rūpyaṃ means respect, gold, silver,
the manner of the excellent four, what is to be obtained, what is obtained, and reasoning.
laya means the alike, such as dance, coquetry, and the unmixed.
lakṣyaṃ means a number, the spending of arrows, and a house. lāsyaṃ means the threefold art of music and a woman's dance.
vikṣya means the play of horses,
what is to be seen, and the wondrous.
brahmyā means a group and consecration,
and also varyaṭana.
śayyā means a bed and a mat, a snake, a hand,
the possession of a bed itself,
and also the composing of words.
śalya means the porcupine and the intoxicating tree.
śamya means a peg, an arrow,
a bamboo stick, and a great arrow.

śūnyā means the hollow one. śūnyaṃ is held to mean without people.
śauryaṃ means heroism itself,
and also conduct and escaping.
saṃkhyaṃ means going together and number,
oneness and the like, and discarding.
taya means beyond the world.
satya means truth, a pair of truths,
and divine substance. satyā means speech.
satyaṃ means possessing that, a boundary, the accumulated, a kind of river, the all-holding,
a promise, intention, and the law.
savya means the left side and the near.
śavyaṃ means a weapon, rice, a quality,
seven stones, sauḍhya,
health, and patience.
sādhya means a kind of yoga,
a group, the gods, and also what is to be accomplished.
sāya means an arrow and the evening.
sūrya means the lord of the day; his beloved,
and a kind of medicine, is sūryā.
sevyaṃ means worthy of service, the root of a reed, and service. saumyā means the beautiful creeper.
stheya means placing in front.

smaya means words of dispute, a settled conclusion, rescuing, pride, and the wondrous.
hārya means the parura tree and what is to be seized. hridya means subjugating, a mantra of the Vedas, knowledge, and medicine.
hṛdya means a life of a hundred years,
the joy of the heart, and the essence.
kṣaya means laying down, the end of the eon, an abode, and a particular kind of person.
adyaya means refuting,
a command, transgressing the order, and the staff of destruction.

adhiṣya means without a footing,
a great heap, and a particular kind of river.
anaya means poverty,
fortune, a system, and the abode of nonvirtue.
apataṃ means a little girl.
abhaya means fearlessness;
abha also means vanapa.
abhiya means uśīra.
abhikhyā means renown and fame,
the fame of the good, and names.
avadyaṃ means deserving death,
the meaningless, and reviling.
aśvīya means a herd of horses and what benefits horses. ahalyā means a goddess, a kind of Śrī, and the queen of Gautama.
mahārma means a mountain and the firm.
ātithuk means a butcher's son and a butcher. ātreyī means a menstruating woman, the son of the knower of the stream, and a particular kind of river.
ātraiya means a kind of sage.
āditya means the sun and a god.
āmnāya means instruction that has been heard.
āśaya means intention,
a basis, a support, and dependence on another.
āśraya means a storehouse,
the stained, and she who explains anything.
indriyaṃ means the mind;
indriya means the object and the faculty.
udaya means the eastern mountain and rising.
upāya means conciliation and the like,
skillful means, and approaching.
ūrṇāyu means a woolly sheep,
a blanket, and destruction in an instant.
aiṇeyaṃ means the skin of the female black antelope, and a particular kind of binding in the joy of love.

aucitye means freedom itself,
truth, and the fitting.
kambaya means niryama,
a kind of elixir, an ointment,
a limb of desire, and fragrant red.
kāleya means a kind of asura.
kāmeyaṃ means a portion of time.
kulāya means like blue,
a blue bird, and an abode.
kaukṛtya means remorse
and acting without understanding.
gāṅgeyaṃ means the mustaka sedge, gold, and kaśeru.
gāṅgeya means a troop,
Bhīṣma, and the son of Gaṅgā.
cakṣuṣe means kaṭika,
the white lotus tree, and the essence of eye salve.
kuśalyaṃ means good fortune and what benefits the eyes. campeya means śyāpaka, the destroying arrow, the stamen of a flower, and gold.
jaghanyaṃ means the last, reproach, and the remainder. jaṭāyu means a kind of bird and the guggulu tree. tapasyā means celibacy, austerity, and the Phalgunī star.
devayu means one who possesses Dharma, and devayātrika.
dvitīyā means the very distinct,
and what completes sale.
nādeyī means the victorious woman,
the hidden jambu, and the water willow.
nikāya means the self and a house.
jabā means raṅgagiguṣṭha, accord with Dharma, a certain descent, a weapon, gathering, and mixing.
naipathyaṃ means one who dyes
and one who fully accomplishes.

payasya means gruel,
a fair complexion, a milch cow, and what benefits milk. varya means an abode, thunder, and making sound.
paryāya means a synonym,
an emanation, distinguishing, and an arrow.
pānīya means what is to be drunk, and water.
pāruṣa means Jupiter.
pāruṣyaṃ means harshness,
and also the grove of Śakra.
paulastya means the lord of the kiṃnaras, the grandson of Broad Light, and Daśagrīva.
pratīrle means the rotted hand-grown,
and a rite spread out with certainty.
praṇaya means joy,
intimacy, and asking.
praṇāya means burning and casting away,
the wholly undesired, and expression.
pratyaya means an oath, a reason, knowledge, trust, certainty,
the state of being a suffix such as sīnta,
a hole, an abode, conduct, and the dependent.
pramaya means death, the end of the eon, and those who have fainted.
prāpya means accord with the path, and possessing intrinsic nature. palaya means a beam, a pot, a disease of the neck, and a bracelet.
bāleya means bañjikā,
a donkey, and vasihita.
brahmaṇya means sanu,
vṛṣa, and the good of Brahmā.
brāhmaṇyaṃ means a brahmin and an assembly of brahmins.
bhujiṣya means a bad friend and a cord on the hand. bhujiṣyā means a dependent woman and a servant of the merchant caste.
bhūṣācyu is held to mean great light,

and cool rays.
bhrātṛvya means a cousin's offspring.
maṅgalyaṃ means curd, auspiciousness, and the pleasing. maṅgalyā means the bilva fruit, the aśvattha tree, the lentil, and the protecting.
maṅgalyā means the clear one,
the hundred-flowered plant, the priyaṅgu, the downward-looking flower, white sesame,
the conch flower, and orris.
malaya means a country and a kind of mountain,
a pleasure garden, and a part of a mountain.
malayā also means the purging plant.
mṛgayu is said of a brahmin.
gomamu means diseases.
rahasya means what is to be hidden.
rahasyā means a kind of river.
lohityaṃ means red,
a grain, and a particular kind of river.
vaktavya means reproach and the inferior, and the dependent. madāhya means good speech and the cutter, victory, and the path of the Victor.
vijayā means Gaurī,
her female friend, and a kind of dharma.
vinaya means taming, a system,
and a net. viśalyā means a woman's crest, an elephant, guḍūcī, the purging plant,
and also freedom from a thorn.
vismaya means wonder and pride.
viṣaya means conduct and the sense object, and is also definitely used for the object of the faculties;
it is also known to mean the knowledge of relations and the like.
vyavāya means great joy,
and is also rightly known to mean invisibility.
vyavāyaṃ means splendor.

śiṇḍayaṃ means a kind of sage and a particular purifying bilva fruit.
śālyayaṃ means the hundred-flowered plant,
and also what is born of flesh.
śīrṣaṇya means the expanded,
the hair, and the one with a peak.
śaileyaṃ means sea salt,
a palm leaf, and what is born of rock.
śvaśurya means a mother-in-law,
a pot, and śyāleka.
pannaya means support from behind,
power, a system, and gathering.
samaya means a tenet,
an oath, conduct, right knowledge,
the kinds of things to be taught by it,
time, and also conventions.
saraṇyu means the water-giver,
the wind, power, fitness, and strength.
bau means anāyapa,
and also the activity of a boar.
saurabhyaṃ means fragrance, beauty, a quality, and respect.

saṃstyāya means entering everywhere, shape, the broad, and the neck.
tirṇyaṃ means inexhaustible substance,
the supreme, gold, seminal fluid,
and also a kind of pride.
hṛdeyaṃ means the essence and the heart.
kṣipaṇyaṃ means a fragrant body.
kṣitraya means another's body,
what is fit to be healed, a field, a root, another's wife, joy,
what is to be accomplished, and diseases.
anuśaya means remorse,
close connection, and aversion.
antaśayyā means death,

a bed on the ground, and the charnel ground;
without the right, not the right, and the contrary.
avabyana means pride.
upakārya means ltami, the master's abode,
and a kind of benefit.
kātraveya means lead,
the life of flesh, and weapons.
upakraya means healing,
undertaking, and killing,
the age of the moon, a canopy,
the self, and a kind of medicine.
jālāśaya means the basin of the waters.
jalaśayaṃ means the reed-giver.
taṇḍulīya means the viḍaṅga tree, the small māri, torment, a root, the empty,
the fruit of the kataka, and a broad garland.
dhanaṃjaya means a horse and the body,
an elephant, the wind, fire, and the kakubha tree.
niramaya means faultless thought.
paribāma means the abode of waters;
naṃtamba, and the fully covered.
pāñcajenya means the conch of Hṛṣīkeśa, and vāṭaga.
pauruṣeya means manly vigor,
a division of words, a herd, killing,
and things made by man.
vitabāyaṃ means fear and the terrifying. pratiśrama means a meeting place and an abode.
phalaṃdaya means the fruits, arising, gain, and the realm of threefold play.
pileśaya means a child and a snake.
bhāgadheyaṃ means fortune,
the hand, and a share.
bhṛtandṛya means doing,
and a gathering of sound and its domain.

mahodboye means origin, liberation, dumo, and rgurmo.
yahālama means a monastery,
a temple of the non-Buddhists, and the supreme lord.
mahāmūlyi means of great value,
such as the ruby.
mājāriya means the common caste and practicing the conduct of a cat.
ratenyaya means hanging down, killing,
surplus, and the mongoose.
samucchaya means rising and stopping.
samudāya means an assembly,
union, and near sequence.
samūdāya means the leading of an assembly, and sound.
sambaraya means battle,
decline, and future time.
salaṅgaya means sound and a name, play, cattle, and birds.
sthūlocchaya means ends,
logs, stones, ears of grain, and the middle of the elephants.
What is called akutobhayaṃ means a temple and akīndiśīka.
kālānupāryaṃ means a tree,
the śiśapa, the time-born,
and what is born from a mountain.
What is called dugdhatālī means the milk of raw milk, the foamy, and then the tsamsa of milk,
and tatapaṇḍakīṭa.
What is called pravacanīya means the excellent expressed and the excellent expresser.
What is called pṛṣakabāyī means Śrī, sequence, the nourisher, and the woman supreme among a hundred.
patyuṅgamanīyaṃ means
what is to be kept close by, and cleansed clothing.

viśvaksenapriyā means
Padmā and the protector.
The section of words ending in ya.

ra means the fire of desire, fire, and the sharp.
rā means atog and yellow.
ru means sound, fear, and a portion.
ri means the day-maker and the earth.
gro means what is to be cut and what cooks.
ghrā means the nose and smelling.
dra means a tree, the day,
gold, and one with the form of desire.
śrī means Śrī, Sarasvatī, beauty, wisdom, the pine tree, entering, the excellence of the three groups, attire, and the beneficial.
sru means dripping and the sound of flowing water.
hrī means viḍa and shame.
agraṃ means the chief and the supreme,
what has become the peak, surplus and the like,
the front, power, pride,
a brahmin, beauty, light,
worship, and raising.
aṅgamasrimbekhāṇḍisva means the sharp,
and also madhorihe, the mountain-born.
rantra means the swift, the crooked body,
and going swiftly.
asraṃ means red and a request.
asra means a corner and hair.
astraṃ means a weapon, a bow, and what has gone to its place.
ārā means piercing leather.
ārā means the earth-born and Saturn.
aru means a kind of tree,
a small monkey, and the fanged one.
indra means Śakra, darkness itself,
the lord of yogins, and a serpent's hood.
ira means an elixir, a retinue, and holding,

and things by the unequal.
ugra means the fierce, calling,
the son of a common caste woman, and the Seizer.
ugrā means black orris, binding,
a she-camel, and a great she-elephant.
uṣṭi means a woman who keeps cattle.
usra means light; usrā means a cow and the upper protector.
aindri means a crow and the victorious one.
edra means the japā tree
and a kind of liquor.
aṃghṛ means the foot; praṃ means the eldest.
kadru means gold and tawny.
kari means the hand and hailstones.
kāra means killed, a mātṛkā, a mountain, certainty, separate effort, and the Mighty One. sārā means a kinsman, a town, binding, gold, the done, tormenting,
a female messenger, and attendance.
kāru means sewing,
a doer, and one of all crafts.
kāri means action and a barber.
kīra means a region and a parrot.
kuru means a kind of ruler, food, Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva), and what removes poison.
kṛcchaṃ means hardship, sin, torment, and the like.
krūra means fierce and pitiless.
kroṣṭi means a jackal, milk, destruction, and the veda tree.
khara means a donkey, lhaseg,
the sharp-mouthed, a toothless snake, white, and the leaf of the kola.
gara means a particular disease.
garaṃ means poison and what makes a lesser poison.
gātraṃ means the best of elephants and the body, and the kinds of limbs such as the thigh.

giri means a mountain, the mountainous,
a seat, an eye, destruction,
and also voice, word, and melody.
kuru means doing service and the like,
brahmins and the like, the god of mantras,
the great, the moving, and the potter.
guṇḍra means the splendid.
gundā means a full measure of rice, a canopy,
the priyaṅgu, and a crooked dance.
gṛdhra means a kind of lu ba bird.

gotra means the earth-holder, a mountain; gotraṃ means lineage, and also the kṣatra and a name, craving, harm, and the moon,
and also the path and the forest.
godrā means a cow and a herd of cattle.
gora means the maker of night, the moon,
the dawn, white, and the pure.
gori means the daughter of the mountain, the water goddess, consort of Varuṇa, and the lot of terror,
a river, a drawing, and a nurse;
tawny and bright are also meant, and the priyaṅgu.
gauraṃ means destruction, white,
white mustard, Padmaka, and a lake.
ghapra means the day and harming.
ghori denotes the terrifying, and is a name of Umā. ghora means the knotted one.
cakranaṃ means the ruddy goose and an assembly.
cakre means a part of a chariot, an army,
a network of villages, a whirlpool of water,
a potter, and the accomplishing of a task,
a vessel, a province, and a kind of weapon.
citraṃ means the variegated, the wondrous,
the painted all over, a forehead mark, and the sky.
citā means a lunar mansion, she who causes hearing,
a serpent, and a kind of goddess,

the mouse-leaf plant, the goṭumba gourd, Bhadrā, and a female elephant.
ciraṃ means cloth, a topknot, lead, and a cow's udder.
ciri means a loincloth, and a kāpini; cikra means the sour and the water willow.
cuśrī means the cag; cugri is held to be the emblic myrobalan tree.
citra means a month and a kind of mountain,
the dead, and a shrine.
cora means a thief and a fine conch.
chatra means a covering against the heat.
chetrā means the honeyed one, Sichuan pepper, and the rock of Indra.
jāra means a lord who gives satisfaction, a lover.
jāri means certainty and a kind of medicine.
jīra means cumin and a sword, and ṭāra means a weapon and a swift goer.
tintri means the chief, a philosophical system, learning, a particular branch,
the upkeep of servants and wife, a treatise,
a cause, a covering,
the one with threads, the single supreme,
the established, and a means of accomplishment.
tantri means knowledge, a quality,
a word, the guḍūcī vine,
an eye, and haste.
tari means a chest for clothes and such, a boat, and a box.
tānaṃ means copper and the red dawn.
tāra means very high, a bow, pearls and the like well purified, ferrying across, the pure, and the freed.
tāraṃ means silver, a star,
the wife of Sugrīva and the wife of the Guru (Bṛhaspati), a goddess born among the followers of the Buddha,
and the pupil at the center of the eye.

tīra means austerity, a shore, a bank, those of the east and of the west.
tīpraṃ means loud crying, completeness, and possessing that eye.
hībri means the shoots of dūrvā grass,
fragrant dūrvā,
the bamboo-bearing, and the luxuriant.
totraṃ means a goad, frightening, and casting away.
dari means a mountain cave, and the sense of "a little."
dapra means a donkey and a horse.
daru means the tree of the gods and wood.
dvāraṃ means a door and assent.
dhura means a tortoise, cattle, killing,
and cotton. dhara means the bearer,
the seat of the essence, and the earth.
dhādrī means one who transforms, a doe,
a foster mother, and the ketakī.
dhvara means the bearer and abundant rain.
dvana means a garland, harm, a substance, going, a horse's gait, the tailed one,
the edge of a sword and the like,
the van of an army, the eye, a kind of collar, turmeric, and the night.
dhira means wise, steady, broad, and gentle.
dhīraṃ means saffron. nakra means the deep. natra means the tip of the nose and the fierce.
nāras means the Victor and a man.
mārā means a mother and camphor.
nāra means a lineage. vāna means water. nāpra means of the lord of night. nipri means the strong, a felly, Revatī, and the forest.
netraṃ means an eye, the root of a tree, cloth, a quality, a chariot, and dance.
neta denotes silk and a leader.
patri means a leaf, the winged one,

a side, and a guide. para means the supreme,
oneself, this, and the hidden.
paraṃ is held to mean the imperishable and some.
pātri means a vessel, a minister,
the fitting, the distance between two banks,
the blade of a ladle and the like,
and the space between facing banks.
pārī means a sea monster, completion,
vānta, the pārava,
and the rope for an elephant's foot.
punta means an asura, a kind of sugarcane,
a white lotus, an insect,
the variegated, an abode,
the earth, and liquor. suraṃ means a city, a pale shoot, and a house, an upper story, a village, and the body.
pura means guggulu. burā means former times. puru means heaven, a particular king, and brahya.
parā means a thief. pura means a kind of powder, a stream, and the thorough washing of a wound.
potraṃ means cloth, the tip of the face, and also a boar's snout, to be understood likewise.
paura denotes one in the city.
pauraṃ means grass. bakra means slow going. bakraṃ naṃ denotes a kind of leaper.
vakra means the crooked and the angry.
badhru means a village and the eyes.
badhu means a subtle sage,
a mongoose, a shank, a vajra,
the tawny, and the broad.
bar means the lord of a maiden, a bridegroom, ṣilga, the gods and the like, deceiving, and comes to mean encircling.
baraṃ is held to mean saffron,

and also the chief, and a particular state of mind.
birā means the three fruits and a boat.
barī means the cow-victor and the loin plant.
vāra means a day, of the sun and the rest,
a door, an occasion, and the Seizer.
bhara means the bent, a wine vessel, and a multitude.
vāri means an elephant's tethering post and the like, and the body.
vāri means the goddess Sarasvatī.
bari means modesty and water.
vāsra means the day. vasaṃ means the intoxicant and a crossroads where four ways meet.
vīra means the very heroic and the complete.
biraṃ means a root, and vairaṃ a man,
the plantain, the gambhārī,
the tamāla, the lavālu,
the kṣīrīpī, the kākolī,
the lord of milk, the woman with sons,
the udumbara, a cowshed,
and the destroying of milk.
brenta means the giver, Śakra (Indra) and the rest,
the destroyer, the cloud, and sounds.
bhadra means the Seizer, the enjoyment of pleasure,
a tree, the maruka, the dandha,
the chief elephant, and the good.
bhadri means a kind of act,
a canopy, bliss, and gold.
bhadrā means the one who casts off, a medicine, the subtle,
the unbent, and the kaṭphala. bhara means the supremely excellent and raw sugar.
bharu means a companion and gold.
bhāra means free from killing. balā means gold and twenty thousand.
bhiru means one chosen as Indra, fear, and a kind of nāsikā.
bhūri means brārjya, gold, Brahmā, Indra, and a hero.
mantā means a kind of Veda, secret speech, and the accomplishing of gods and the like.

maru means a desert and the mountain-born.
mātraṃ means a limit and what is held by it.
mātraṃ means a covering, wealth, slight pride, an earring, and the body of a letter. māra means an obstructor, death, and the god Vṛṣa.
māri means the fierce and the ending of birth.
mitra means a friend and the sun.
mīra means a ray of light, a mountain, and water.
mura means an asura, and killing.
yātā means going to a spectacle, going,
and the festivals of the gods.
rāṣṭaṃ means a country and producing.
ruru means a deer and a kind of asura.
retraṃ means semen, nectar, quicksilver, and a place for cloth.

rodhā means a hunter's son. lodhaṃ means lac, sin, and the absence of accomplishment. rotrāṃ means a fierce woman.
raudra means
the fierce and the terrifying,
a kind of Indra, and a door.
bakraṃ means bajra, and the lower part of what has strings.
bajra means wealth, arrogance,
children, and the emblic myrobalan.
rabra means a pa and a bank.
kṣetra means the mind and dust.
geraṃ means the body, the opened, and the wind.
byagra means reversed understanding and thorough agitation.
byāghra means separation and the karañja tree, the blood-filled, and an egg. byaghi means touch, the chief, and abiding in another.
śabkra means Śakra (Indra) and the Arjuna tree.
rtatri means the lord of bliss and the like, and a cloud.
garu means a vajra and the wrathful one.
cāra means a woman of great splendor.

śari means water and a knife.
sastī means a knife, a weapon, and iron.
śar means the variegated and the wind.
śāri means a bird, the tawny color, fighting, the going of an elephant, fastening, and doing.
śātraṃ means a pillar and a teaching.
śigru means doubt and a branch.
bajra means the body and the essence.
śighra means swift and ferrying across.
śukra means Venus, the mother, and the chief.
śukraṃ means semen, a disease of the eye, and white. śubhraṃ means a cloud,
a lamp, and white.
śura is explained as the beautiful and the heroic.
sūra is also seen to mean the sun.
śatraṃ means a sacrifice, constant giving, fraud, an abode, and a forest.
sara means a necklace and the tip of the birch.
sāṃtraṃ means the dense, the earth, and forests. bāraṃ
means reasoning, water, and wealth.
sāra means marrow, a portion, and the coarse.
pibra means the burning of fever and water.
pipra means a particular river.
sīra means a plough and the lord of the day.
sura means a god. surā means liquor and a drinking vessel.
sūtraṃ means what indicates, a bow, thread, and arrangement.
sthiraṃ means the unmoving, liberation,
the leaf of the śala, and the earth.
sphar means baring the teeth,
a water pitcher and the like, and the lord of bubbles.
sara means the letter a and the rest,
the high tone and the rest, the middle and the rest,
the soundless, fear, and the wind.

svari means the self-willed and the slow.
svaru means a vajra, a sacrifice, an arrow,
a cake, and a piece.
hari means Viṣṇu, the lord of all,
the moon, the wind, Indra, fire, Yama, a snake, a frog, a monkey,
a horse, a parrot, a kind of world,
the tawny, and the Seizer.
hāra means a pearl necklace and a weapon.
hisraṃ means a crow, a fruit, and flesh. hipraṃ means destroying.
hīra means pīsīlikā,
Śrī, a diamond, and Śaṅkara (Śiva).
hobā means a kind of drawing,
a kind of treatise, a house, and half of a lunar conjunction.
kṣara means a cloud, and kṣaraṃ water.
kṣara means molasses, ash, essence, the bad, and salt.
kṣiraṃ means milk and water.
kṣutra means the small, the lowest,
the angry, and the miserly.
kṣutrā means a noblewoman, a dancer,
the bodiless, and the great destroyer of essence.
hośā means the kaṇḍakāri,
the caṃgerī, and the makṣika.
kṣura means nāsita, the helper,
the bze ma, and ambar.
kṣetraṃ means the body, a wife,
a sickle, the accomplished, and abodes.
kṣautra also means milk.
aṃgura means the śapa tree.
yaṅkake means the light.
aṅkura means a sprout,
body hair, water, and blood.
aṃgāra means ignorance,
the auspicious, and the unburnt.
ajaṃra means the wind, a woman,

a region of the body, and dardar.
andira means a man's potency.
adhara means a tooth, an abode,
the low, and the thighless.
adhara means a kind of ground,
not knowing, and devotion.
antari means difference,
the distinguished, room,
the self and separation from what is one's own,
inside, outside, between, and boundary, its purpose, for the sake of, occasion, and a hole.
saparaṃ means the timely purpose,
and also the hindquarters of an elephant;
anāce and netra are said.
avara means joy,
the mother of existence, and the last.
avari means the end of an elephant's shank, and the hinder part removed.
avara means a god, a bone,
the gathered, a vajra, and a tree.
amārā means the city of Indra, dūrvā grass, kava, and guṭūci.
ambari means cloth, cotton,
the sky, attachment, and fragrance.
araraṃ means a covering and a door panel.
asura means a rākṣasa, fire,
an asura, and the sun.
akṣaraṃ means Brahmā,
the sky, and a letter.
ākara means birth and an abode,
and is explained as what flows from it and the chief.
ākāra means indicating by a hint,
a shape, and calling.
ādāra means a support,
a ground, and a water-holder.
āsāra means an expanse,
the bearer, rain,

a friend, and strength.
aṃguri means dimness of sight, disturbance, great strength, and the good.
āhāra means food,
eating, seizing, and gathering.
itada means sāmara,
another, the established, the healthy, and the swift.
itvara means piercing with the horn,
the low, a wayfarer, and an act of strife.
iśvara means the wealthy,
Śiva, a lord, and Manmatha (Kāma), churner of the mind.
īśvarī means a lady,
the White One, the mighty lady, and the withering one.
attara means different words,
and also princes.
uttara means the north, above,
the later, and the superior.
udara means the belly,
fighting, recognition, conduct, and an instant.
udāra means a cutter,
the great, one worthy of offerings, and the proper.
andarā means the ground,
the eating of all crops,
a stream of water, a seasonal offering, fragrance, and kṣariṃ.
auśīri means one-pointed,
a single note, the undisturbed,
the handle of a yak-tail fan, a single utterance, a bed, and a seat. kacchuri means sāmana and moving.
kacchurā means
finding evil, knowing evil,
a peak, the śimbi,
and the sārī. kañjara means sound,
the sun, Brahmā, a sage, and the belly.
kaṭvari is held to mean a wheel,
and the despised. Then kaṭvasū.
rambaṃ means śīpa, the giver of eyes,

Nairṛti, and the youthful.
kaṭitraṃ means a waistcloth,
the golden, and a part made of leather.
kaḍāra means tawny,
a subject, and the tawny color.
kaṇiru means the karṇikāra tree,
a female elephant, and entering.
ganeru also means the same.
kadara means a kind of acacia,
a saw, and disease.
śrena. kandara means a mountain cave.
kandara and kandhārā
mean a cloud and the neck.
kurara means a kind of bird, a dog, a saw, and the blind. karīra means a bamboo shoot, a pot,
and also a kind of tree.
kabarī means an arrangement of the hair,
and also a kind of branch.
kabaraṃ means salt,
the sour, gold, and a bolt of cloth.
karparana means a cake,
a kind of weapon, and a basin.
karkarī means a water jar,
an insect, a mirror, and the firm.
karīrī means a small bee,
the root of a tooth, and an elephant.
karbura means a rākṣasa,
a small sin, and gold.

karburī means a mass of black.
karbura means the variegated.
karburā means a jackal.
karburaṃ means a tiger.
kalatraṃ means eating again and again,
a place hard to reach, a wife, and the hips.
kāntara means calamity and the like,

a treasury, and a particular act.
kāntāraṃ means a road hard to travel, and also a great wilderness.
kābere means a kind of river, turmeric, looking, and a woman.
kāsmīri means saffron.
cikura means moving, light,
a house, the broad, a serpent,
the Mountain Rat, and a kind of tree.
chitvaraṃ means a cutting implement,
the bad, and the hostile.
chidira means a great light,
an axe, a sword,
and a rope. jaṭharaṃ means the belly and the tightly bound.
jaṃbi means nature, the jambiri tree, a measure of grain, and flowers.
jarjara means the old,
the tattered, and the banner of the abode.
jalentā means Varuṇa,
the ocean, and Jambhala.
jasuri means the vajra thunderbolt.
jhajhara means the age of strife,
a kind of musical instrument, and a kind of tree.
jhalarī means cymbals,
the bound, the musical instrument huḍuka,
a child, and the holder of a wheel.
ḍagara means ṭaṃganḍa,
ṭira, kure,
wandering about, and a sphere of activity.
ṭaṃgāra means a bowstring, sound, fame, and wonder.
bringira means what is to be discarded.
tiṃgara means vomiting, and ṭaṭṭharī means hanging,
an army signal, a musical instrument, and lying.
tamipharaṃ means dimness of sight and anger.

tamiśrā means a dark night, and the praise of darkness. tittiri means a small bird and a sage.
timiraṃ means a storm of darkness, darkness, gloom,
craving, and a black cloud.
tambutī means śulī,
āḍū, and glory.
tuṣāraṃ means by nature a kind of snow,
and what cools.
bhūpara means the astringent,
a horn, the best of waters, and a man with a beard.
tvakyantrā means one with hands.
takyanta means the best of limbs.
dandhara means the turning of a potter's wheel, an elephant in rut, and a machine for arrows.
dantura means the uneven,
and teeth that are high and low.
dahara means a liar,
a younger brother, and the dark.
dartara means a kind of mountain, and denotes the slightly broken.
dardura means sālapa,
Malaya, cymbals,
bhaṃdra, and a kind of mountain.
darurā means wealth, crystal, and a network of villages. durdura.
dāsera means a son fit to be a servant.
durduraṃ means the hard to grasp,
the ṛṣabha medicine, the asuras and the like,
the threefold play, Viṣṇu, the Dvāpara age, doubt, and a pair.
dhūpara means a brazier,
the few, and the utmost limit.
narendra means the protector of the earth,
a physician for poisons, and a cutter.

narmara means the sun, a horse, foam, a tortoise, a cow, and fire.
narmarī means thuni, an elephant,
a mountain cave, the partless, and muralā.
nāgara means a city dweller,
the skilled, and the broad.
nāgaraṃ means the gla sgang root, dry ginger, and the binding of love.
nikara means a multitude, the essence,
a gift fit for the family, and a kind of multitude.
nikara means wealth,
glory, and arrangement.
nirjarā means the ageless, piśaga, casting off old age,
the leaf of the tāla palm, and guḍūcī.
nirbara means the shameless,
the fearless, and hard heartwood.
niṣṭhura means the shameless and sva.
nibara means a merchant and the substantial. buṃkura means a bridge, a staircase, water moss, and the bends of a stream.
buṃjara means the body.
pañjaraṃ means a birdcage.
padāra means the dust of the feet,
and what clings to the feet.
pavitraṃ means copper, water,
the righteous, the purifier, and the pure. baṭīra means a sickle, a root, the rooted,
a sparrow, bamboo, pollen, and conduct.
bāṇḍuraṃ means color,
marubakaṃ, and what has it.
sāmara means the lowly and the deluded, and also one who dwells in the sky.
parbara means a king's sacrifice, fear, and the dregs of food.

pije means ash,
mītra, matted hair, nipaka,
and possessions. piñjiraṃ means gold, yellow, and a kind of horse.
biṭhara means the nose.
piṭharaṃ means churning and musta grass. piṇḍīra means the buffalo's gait and the shedding of branches.
pīpara means a tortoise's back.
puṣkaraṃ means the sky, water,
the tip of an elephant's trunk, a lotus, attachment, a weapon, the earth, medicine,
an island, a kind of bank,
a lake, an arrow, a sword, a fruit,
the body of a musical instrument, and a mouth.
prakara means kurumba,
and scattered flowers and the like.
prakaraṃ is to be known as joṅgaka.
prakarī means
a crossroads and a forest.
prakāra means the similar and a kind.
prākhara means the very rough,
armor for horses and the like,
a mule, and a dog.
pradara means a split within,
the śarabha, and songs.
prāntaraṃ means the long, giving up,
a road, a forest, and the frontier.
pravaraṃ means a lineage and a family.
pravara means the supreme.
prasara means the thoroughly clear, force, and leading forth.
prastara means obtaining a jewel.
pañcara means dung,
a sheath, and a palm twig.
prasara means bakoṭa,
sthaśi, karañja, and a family.

badaraṃ means the jujube,
cotton, and fruit.
badarā means Elāpattra, Viṣṇu's stride, and a medicine.
bandhura means binding,
joy, and binding separately.
badhurā means a sky-goer,
a goose, and the best of women.
baratāna means the private part and mere entering. barbara means curled arrangement of the hair and the lowly.
barbarā means pañjikā,
a branch, and flowers.
vāgara means the uninhabited, śāgha, conduct, the wind-wrapped,
the wish to speak, and the fearless.
vāsara means the day and attachment.
pāsurā means the lord of the earth and kṣu.
bhārloru means a peak.
Of which supa is the best of women, and that also means a deer and a kind of mountain.
bhāskara means the sun and fire.
bhraṃgāri means a bee.
bhṛgara means a golden pitcher,
the lustful, a bee, and bhara.
A stone, a fly, and bhramara.
makara means the seizer of men,
a treasure, and a division of the zodiac.
baskura means a mirror, mukura,
a mirror, the bakura tree,
a stalk, and the flower of kulāla, ballāka. mañjarī
means an ear of grain, a large pearl, and the tilaka tree.
matsara means virtue and hatred,
a path, and a quarrel. matsarā means avarice and a fly.

madāra means sindhipa
and the bad. maddhutra means a bee and the radiant.
madhura means māśa.
madhuraṃ means a kind of poison.
madhura means a subtle essence and the displeasing. madhurā means a honeycomb, the hundred-flowered plant, and a kind of town;
likewise the honey tree,
nisteyā, and stitching.

mandara means an indicator,
a treasury, and churning.
mandraraṃ means red lead.
manthara means an intoxicant,
a wheel, and the broad.
mandara means heaven,
the mandāra, and the churning mountain.
mandara means the slow and grain.
mandaraṃ means a city
and a house. mandara
means the abode of sea monsters. mandāra means the tree of the gods, the all-good, and the leaf of the arka.
maṃdurā means a stable for horses, and a thing whose purpose is near.
mayura means the crested one.
marmara means cloth without a sound, leaves with much rustling, and a kind of cloth.
marmarī means the yellow tree.
masūra means a lentil,
the similar, and a woman.
mahira means the elder in common usage. mahandra means an abode and a mountain.
maṭhara means the sun's halo and a kind of bird.
mārsārā means a cat,

khadja, and flesh. mudira means the radiant and a cloud.
muṅgara means clods and the like, destroying, what is not a means, and a kind of flower.
murmura means the sun, ta,
the frostless, and calm abiding.
muhira means arrogance and delusion.
rudhira means saffron and blood.
rudhirara means the delighter of the earth.
baṭhara means the hard,
the moving, and baṣṭa.
bakkara means a mount and a sheep.
ballura means dried meat, meat, and the tusked one. balluraṃ means a forest field and descending. ballarī means an ear of grain and dried meat. ballara means a meadow, a place where waters meet, a field of cilu, and a land of herbs.
baśiraṃ means sea salt.
bhagaṇaṃ means dhaka
and kiṇihī. barāṃraṃ
means water and the conch that turns to the right,
the red seed of the guñjā,
and is also to be seen as the insect-born.
basru means incense,
a bird's nest, a house, and a pot.
vikāra means the ugly, disease, destruction, the destroyer, and sound.
vidura means a paṇḍita,
ṣilga, and korabāna.
vidhuri means going apart,
the separated, and the incomplete.
vidura means an elixir.
vībara means a hole, an opening,
an entrance, a corpse, and a pit.
pisara means spreading far and wide.

bastira means vast elaboration.
vistāra, of the broad,
means covering with broad leaves.
viṣṭara means a bundle of Kuśa grass,
a seat, and what is born from the earth.
vihāra means roaming,
a group, the abode of the Sugata, and a place of play.
śakārī means a kind of meter,
a kind of river, and a girdle.
śaśāraṃ means a mound in the middle of water.
dundrarī means a bank.
śaṃkaraṃ means the daughter of the mountain,
the protectress, and the doer of virtue.
śarkarā means gravel,
a land that has it, the cotton-bearing,
raw sugar, a piece, a modification,
and a kind of fine stone.
sarbarī means she of the three watches, turmeric, and a woman.
śavara means a kind of barbarian, Śaṅkara (Śiva), and water.
śakāra means a bull.
śākāraṃ means a kind of meter.
śāṃkari means the lord of obstructors (Gaṇeśa) and the withering one. śārīra means the body-born and a bull.
śarkara means the froth of milk.
śarbaraṃ means the destroyer and black darkness.
śārāraṃ means the groin, a nail,
a ladder, and a birdcage.
śābara means the lac tree,
sin, and the absence of accomplishment.
śābarī is called the bearded śimba. śābaraṃ
also means its nature.
śakharaṃ means a mountain, a tree, a root,
the armpit, the palm, and ends,

the seed of the ripe pomegranate,
the jewel-bearer, and also edges.
śilinda means a kind of fish
and a kind of tree.
śīlīndri means karake,
the flower of things, and the third town.
śīlīndri means a kind of female bird,
the long-legged one, and the sāla.
śiśira means, among the seasons,
the frosty, and the frozen.
śīkara means the variegated,
the wind, the motionless, and the watery.
śuṣiraṃ means the hollow,
nīgna, and the perforated.
śrīṃgāra means great joy,
the erotic sentiment of dance, and an elephant's ornament.
priṃgāraṃ is held to apply to the later, to sindūra, and to the flower of the clove.
śvaśura means the elder of a married couple.
śvaśurā means the medicine of Brahmā.
saṃkara means the crackling of fire, sweeping all around, the unswept, and the daughter of an improper union.
Some hold that it is sakāra.
saṃgara means luster, a pledge,
a kind of act, poison, and want.
saṃgaraṃ means what is to be traveled, and a fruit.
sabhāra means accumulation and a collection.
ambara means a deer,
a mountain, an asura, a fish,
and a particular Victor.
saṃbāraṃ means water,
the vow of the followers of the Buddha, and wealth.
saṃbarī means a kind of medicine.
samudraṃ means the characteristics of the body.
samuṭīya means beauty and the like.

sābaṃtrī means a kind of deity.
sāvitri means the lord of sāvantī.
sindhūraṃ means a kind of tree.
sindhūraṃ means red sand.
sindhūri means dhāhakī
and a beautiful red cloak.
sundari means a kind of chief lady.
sunāra means a bitch's teat,
a serpent's ornament, and bika.
serintrī means another in another's house, śibyakriṅ, and the independent.
saṃkaraṃ means the colorer and the great elder. sauvīraṃ means kījikaṃ, the source of eye medicine, and the land of jujubes.
saṃskara means experience,
full understanding, and individual effort.
saṃstara means a row and a sacrifice.
tiṇḍīra means foam,
and what is called bāna phiṃgana.
aklupāra means the lord of the waters and the king of tortoises.
agnihotra means fire,
and the offering of a fire offering.
anuttara means the chief,
and the purified in separate words.
agropa means the north,
the reversed, and the unsurpassed.
atisara means the bound, disturbance, one's own strength, and the fearful.
abhihāra means assault,
a thief, and patience.
aruskara, the bhallāta,
denotes the wound-making tree.
ardhacandra means a piece of the moon,
a hand at the throat, a kind of arrow,
the half moon, the moon, and a kind of khamdur maker.

alaṃkāra means an ornament,
an example, and a quality.
avasaraṃ means a kind of mantra,
the very empty, and rain.
avatāra means entering,
a ford, a ditch, and the like.
abhara means a graha, a thief,
a quarrel, gambling and the like, and a retinue.
avaskara means the anus,
the secret part, summoning, and approaching.
aśatara means a calf,
and a particular kind of elephant and horse.
asipatra means a silk scabbard and a particular hell.
āḍambara means the sound of the lord of elephants and the sound of cymbals.
prabañce is remembered as racanā and as composition.
ātmavira means great vital force,
the son of a wife's brother, and a refuter.
indīpari means the utpala.
indīparā means babhyimo.
udumbara means the fruit of people,
the body-holder, and the friend of the broad.
udumbari means copper
and a kind of costus.

udumbara means the very high,
the single, and the unbearable.
upagara means scattering flowers and the like,
and helping.
upakara means the near,
the thorough obstructor, and the helper.
audumbara means a tree and the five foods,
and also a kind of disease.
kaṭaṃbhara means the great descent, Rohiṇī, an elephant, and a woman.

kalimbaka means the round,
the rain-born, and the mūrvā.
karavīra means the horse-killer,
a kind of asura, and horses,
one with sons, the god-born, the chief,
and likewise cattle.
Some hold that karavīrī means a great elder woman and worship.
karṇakāra means the gimāka tree and the utāla.
karṇupūra is to be seen as the utpala, an ear ornament for the most part,
and the finest ornaments.
karmakara means a hired man,
one who lives by wages, and a worker.
Some hold that karmakārī means marbā and the embodied.
kalikā and dhumapaṭa mean
a nail and the hand-born.
kādāmparī means a woman held by another, sugarcane liquor, melody, and the mynah.
kālijara means the gathering of the circle of yogins and a terrifying melody.
kumbhakāra means the potter caste.
kṛṣṇasari means a deer,
the oily, and the neshawa.
gigadharā means the daughter of the mountain,
a protector, and the lord of the waters.
girisāra means tin
and the mountain of Malaya.
gṛhārīra means covering with a fence, lifting, and a part of the costus.
ganasāra means camphor, quicksilver, and turning to the right.
cakradhara means Viṣṇu,
a serpent, and a network of villages.
carācara means the ground,

knowing by a hint, and moving.
carmakāra means a shoemaker,
a leather worker, and a medicine.
citraṭrira means the lord of night, Ghaṇṭākarṇa, the destroyer of definite meaning,
the mover, and one with a mark at the corner.
jaṭaṭīra means matted hair, kokaṇa, the lord of the mountain's daughter,
the first-born of trees,
a poet, and the earth-born. talapatrī means raṇḍa.
tālapatri means an earring.
tuṅgabhadra means a kind of water.
tuṃgabhadra means the intoxicated and the baring of teeth.
tuṇṭakiṭī means a cotton canopy and the embodied. Then tulādhāra means the house of balance and a merchant. toyadhara means a cloud, the gla sgang root, and fine gold.
daṇḍadhara means Yama and lands.
daṇṭadhāra means Yama, a king, a staff,
a charcoal house and the like, a garland,
a staircase, and the finest curtained hall.
daśapura means a country, a town,
and the lowing of cattle.
digampara means the bronze maker,
the naked, darkness, and the spear-bearer.
durodaraṃ means common usage, dice, gambling, and wagering.
dehayātra means meteoric iron and death.
demotura means an elephant's face and an old sentient being. Then dharādhara means a mountain and Viṣṇu.
pāradhara means a vehicle on water and a sword. dharaṃkuraṃ means karakā, pīkara,

and śīra. dhārturaṣṭana means
one with black bill and legs, the clear, a Kaurava, and also an emanation.
dhuraṃdhara means
the dhava tree and dhrurbaha.
dhūndhumar means Śakra (Indra), a house that guards words, smoke,
and the footed.
dhitarāṣṭa means one with a mother,
a kind of bird, and a good king.
dhritarāṣṭi means a goose, abodes, and also medicine.
nabhaścara means a cloud, the wind,
a bird, and a vidyādhara.
niśācara means a snake, wealth, hera, and the vajra lady.
niśācarī means an owl.
niṣaddhara means the eater and a snake.
niṣaddhari means mud and night.
nīlāmbara means the wicked,
the one who looks askance, the slayer of Pralamba, and the corpse-eater. payodhara means a cloud, the cane tree,
the coconut, ruli,
and kāśa grass.
parebara means the great and the like,
and a kind of deer.
paripara means succession,
complete succession, and harm.
parikara means an observance,
the cross-legged posture, a retinue, an undertaking, the girding of the body,
a covering, and solitude.
parivāra means a retinue,
the sheath of a sword, and a covering.
paripara means a god,

trade, dying, and the one-sided.
pakṣacara means the moon,
one gone from the herd, the broad, a fever, and an elephant.
pāṭaṭīra means a water vessel,
the work of a toll collector, iron cymbals, food of meat,
the vessel of jahu, and the purifier.
vārāvāra means the lord of rivers,
and the far and near banks.
pāribhadra means the nimba tree and the mandāra tree.
vītāmbara means Viṣṇu and a dancer.
pītapāra means what satisfies cattle,
a jewel, and the Malaya-born.
pūrṇapātrā means a vessel filled full, what is born of milk and the like,
reviling, a drum, and mixing. pratīhāra means a miracle, worship,
a door, a doorkeeper, and the immediate.
pratisara means an army, the rear, kaṃkarṇa, the washing of a wound,
a great kind of mantra, an ornament,
a thread on the wrist, and protection.
pratīkāra means a remedy and an example.
prabhākara means the sun.
vakranakra means a bad parrot.
palabhadrā means a maiden,
a protector, and strength.
barbaṭiraka means the sprout of the sage's place of curds, and the daughter of the woman with a multitude.
vārakīra means the sharp-beaked,
the fully grown, and a horse.
virabhadra means a horse of keen mind,
a horse, and a great hero, and one who acts heroically. vīṅtara means the chief of Śrī, one who acts heroically, and guṇṭa.

maṇicchitra means fat,
and also the medicine called ṛṣabha.
mahāpīra means a garuḍa,
a hero, the throated, sound, lightning,
a monkey, the sun, the fire of the sky, and jarāṭaka.
mahāmātra means the keeper of elephants,
one rich in limbs, and a minister.
rathakāra means a buffalo,
one born of a female elephant, and its instant.
rāgasūtraṃ means cotton thread, silk thread, spring, a portion,
a conch, and gaṇipatrika.
laṅgakharu means the burnt lamp and daśāṃśeṣa.
lambodara means a binder,
the abode of the plough, and the belly-bearer.
lakṣmīputra means the fulfilled in desire and a horse.
vātaputra means a great cheat, Hanūmān, and Bhīṣma.
bandutandra means one with the fruit of essence, and the four limbs.
vibhākara means great light and the illuminator.
vibhākarī means she who dispels darkness, turmeric, the clarifier,
the challenger's garment, luṇṭī, kaṭṭali, and a crooked woman.
viśvambhāra means the Seizer and Śakra (Indra); viśvambhārā means the earth.
viśvakadru means the bad, sound, digging all around, and a dog.
vītihota means the great sun.
vitrahotri means the maker of day.
vyatikara means misfortune and obstruction.

vyavahāra means conventional usage,
and also a kind of tree, and a place.
śatapatra means the split one's swoon, the one possessed of wood, a pot, and the crested one.
śatapatrī means one like a victor.
śatāparī means the mistress of good conduct.
śilumāra means the water monkey,
the self-rescuer, and the Seizer.
samudrāru means binding a bridge,
the grasper, and the britimiṃgi.
saṃprahāra means going and walking.
sahacarī means jhiṇṭā.
sahacara means youth
and acting separately.
sālasāra means a tree, and asafoetida.
sukumāra means soft.
sūtradhāra means a carpenter, a craftsman, anantra, the stomach, dance,
a kind of vessel, and Śakra (Indra).
sthiradaṃṣṭra means one who goes on its hands,
and a lion that resembles a boar in form.
utpalabanī means
a mass of utpalas, equal,
a heavenly dancer, the follower of Kapila, and a kind of non-Buddhist.
tāmālābatri means
a tilaka mark, tāpañci, and the leafy one.
tālāśipatraṃ means
tāmalakī and tīlāpa.
pādacaudvara means
the pippala, karakara,
and śaikrta.
It is also held to mean one who makes plain only the faults of others, one who strives at that, and a man.
pītakāparaṃ means
the bile-holder and saffron.
pāśucāmara means
removing dust and high praise.

rasakepara means
bakula, vedhaka,
and the flowers of the nāga tree.
rājapadāraṃ means
the fruit of the lapalli, and the red emblic myrobalan.
romakesara is held
to mean bristling hair.
basvokasmarā means
the Padmaka of Śrīda (Kubera), and the city Alakāvatī.
pipratīsāra means
regret, anger, and latent tendency.
samabhihāra means
having the definite sense of again and again.
sarvatobhadra means
a figure of sound in poetry, and a kind of cave.
sarvotobhadra means
the low, food, and a woman dancer.
Thus ends the section of words ending in repha, the letter ra, from the Viśvaprakāśa, otherwise named the Garland of Pearls.

la means Indra. lā means giving and wealth.
li also means dissolving.
lu and lū mean cutting.
āmla means a variety of taste,
and āmbī, the cādgerika herb.
ali means a bee, and a nest.
āli means one who receives alms.
āmbī means a drink, and also thought.
alu means gayanika.
bhela means kakaṃṅa.
ilā means a cow, the earth, nectar, Sarasvatī, the moon, and a woman.
ḍola means desire and going.
kala means melodious, a clear sound, unripe, a part, and white.

kilā means a sixteenth part, the last part.
rūla means an object, an elder,
a craftsman, the first part,
and a particular time.
kali means an inner sacrifice, strife, the rooted one, and the giver of virtue.
kāla means time, death,
the Great Dark One (Mahākāla), Yama,
the devourer, and the Dark One.
kālī means the dark woman, a kind of mātṛkā,
the White One, a row of clouds, well transformed, kāṭa, and pavāda.
kāla means the black trivṛt, indigo, and madder.
kilā means phlegm, certain destruction,
blazing, and complete contraction.
kuli means self-arisen, a sacrifice,
a limb of time, a house, and a nest.
kūlaṃ means an accordant group,
an embankment, a dam, and a pond.
kola means the indicator, the protector,
the cherished, koḍa, making a bhela,
and a raft. kalaṃ means the utpala.
kola means a warming medicine and a shapely woman.
kala means crooked, base, and low.
khalaṃ means pa, and also a place, turbidity, and also crops.
khalu means skin, inclined,
a kind of garment, a boy, and the cātaka bird.
khallī means the hands and feet, closeness, and disease.
khilaṃ means unobstructed, essence, inserted all around, and piercing.
gala means the throat, ten white incenses, a heap of sāla, and the earth-born.
golā means the friend
of podāvarī, and the gola leaf-eye herb.

golaṃ means a collection of round things,
the jewelled one, and a maṇḍala.
calā means moving, shaking, the lotus goddess, lightning, and a covering. kīlla means undiminished,
the Victor, and cloth.
callī means a lineage and having a basis.
kīllā means cloth and moving.
calu means rotten. cullī means gathering, meditative concentration, and music.
colla means a poor garment, and reproach.
challī means a kind of flower and the bakula: so the tantras proclaim.
challa means lifting, deceit, and trickery.
jalaṃ means the water-blaze, water, a coil, and crooked.
jālaṃ means koraka, a lattice, dambha, and prinda.
jāli means a covering net,
a near net, and trees.
jhālā means the torment of heat, waves, lumo,
and fear. jhallī means the fever sickness, jhiruka, entering, and lying down.
tala means music; tala also means a sword's hilt, the destroyer, a bull elephant, a forest, birdsong, and chudzi.
tallī means sand. talu means a hole.
tolā is held to mean a kind of tree,
the thumb, and the middle finger.
tāla means the timing of melody, liquor,
the hilt of a sword and the like,
kinds of musical vessel
made of bell metal,
the fruit of the hand, the palm,
tāsaṃ, and a mass of babala.
tulā means a zodiacal house, eight palas,
a kind of measure that weighs,
binding, holding, the unbearable, brass, and a vessel.

tūla means soft, a root,
the sky, and Brahmā's tree.
dalaṃ means a substance, shade,
a weapon, a leaf, and what is not a fragment.
dali means a kind of leafy plant.
duli means kamabī.
dolā means a kind of conveyance and indigo. dhūli means dust and a kind of measure.
nala means poṭagala,
the one who has a king, sīsa,
and pidūdipata.
nalī means realgar and shade.
nalaṃ means the lake-born and a lotus stalk.
nelā, nālā and nīlī mean
a branch and kaṭaṃbaka.
nālā means causing to drink and the like,
and a tent. nīla means dark in color,
the lord of the monkeys, a kind of mountain, and the Dark One. nālī means a kind of tree mark.
palaṃ means mīpa, and the self.
balū means stout, kusuma,
a small house, and a city of wheels.
sāla means a row, one side,
and a precipice. kaluṃ means the tip of a vine, a portion, and a beard.
salū means sour, and a sign.
kīlu means bathing.

pīlu means
a tree, an elephant, a flower, an arrow, the tāla, and a fragment of bone.
bula means mere meaning, and a broad palm.
phalaṃ means crops, what is produced by causes, fruit, growth, gain,
jātiphala, bakkala,
and also the first portion of one who seeks;

the three fruits, the fruit-bearing, and the fruited.
bālaṃ means the world of essence, cotton and the like, and cloth,
the Mighty One, the plough-bearer, the asura,
the body, the crow, and one with offering cakes.
balaṃ means smell, taste, an army, might, the coarse, form, and delight.
palā is said to be baṭyala.
bali means a kind of unsightliness, the outspread, a tooth, a ray,
pus, benefit, the ocean-born,
old age, the anus, skin,
a kind of ruined view,
a house, and a kind of tree.
palli means a jomo, pā,
tatā, and a kind of flower.
bāla means a child, hair, a horse,
an elephant, and the head.
bāli means dull, a child, and shame.
pilam means a cave, an opening,
a hole, a nest, and a house.
pailā means time, a boundary,
the feast of the lords,
the gums, the coil of milk,
the ocean and its water,
dying with afflictions still present, attachment, words, and minds.
bhalla means an arrow and a bear.
bhallī means bhallāta and an arrow.
bhālaṃ means the forehead and daytime.
bhalaṃ means the fearful, the heart,
a kind of fast, and the victorious one.
bhela means dirt, excrement, an insect, and a scorpion.
malla means utter miserliness,
a vessel, and one who bears a skull cup.
mālu means a kind of fish. laṭi means a child and a vine.

malam means a field and water.
māla means a flower garland, and meeting.
mūlaṃ means the first, a root,
a lunar mansion, an elephant, chul, and the like.
maulī means assembled, mixed, righteous, a crest,
the aśoka tree, and a diadem.
It also means play, sport, and grace,
the chief of the graceful,
and the entire wheel.
lolā means the tip of the tongue, and moving.
lola means intense craving, and moving.
vyāla means savage, one who goes on its hands,
and a beast of prey with cruel fangs.
śala means the leaf of the śallaka, and comes from the activity of a swarm of bees.
śāla means a kind of fish,
a tree, the general, rice, and eating.
śālā means a home, a house,
one side, the drier, and a branch.
śālu means the gati substance, and the thief herb.
śāli means scent, the outside,
fruit, and the like.
śilā means a small stream,
a stone, the unbearable, and the wheel-holder.
śilaṃ means high, and a stone.
śili means a creature with many legs.
śīlaṃ means bhi, supreme investigation, semen, white, and yoga.
śuklaṃ means having form, white,
and being possessed of good qualities.
śulaṃ means dying, a banner, yoga, and the inside.
śūlā means merchandise, yoṣā,
a terrible view, and a stake.
śela means a mountain. śailaṃ means the mountain-born, the garuḍa, and the hare-marked one (the moon).

śāla means the earth tree, and the white incense tree.
sthāla means a kind of vessel.
sthālī means kyanar and the sky.
sthāla means stout, heaped up, and of little wisdom.
hālā means liquor, and the lord of men.
hala means jest, contempt, and grace.
aṃgula means an elephant,
an earring, and a finger, the branch of the hand.
acala means a mountain, a peg,
and the unmoving. acalā means the earth.
añjali means kutapa,
and the palms joined together.
anala means a Vasu god, and fire.
anila means a Vasu, and the wind.
abela means the powder of gola.
amalā means the lotus goddess.
amalaṃ means destruction and a cloud. arāla means resin, an elephant in rut, and crooked.
akulaṃ means nā, the cloth of akaka,
and one with ears like staffs.
abhīlam means a terrifying place.
sūlūlāṃ means the mother of a clan,
and saving by the head and crown.
itvala means a fish,
a kind of asura, graceful, and blazing.
ujjala means blazing, clear, and flourishing.
uttā means a monkey,
the chief, transformed, and going upward.
utpa'alalaṃ means the utpala, costus, and the fleshless.
utphulla means an act of a woman, opened, and going upward.
unnāla means the noble,
the chief, and going upward.
upalā means gravel,
a stone, a pebble, and a jewel.

katalī means a banner,
bhapatākā, a kind of deer,
the composer, the plantain, the questioner, ḍaṃspyaṃ, and śāllalī.
kandalo means close attachment,
a new sprout, and a skull.
kadālī means a sweet sound,
a tree, and a kind of deer.
kapila means a kind of sage,
fire, a dog, and tawny.
kapilā means the elephant of the fire quarter, a she-elephant, and a kind of cattle.
kāpāla means the bone of the head,
the śiṃśapa, the dusty one,
a pot and the like, molasses, costus, a kind of disease, and going.
kamala means the water-born,
water, the non-barbarian, copper, and medicine.
kamala means a kind of deer.
kamalā means Śrī.
kamala means a nāga king,
the one with a nose, rotten, and an insect.
kambala means the best of gregs, and water.
kapālā and dantara mean high and terrifying.
karāpaṃ means
the axe-bearer,
gnashing, effort, and sesame oil.
kallola means ullola,
great joy, and a path.
kākola means the crow
of the valleys, a kind of clay, and a potter.
kākīla means living on a portion,
the play of love, praṇāla, unstable, captivating, and the shade of a tree.
kāmālā means the desirous,
a kind of desire, and the thirsty one.

kārhali means a young woman.
kohalāṃ means certain, and skraṃ.
kāhalā means kinds
of vessel used as cymbals.
kāhala means bad.
kiṭṭala means a copper pot,
and is also said of a mass of iron.
kīlālaṃ means blood and water.
kudhūlaṃ means the familiar peg,
a precipice, and a chaff fire.
kucilā means unpierced,
a poor garment, and a soiled garment.
kuṭīle means what is not gold-bearing, and crooked.
kuṭilā means a kind of river.
kuṇḍalaṃ means an earring, and likewise a bracelet, a stiff fan,
a golden tree, gu, and ḍūcī,
and it also applies to a lineage.
kuddāla means a hoe,
the earth-crusher, and the earth-opener.
kuntala means a region,
the word for a country, and braided locks.
kundala means the paper tree, barley, and also bhāla.
kumbhila means a verse,
the shadow-stealer, a robber,
and also a row and a fish.
kulāla means a potter,
kukkubha, and kośika.
kuvalaṃ means the utpala,
a pearl, a fruit, and the jujube fruit.
kuśala means full attainment,
merit, and training.
kevala means made into one,
alone, and kuhana.
kevalaṃ means lasting benefit,
and a kind of wisdom.

kepila means a tree, growing,
korarika, and kema.

komala means soft, and water.
kohala means a sage, and liquor.
gandholī means the varaṭā, and is the abode of the good. garalaṃ means poison, pride, grass, and pulaka. gokila means the mouth-holder, essence, the cowherd, and the nearby guardian of the earth.
gaurila means iron powder,
gairala, and white mustard seed.
granthila means bamboo,
vikaṅkata, and sadyanthi.
cañcalā means lightning, and Śrī.
cañcala means moving, and desirous.
catvāla means wind, essence, dullness, and the hearth of the fire offering.
candila means what is not the moon.
capala means an instant,
swift, and moving,
mercury, a fish, a robber,
and also a kind of stone.
chabalā means the lotus goddess, lightning, and bisbali.
cūḍūla means the wheel-holder,
the crest-holder, and the crested.
cagala means dayoṣā,
an elder, and a child.
cchagala means tamata,
a goat, and blue cloth.
jagala means dadaka, liquor,
the clarifier, and the intoxicating tree.
jagala means a waterless country, and the wilderness.
jaṭila means having matted locks,

the holder of matted locks, and the spikenard herb.
jambhala means the jambhira, and also a kind of god.
jambulā means the branches and leaves of the jambū tree, and covered with leaves.
jambhala means chubla and mud. Then jāgala means kapiñja. jigurī means born of the jaṅgala, a peak, śambhi, and a physician for poisons.
jaṃgalaṃ means the netted, and fruit.
taṇḍula means rice, sowa grain and the like, a mass, and piṅgaka.
tumula means action
and the tree of dispute. taitila means the gaṇḍaka, and a kind of karaṇa.
dukūlaṃ means half,
linen cloth, and fine cloth.
dhavala means beautiful, white,
and mahāvṛṣa.
dhavalī means well-born.
nakula means a particular son of Pāṇḍu, and the mongoose.
nakulī means a hen,
spikenard, and medicine.
nukuli means a hen, a man,
a root, the grass bird, and rasvalo.
nābhīlaṃ means the place of the essence of the navel, cakṣina, and camaṃ. nicula means being without cloth, and the plantain.
nirmalam means stainless,
a white cloud, and free of stain. niṣkala means empty of equipment,
of impaired seed, and partless.
nistalaṃ means round.
devālī means a fresh garland,

the garam of the earth, and the woman who does good.
pañcālī means a song, and a pot.
pañcālā means the people of a land.
paṭilaṃ means a not-certain disease,
a dark blotch, and a covering.
paṭila means meaningless,
and the cloth of karkaśa.
paṭola means a kind of cloth,
the radiant woman, and wearing.
balalam means a kind of sesame,
flesh, mud, and a rākṣasa.
pāgalo means the costus herb.
sāmalaṃ means foul water, and rik;
and the same with a stacked letter means the same as the one before.
pāgali means a fresh earth pigment.
pālā means a harmful substance, and the maker of existence. Then bāṭalā and bāṭalī
mean a tree and a flower.
bāṭalaṃ means kyanar.
pāṭala means grain oil,
and it comes to mean bright red.
bātilī means dead,
a kind of vessel, the left, and a fish trap.
pātalaṃ means former times, and the underworld.
bāśula means pā, and the binder.
pīśulaṃ means the leg of a bed, and a spear.
bigala means a kind of sage,
fire, the fierce-rayed one, a halo,
a kind of treasure, and a monkey.
siṅgala means rays,
harm, the jug bird, and a dwarf.
picula means jhabuka,
nicula, and the water crow.
picchalī means śātmali,
a kind of ocean, and the śapa tree.
picchala means the top of the foot, and waterless.

kuñjalaṃ means a child of flesh.
piñjalaṃ means harm.
pittālaṃ means born of splendor,
a substance, and bilious.
pittalī means the water pippalī.
pappilaṃ means the bodhi tree,
a kind of bird, and riśubha.
pippalaṃ means water.
pibpili means a place, cutting,
division, and pollen.
pudgala means a person, the self,
the body, and beautiful form.
biśala means beautiful, skilled,
good, and moral discipline.
brakhala means horse armor, intoxicated, bad, and the lowest.
tābāla means the world below,
praise, a finger, and the hand.
brapāla means coral,
the staff of the vīṇā, and a fresh shoot.
phenila means the luṅtai tree.
phenilaṃ means the jujube fruit.
phenilā means the fruit of the intoxicating tree.
bhandhala means sour,
the head-vegetable, balvara,
and elephants set loose.
bahulaṃ means the sky.
bāhulā means elā,
nīlāṃkā, and the earth.
One with activity, the dark fortnight,
fire, yani bahuma,
prāhya, and dark in color: these are bahula.
badhīla means afflicted,
masī, meditative concentration, and bargā.
maṃgalā means white dūrvā grass.
megala means the son of the earth (Mars).
maṅgalaṃ means excellent good fortune, and likewise guarding new wealth.

mañjala means jalaradku.
mañjula means soft.
mañjilṃ means water moss.
maṇḍali means the form of an elephant, nikurusba, a kingdom,
a king, the planet Mars, the one with twelve,
costus, a snake, a division,
an enclosing courtyard, and a circumference.
maṇḍala means a maṇḍala,
and also an essence and what is measured.
mahilā means the great earth,
the one worthy of worship, the terrifier, and śundra.
mācala means a drop,
a robber, āmaya,
holding, and yādasa.
mātula means bad,
a maternal uncle, grain, and the intoxicating tree.
mukhalī means the tāla,
a jewel, and the mouse's ear.
muśālī means a spade,
and a dabyi. mukhale means a pestle with an iron tip.
meṣala means the golden mountain,
the upper slope of a mountain, and a sword belt.
mekhalā means the region of the waist,
the flavorful, and a girdle.
rasālā means sugarcane,
a crest, the pine tree, and the sap of the sāla.
raśalā means polishing,
the tongue, dūrvā and the like, and a tree.
rāmila means the delighter, desire, a tail, and a cow's tail.
lādkulī means the water isbalī,
the paper tree, and a kind of flower.
lāṅgalaṃ means a kind of spade-wood, śāra, and a horse.

lohala means an iron chain, dariks, and speaking indistinctly.
mañjula means the kela tree,
the willow, and taitisa.
baṇḍala means a hero,
battle, the world,
and what is called apanitraka.
bātula means windy,
a mass of wind, and with wind.
bātalaṃ means a king,
the seed of the kuṣṭhaṇḍa,
and the seed of the kolāstha.
bāmila means wicked deceit and deceit. biḍāla means a cat, and a kind of sky-goer.

vebula means vast,
deep, a mountain, and the western mountain.
simalā means stainless and cleansed, and also a kind of ground.
biśula means a kind of tree, vast, and extensive.
biśāla means born of the supreme lord,
and should also be understood as Ujjayinī.
bṛṣala means the common caste,
a horse, and the son of the moon.
śakala means bark,
and a thing broken into pieces.
śamālaṃ means a kind of bell metal, and avarice.
sayalu means not waking from sleep, and is said of snakes and dogs.
śayalu means a disposition to sleep.
śārdūla means a kind of rākṣasa,
the eight-legged lion,
a tiger, and also the supreme chief,
and a place. śālmalī means a kind of tree,
and also a particular twice-drinker.

śītali means the mountain-born,
a small flower, what comes from the mountains,
cool, the leaf bean,
and what is called nībhara.
śībala means water moss, and the mountain-born.
śrigālī means the jackal, the frightful female.
śrigāla means the fox, and an asura.
śaṃkala means an iron chain,
and the fastening of the waist cloth.
śaivalam means water moss,
the lotus tree, and worship.
śoṣkala means meat for sale, and cooling food. śyāmala means not white, the aśvattha, blue-green, and deep black.
śaddhāru means faithful,
the inexhaustible, pā, and devotion.
śrīphala means the fruit of Śrī, blue, the emblic myrobalan, and mālūra.
ṣaṇḍāli means the lake-born,
the desirous, sesame oil, and pride.
saṃkulo means as it is expressed,
pervaded, and what expresses this meaning.
sandhrila means suruṃgā, joy, and intoxication.
nipālī means kyanar,
from skin, sabhalā, and guñja.
sarala means rotten wood,
extensive, and crooked.
sedhyalā means fish meal,
and kilāsinaṃ.
sutala means uṭvā, sekā,
binding, and a particular realm beneath the earth.
surela means a kind of mountain, peaceful, and bowing low.
temala means a goldsmith,
a lizard, and a kind of stone.

aṅkapāli means undertaking fully,
the end, and the terrifier.
atipalā means a kind of strength, great strength, and extreme strength.
akṣamālaṃ means what is to be produced, darundha, and a rosary.
ulūkhala means guggulu
and udūkhala.
ekāṣṭhila means the garment of sin.
cukala means in sequence.
kacamāla means causing thirst,
a kind of nāga, and a kind of matted hair.
kaṃdīla means a donkey,
the egg-bearer, and the blaṃkṣa tree.
kamaṇḍalu means a water pot,
and the barkaṭī tree.
karmaphalaṃ means the transformation of karma,
and the karmic maturation of actions.
kalakalu means kolāhala,
and likewise sarjanasa.
kurūhalaṃ means a reader of signs, and a weapon.
khatamāla means smoke, and a cloud.
gaṇḍaśimara means ripened.
sthulopala means a skull.
ganphalī means the fruit-bearing,
and the bud of the camvaka.
raktapāla means a kind of mountain.
cakravālaṃ means the encircling range.
jalāṃcalaṃ means water moss,
and what surely goes into water.
damāmalaṃ means maruka,
and also taming.
dhvaninālā means the lute,
the flute, and kohala.
parimala means fragrance itself,
the ravishing, and the bright.
samunmīla means destroying,

clinging to the limbs and the like, and fragrance.
sīthakeli means the stool itself,
the active one, and the corner of the eye,
the hard to cross, ke, a river,
and also running forth on foot.
ṣoḍagala means clear,
a sheath, and a kind of fish.
bahuphalā means dirt,
the owner, and milk.
bṛhannala means a hairdress,
and also mahāpoṭaka.
bhaṭakāli means the mountain's child, gandholī, and a kind of medicine.
bhasmatūlaṃ means the dust of snow, rain, and the kunāla of the village.
maṇilālā means a queen,
the tenth lunar mansion, and the Seizer.
madakala means an elephant in rut, arrogance, and speaking indistinctly.
mahākāla means the Great God (Śiva), the kiṃśaka, and the utter destroyer.
mahādīla means a kind of nāga.
bamākāra means a kind of jewel.
mahābala means sīśaka,
and is said of the strength of youth.
mahābalā means the balangji fruit. maktāphalaṃ means a man, a pearl, camphor, and the fruit of the bali.
mṛtyuphali means the leaf of the arka, and the tree of the Great Time.
bahuphala means veṇī,
the poison-mustard, and spikenard.
rajasvala means a woman.
rajasvalā means the woman in her courses.
batakili means kalālāsa,
and the pole-pieces of rafts.
pataphalaṃ means the bow of Śakra (Indra), and also morning attachment.

macikila means a kind of mallī,
and also taming.
sadāpala means the beta tree.
udumāra means a heap of fruit.
haritālī means a nakha line,
a sword, and durdā.
hakhāhala means Brahmā's snake,
the eldest, and a kind of poison.
hastemala means the earth-guarded son,
and what is called kiniyaka.
The word asutībala
means a sacrifice, and a seller of liquor.
durdaṇḍapāla means
kinds of fish and snake,
and also the king of kings.
ekakuṇḍala means
the destroyer of kālindī.
kluṭāpakala means
the bilious fever of elephants, ripening, and purifying.
kṛbīṭapāla means
the meeting of waters, and the ocean.
pañcakasbala means
the white radish, and a kind of stone.
mandracūrṇala is held to mean an overpowering vidyā-mantra, the meaningless mantra of the ḍākinīs, knowledge, kuśa water, and an instant.
suratatāli is held
to mean the head garland of a messenger woman, and the flower garland for the head worn on a bride's wedding day.
From the Viśvaprakāśa, otherwise named the Garland of Pearls, the section of words ending in the letter la is complete.

va means a pot, Varuṇa,
the day, and independence.
vā means the wind, an arrow, and a spear.
vi means a bird and the sky.
sva means knowledge, the self,
cutting well, and one's own wealth.
avi means a sheep, the sun, a mountain,
a mouse, and wool.

avī means the woman in flower,
a horse, iron, and a kind of man.
ūrdhvaṃ means above, and andhya.
kaṇvaṃ means sin, and a sage.
kaṇa means possessed of badness.
kavi means melodious, the learned one, Venus, an anthill,
a dog, and one who composes poetry.
kiṇvaṃ means sin, born of a king,
people, and suppression.
kharba means short, and scent.
grība means the throat and the neck.
cchavi means good and beauty.
jabā means the ḍoddhā flower, and speed;
jaba also means swift.
jīva means the lord of speech, a kind of tree,
and should also be understood as any living creature.
jīvā means causing to live, maurvī, the earth, conduct,
piñjita, and desire.
jīviṃ also means livelihood.
tatvaṃ means intrinsic nature, a kind of permanence, and the supreme self. ṅava means forest, grove,
and a forest stream.
dipaṃ means heaven, the intermediate space,
the light-goer, the sky, and space.
deva means a king, a god, and a cloud.
devaṃ is held to mean a sense faculty.

devī means a noble lady,
a woman of splendor, bṛkka,
a dancer consecrated by Brahmā,
and the wife of a lord of men.
drava means essence, pradāva, and what has become melted.
dvandāṃ means wrong conduct.
dvandra means a pair, fighting, and killing.
dhava means a lord, a kind of tree,
a cheat, and a man.
bhūpa means entering a portion,
a sage, yoga, vaṭa, and wealth.
bhupaṃ means certain, conceptual thought,
permanent, and unmoving.
bhrubā means mūrpāra, a cow,
a scattered leaf, and a kind of garland.
nava means a crow, praise,
and what is to be newly praised.
nībī means the knot of the waist cloth,
the root, and the last.
paṃkva means bowed down fully,
decaying, and facing toward.
marśva means the armpit, a base,
a wheel, near the edge, and a herd of cattle.
pṛthvī means the surface of the earth, the earth, asafoetida, a girl, and black cumin.
prādhvaṃ means binding, restraint, oppression, and driving far away.
plava means the kāraṇḍava duck,
a frog, bhelaka,
the water crow, the plākṣa tree,
going far, a spreading sound,
the well-born, and a monkey.
plavaṃ means an army, high,
scent, grass, and harming cattle.
bhava means Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva), saṃsāra, glory, good attainment, and birth.

bhāva means intrinsic nature, action, intention, a sentient being, the self, birth, activity, play, an entity,
a particular state of the meaning of words, people, understanding, wealth, dance, bathing, and also the learned.
revā means a kind of jambālinī, raṃs, Smara (Kāma), vast,
short, the treatise, a horse,
dance, a kind of san mo,
a fruit, the blameless,
and a kind of bird.
lava means a portion, grace, cutting, giving, the delighter, and joy.
pibali means the fruit of Śrī.
billbaṃ means various, and the city of the gods.
biṃśva means various, all, poison,
and also a drink of flour.
śava means a corpse, and a drink.
śibi means birch bark, and a kind of lord of men.
śiva means the Seizer, a kind of yoga,
a god, a peg, powder,
guggulu, and the bangkar tree.
siva means liberation, a door, water, and virtue. śivā means the White One, stainless, kakeru,
jhāṭāmalālaṃ,
the she-camel, and the fruit of the śakśu.
satī means people, a sentient being,
existence, a living creature, the self, an entity, a substance, strength, piśācas and the like,
the existent, quality, wealth, intrinsic nature, and the end.
sava means the all-holding, a sacrifice, bathing, peace, and the equal of one worthy of offerings.
śrubā means a kind of śrugā, śalleki, and murbā.

havalaṃ means calling,
and decisive instruction.
hrasra means short and low.
kṣava means mustard seed, and kṣuḍā.
abhāva means non-existent,
a non-entity, and death.
aklība means a place that does not exist.
artavaṃ means a flower,
menstrual blood, time, and a bhūta.
āprava means a promise, affliction, a word, and abiding.
āhiva means a sacrifice,
and also conquest.
utpava means a festival,
desire, and boundless anger.
uddhapa means a festival,
the maternal uncle of Viṣṇu, a sacrifice,
the purifier, the doer, clear, skin, and black cumin.
kitapa means bad,
and also intoxicated, and a deceiver.
keśava means the nāga tree,
the meadow-born, and the hairy one.
kaitavaṃ means cchala,
appearance, kumuda,
an enemy, and bad.
kairapaṃ means kumuda,
and the moonlit. kairabī, gaṇḍvi and gāḍi mean
a bow, and the bow of Arjuna.
gālava means lac, and a sage.
tāṇḍavaṃ means dance and grass.
Heaven, the intermediate space, the triple play, the woman of the triple play, and a kind of Veda.
dīdivi means the intelligent,
intention, and also the self.
dījeṃhva is the name for snakes and for a slanderer.

naṃṣpāp means the sun, the wind,
kaḍampaṅgara,
conceptual thought, the intoxicated,
and simbikārajamāṣā.
nitnaba means badly spoken,
unskilled, and untrustworthy.
pañcatvaṃ means five times,
an entity, and a treasure.
ballava means a great raft, lac dye, and the color of lac.
bīrthabī means moving,
kiśala, and leafy branches.
pīrthava means shallow,
the earth, and a modification of earth.
puṅgava means a bull,
the chief, the birthplace, the best, and a kind of medicine.
prabhava means birth,
the source of water, the conqueror of opponents, the assailant, and realizing the conduct of every disease.
prabhāva means power, splendor,
the first, an object, and a place.
prabhava means from the womb to the end,
the flower and fruit of the brahmins,
a mutual friend, and the world-born.
prasava means the sprouting,
the vajra tree, and syūta.
perabi means a rākṣasī and a jackal. ballava means destruction, a cowherd, and Bhīṣma. bandhapa means a relative and a friend.
bargaba means Venus,
an elephant, the delighter, the axe-bearer, and the good archer. bhārgabī means the mountain's child, Śrī, and white dūrpā grass.

bhairava means the son who abandons evil.
bairavaṃ means terrifying.
mādhava means the hairy one,
the accomplisher, and spring.
mādhavīna also means honey, sugar liquor, the woman who beats,
and the utterly liberated.
rāghava means a great fish, gye,
a kind, and the line of Raghu.
rājīva means a fish, a deer,
and one who lives near a king.
sūbaba means a pot, and subjects.

a particular kind of woman, and a brahmin.
bāḍabaṃ means a herd of mares,
a particular act of women,
the subterranean aurba fire, and a brahmin.
baitraba means setting out in flight, and the intellect. Then bibhaba means wealth and nirvāṇa.
pibhāpa means what is fully amassed, desire, that which makes manifest,
and the destroying of the very substance of enemies.
śātrābaṃ means aversion,
and what arises from an enemy.
śuṣabī means a sword,
cumin, and black cumin.
ṣāḍaba means the essence of flavor, song,
a swift insect, abundant growth,
a boat, and colors.
sarciba means moving and calling.
sambhaba means arising,
Smara (Kāma), a cause, begging,
union, utter difference,
the support and the supported.
sugrība means the lord of the māras, and is said of a beautiful neck.

saindhāba means a churned gem,
a horse, and what comes from the land of sindhā.
anubhāba means power,
a support, and what indicates a thing.
abatnaba means evil speech, reviling, and slander.
abheṣaba means a dwelling,
a nest, and the proper setting up of a sacrifice.
ādīnapa means drawback and fault, complete affliction, and a bad end.
ubablapa means producing,
roaming about, a thief, and a lion.
kuśīceba means one born of an anthill,
a dancer, and a beggar.
kuśīlaba means obtaining one,
and the son of the forbearing Delighter.
jalvabilva means desire,
a tortoise, a frog, and a crossroads of waters.
jibaṃjaba means the cakora,
a kind of bird, and a particular tree.
dolājrepa means lending at interest, wrong understanding, and great joy.
dhamārgapa means
the apāmarga plant,
and is also said of debadālī.
parislaba means moving,
agitation, and a mark of what is expressed.
barābhaba means disappearance, ruin, and becoming otherwise.
barabasa means protecting others,
the son of a śūdra, and a twice-born.
puṭagrība means a weapon,
a gargarī churn, and a copper pot.
baladebā means the one who has rain,
the god of strength, strength, the wind,
a red horse, the horse of the Seizer,
one born from the depths, and the Veda.

śītaśiba means rock incense, a path,
rock salt, and misī.
satedeba means strength.
utpalyuba and sāriba
mean the pot herb and what is accompanied by gods, a snake's eye, and pale.
One who has craving is asitibhaba.
A river is āsitaṃbhabi.
This is the section of words ending in va.

śa means a hundred weapons, and harm.
śaṃ means the Dharma, and śā the Teacher.
śī means one who has fallen asleep,
and one who is always asleep.
āśa means desire and craving.
āśu means grain and swift.
iśa and kuśa mean the pole of a plough,
the Lord, and a chief.
aṃśu means light and the sun's heat.
kāśā means the sound of coughing, and a grass.
kāśī means vārāṇasī,
a young elephant, a monkey, and a naked one.
kuśa means the son of the Delighter, a continent,
and a kind of application.
kuśa also means intoxicated, sinful, and an elephant. kuśā means a letter. kuśī means proclaiming the time.
keśa means hair, one who is bashful,
a kind of asura, and Varuṇa.
kleśa means suffering, attachment and the rest,
and it is also seen for the action sāya.
darśa means seeing, the meeting of sun and moon,
the end of the fortnight, the face-bearer, and the moon.
daśā means what governs, a portion,
the karmic maturation of action,
and a state of powerlessness.
dṛśa means intellect, seeing, the eye,

knowing, seeing, and moving.
daṃśa means armor, a snake's bite, play, a fragment, and a fault.
nāśa means fleeing, scattering, dissolving, and not being perceived.
niśā means night, turmeric,
a tree, and yellow.
baśu means the utter destroyer, deer and other animals, excellent, a vessel, and what is to be burned.
sāṃśu means dust and crops, wealth, and what comes from long amassing.
pāśā means the directions and so forth, death, the sense of moving, and hair,
the end of power and the rest, the sense of reviling,
the edge of the ear, and the sense of beauty.
baiśī means meat and a lump,
fleshy, a sword's sheath,
a grain seller, and a kind of flour gruel.
rāśi means a heap, a ram, a fault,
a weapon, and being without power.
paśā means illusion, datta, desire, and a chief.
baśā means a woman, a daughter, a barren woman,
a cow, and a she-elephant.
baiśa means the merchant caste, the mind-born,
and is rightly held to mean entering.
beśa means a shop, entering,
a dwelling to be entered, and a house.
baṃśa means bamboo, lineage, mixing, and the bone that is part of the back.
baśu means cattle, the essence of fragrance,
a particular kind of person, and lodhra.
parga means the Veda, giving, illness, and also one who touches;
it is also held to mean battle and aspiration.
ādarśa means a mirror,
a commentary, and a single volume.

udhīśa means the mountain's daughter, beautiful, and a particular text.
upāṃśu means a kind of birth, dust, and a place empty of people.
kapiśī means madhvalbi,
blue-gray, and sehla.
karkaśa means kamvila.
kāśā means destroying, a sugarcane chariot,
a merciless person, agitation, firm, and one who is rash.
kānāśa means what pacifies, agitation, rough, and the destroyer of dust.
kuliśa means a kind of fish,
āli, and is held to be the vajra.
goriśa means the Lord,
the lord of speech, and the lord of the mountains.
tādgīśa means a lion and the moon.
duḥdurśa means the seat of disease,
a thorn, and rough to the touch.
nireśa means near the end, showing, and explaining.
nirbeśa means entering,
enjoyment, and delusion.
nipeśa means pacification, doing likewise, and removing.
nisteśa means merciless,
a sword, clear, and equal to that.
balāśa means the kiśuka tree,
the śaṭī plant, greenish yellow,
and one born of nikaśa.
palāśaṃ also means clothing.
bakṣiśā means the garuḍa,
the Dark One, reddish yellow, the well-born, yellow,
a fish, and the lord of creepers.
piṅgāśī means indigo and a medicine.
prakāśa means renowned,
laughing aloud, austerity, and clear.

pradeśa means what occupies a region, and is rightly held to be the span of finger and thumb.
bhūkeśī means balbaja grass.
bandūśa means fine wool.
omaśa means sheep's wool.
śrigālī means a monkey, spikenard, an awn, and śilda.
lomaśā means the crow's shank plant.
kāśīśa means a division of kāśī, great fat, very strong,
expansive, and certainly born.
bikeśī means clear,
distinguishing, and spread-out hair.
bibāśā means one who is clothed, water, wind, and release from fat.

baibaśa means the lord who holds many.
bīkāśa means very clear,
clear, and distinct expression.
saṃkāśa means holding entirely,
alike, similar, going, and equal.
padeśa means holding correctly, and a region. sukhāśa
means beautiful and destruction.
sabaśa means a bed,
Varuṇa, a king, and timisa.
hatāśa means agitation,
merciless, destruction, and desire.
abadeśa means a word, a weapon, deceit, and a sign.
ababhraṃśa means a kind of language,
corrupted sound, and what is hard to understand.
āśrayāśa means great light,
the body, and what destroys.
uparaṃśa means fire,
harm, and what eats.
upasbarśa means touching closely,

touching all over, bathing, and rinsing the mouth.
paṇḍaparśu and pīnāki
mean a fierce eye, bad, and crooked, Rāhu, a fragment, malaka,
the anointer, the Delighter, and the axe-bearer.
jībitaśa means an example, a single end,
the end of life, and the lord of the lake.
nāba bāśa means Smara (Kāma),
the act of women,
Varuṇa's noose, and the name of the axe of the Lord.
pañcadaśi is held to mean the full moon and the new moon.
paribiśa means a round disk.
pādayāśi and baḍūka
mean an iron chain and an anklet.
puroḍaśa means a kind of sky,
the moon, the essence of the khri tree,
flour, and māsī,
and is also held to be a kind of bath;
history, worship, a village harvest,
a friend, consecration,
and also a kṣatriya, one who touches the earth, and the after-born.
This is the section of words ending in śa.

ṣa is held to mean the chief.
ṣi means released from the womb.
uṣī means an arrow, sons,
night, and dawn.
uṣa means one full of desire, and guggulu.
ṛṣi means blazing light, the Veda,
a sage, establishing a place, and the like.
karṣa means leather and a prize bull.
karlū means heavy, fires, houses, and what expresses.
koṣa means the substance of the gods, wealth, agreement in meaning, Prahlāda, holding correctly,
a sheath, birth, an unopened bud,

a vessel, and the guard of a sword.
ghoṣa means the hundred-petaled flower,
the melodious, and thunder.
ghoṣa also means the sounding, fear, sunābhīra, and a creeper.
jhaṣā means the strength of the nāgas.
jhaṣā is also said to mean roaming about.
tarṣa means desire and thirst.
tuṣa means chaff, skin, and eye.
tīṣa means desire and thirst.
tīṣa also means lovely light, Sarasvatī, an end, and jigīṣa.
doṣa means censure, sin, a fault,
night, and the hand.
poṣa means a particular month,
victory, accomplishment, and moonless.
pauṣī means victory and increase.
preṣa means roasting,
destroying, and affliction.
bhaṣā means language and words.
māṣa means a particular grain, pride, delusion, skin, and a kind of censure.
maṣi means competing, and deceit.
meṣa means what grasps.
barṣa means a house, a kind of medicine, and the summer season. barṣaṃ means rainfall, the water-born, Jambudvīpa, and a cloud.
biṣaṃ means white aconite.
biṣa means garala poison and water.
biṣa is also explained as the pervader.
bṛṣa means the Dharma and a mouse.
bhriṣa means a seat, a chief, a house,
an iron chain, and what holds fluid.
dṛṣā means a monkey, a dog, and the capable.
bṛṣī means the name of a vow, and a seat.
śuṣi means dried up, and a hole.
ṣeṣa means libation, and remainder.

ṣeṣa also means Ananta, particular, stainless, and indivisible.
abheṣu means appearance.
ubhiṣū means holding to one's own.
ākarṣana is explained as independence, and also as one who throws the dice,
a noose, bow and arrow,
and also a thing one is practiced in.
āmiṣa means combing the hair,
meat, enjoyment, and desire.
āmiṣi also means beauty's objects, such as visible form and the rest.
uṣṭīṣa means a turban,
a crown, and a particular characteristic.
kalmaṣ means a rākṣasa,
and also black and pale.
kalpaṣaṃ means turbidity and sin.
kilpiṣe means an illness to be abandoned, and what cannot be accomplished. kusmāṣaṃ means kāñjika and what contains barley.
ganḍūṣa means filling with ṣa, vast extent, what is not white,
an elephant, and a finger.
jigīṣa means the wish to conquer, somewhat wild,
excellent, and an end.
tarīṣa means lovely in shape,
a raft, and the shore of the ocean.
tībiṣa means gold and a cloud.
nagtuṣa means a kind of king,
and also a kind of snake.
niṣaka means karṣapāṇa.
nikaṣā means the lac woman.
nimeṣa means blinking,
a division of time, and the meeting of eyes.
baruṣi means variegated, rough,
and speaking rashly.

puruṣa means the nāga tree,
what is born of honey, and supreme.
sauruṣaṃ means splendor,
and also thought and action,
above, vast, the upper arm,
the hand, a man, and a drink.
pratyuṣa means the door of the day,
dawn, and Vasu.
pradoṣanaṃ means a woman with faults, dusk, and the door of night.
mahiṣī means a queen consecrated by a protector of the earth.
māriṣā means fragrant,
a kind of medicine, and the clear mother.
māriṣa means a kind of sdo plant, a dancing woman, and the mother who transforms.
rohiṣaṃ means the purifying fish.
rohiṣa means a kind of deer.
biṣeṣa means mere distinction.
biṣeṣa also means a tilaka mark.
beśeṣa means not parted, separated, and become distant.
byākarṣa means having essence,
salaka, throwing the dice, and summoning.
śuśruṣa means the wish to hear,
service, and talk.
śailuṣa means the bilva tree,
and also cutting kuśī.
saṃharṣa means competing.
anukarṣa means the underframe of a chariot, and drawing along after,
the drink of the gods, craving,
and longing.
arjimiṣa means a god and a fish.
albariṣa means a particular mountain, the sun, the one with the axe, the one with pieces, pītana, and kiśora.

amburīṣaṃ means sound, a land, and a circle.
alambuṣa means an emetic.
alambuṣā means gaṇḍirī,
heaven, and a kṣatriya.
kimburuṣa means the horse-faced,
and also a class of world.
nandighoṣ means dwelling on the far shore, reciting praise, and making melody.
parighoṣa means what is to be said,
a sure proclamation, and thunder.
palaṃ means good, food,
lac, guggulu, and kiṃśuka.
balaṃkaṣa means a round head,
a medicine, and a rākṣasa.
mahāghoṣā means a kind of horn,
and the eagle's cry at market time.
bātararūṣa means a whirlwind,
hair standing on end, and Śakra's bow.
This is the section of words ending in ṣa.

sāna means meaning and Śrī.

sī means a charioteer.
se means the son of Śrī, and joy.
so means the drying one, and a mother.
aṃsa means a part, and binding.
kāsu means power, a weapon, what is incomplete, clothing, a staff,
the staff of gods and men,
a staff's vessel, and also a measure.
gudbatapakāhāra means a wick, and granbriparṇa.
gosa means the dawn.
cāsa means gold, a crest,
a kind, a cubit, and words.
dāsa means a jewel, a fault, and fear.
dāsa also means a hired man, a fisherman, faith, mere giving,

a servant, and the dispossessed.
nāsa means the nose, the nostril, and also the upper beam.
prasū means a mother, the measured,
a horse, and contradiction.
basū means Śrīda (Kubera), an opening, fire, a family, light, a particular god,
a tree, a medicine, a jewel,
above, a market, wealth,
poetry, a burden, power, and beauty.
bhase means the vulture of the earth,
goṣṭo, and a rooster.
maṃsaṃ means meat, spikenard,
kakkoli, and matted hair.
māsa means a month, and what meets the moon.
māsī means honey and milk. mise means the hundred-petaled flower, jāmā, mridvā, one who has a dwelling, and the best ground.
rasā means the essence of flavor, tiktā and the rest, garlic and the like, fluid, poison, mercury, a bodily element, liquor, bola, butter, and the body.
rasā means the tongue, a stallion, recitation, śallakī, and kaṃgu.
rāsa means musk, play,
and also speech and an iron chain.
phatsa means a son and the like, tallaka, what is finished, and eating.
bāsā means a house, a state,
and what is called aṭi rūlaka.
byasa means the sage, and vast.
śaṃsa means speaking, and desire.
hiṃsa means robbers and the like, and harm.
haṃsa means the sun, madāla,
the Dark One, the wind of the body, the passionless, a lord of men, the lord of the supreme,
a kind of yoga, mantra, and the like,

a miser, and a particular horse.
abhyesa means today, this, another, correctly placed, a good quality, poverty, light, and the entirety.
alisa means slow in action,
and a particular tree with a hollow trunk.
alasā means the lord of faith, always going, sin, and harming others.
āśis means the fang of a snake or a mouse, what does harm, and alike.
āśbāsa means full explanation,
complete determination, and certain entry.
cmaśvāsa means mere binding, moving, and a bow.
ucchasa means breathing in,
breathing out, a simple binding,
and a particular quality.
uttaṃsa means an earring,
an earful, and a headband.
uras means bulk, and an obscuration.
ruśas means agreement of intention, and dawn.
enas means dependence on another, sin,
the body, and a house.
orjas means splendor, the elements,
what is signaled on every side, very clear, holding close, and also cutting.
kīkasaṃ means a bone.
kīkasa means a tiny insect.
cchandas is held to mean verse and what is heard, independence, and conduct.
camasa means what goes everywhere, gold, pride, and a kind of later thing.
jyāyas means an elder brother, and excellent.
jyotis means sound, fire, very clear, seeing, and the pupil of the eye, austerity, a particular world,
a vow, candrāyāna and the like,

austerity, arrogance, and counting.
tamas means heaven, appearance, and anger,
a particular quality, and accomplishing an aim.
taras means strength and force.
tamasa means the dark one,
a fierce woman, bad, and going lightly.
tejas means overpowering others, clarity, might, strength, and semen.
dhanus means the arrow-holder, a house, and a bow,
an archer, piyālaṃ,
the best bow, a bowstring, and the earth-born.
nabhyes means the sky. nabhās means a cloud,
the fruit of the lotus root, and what holds beings.
panasa means rain, a stone,
the nose, a monkey, a kind of illness,
the rainy, the thorny, and fruit.
bayas means milk and water.
pāyasa means the abode of Śrī.
pāyasaṃ means the best of foods.
puṣkasī means the black woman, blue,
a dog-cooker, the lowest, and puṣkasa.
bhūyas means again, and many meanings.
manas means the mind, and near.
manis means a festival and splendor.
mānasa means curing one's own illness.
rajas means a lake, a quality,
a mountain, the best, and the born.
rabhara means that very thing,
joy, and also force.
rahasa means secret and joy.
rākṣasa means a fanged rākṣasa.
retasa means fluid, the essence of flavor, agitation, miserliness, and the last.
roṅasa and rodipī
mean the sky and the earth.
lālasa means speaking together, enthusiasm, begging,

craving, and excess.
bapu means the body and what is ripened.
bayas means youth, a child, and the like, and what goes in the sky.
birdis means fire, a peacock,
kuśa grass, voiding excrement, blazing, explanation, and form.
bāyas means śrībāsa,
what grows by the torma, a crow,
udusbarikā,
kākamācī, and a stage of life.
mahasa means the sleepy snake, renunciation through water, and good in sequence.
bidvadma means one whose self is firm,
the wise, play,
and playfulness of thought.
bātas means a means of snaring birds and wild animals.
biśāsa means stripped of clothing.
bibhātsā means Arjuna,
the ugly, the filthy, and harming.
baidhas means Viṣṇu, the planetary god, and knowing much.
riras means the head, the foremost part of a troop,
the supreme, and the chief.
śrotas means a current, and the ear.
śreyansa means auspicious and peaceful.
śreyasbi means a she-elephant, pispalī, and also bathing.
śeyas means the Dharma, good fortune, Śrī, a place, Viṣṇu, and the lotus goddess.
samasa means summary,
the heart, incense, and power.
saras means water, together,
winter, and paths.
sahasa means an aspect, and moving to and fro.
sāhasa is held to mean taming,
and doing a deed by force.

sāripa means the moon, and a bird.
saisaṃ means not born here.
habis means butter, and what is to be burned in offering.
agauklas and nagaukās
mean the sarabha, the lion, and a bird.
adhibasa means a dwelling, formations, incense, and the like.

abadhvadma means reviling, giving away completely, and wide open.
udarcis means a man,
and one whose flame rises upward, shining upward.
kiniyadma means the after-born,
the very small, and a younger brother.
kalahaṃsa means one with a flock,
the king of geese, and the best of men.
kumbhīnasa means blazing poison,
a view of lineage, and going on the hands. kumbhīnasī means the mother of salt.
ghanirasa means water,
and mercury that falls to the right.
saṃtraniryā sa means camphor, sumoraṭa, and the betel leaf.
candrahāsa means the sword of Daśagrīva, and also other swords.
bhāsarasa means copper,
and also gold and the lotus.
triśrotasanaṃ means the river of the gods,
the daughter of jahnu, and the leaf of heaven.
dīrghayus means one with arrows,
and the livelihood of kaśāsma.
niḥgreyasaṃ means virtue, liberation, the definite good, and the Seizer.
nīlañjasa means a kind of goddess,
a river, and also a kind of lightning.
punarbasu means a star,
the Dark One, and kātyāyana.

baurṇamāsī means the full-moon day,
the full moon, and a sacrifice.
pracetas means a sage,
Varuṇa, and the Dark One.
yobarīyansa means the chief,
the highest place, and the youngest.
madhurasā means mūrbī,
grapes, and milky plants.
malīmasa means the deceiver,
iron, and a flower.
mahārasa means the date fruit,
a treasurer, and wheat.
raserasa means born of essence, accomplished essence, and strength.
pibhābasu means great light,
the sun, and a particular Seizer.
biśopasu means a kind of gandharva, a man, and night.
bihāyas means a sky-goer,
the sky, and the path of the gods.
śvaśreyasaṃ means virtue,
the joy of others, and happiness.
sasttārcis means what burns,
the light of heat, and a yellowish eye.
samañjasa means practiced in drawing.
barjarasa means a kind of lute,
and dhūnaka.
sadhīyansa means very good,
and also very bhaḍṭa.
seddharāsa means the essence of flavor, and venomous snakes and the like. sumnāsa means a flower garland, stable, and melody. sumedhās means one who is clear, of good intellect, and power.
dibyacakṣus means meaning, fragrant, and beautiful-eyed.
nabha śramos means drawing.

sūpa means the moon and a net.
haṃgu is the sound of rlāsaṃ, nilba, and all trees.
What is called hiraṇṭyarahas means the seven flames, and then also the seventh of the seven weekdays, counted backward from Saturn.
This is the section of words ending in ṣa.

ha means an elephant
with an angry glow, and the vajra.
hī means the son of Indra.
ahi means an asura, bṛha, and a snake.
yīhā means shade, and udyama.
uhu means the waning moon, seeing, and an assembly.
guha means a thicket, a lion's tail, a cave, and a heap.
gṛha means a house, ballī,
a holding seat, a holder, and a necklace.
graha means the sun and the other planets, binding, close attachment,
hair, atyama,
a holder, the Delighter and the like,
the lioness's son, and the seizer of darkness.
nahā means binding, stacking, wide, and the joint of an elephant's leg.
sprohato means what is purified,
a section, and wide,
and likewise for numbers such as three.
pāta means a bull, pride,
and a horse. bahā means a mount.
maha means a festival and splendor.
matī means the earth, a river, delusion, and joy.
ahaṃ means intellect and delusion.
lohe means a weapon, joṅgaka, and everything born of fire.

barhaṃ means a peacock's tail, a feather, and a wing.
yahā means the scent-bearer, a heap, a region, and bulls. byuha means
the array of an army, an assembly, emanation, and understanding.
saha means strength, patience, the earth, muṅgaparṇi, and the naṣa medicine.
saha also means a goddess, a maiden, patient, and endowed.
siṃha means one with a sound in the throat,
a kind of house, and the chief place.
motī means great history, kauraṅga, a mother, and belu.
snaha means butter, sesame oil and the like,
fluid substances, and a friend.
atyūhā means a peacock,
hadyūho, indigo, and a medicine.
āgraha means the power to hold on,
what holds, and sequence.
āroha means a mountainside, length, raised up on all sides, breadth of lip, an elephant tamer,
and it also comes to mean a kind of pride.
uha means enthusiasm,
a thread, and also continuity.
kaḍahā means maratī and the like,
vessels, camphors,
a stūpa, a tortoise's back,
and buffalo calves.
kalaha means trade, an insect, grinding,
a sword's sheath, and sesame.
dātyāha means a black snake, prostration, and a sky-goer.
napāha means the first,
the day, and a portion of ground.
nagraha means the eight restraints,

binding, and law.
niryuha means a ring on a door,
a headband, and an elephant's tusk.
nirṣuha means a part of the groin,
and also reasoning and certainty.
paṭaha means a proper undertaking,
and the great drum of war.
pragrata means the cord of a balance, jyābāndha, certain, the hand, raśmi, the bridles of horses and the like,
a barren woman, and one who has gold.
pragaha means a thread,
and also the measure of rain and the like.
brabāha means convention,
milk, and a stream of water.
parāha means a pig, mustā, fragrance, bislu, a cloud, and a great drum.
pārahi means a mātṛkā,
and is explained as seen as a goddess of the Buddha, and also as a medicine. bigraha means the body, battle, and vast,
division into parts,
a compound, Videha, and mithī.
bideha means mithīlā,
and also the empty ground of the body.
dehī, as spoken, means clear,
the White One, the woman of Brahmā, and pispalī. saṃgraha means vast, a weapon, the clenched fist, and summaries. subahā
is held to mean flowing down properly.
subahā means the leaf of ele,
śallūkī, and medicines,
a creeper, a stalk,
and sephalikā.
abhegraha means clinging,
application, and respect.

abagraha means stopping rain, binding separately, and a row of elephants.
abaroba means not independent,
a root, lūta, going upward,
a branch, śipalā,
a ladder, and likewise descending.
aśvarohā means fragrance.
aśvaroha means one who rides in turn on a horse.
upagaha means a barren woman, application, and conformity.
upānāha means a lute,
what binds, a wound, and an ointment.
gandhabahā means the one with a nose. gandhababaha means the wind.
tanūruhaṃ means the garuḍa, and the furry. tamophahana means the victor, the sun, a man, and the mark of a deer.
debasaha means sruta,
the stem of the utpala, and a medicine.

parigraha means complete birth,
the earth, making one's own, and an oath.
paribāhe means a price,
a king, what is suitable, and a complete covering.
barībāha means water, exhalation,
a protector of the earth, a thing, and broth.
pitāmaha means a father, a lord, Brahmā, and a grandfather.
patigraha means making one's own,
an army, the rear, a particular planet,
the great ones, bipa,
the wind, holding that, and holding a place.
mahārohā means the waist,
a kind of woman, and day and night.
mahāsahā means what descends on all,
and the leaf of the nava bean.

What is called prabitṣamahaṃ means a great-grandfather, Brahmā, and the father's father.
This is the section of words ending in ha.

kṣa means a rākṣasa, and a mere field.
akṣa means a wheel, the noose-bearer,
a chariot, the myrobalan, conduct, convention, thought,
and dādmāṅgarśa.
akṣṛra means one who has given up the senses,
and also sau and love.
rikṣaṃ means bhallu, a bear, red,
what is done, and wealth.
ṛkśaṃ means a kind of sage,
a star, and a kind of going.
kakṣa means serabha,
the root of the arm, the lung,
a dry forest, grass,
and a burden. kakṣu means a house, the golden, a treasury, a covering, a creeper, moving,
leading, holding, a vessel,
a part of a chariot, an elephant, and dust.
caukṣṛ means cool, round,
a vessel, clean, and pleasing.
dakṣau means a sage, the Seizer,
a tree, a rooster, and what holds fire.
dakṣo means one who is confident, and fire.
dakṣa means the ground. ddhaṃkṣa means a crow, kaṃka,
a beggar, and the house of logic.
dhūkṣākka means ika.
nyakṣa means all, the Dark One,
and also rāma of the axe.
bakṣa means a side, one face,
a house, a wall, the moon, the Guru (Bṛhaspati), a man,
a friend, a king, the strength of an elephant,

what is to be accomplished, the limb of a garuḍa's body,
a hearth, a hole, opposition,
the finest hair and the like, and an assembly.
prekṣa means intellect, dance, and an instant.
pakṣa means bispala, matted hair,
and also the side of a house,
a kind of lamp, and the vessel of darda.
bhaṃkṣā means holding, the dispeller of darkness, lying down, and the object of begging.
mokā means release from sorcery, release, and freedom, and the muṣkaka tree.
yakṣa means Kubera, a guhyaka, a protector, a guard, and indicating.
rūkṣa means a particular tree, rough, joy, and empty.
lakṣe means a number,
a house, an arrow,
what works wonders, and wonder.
adhyakṣa means one who governs.
padyukṣa means direct perception,
the unchanging, the momentary,
the head, a vital point, and teeth.
usbrekṣa means a poetic ornament, and anadhā.
gabākṣu means Indra,
Varuṇa, dābā, and kīkīśa.
gorakṣa is a name for lead,
and the protecting of cattle.
mṛgākṣi means a deer's eye, Indra, Varuṇa, and the one full of desire.
raktākla means sairitha,
agitation, a pigeon, and the cagora.
samīkṣa means suchness, intellect, a kind of text,
and nibhalana.
debibṛkṣa means the seven-leaved tree, guggulu, mandāra, and the like.

bīrabṛkṣa means the bhallā tree, and the kakubha tree.
byutabṛkṣa means śā, the boṭa tree, and a red tree.
jarābṛkṣa means the woundless,
the golden, and saṃtha.
biśālakṣa means the eye of the Seizer,
and it is called the supreme wide eye.
śakaṭākṣa means the dhaba tree,
and it is called the one with sidelong glances.

The forms that have arisen as the outcome of irregular words through adding aṇ and the others, the suffix ta, guṇa and the rest, should be examined;
the groups of genders not stated are also to be inferred;
and if some have not been included here, it is for fear of prolixity.

In the Viśvaprakāśa, also called the Garland of Pearls, the sections ending in the letter kṣa are complete.

Now, in that same proper order, beginning with the letter ā,
in this section on various meanings,
I shall also state the indeclinables.
ā means Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva), āmsaṃpo, Smara (Kāma), pervading, near, an element, the sense of remainder,
torment, and anger;
these are not to be joined in sandhi.
i means desire, weariness,
Śrī, suffering, real anger, Śiva, the perfect Buddha, and speech.
ā means protection, the protector, purification, an act, beginning, and countless.
ṛ means the reviling speech of the gods.
ṛ means the reviling speech of the asura women.
'ṛ also means the mother of the gods.
e means the four hands,
Smara, calling, and songs.

i is explained as Śiva,
and also Smara, calling, and competing.
aṃ means Brahmā, light, and competing.
au means the sky, calling, competing,
the supreme Dharma, and assent.
aḥ is explained as a broom.
ku means reviling, and the sense of little.
kiṃ means distinction, obstruction, and also scolding and reviling.
ki means the future, and fatigue.
aṅga is also seen as calling to all,
joy, and the sense of again.
kiñja means beginning, and all.
ca means continuity, ascertainment, filling out a verse line, a gloss, gathering from everything, collecting incidentally,
the sense of mutual, focusing,
the direct, the sense of the unseen,
the crooked, the sky-goer, and the like.
nanuca means a question,
a god, reasoning, what is truly firm, and high praise.
prañca means the best, the past, before,
dawn, and an interval,
a direction, place and time, heruka,
the middle, and binartha.
na means absence, negation,
the contrary, and what is other than that,
alike, the sense of little,
the sense of intrinsic nature, and sequence.
puṣbū means high praise,
the sense of very, good,
excellent, and blameless.
ati means between, lacking,
the sense of middle, depending,
sameness itself, abandoning now, excellent, and above.

atas means indicating by reference, definite teaching, the sense of the fifth case, and the agent.
antatas means teaching,
the sense of the fifth case, a limb of meditation,
and also recognition, slander, and harm.
aho means wonder, desire, weariness, the perfect Buddha, and compassion.
ā means oneself, far, and near.
itas is explained as certainty, parts,
and also the sense of the fifth case.
ati means a cause, completion,
an introduction, distinguishing, clarifying, and the like, drawing along after,
kinds, the sense of "but," and conception.
u means asking, and the sense of alternatives.
ki means question and desire.
kimuta is known as excellent,
and also a question and the sense of alternatives.
kutas is held to mean realizing, asking,
and also the sense of the fifth case.
he means the sense of "you," and the sense of giving.
me means the sense of "I," and "mine."
tu means filling out a verse line, distinction, focusing, and gathering all.
tatas means first, asking thoroughly, the sense of the fifth case, and as in a discourse.

tāvat means unbroken and broken, emphasis, and a little,
and complete settling.
paścāt means
the west, and also later.
purastāt means the east, and before,
the sense of former, and first.
prati means giving back, and first,
holding each one distinctly,

the arising of the principal, and the wish to obtain, characteristic and the like, and application, the sense of "merely," and facing toward,
clear manifestation, and speaking as well.
bata means weariness, and play, and censure, satisfaction, calling, and wonder.
The word yatas means certainty,
the sense of the fifth case, and distinguishing.
yadvā tatri means alternatives.
yata means self, and restriction.
sīman is a section, kata.
śaśvat means again, and the sense of always.
śiti means question, and alternatives.
sakṛt means together, and once.
sākṣāt means direct perception, and equal.
svasti means aspiration, virtue, merit,
well-being, happiness, and the like.
hanta means joy, and compassion, purity, beginning, poison, and the like;
and also in the good sense of poison and the like the word hanta is applied.
atha and atho mean virtue, question, beginning, doubt,
and without interruption. anyathā means not so, and the sense of another manner.
tathā means like that, definite teaching, certainty, and gathering all, continuity, and producing,
summary teaching, and the individual.
yathā means inference, like that,
definite teaching, and summary teaching,
and also cause and producer.
vṛthā means sickness, and discarded, without cause, barren, and in every case;
by that cause it should be seen in these.
ut means principal, clear manifestation, liberation, binding, and the action of above.

byuru means obtaining, entity, separation, one's own strength, and powerless.
anu means sequence, inferior,
the sense of after, the sense of together, great breadth, the sense of near,
similarity, characteristic, and the like.
kinnu means question, and alternatives.
nanu means question, emphasis,
calling, drawing along after, and permission.
nānā means many, the sense of discarding, and also the sense of both.
nina means always, certainty, wonder, arrangement, summary, aggregate,
inner entity, and entity,
seeing, and giver,
binding, supreme peace,
liberation, virtue, doubt,
and abode. nu means the sense of drawing along after,
abode, kind, similarity,
and should be seen in the sense of cause.
apa means the Dark One, the sense of separation,
the sense of discarding, reading, separation, the unpleasant, thief, joy, and definite teaching.
api means possibility, need,
question, censure, gathering all, reasoning, the meaning of a word, acting at will,
and actions. upa means inferior, bad, pervading,
beginning, and worship, doing without conduct, giving,
a recipient of offerings, and the past.
ut means effort, fault, and talk,
the sense of the deathless, the sense of effort, gathering, and the wish to anoint, and the sense of a border: so is the word well known.
The word va becomes simile;

for Varuṇa too it is this very word.
vā means alternative, and simile,
the sense of "only," and gathering all.
vai means filling out a verse line, connection, drawing along after, and certainty.
abhi means having become thus, and talk, strong desire, and facing toward.
abhīkṣṇam means again and again, quickly, excellence, and continuity.
ābhīkṣṇyam likewise
is held to mean again and again, and continuity.
amā means the sense of together, near,
the new moon, and together.
apavye means effort, and permanent.
alam means ornament, the word of sufficiency, fruitless, capable, obtaining, and emphasis.
id and the rest are for the ornament of speech.
sam is also held to mean the sense of former.
i means suffering, meditation, anger, direct perception, and grasping.
um means question, assent, and anger.
um means question, assent, anger, and weariness.
evam means manner, simile, acceptance, and restriction.
oṃ means assent,
speaking, high praise, and sequence.
ka means head, happiness, and water.
kathi means question, and manner.
paṃ means moving, and arising.
mami means assent.
prana means wish, following after, and the sun.
kaṃ means question, and censure.
joṣam means silence, happiness,
high praise, and moving.
uddinam means during the day,
and the sun abiding day by day.
tūṣṇīkā means merely not speaking.

tūṣṇīkam means one who is a sage.
nāma means clear manifestation, arising,
bad, acceptance, and anger.
nūnam is explained as alternative and certainty of meaning.
prādhva means bent, conforming, excellence, certainty, and the sense of "very."
śam means virtue, and happiness.
sam means the sense of attachment, the sense of sameness, the sense of beauty, and the sense of excellence.
sma means the past, and filling out a verse line.
samā means censure, and having a pair.
sāmpratam means the present.
ham means an angry word, drawing along after, and body.
praguṅa means alternatives.
hūṃ means subduing, and assent;
some also hold it to mean wrongdoing.
ayikā means a portion, and bad,
speaking, understanding, a joyful word, setting out to the battlefront, drawing along after,
going, circling round, and anger.
āya means memory, poison and the like,
the end of time, and the middle.
antarā means the sense of separation, the sense of middle, and the sense of near.
antar means the sense of furthest end, the sense of middle,
and should be seen in the sense of one's own activity.
urarī and ūrarī
and ūrī mean vast, and made one's own.
dur means negation, hardship,
the sense of going and the like, and not excellent.
nir means negation without remainder,
and certainty in senses such as "intensely."
parā means understanding, harm, replying, principal, supreme,
facing toward, liberation,
the sense of certainty, and subduing.

pari means all around, entity,
the wish to obtain, characteristic and the like,
embracing, clothing, pervading, sickness, grief, worship, supreme,
protector of the earth, speaking of faults, and discarding.
punar means distinction, first,
having become former, ancient times,
being firmly bound, the past,
above the earth, the higher realms, and the other world.
kila means beauty, history, possibility, and the sense of drawing along after.
khalu is remembered for the ornament of speech, the wish to obtain, negation, certainty, continuity, not speaking,
the wish to know, and the like.
ava means pervading, thorough meditation, separation, object, negation,
the sense of a little, consciousness, simile, and restriction.
vas means the sense of "you know,"
division, and manner,
the past, the sense of distinct, principal,
entity, and sky-goers.
uṣā means number, having number,
the end of night, and the wish to lie down to sleep.
doṣā means the door of night,
night, and also cloud.
niṣaṣā means end and middle, protection, and also other.
agrahas means first,
tip, supreme, that very thing,
and the silent.

abhitas means end, and all ends, facing toward,
both, and quick.
tiras means animal, invisible,
weariness, and negation, entirety, and the past.

nīcais is held to mean having little independence.
puras means supreme, and first.
gurańsana means first and supreme.
prātar means the early part of the day, the morning.
pūrvedyus means the ground of the Dharma,
the sense of former, and the day before,
after and after, and again and again, in the sense of many. mithas means mutual, and seizing.
prādus means clear manifestation, conduct, and should be seen also for mere existence.
śanais is explained as moving slowly, independence, and good worship,
the sense of certainty, and following after,
hardship, and genuine prosperity,
just at that time, and haphazard,
and also what occurs suddenly.
mahā means born of grief,
bad, poison, and the sense of compassion.
aho is held to mean question, discernment, wonder, and protecting.
ahāhā means that wonder arises.
ahaha means latent tendencies,
total affliction, and great joy.
āha means moving, and the sense of definite application.
utāho means considering these.
The word saha means all,
at once, and genuine joining,
similar, existing, and connection.
ha means filling out a verse line, connection, and inferior.
hā is for poison and the like.
hāhā is well known for weariness;
for a gandharva too there is Hāhā.
he is for distinction, restriction, and filling out a verse line.
hī is for wonder, poison and the like,

joy, and the causes of suffering.
hītī means wonder, and laughter.
hūtū means joy, and a gandharva.
he and hai mean not arriving, remembering, calling, and causes.
ho and ho are held to mean all,
calling, and rivalry.
mikṣa means quick, and the sense of certainty;
some also hold it to mean that very thing.

These are the inexhaustible words having many meanings.

In the Nepalese year three hundred and eighty-one, on the eighth day of the dark half of the month of Phālguna, on the day of Jupiter, Thursday, in the town of Śrī Lalitapura, at the great monastery where Gautama especially abides, the section that the paṇḍita and elder Glorious Supreme Lineage Śrījñāna had written down is complete.

This was done at the command of the supreme and peerless object of offerings for gods and humans, the Precious Nirmāṇakāya, the Fourth Holder of the Red Crown, the Precious Chennga of Thel, the precious seat of the glorious Phakmo Drupa. The one called Zhalu Lotsāwa, the monk Dharmapālabhadra, relying on earlier translations such as the Treasury of the Immortal (Amarakośa), left out such things as the words that identify grammatical markers, which are of no use in Tibetan; he kept the Sanskrit as it was where it was needed as the basis of explanation, and left as they were those for which no equivalent was found. Thus he translated it, edited it, and made it correct.

Translator's Notes

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon: each Sanskrit headword, written in Tibetan letters, is followed by the meanings it can bear. The headwords are given exactly as the Tibetan spells them, and many are evidently corrupt in transmission; meanings are translated from the Tibetan glosses, several of which are themselves garbled. Doubtful points: "light" reads □□□□□ as □□□□□; "a particular number" for śaṃku reads □□□ as □□□□; "molasses" for kaṇaka reads □□□□□ as □□□□□ only conjecturally; the gloss "a girl who has seen her first flow" for rākā interprets a corrupt phrase; the isolated line "A mountain, ka, and beauty" and the glosses for tarka (the divisions of the śātri), tośaṃ, abyuka and kañcuka are uncertain. □□□□□□ is taken as Kubera, whose city is Alakā.
• As in the previous piece, the Sanskrit headwords are given exactly as the Tibetan spells them, and both headwords and glosses are often corrupt; many glosses are rendered literally where their intended sense cannot be recovered with confidence. Identifications that rest on the evident Sanskrit behind the Tibetan include the atimukta creeper (Tibetan "very freed"), Viśvāmitra (Tibetan "various friend of the senses"), the mast (Tibetan "tree of qualities," guṇavṛkṣa), the leather-winged one as the bat, the lord of the west as Varuṇa, and the perfumed chamber (gandhakuṭī). "A certain shrub" renders the unidentified Tibetan plant name le brgan. In the karmukaṃ entry a stray syllable kri is disregarded.

• As before, Sanskrit headwords are reproduced as the Tibetan spells them; both headwords and glosses are frequently corrupt, and many glosses are rendered literally. Garlok (Tibetan gar log) is the Tibetan name for a Turkic people, here glossing turuṣka. The stray syllable thu before "nāga" in the takṣaka entry is disregarded. Sweetwood renders Tibetan shing mngar, licorice. "The ragan" renders an unidentified Tibetan word (ra gan, possibly brass).

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized exactly as the Tibetan spells them, even where the standard Sanskrit form differs (e.g. rucarka for rucaka, betarka for vitarka). Several glosses rest on probable copyists' slips: "ya mang agna" read as Jamadagni (Reṇukā is his wife); "khyem" read as khyim, "house, household" (rātrika, ṅañcaka, svasteka); "khye" read as khyi, "dog" (sūcaka); "rmod pa" read as smod pa, "reviling" (ākṣepaka); "dag dad" read as ngag dang, "speech and" (eḍamūka, deaf and dumb). Uncertain renderings: "rgo ma" (rātrokai) taken as "mare"; "gru'i byu ma" (bijakaiśaṃ) taken as "kernel of a grain"; "mi dzi'i las" (byālīśaṃ) as "an improper act"; "dbyangs ldan" (śaṃpūkā) as "a sonorous shell"; "ri skegs myos" (śakhākā) as "porcupine, intoxication"; "rgyal cho kar" (sasthāki) as "a royal line"; "nab so" (kathillaka) as "basil"; "dbal 'bras" (karkotake) as "a pointed fruit"; "rgyal byed mkhas pa" (kākarūka) as "one skilled in winning"; "se'a snyan" (svasteka) as "sweet sound". Unidentified words such as summa, urṅhāna, joṭirga, balmakī, phara and hīlīna are left as spelled.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords and other Sanskrit words are romanized exactly as the Tibetan spells them. Probable copyists' slips: "seng lding" read as seng ldeng, khadira (tuktaśāka); "glo gros" as blo gros, "the wise" (niyāmaka); "snod gad pa" as snod gang ba, "full vessel" (pūrṇapaka); "sbre'u" as spre'u, "monkey" (śatānika); "spre'u'i dra ba" in santanika taken as "cobweb," following the Sanskrit sense of santānikā. "lag 'gro" is rendered "serpent" (bhujaga). Uncertain: "gzem" (triparṇakaṃ) left unidentified; "brad byad pa" and "brad po" taken as "gambler"; "tshor reg" (baraṇḍaka) as "howdah"; "nges rgyal 'phrog byed" (bhāryāṭika); the division of "rā ... dharaṅka"; "piṣṭa'i dgon pa" (upakārikā) as "flour cake"; the last three entries contain garbled Sanskrit quotations, romanized as written.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords and other Sanskrit words are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. The colophon names the work "sna tshogs gsal ba," also called "mu tig phreng ba," by Śrīdharasena (dpal 'dzin sde); this is taken to be his lexicon known as the Viśvalocana or Muktāvalī. Probable copyists' slips: "grang" read as grong, "village" (grāmamaṅkurikā); "sprul" as sbrul, "snake" (bhoga); "nang" as nad, "disease" (roga); "seng lding" earlier and "klog" here as glog, "lightning." "khram pa'i 'bras" (mātulasutraka) is taken as the thorn-apple fruit, following the Sanskrit sense. Uncertain: "mid zlos" (aṅga), "tshigs bral" (bhaga) rendered "dispassion," "chags thogs" (mṛga), and "san mo" (yuga) rendered "yoke-pin." "lha min" under lekha is kept as "asura" as written, although Sanskrit lekha means a god.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords and other Sanskrit words are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. "spal ba" (byaṅga) is read as sbal ba, "frog," and "sprul" (kāliṃgā, jihmaga, sunnāga) as sbrul, "snake." Uncertain renderings: "sa yi mag pa" (śṛṅga), literally "son-in-law of the earth"; "lus khral" (asāṅgaṃ) as "a defective body"; "rta bon po" (turagī) as "mare," following the Sanskrit; "gnyis med" (rāthāga) as "the non-dual"; "bcu smin pa" (bātiga) read as bcud smin pa; "rlung gi tshogs" (kathāprasaṅga); "skya nar" (moghā). "mu stegs" under dhārāṅga is taken in the sense of tīrtha, a sacred ford.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords and other Sanskrit words are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. "byi ga" (kārtsigha) is taken as a shortened form of byi dang ga, viḍaṅga. "lha ma" (namuci) is read as lha ma yin, "asura." "'dong" (ruci) is read as 'dod, "desire." Under kanici, "rgyas pa" is translated "flowering," since here it is a common word and not the name Vyāsa. Under aja, "nag po" and "dran pa" are taken as the Dark One (Kṛṣṇa) and Smara (Kāma), following the Sanskrit senses of aja. Uncertain: "sma(r) mi bsngags pa" (kūrca), "'bra go'i shing" (barju), "ngan spong" and "bu rdul bzang" (dvijā), "mon sman nu" (nyubbaṃ), "pu shel rtse" (lāji), and "ma min bdag" (kaccha).

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon: each Sanskrit headword, transliterated in Tibetan, is followed by its senses in Tibetan. Headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them, often irregularly. Several Tibetan glosses are obscure or are themselves transliterations and have been kept as sounds rather than guessed at: khorudāhṛdā, dabong, sbreu, skyega, ākadhi, sabaratha, kṛṇa eka, akaprasabandha, shol, lukkhurma, nataṅ. In the entry for bhūmijā the Tibetan has "anakī", which I read as Jānakī (Sītā, the earth-born), with an initial syllable lost. Under dharmarāja, "garuḍa" and "peacock" stand between the two halves of the word for Sugata; they may be intrusive glosses. "Stepping over" under munibhaiṣaji probably renders laṅghana in its medical sense of fasting. Under kruṣṭaṃ, "du" (smoke) is read as ngu, "weeping". Under daivajña, the Tibetan "one with a host" renders gaṇaka, the calculator, that is, astrologer.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them, often irregularly, and several glosses that are themselves transliterations or obscure Tibetan words are kept as sounds: ṣilga, petana, yamakuṭa, risrita, satīnaga, bhautāñcalīma, sākali, gandholī, cina, dhuka, baṃgaṃ, dru, śabi, hantṛ, kraya, kāntadatta, prāñcaloha, kūśūl, kuśul. "The Victor of karkaṭa" under mārkaṭa is literal and unclear. Under kāmakūṭa, "one with a host" renders gaṇikā, the courtesan. Under karkaṭa, "a particular house" probably means the zodiacal sign Cancer.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them. Many glosses that are themselves transliterations or obscure words are kept as sounds rather than guessed: pāripali, nogona, cūcuka, naleśaṃ, caccakrika, gyolpo, kinikala, piṃka, kutbā, jārāta, buraṃ, gutī, rilu, madhvāna, baḍabhū, turbba, kuhana, kadhī, sihlaka, drago, byaba, cavikā, kara, durasaṅ, dalāṭaka, karkāru, mucacañca, traṇikā, karhāṭaka. Under ṣaṣṭi, "the queen of the Seizer" is literal; the Seizer may be Hari or Hara. "The bow of Karṇa" for kālapṛṣṭha takes "ear" (karṇa) as the hero's name. "The lord of the mountain's daughter" under śrīkaṇṭha is Śiva. Under aṇḍa, vīrya is kept untranslated because here it most likely means semen rather than diligence.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them, often irregularly, and glosses that are themselves transliterations or obscure words are kept as sounds: sta, thaba, karavīrī, kacchi, sākasājñe, saraṭa, braba, sarba, bhugna, kṛtapābanhya, maukṛ, lāva, dhūrā, kṣoda, būga, svokaka, barāṭa, pola, buraṃ, kutsaka, matog, barpaṭa, jhiṇḍa. Under mārtaṇḍa the Tibetan literally reads "the light of the fierce one"; mārtaṇḍa is the sun, so it is rendered "the fierce-rayed sun". Under kṛṣṇa, "the accomplisher of existence" is literal and its referent is uncertain. The final group, from "praise" onward, lists the senses of varṇa, though the Tibetan attaches them to parpaṇi.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them, often irregularly, and glosses that are themselves transliterations or obscure words are kept as sounds: blin, sāṣaṇḍi, kāchoma, sinduvār, naleśaṃ, paṭa, nāsita, abarku, gosnyö, apācī, mṛṣṭi, para, sūdha, samañjapa, pāṅka, drago, durbātri, pṛkkā, śallaṣi, beta, karkaśa, kṣumā, ṣacya, do. "Apācī" is the south, so dakṣiṇa and dakṣiṇā include that sense. "That with five characteristics" under purāṇaṃ refers to the five topics that define a purāṇa. "The teacher of the gods" under dhiṣaṇa is Bṛhaspati. The Tibetan for "the lord of waters" is Varuṇa.

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; the Sanskrit headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, many of them visibly corrupted in transmission (for example śramaṇaṃ for śravaṇaṃ, nārleyaṇa for nārāyaṇa, hiraṇa and tiraṇya for hiraṇya). Several glosses are Tibetan transliterations or obscure plant and object names that could not be identified with confidence and are given as written: "soma bla," "sog po," "gu," "siṃha," "la bar ba," "lri," "bya ma so rgyug pa," "bam," and "bu leng." Under lavaṇaṃ, "a kind of elephant" renders gnyis 'thung ("twice-drinker"); other Sanskrit lexica give a kind of rākṣasa here. 'ching bu'i snod is read as mching bu'i snod, "glass vessel," the usual sense of siṃhāṇa. In utkṣepa, so ba nyed is tentatively rendered "winnower of grain." Under taṇḍurīṇa, brka ba is taken as a sound-rendering of barbara, "barbarian." Under suṣeṇa, the gloss may refer to Suṣeṇa, the monkey physician allied with Sugrīva.

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; the Sanskrit headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupted (for example kuktu for mukti, kikta for tikta, piṅkā for paṅkti, nāti for nīti). Under kunti, skyab seng is read as skya bseng, Pāṇḍu, whose queen Kuntī was. Under pota, gu is read as gru, "boat," the standard sense of pota. Several glosses are unidentified plant or object names and are given as written, notably "jila," "bhelu," "parba," "kolāhva," "sādhva," "bakṛmba," "kha lang tshang ma," and "māpāka." Under manta, shed bu is taken as "human" (manuja).

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; Sanskrit headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupted. Several glosses are unidentified names given as written (for example "rug," "urbati," "caṇḍa," "kakola," "sībana," "ūta," "dhvananti," "āgatī," "nānaka," "sgyeng bu"). Under śvetā, the lines "good and existing, auspicious, and worship" appear to belong to a headword (probably sat) that the Tibetan does not spell out; they are translated where they stand. Under agasti, "the destroyer of the hosts of Vaṅga" renders bangga'i sde 'joms literally and is uncertain. Under kṣartti, ngnes sbyor is taken as "close attendant." "The third nature" under akṣataṃ is the usual lexical term for a eunuch.

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; Sanskrit headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupted (for example bakāti for pratipad, bārpatī for pārvatī, dhārtatu evidently for bhārata). Several glosses are unidentified names given as written (for example "lita," "stvajā," "gaśita," "cila," "dayita," "zhi ma," "ballaga," "rdzong ma," "'tsho ma," "the ri ba," "pābye," "basrita," "pṛbaga"). Under kanditaṃ, du is read as ngu, "weeping." Under pracita, spur mi ldan ("without a corpse") is read as spun mi ldan, "without siblings," as in the parallel entry for ācita in the preceding piece. Under bārpatī, dro ba dī is taken as a sound-spelling of Draupadī. Under nidṅhati, rna ba and nag po are kept as the names used earlier in this text, though here they may simply mean "black-eared."

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; Sanskrit headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, many visibly corrupted (for example panitā for vanitā, birluta for vidyut, bannati for santati, sthasati for sthapati). Several glosses are unidentified names given as written (for example "picība," "maṅga," "sky nar," "skhali," "abiśapta," "tinipa"). Under bāsitaṃ, skra ("hair") is read as sgra, "sound, cry," the usual sense of vāśita. Under sambarta, rtsod pa'i shing, "the tree of strife," is likely the vibhītaka (kali) tree.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; the headwords are given in romanized Sanskrit following the Tibetan spellings, as in earlier pieces. The verse beginning "Precious gold, one with a host" has no headword in the Tibetan as it stands, and is translated as written. In the airāvataṃ entry, "Indra's bow" reads dbang and mda' stan ("arrow-seat," a bow) together; this is uncertain. In the pratibatti entry, gos byed ("making clothing") may be a slip for go byed ("making understood"). In the vivasvāta entry, bābasu and cena are left as transliterated; their sense is unclear. The Reed-born (mda' skyes) is taken as Śarajanman, Skanda, with moderate confidence. skang ba'i before pañcagupta appears to mark a supplementary entry. ras bal is taken as cotton.

• Headwords are romanized following the Tibetan spellings, as in earlier pieces. The Drier (skems byed) is taken as Skanda with moderate confidence. "The son of the stubborn woman" (rtul mo'i bu) is a literal rendering of an epithet not securely identified. In the tīrthaṃ entry, pus mo ba ni tā is obscure and rendered literally as "the knee, and tā". In the mantha entry, bcu gnyis bdag is read as "lord of the twelve," an epithet of the sun, and tsam pa as roasted barley flour. In the prothartha entry the phrase dar zho dkrogs pa'i ba appears defective and is rendered as churned curd and buttermilk.

• Headwords are romanized following the Tibetan spellings, as in earlier pieces. Several runs (beginning "A cloud, mustā," "triśa," and "A giver, Śrīda") have no clear headword as the Tibetan stands and are translated as written. In the ākrānda entry, du is read as ngu, "weeping." In the govinda entry, dbang gzhan skyes is taken as Upendra, the "younger brother of Indra," an epithet of Viṣṇu. In the prapada entry, the syllable pa after rab dang is left untranslated as meaningless. In the śatahvāda entry, klog is read as glog, "lightning." Meghanāda and Daśagrīva are names: Rāvaṇa's son and Rāvaṇa himself.

• Headwords are romanized following the Tibetan spellings, as in earlier pieces. In the abharodha entry, rgyal po'i khab here has its lexical sense "royal palace" rather than the city of Rājagṛha. In the yojanagandha entry, rgyas pas spros is taken as an allusion to Yojanagandhā, mother of Vyāsa; the Tibetan is terse. In the dadhi entry, dpal stug is taken as śrīveṣṭa resin. In the māgadhā entry, zegs ma khyu is rendered "a cluster of pepper" with some uncertainty.

• Headwords are romanized following the Tibetan spellings, as in earlier pieces. Several runs (beginning "kinglike," "aṅgudī," "Meaning, begging," "Self, Brahmā," and the final line) have no clear headword as the Tibetan stands and are translated as written. The chinnā entry (gi, shi g.yo, thal mo) is obscure and largely transliterated. The division between the ketanaṃ and kaubini entries is uncertain. kaṭhināṃ as "turban wrapping" (thod le skor) is a tentative reading.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; each headword is given romanized as the Tibetan spells it, and many spellings are irregular (for example darnśaṃ for darśanaṃ, nandarmāpeni and nandarṇa probably for nandana, rlubān and dtanaṃ of uncertain identity). In the first line the particle written ṇi is taken as the ordinary topic marker ni. In the ghattanā entry the wheel-bearer (cakrin) list reads sprul, taken as a slip for sbrul "snake," which the Sanskrit cakrin supports. "One clad in hide" (ba bas pa), "a rounded stone" (bong sgong) and the headword written as the Tibetan word "benefit" (phan pa, probably standing for pṛtanā "army") are uncertain readings. The Noose-Bearer is Varuṇa (Pāśin); dhanvin's "srid sgrub" tree is taken as the arjuna tree.

• Headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, irregularities included. Some Tibetan glosses are uncertain: le brgan is taken as madder, seng after "knowing" in the badanaṃ entry is rendered "lion", sdig pa in the śataghnī entry may mean "scorpion" rather than "evil", and ti ni ba in the sandarṇa entry probably stands for the tiniśa tree. The line rendered "bartan means the body..." has the Tibetan brtan ("firm") as its headword, perhaps a garbled transcription. In the śakuni entry, stobs bzang is taken as Subala, father of Śakuni.

• Headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, irregularities included. "The Mountain Rat" renders ri byi, apparently the name of a sage (in the entries for "the pot-born" and mahāmuni, where Agastya would be expected), but I cannot confirm the identification, so it is translated literally. In kātyāyana, mchog sred is taken as Vararuci, and "Kātya's daughter" reads bya mo ("hen") as bu mo ("daughter"). The lines "tabo, of cattle; dhana means austerity..." appear to be a broken transcription of tapodhana. phyi dong ka in the rasāyani entry is an unidentified plant name.

• This is a lexicon of homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. Some readings: in the subarban entry 'da' is read as mda' ("arrow"); in the kṛpā entry rtse ba ("play") is read as brtse ba ("compassion"), the sense of kṛpā; and in the first entry of the new pa-section the headword written kha very likely stands for pa, whose senses (wind, drinking, protector) follow. "The son of the Mighty One" (stobs ldan bu) in the bairocana entry and "the one with ten fears" ('jigs bcu pa) are literal renderings of epithets I cannot securely identify. srid sgrub in the śvetabāhana entry is taken as the hero Arjuna, and ce spyang lto "the wolf-bellied" as Vṛkodara (Bhīma).

• Headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. A few readings: in the dvijihrā entry sprul phra mo is read as sbrul ("snake") and phra ma ("slanderer"), the standard senses of dvijihva; ri dags myos pa in the darbu entry is taken as musk. Some Tibetan glosses are unidentified plant or object names and are given phonetically or literally (brikang, lhangtsher gong, tshadpara, the dra go fruit). In the bha entry, 'dri bu is uncertain and is rendered "bee". "The Dark One" in the pṛṣāka entry renders nag po (Kṛṣṇa).

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are given in romanized form and their senses are translated from the Tibetan glosses, several of which are obscure. Some headwords are evidently miswritten and are given in their evident form: garḍaddhā as gardabhī, brāma as grāma, and bhāma (the second one) as bhrama. Uncertain renderings: sum rtsen under vibhu ("the one of threefold play"), rta rag under sabhā ("horse yard"), maṃ bzang under aśubha, dbang pos thig le under dundubhi, zer na under kharma, the "double ma" entry, and the glosses for jālma, where "she who makes right view" may be a slip for "one who acts without proper consideration" (not supplied here, as it would add a negation). The line "a peak, a cat, the supreme, an abode, and the chief" appears to belong to an unnamed headword (perhaps kakud) and is kept where it stands. rgyu skar under nābhi is taken as a lunar mansion; myos pa as musk.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them except where plainly miswritten: nāma is read as vāma, sābaṅgama as plavaṅgama, brahārma as prāharma, madzyamā as madhyamā. Under rāma, "ya mang agni" is taken as Jamadagni (the reference is presumably to his son Paraśurāma), and shol 'dzin as the Plough-Bearer, Balarāma. Rumā is the name of Sugrīva's wife; the Tibetan simply gives "Sugrīva". Several glosses are obscure or garbled and are rendered literally or romanized: masvacalcaṇākare (under rukma), naleśaṃ, pūrbidakaṭaluṇṭī, rus sal, kaunāsa, murbbahlā, and the phrase under varam rendered "making the sound o". After śrāma the Tibetan carries a parenthetical scribal remark that an interlinear note reading "what is called cāgu" appears there; it is not part of the lexicon entry and is not rendered in the body. Under upakrama, □□□□□□□□□ is given as "restoration", here in the sense of remedial treatment.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, except where plainly miswritten (□□ read as caya, □□□□ as janī, □□□□ as jantu, □□□□□□ as tārkṣya, □□□□□ as dasyu). Under nityaṃ the Tibetan □□□ ("tiger") is evidently a slip for □□□ ("permanent") and is so translated. Several glosses are obscure and rendered literally or romanized (for example the "living rattle" under kulyā, aślā, varyaṭana, medura, smasa, vitingi, sauḍhya); bīṅgi is probably vīrya, given its glosses. Under yāmyā, □□□□□□ is taken as "expansion" rather than the name Vyāsa.

• A lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them (□□□□□□ read as paryāya, □□□□□□□□ as pānīya, □□□□□□ as payasya, □□□□□□ as upāya). Many glosses here are obscure or garbled in the Tibetan and are rendered literally or romanized (for example under āśraya, jabā, pratīrle, bāleya, gomamu, bau). Under gāṅgeya, □□□□□□□□□ is taken as Bhīṣma, since both he and Kārttikeya are called "son of Gaṅgā"; under paulastya, "the grandson of Broad Light" renders □□□□□□□□□ literally. Under tapasyā, □□□□□□□□□ is the lunar mansion Phalgunī.

• This piece of the homonym lexicon is heavily corrupted in the Tibetan; headwords are romanized as spelled (tirṇyaṃ is evidently hiraṇyaṃ, kuru in the second instance evidently guru), and many glosses are rendered literally or romanized where they cannot be identified (for example ltami, naṃtamba, dumo and rgurmo, tsamsa, atog, lhaseg, and the long compound headword before madhorihe). The line "without the right, not the right, and the contrary" seems to belong to a headword such as apasavya that is not spelled out. Under phalaṃdaya, □□□□□□□□ is rendered as in the earlier occurrence ("threefold play"), probably meaning heaven. Under āra, □□□□□□ is taken as the planet Saturn.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; the headwords are given in romanization as the Tibetan spells them, even where the spelling departs from standard Sanskrit (for example tintri and tantri for tantra, tānaṃ for tāmraṃ, rāṣṭaṃ for rāṣṭraṃ). In the entry for cakra, □□□□□ has been read as □□□□□, "ruddy goose" (cakravāka), an evident copyist's slip. Under gotra, □□□□□ is kept as kṣatra, though kṣetra "field" or chatra "umbrella" may be intended. The headword written □□□□□□ has been read as chatra, "umbrella," from its gloss "covering against the heat." Several glosses are obscure in the Tibetan and are rendered literally: "she who causes hearing" (citā), "the lot of terror" (gori), the "shoots" (□□□□□) of dūrvā (hībri), "a doe" (□□□, dhādrī), "a kind of collar" (□□□□□□□, dvana), "a pale shoot" (□□□□□□□□□, suraṃ), "a kind of leaper" (□□□□□), and the line on barī (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□). The words cag, ṣilga, brahya and brārjya could not be identified and are left as written.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them, even where the spelling departs from standard Sanskrit. In the entry for svaru, □□□ has been read as □□□, "arrow," an evident copyist's slip. Several glosses are left as written because they are unidentified Sanskrit words or obscure in the Tibetan: pa (under rabra), rtatri, pīsīlikā (probably pipīlikā, "ant"), bze ma, ambar, dardar, sāmara, sāmana, kava, kṣariṃ, śrena and śīpa. The phrase □□□□□ under kaṇiru is taken as the karṇikāra tree. The headword at the start of the last entries (□□□□□□□□□ □□□□) is divided as kaṭvasū and rambaṃ, but the division is uncertain.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. Under chidira, the gloss written □□□□□□□□□ is taken as paraśvadha, "axe." Under dahara, □□□□□ has been read as □□□□□, "younger brother," an evident slip. Under bhūpara (probably tūvara, usually "beardless"), □□□□□□□□ is rendered as written, "a man with a beard." Under badarā, □□□□□□□□□□ is given as Elāpattra per the house glossary, but in this list of plants it probably means the cardamom leaf, and □□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Viṣṇu's stride") is the plant Viṣṇukrāntā. Under durduraṃ, □□□□□□□□ is rendered literally as "the threefold play." Many glosses are unidentified Sanskrit words left as written (for example ṭaṃganḍa, ṭira, kure, śulī, āḍū, sālapa, bhaṃdra, thuni, piśaga, sva, mītra, nipaka, kṣu, supa, sindhipa, māśa, nisteyā), and the lines on pāsurā and supa are obscure.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. In aklupāra (akūpāra, "ocean, king of tortoises") the syllable □□□ is part of the transliterated headword, not the word nāga. Under śāṃkari, □□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("lord of obstructors," Vighnapati) is taken as Gaṇeśa. Several items are unidentified words left as written or rendered literally: khadja, ta (under murmura), baṣṭa, cilu, dhaka, kiṇihī, ṣilga, korabāna, śimba, karake, nīgna, sāvantī, dhāhakī, bika, śibyakriṅ, kījikaṃ, bāna phiṃgana, babhyimo, the □□□□□□□□□□□ under ardhacandra, and the □□□□□□□□□□ ("silk scabbard") under asipatra.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords are romanized as the Tibetan spells them. □□□□□ under kaṭaṃbhara is the lunar mansion Rohiṇī. Under nīlāmbara (an epithet of Balarāma), □□□□□□□□□□□□ is taken as "the slayer of Pralamba." Under vātaputra, □□□□□□□□□ is kept as Bhīṣma for consistency with earlier pieces, though the son of the wind is properly Bhīma. Under prabhākara, the closing syllable □ after "sun" is left untranslated. Many glosses are unidentified Sanskrit words left as written (for example gimāka, utāla, marbā, neshawa, kokaṇa, raṇḍa, karakā, pīkara, śīra, dhrurbaha, hera, ruli, jahu, kaṃkarṇa, guṇṭa, jarāṭaka, gaṇipatrika, daśāṃśeṣa, luṇṭī, kaṭṭali), and some phrases are rendered literally where the sense is obscure.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; the Sanskrit headwords are romanized letter for letter as the Tibetan spells them, so many depart from standard Sanskrit (for example śilumāra for śiśumāra, pipratīsāra for vipratīsāra, kilā for kalā). Several glosses are themselves Indian plant or object names transliterated in Tibetan (jhiṇṭā, tāpañci, karakara, kakaṃṅa, prinda, poṭagala, pidūdipata, kamabī, mīpa, babala, chudzi, lumo, britimiṃgi); these are kept as written because they cannot be identified with confidence. In the rasakepara entry, the written □□ between bakula and vedhaka is read as a slip for □□ "and". The section colophon names the source lexicon as the Viśvaprakāśa, also called the Garland of Pearls; "repha" is the grammarians' name for the letter r. In the calā entry, "the lotus goddess" renders □□□, taken here as Padmā, that is, Lakṣmī. Other uncertain glosses: in the śatapatra entry, "the split one's swoon" and "the one possessed of wood" are literal; the latter may mean the woodpecker. "Water-blaze" is a literal rendering of □□□□□□. "Madder" for □□□□□□□ is tentative. In the dalaṃ entry the final □□□ is translated literally as "what is not a fragment", but the sense is unclear.

• This is a lexicon of Sanskrit homonyms; headwords and the Indian words used as glosses are romanized letter for letter as the Tibetan spells them, many being irregular (for example pailā for velā, itvala for ilvala, katalī for kadalī). Several glosses are transliterated plant or object names, or short Tibetan words, that cannot be identified with confidence. These are kept as written or translated literally: baṭyala, jomo, chul, kyanar, gregs, bhi, nā, akaka, skraṃ, gu, ḍūcī, kema, and "stiff fan" for □□□□□. Where a headword's division is unclear, the most natural reading has been chosen: palā ... baṭyala; mālu and laṭi as two entries; kepila ... korarika, kema. In the maulī entry, the lines from "play, sport, and grace" onward lack a new headword and are taken as continuing it. "The lords" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□, a plural of the epithet elsewhere rendered "the Lord". In the acala, śūlā and kudhūlaṃ entries, □□□□□□ is taken as "peg" or "stake" (Skt. kīla, śūla), not the planet Jupiter.

• This lexicon lists Sanskrit homonyms. Headwords, and the Indian words used as glosses, are romanized letter for letter as the Tibetan spells them; many are irregular (for example bigala for piṅgala, megala for maṅgala, meṣala for mekhala). Several glosses are transliterated Indian words or terse Tibetan words that cannot be identified with confidence, and are kept as written or translated literally: dayoṣā, tamata, dadaka, chubla, sowa grain, rasvalo, cakṣina, camaṃ, garam, rik, kyanar, yani bahuma, prāhya, jalaradku, nikurusba, dabyi, isbalī, dariks.

Where headwords and glosses run together, the most natural division has been chosen. In particular, "camaṃ" is read as ending the nābhīlaṃ entry and "nicula" as a new headword; "pātalaṃ" is taken as its own entry; and the lines before "bahula" are taken as its glosses, since bahula means the dark fortnight and fire.

In the bigala entry, the stray syllable □□ before the next headword siṅgala has been left untranslated. In the picula entry, □□□□□□□□□□ makes no sense as written and is read as □□□□□□□□□, "water crow". In the paṭilaṃ entry, "not-certain disease" is a literal rendering of □□□□□□□□□□.

• This lexicon lists Sanskrit homonyms. Headwords, and Indian words used as glosses, are romanized letter for letter as the Tibetan spells them; many are irregular (for example vebula for vipula, bṛṣala for vṛṣala, hakhāhala for halāhala, maktāphalaṃ for muktāphala). Several terse glosses cannot be identified with confidence and are kept as written or translated literally, among them darundha, balangji, kalālāsa, kiniyaka and nakha.

In the śālmalī entry, "a particular twice-drinker" renders □□□□□□□□□. This is normally a word for the elephant, but here it probably reflects Sanskrit dvīpa, a continent, since Śālmalī is one of the continents. In the bṛṣala entry, □□□□□□□□□□ may be a slip for □□□□□□□□□□, Candragupta, who is called Vṛṣala in Sanskrit drama; it is translated as written. In the śayalu entry, □□□□□□□□□ is taken in its lexical sense of "disposition", not moral discipline.

Stray syllables have been left untranslated: the "ng" after □□□ in the durdaṇḍapāla entry, and the "mi" in the maktāphalaṃ entry, which is rendered "a man" but is doubtful. The headword kluṭāpakala begins with □□□, which may be a Tibetan translation of nāga, not a transliteration. "The Great God (Śiva)" renders □□□□□□□□□ in the mahākāla entry, and "the Great Time" renders □□□□□□□□□□, a literal translation of mahākāla.

• This lexicon lists Sanskrit homonyms. Headwords, and Indian words used as glosses, are romanized letter for letter as the Tibetan spells them; many are irregular (for example bhūpa and bhupaṃ for dhruva, marśva for pārśva, pīrthava for pārthiva, kitapa for kitava). Several terse glosses cannot be identified with confidence and are kept as written or translated literally: raṃs, san mo, gye, kakeru, kaḍampaṅgara.

In the devaṃ entry, □□□□□□ is taken as "a sense faculty" (indriya), the usual sense of the neuter deva, not the god Indra. Two runs of lines have no headword written: the lines after revā (from "raṃs" onward), and the line beginning "Heaven, the intermediate space". These are translated where they stand. "Smara (Kāma)" renders □□□□□ in the revā entry, following its earlier use in this text. In the śiva entry, □□□□□□ is taken as "a peg", not the planet Jupiter. In the sava entry, □□□□ is taken as "peace".

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; the headwords are Sanskrit written in Tibetan letters and are given as spelled, often in garbled forms. Several glosses are themselves obscure or corrupt in the Tibetan and are translated literally (for example under puṭagrība, where a stray syllable laṃ after "weapon" is taken as an ornamental case mark and not translated, and under bandūśa, rendered "fine wool" from an unclear gloss). "The Delighter" is kept as an epithet (likely Rāma, whose son is Kuśa).

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are Sanskrit in Tibetan letters, given as spelled. Some glosses are obscure in the Tibetan and are rendered literally: "the axe-bearer" under paṇḍaparśu reads sgra sta can, taken as dgra sta can; the mahāghoṣā gloss (tshong dus kyis glag gcor) is uncertain; "Śakra's bow" is the rainbow.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are Sanskrit in Tibetan letters, given as spelled. A stray syllable nyi after the āśbāsa entry is left untranslated as a scribal fragment. "Bulk" under uras renders bong, and "a she-elephant" under śreyasbi reads blang mo as glang mo.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are Sanskrit in Tibetan letters, given as spelled. Under ahi, sprul is read as sbrul, "snake"; "the scent-bearer" under yahā is the wind; "a yellowish eye" under sasttārcis renders the obscure sar mig; a stray laṃ after "day" under napāha is not translated. "The seizer of darkness" under graha is Rāhu.

• This is a Sanskrit homonym lexicon; headwords are Sanskrit in Tibetan letters, given as spelled. Here the consonant sections end with ha and kṣa, followed by a colophon to that part of the Viśvaprakāśa and the opening of the section on indeclinables (Tib. mi zad, Skt. avyaya). "The fifth case" is the ablative. "Lus ngan" under yakṣa is Kubera. Some glosses are obscure: "āmsaṃpo" under a is left as spelled; a stray laṃ after "the earth" under parigraha is not translated; the bracketed headword puṣbū appears in brackets in the source.

• This piece is a list of Sanskrit indeclinables and prefixes with their senses; the headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them, and several are uncertain identifications (tāvat for □□□□□□□, and the forms yadvā tatri, yata, sīman ... kata, śiti, byuru, nina, apavye, kathi, paṃ, mami, prana, praguṅa, ayikā, niṣaṣā, agrahas, which are left close to the Tibetan spelling). Evident copyists' slips read here: □□□□□ as □□□□□ "unbroken"; □□□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□□□□ "emphasis"; □□□□□□ "magnet" as □□□□□□ "assent" under um; □□□ as □□□□ "weariness"; □□□□□□ as □□□□□□ "silence" under joṣam; □□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□□ under tūṣṇīkā; □□□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□□ "excellent" under dur. Under hanta and āya, "poison" (□□□) likely renders a confusion of Sanskrit viṣāda "dejection" with viṣa "poison"; it is translated as written. □□□□□ here means continuity or sequence, not tantra as a class of scripture. The line under um is repeated in the Tibetan and is translated as it stands.

• Lexical headwords are given as the Tibetan spells them; gurańsana, hītī and mikṣa are uncertain identifications. □□□□□□□□□ under tiras is read as □□□□□□□□ "animal" (tiryak), an evident copyist's slip. In the colophon, □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is taken as Śrī Lalitapura (Patan in the Kathmandu Valley); the paṇḍita's name is translated literally ("Glorious Supreme Lineage") because its Sanskrit form cannot be fixed with confidence, followed by Śrījñāna. □□□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□□□ "had written down." The Tibetan can be read either as naming one patron (the Fourth Shamarpa, described as the Chennga of Thel) or two (the Shamarpa and the Chennga of Thel); the translation keeps the apposition of the Tibetan.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.