The Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas, known in Sanskrit as the Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha and in Tibetan as De bzhin gshegs pa thams cad kyi de kho na nyid bsdus pa, is a foundational scripture of Buddhist yoga tantra that presents itself as a Great Vehicle sūtra. Set in the Akaniṣṭha heaven, it describes how the Blessed One Vairocana, endowed with the blessing of all the tathāgatas, reveals the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala and its families of buddhas and bodhisattvas, together with their mantras, mudrās and rites of consecration, and it recounts the awakening of the Buddha through the meditative process of realizing oneself as a buddha. The work also tells of the subjugation of Maheśvara and the worldly gods by Vajrapāṇi in his wrathful form as Trailokyavijaya, and it closes with a hymn of one hundred and eight names in praise of Vajrapāṇi as Vajrasattva. It is Toh 479 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the Tantra section among the yoga tantras, and it is traditionally said to have been translated into Tibetan by the Indian scholar Śraddhākaravarman and the Tibetan translator Rinchen Zangpo.

In the language of India: sarbbatathāgatatattvasaṃgrahanāmamahāyānasūtra

In the language of Tibet: The Great Vehicle Sūtra Called the Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas.

The first fascicle.

Homage to all the buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One Vairocana, of great compassion, was dwelling in the abode of the king of the gods of Akaniṣṭha. He was endowed with the vajra blessing of all the tathāgatas and with the distinctions of the manifold kinds of samaya wisdom. He had attained the empowerment of Dharma king of the three realms through the jeweled crown of all the tathāgatas. He was the lord of the great yoga of the omniscient wisdom of all the tathāgatas. He had realized all the mudrās of all the tathāgatas as sameness, and, by accomplishing the purposes of all, he performed the activity of fulfilling the hopes of all the realms of sentient beings, without remainder and without exception. Vairocana of great compassion, abiding forever in the three times, was the Tathāgata whose body, speech and mind had all become like vajra. That abode, where all the tathāgatas dwell and which they praise, was adorned with gems and great jewels, many colored and hung with bells, and made beautiful with silks, banners, garlands of flowers, yak-tail whisks, nets and half-nets, and moon ornaments stirred by the wind.

He was there together with ninety-nine koṭis of bodhisattvas, namely the bodhisattva great beings Vajrapāṇi, Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord, Ākāśagarbha, Vajramuṣṭi, Mañjuśrī, Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin, Gaganagañja, Sarvamārabalapramardin and others, ninety-nine koṭis of bodhisattva great beings, and with tathāgatas as numerous as the sands of the river Ganges. Moreover, Jambudvīpa appeared to be filled with the bodies of those immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, like a pod filled with sesame seeds. From the body of each of the tathāgatas, too, countless, immeasurable buddha fields appeared. And in those buddha fields, these modes of the Dharma were being taught.

Then the great Blessed One Vairocana abided forever like the entire sphere of space, his body, speech and mind having become like vajra. By entering into sameness with all the tathāgatas, he was the wisdom being who realizes the entire vajra sphere; the essence of wisdom arisen from the vajra blessing of the most subtle atoms of the entire sphere of space; the great jewel of the empowerment with the jewel of the great vajra wisdom of the infinity of the tathāgatas. He became awakened through manifest and perfect awakening to the wisdom of suchness that extends through the entire sphere of space. Because the essential nature of all the tathāgatas is pure, he realized that all phenomena are pure by nature. He truly displayed all forms pervading the entire element of space. Through his knowledge he became supreme in the conduct of taming the realms of sentient beings, without remainder and without exception. By receiving the command of all the tathāgatas and making it bear fruit, he performed all activities, unequaled and unsurpassed. He was all of these: the mind steadfast in the great awakening of all the tathāgatas; the samaya of summoning all the tathāgatas; the lord of wisdom who delights all the tathāgatas; the one to whom all the tathāgatas say, "Excellent!"; the conferring of the great jewel empowerment of all the tathāgatas; the maṇḍala of the sunlight of all the tathāgatas; the jewel splendor of the king of wish-fulfilling gems, king of the aspirations of all the tathāgatas; the great laughter of all the tathāgatas; the great pure Dharma of all the tathāgatas; the wisdom of the great discernment of all the tathāgatas; the wheel of all the tathāgatas; the explaining of the intention of all the tathāgatas; the unfailing fulfilling of the intentions of all, of all the tathāgatas; the utterly firm armor of the great diligence of all the tathāgatas; the yakṣa who guards and protects for all the tathāgatas; and the wisdoms that bind the vajra mudrā of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas.

The bodhisattva great being Samantabhadra dwells in the heart of all the tathāgatas.

Then all the tathāgatas filled this buddha field completely, like a pod full of sesame seeds. Then all the tathāgatas gathered and went to where the great bodhisattva called Sarvārthasiddhi was seated at the seat of awakening. Displaying their bodies of perfect enjoyment especially for that bodhisattva, they spoke as follows: "Son of good family, why is it that, without having realized the reality of all the tathāgatas, you apply yourself with zeal to all these austerities, thinking, 'How shall I manifestly and perfectly awaken to unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening?'"

Then the bodhisattva great being Sarvārthasiddhi, roused by all the tathāgatas, arose from that unmoving samādhi, bowed to all the tathāgatas, and said: "Blessed Ones, Tathāgatas, what is the reality of the tathāgatas like? Please tell me how I should practice."

When he had made this request, all those tathāgatas spoke with a single voice: "Son of good family, examine your own mind and settle in equipoise, and practice by reciting as much as you wish this naturally accomplished mantra: oṃ cittaprativedhaṃ karomi."

Then the bodhisattva Sarvārthasiddhi said to all the tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, Tathāgatas, I perceive it to be like a moon disk in my heart."

All the tathāgatas declared: "Son of good family, that mind is luminous by nature, and so it becomes just as it is cultivated, like a white cloth that is dyed with color."

Then, in order to increase his knowledge of the naturally luminous mind, all the tathāgatas, through this naturally accomplished mantra, oṃ bodhicitta utpādayāmi, caused that great bodhisattva's mind to be generated once more.

Then that bodhisattva, having generated the awakening mind at the command of all the tathāgatas, said: "What I saw as like a moon disk, I now see as the very moon disk itself."

All the tathāgatas declared: "You have made manifest the generation of the mind that is the essence of all the tathāgatas, Samantabhadra. Accomplish it well. In order to make firm that generation of the mind of all the tathāgatas, Samantabhadra, imagine with this mantra the form of a vajra on the moon disk in your own heart: oṃ tiṣṭha vajra."

The bodhisattva said: "Blessed Ones, Tathāgatas, I see a vajra resting upon the moon disk."

All the tathāgatas declared: "Make firm, with this mantra, that vajra, the Samantabhadra mind of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra atmako'haṃ."

Then, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, all the vajra spheres of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, as many as there are, entering into sameness throughout the entire sphere of space, entered into that sattva vajra. Then all the tathāgatas empowered the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Sarvārthasiddhi, with the name "Vajradhātu, Vajradhātu."

Then the bodhisattva Vajradhātu said to all those tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, Tathāgatas, I clearly see the body of all the tathāgatas."

All the tathāgatas declared: "Therefore, great being, meditate on yourself, that sattva vajra, as the body of a buddha endowed with all the supreme aspects, reciting as much as you wish the naturally accomplished mantra: oṃ yathā sarbbatathāgatastathā ahaṃ."

When this had been declared, the great bodhisattva Vajradhātu, having manifestly and perfectly awakened as a tathāgata himself, bowed to all the tathāgatas and said: "Blessed Ones, all you tathāgatas, bless me and make this manifest and perfect awakening firm."

When he had made this request, all the tathāgatas entered into that sattva vajra of the Tathāgata Vajradhātu. Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vajradhātu, at that very instant, manifestly and perfectly awakened to the wisdom of the sameness of all the tathāgatas. He entered the secret samaya of the mudrā of the wisdom of the vajra sameness of all the tathāgatas. He entered the secret samaya of the mudrā of the wisdom of the sameness of the vajra jewel empowerment of all the tathāgatas. Realizing the wisdom of the sameness of the Dharma of all the tathāgatas, he was pure by nature. He became a tathāgata, an arhat, a perfect and complete buddha, the source of wisdom, naturally luminous in the sameness of all of all the tathāgatas.

Then again all the tathāgatas came forth from that sattva vajra of all the tathāgatas. They generated in him the wisdom of the sameness of all the tathāgatas, and empowered him with the empowerment of the great precious gem that arises from space. They generated in him the Dharma wisdom of Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord, and set him over all the activities of all the tathāgatas. Then they went to the summit of Mount Meru, to the peaked pavilion whose pinnacle is made of vajra gems and jewels. There the Tathāgata Vajradhātu, blessed as all the tathāgatas, became inseparable from them, and sat upon the lion throne of all the tathāgatas, his faces turned in every direction.

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, the Tathāgata Ratnasambhava, the Tathāgata Avalokiteśvararāja and the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi, each of them blessing himself as all the tathāgatas, sat in the four directions, regarding all directions as the same, because the Blessed One Śākyamuni had fully realized the sameness of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One Vairocana, not long after the Tathāgata had manifestly and perfectly awakened, was the mind of all the tathāgatas called Samantabhadra; he had been empowered with the empowerment of the great precious gem that arises from space of all the tathāgatas; he had attained the perfection of the sublime Dharma wisdom of Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord of all the tathāgatas; he unfailingly displayed all the activities of all the tathāgatas, unobstructed, his intentions accomplished, and every aspiration of his mind entirely fulfilled. Blessing himself as all the tathāgatas, he entered into equipoise in the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the sattva, arisen from the samaya of the great bodhisattva of all the tathāgatas called Samantabhadra. And from his own heart he drew forth this essence of all the tathāgatas called the realization of the Great Vehicle of all the tathāgatas: vajrasatva.

Then, as soon as this had come forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Samantabhadra came forth, having become moon disks. Thoroughly purifying the great awakening mind of all sentient beings, they settled in the various directions of all the tathāgatas. Then from those moon disks, in turn, came forth wisdom vajras of all the tathāgatas, which entered into the heart of the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana. Because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is utterly firm, and through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, they blended into one. Pervading the entire element of space with garlands of five-pointed rays of light, they became the vajra-like sphere of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas; they came forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas and rested in his two hands.

Then from that vajra came forth vajra-like rays of light of various forms and colors, filling all the world systems with radiance. From the tips of those vajra-like rays came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. Throughout the whole all-pervading dharmadhātu, throughout all that reaches to the limits of the element of space, and in all the clouds of the vast oceans of world systems, they displayed, through manifest awakening to the wisdom of the sameness of all the tathāgatas, the generation of the great awakening mind of all the tathāgatas, the accomplishment of the manifold conduct of Samantabhadra, the pleasing of the families of all the tathāgatas, the going to the great seat of awakening, the taming of all the māras, the manifest awakening to the great awakening of the sameness of all the tathāgatas, and the turning of the wheel of the holy Dharma, up to the protecting of all the realms of sentient beings, without remainder and without exception, as long as they last, the bringing of benefit and happiness to all, and the accomplishment of the supreme siddhi of the wisdom and superknowledges of all the tathāgatas, and so on, all the miraculous powers and magical displays of all the tathāgatas. Then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is Samantabhadra and because it is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the great bodhisattva Samantabhadra. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the self-arisen
Samantabhadra, the steadfast being.
Because of that steadfastness, though bodiless,
I have taken on the body of a being.

Then the body of the great bodhisattva Samantabhadra came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk before all the tathāgatas, remained there awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the commitment (samaya) of the samādhi and wisdom of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the moral discipline, samādhi, wisdom, liberation, and vision of the wisdom of liberation of all the tathāgatas; the turning of the wheel of Dharma; the accomplishment of the aims of sentient beings; great skillful means; power; diligence; the commitment of great wisdom; the complete protection of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder; the bringing of all to sovereignty; and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the attainment of the supreme accomplishment of the equality wisdom of all the tathāgatas, the unsurpassed higher knowledges, and full realization of the Great Vehicle, he empowered that bodhisattva, the great being Samantabhadra, as the universal monarch of all the tathāgatas, with the empowerment of the jeweled crown ornament and diadem of the body of all the buddhas, and placed in his hand that vajra of the accomplishment of all the tathāgatas.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajrapāṇi, Vajrapāṇi."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, rested his left hand proudly with the vajra, and with his right hand held the vajra at his heart as though brandishing and about to hurl it, and he uttered this inspired utterance:

This unsurpassed vajra
Of the accomplishment of all the buddhas
Has been given to me, into my own hand:
Vajra is established upon vajra.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the being arisen from the commitment of the great bodhisattva Amogharāja, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of inviting all the tathāgatas:

vajrarāj

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajrapāṇi. Becoming the great hook of all the tathāgatas, it came forth and entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a great vajra hook, resting in the two hands of the Blessed One. Then from that great form of the vajra hook there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the inviting of all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the supremely unfailing king and because it is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the great bodhisattva Amogha. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the hook arisen from vajra,
The king who never fails.
Since the buddhas pervade everywhere,
To accomplish their aims I invite them from everywhere.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Amogharāja, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk to the right of all the tathāgatas, remained there awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the commitment of inviting all the tathāgatas. In order to accomplish the commitment of inviting all the tathāgatas, the summoning of all the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the sublime blessing of the gathering of all the tathāgatas, he likewise placed that vajra hook in the hand of the bodhisattva Amogharāja.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajrākarṣa, Vajrākarṣa."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrākarṣa, invited all the tathāgatas with that vajra hook and uttered this inspired utterance:

This unsurpassed wisdom
Of the vajra of all the buddhas
Is the sublime invitation from everywhere,
To accomplish the aims of all the buddhas.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra blessed by the being arisen from the commitment of the great bodhisattva called Māra, and from his own heart came forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of delighting all the tathāgatas:

vajrarāga

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. Becoming the flower arrows of all the tathāgatas, it came forth and entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a great vajra arrow, resting in his two hands. Then from that form of the vajra arrow there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the delighting of all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is supremely the work of Māra and because it is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the great bodhisattva Māra. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am pure by intrinsic nature,
The one who delights the self-arisen ones.
In order to purify those free of attachment,
I tame them by means of attachment.

Then the body of that great bodhisattva Māra came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk to the left of all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra blessed with the delighting of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the vajra commitment of Māra of all the tathāgatas, the gratifying of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the attainment of the supreme accomplishment of Māra of all the tathāgatas, he likewise placed that vajra arrow in the hand of the bodhisattva, the great being called Māra.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajradhanu, Vajradhanu."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being called Vajradhanu, with that vajra arrow performed the work of Māra upon all the tathāgatas, and uttered this inspired utterance:

This stainless wisdom
Of the attachment of all the buddhas
Slays non-attachment by means of attachment
And bestows every bliss.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the being arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Prāmodyarāja, and from his own heart came forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the utter joy of all the tathāgatas:

vajrasādhu

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. Becoming the cry "Excellent!", it entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of vajra delight, resting in his two hands. Then from that form of vajra delight there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the crying of "Excellent!" by all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is that which brings supreme joy and because it is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Prāmodyarāja. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! Since I am supreme
Among all the omniscient ones' gifts of "Excellent!",
I am the one who surely brings forth delight
In those who are free of conceptual thought.

Then the body of the great bodhisattva Prāmodyarāja came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk behind all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraharṣa, with that form of vajra delight, brought utter delight to all the tathāgatas with the cry "Excellent!", and uttered this inspired utterance:

This giving of "Excellent!" by all the buddhas,
Because it sets all things in motion,
Delights all the vajra ones
And increases divine delight.

The great awakening mind, the commitment of inviting all the tathāgatas, the wisdom of delighting all the tathāgatas, and great delight: these four are the beings of the great commitment of all the tathāgatas.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the jewel, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Ākāśagarbha, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of empowerment by all the tathāgatas:

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the thorough realization of the wisdom of the equality of all things with space, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara, and it came forth as light rays filling all of space. Those light rays of all of space illuminated all the world systems, so that all became like the expanse of space. Then, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, all those expanses of space entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, and because the samādhi of Vajrasattva had been thoroughly cultivated, they took the form of a great vajra jewel, its size equal to all the world systems arisen from the whole element of space, and it rested in the two hands of the Tathāgata. Then from that form of the vajra jewel there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the fine atoms of all the world systems. They performed the empowerment of all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the tathāgatas throughout all the world systems, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva has arisen fully from the essence of the whole element of space and because it is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Ākāśagarbha. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! Since even the Victors, free of attachment,
Regard me as lord of the three realms,
I am the supreme empowerment
Of the sublime vajra jewel.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Ākāśagarbha, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk before all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the precious jewel of all the tathāgatas. Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajragarbha, Vajragarbha."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, set that vajra gem in the place of his own empowerment, and uttered this inspired utterance:

I am that empowerment,
The form of the being of all the buddhas;
Since it has been given into my hand,
Jewel is placed upon jewel.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the jewel, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being called Mahātejas, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the light rays of all the tathāgatas:

vajrateja

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajrapāṇi. Becoming a great sun disk, it entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a vajra sun, resting in the two hands of the Blessed One. Then from that vajra sun disk there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the radiating of light rays by all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the tathāgatas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is supremely brilliant and utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Mahātejas. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the incomparable brilliance
That illumines all the realms of beings,
For I bring together
Even the guides, the pure buddhas.

Then the body of that bodhisattva, the great being of stainless brilliance, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk to the right of all the tathāgatas, remained there awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the disk of light of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the commitment of the light rays of all the tathāgatas, the unequaled brilliance of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the attainment of the light of all the tathāgatas and the sublime accomplishment, he likewise placed that vajra sun in the hand of the bodhisattva Mahātejas.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajratejas, Vajratejas."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being, with that vajra sun illumined all the tathāgatas, and uttered this inspired utterance:

This illumination of all the buddhas,
Which destroys the black darkness of ignorance,
Far surpasses the light of suns
As numerous as the finest atoms.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the jewel, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Ratnaśrī, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of fulfilling the intentions of all the tathāgatas:

vajraketu

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. Becoming victory banners of various colors, forms, ornaments and shapes, it came forth and entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a vajra banner, resting in his two hands. Then from that form of the vajra banner there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the raising of the jewel banners of all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the glory of the jewel and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva Ratnaśrī. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the incomparable glory
That accomplishes every aim,
Fulfills every intention,
And brings all purposes to completion.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Ratnaśrī, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk to the left of all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra blessed by the banner of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the commitment of raising the banner of the wish-fulfilling king of gems of all the tathāgatas, the complete fulfillment of all the hopes of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the attainment of the sublime accomplishment of the great aim of all the tathāgatas, he likewise placed that vajra banner in the hand of the great bodhisattva Ratnaśrī.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajraketu, Vajraketu."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraketu, with that vajra banner set all the tathāgatas to the practice of the perfection of generosity, and uttered this inspired utterance:

The banner of the wish-fulfilling gem,
Which brings to complete fulfillment
All the intentions of all the buddhas,
Is the way of the perfection of generosity.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of the jewel, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Nityaprītipramuditendriya, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the delight of all the tathāgatas:

vajrahās

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. Becoming the smiles of all the tathāgatas, it came forth and entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a vajra smile, resting in his two hands. Then from that form of the vajra smile there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the marvels of all the tathāgatas and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is ever joyful, with faculties utterly delighted, and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Nityaprītipramuditendriya. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

Because those who are always in meditative equipoise
Devote themselves fully to the aims of the buddhas,
How wonderful! I am the great and marvelous laughter
Of those who are supreme among all.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Nityaprītipramuditendriya, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk behind all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra blessed by the marvels of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the commitment of producing the marvels of all the tathāgatas, the making unsurpassed of the faculties of all the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the full attainment of the wisdom that purifies the faculties of all the tathāgatas, he likewise placed that vajra smile in the hand of the great bodhisattva Nityaprītipramuditendriya.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajrahāsa, Vajrahāsa."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrahāsa, with that vajra smile brought delight to all the tathāgatas, and uttered this inspired utterance:

This, which reveals and brings forth
The marvels of all the buddhas,
Is the wisdom that brings great delight,
Which other systems of teaching cannot know.

Great empowerment, the disk of light a fathom wide, the aim of the great being, and great delight: these four are the beings of the great empowerment of all the tathāgatas.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of Dharma, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the Dharma of all the tathāgatas:

vajradharmma

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. Because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the full realization of the wisdom of the equality of phenomena, pure by their intrinsic nature, it came forth as light rays of the sublime Dharma. Those light rays of the sublime Dharma illumined all the world systems everywhere, so that they became like the expanse of phenomena. And all those expanses of phenomena entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where they blended into one and took the form of a great vajra lotus, its size equal to the whole of space, resting in his two hands. Then from that form of the vajra lotus there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They filled all the world systems with the samādhi, wisdom, higher knowledges and so on of all the tathāgatas, and with the magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the great bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the ultimate truth,
Self-arisen and pure from the very beginning,
For through phenomena that are like a raft
Complete purity comes to be perceived.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana and, resting on a moon disk before all the tathāgatas, remained there awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra arisen from the commitment of the wisdom of the equality of the samādhi of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the commitment of the complete purification of all the tathāgatas, the complete purification of self and others among the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to bringing about the attainment of the Dharma wisdom and the six higher knowledges of all the tathāgatas, he empowered the great bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord to turn the wheel of the sublime Dharma, with the empowerment of the Dharma body of all the tathāgatas, and placed that vajra lotus in his hand.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajranetra, Vajranetra."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajranetra, opened the petals of that vajra lotus and gazed with a gaze that sees attachment as completely pure, as having the essential nature of non-attachment, and he uttered this inspired utterance:

This realization of the very reality
Of the attachment of all the buddhas
Has been given to me, into my own hand:
Dharma will abide in Dharma.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of Dharma, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Mañjuśrī, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the discernment and great wisdom of all the tathāgatas:

vajratīkṣṇa

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. It became swords of discernment and wisdom and, coming forth, entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a vajra sword, resting in the two hands of the Blessed One. Then from that form of the vajra sword there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed the discernment and wisdom of all the tathāgatas and so on, and the magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is supremely gentle glory and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being, the youthful Mañjuśrī. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am held to be
The Gentle Voice of all the buddhas,
For although discernment has no form,
It is perceived as voice itself.

Then the body of the bodhisattva, the great being Mañjuśrī, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One and, resting on a moon disk to the right of all the tathāgatas, remained there, again awaiting their command.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra arisen from the commitment of the discernment and wisdom of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely, the commitment of cutting off all the afflictions of all the tathāgatas, the cutting off of all the suffering of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and the causing of all to experience bliss and happiness of mind, up to the complete perfection of the sublime discernment that follows the speech of all the tathāgatas, he likewise placed that vajra sword in the hand of the bodhisattva, the great being Mañjuśrī.

Then all the tathāgatas empowered him with the empowerment of a vajra name, calling him "Vajrabuddhi, Vajrabuddhi."

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrabuddhi, wielded that vajra sword toward all the tathāgatas, and uttered this inspired utterance:

This is the way of the perfection of discernment
Of all the buddhas,
Supreme in cutting down all enemies
And in vanquishing all evil.

Then once again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the vajra of the blessing of Dharma, arisen from the commitment of the bodhisattva, the great being Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin, and from his own heart he drew forth this heart essence of all the tathāgatas, called the commitment of the wheel of all the tathāgatas:

vajrahetu

Then, the very moment it came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that same Blessed One Vajradhara. It became the maṇḍalas of all the tathāgatas, beginning with the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, and, coming forth, entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, where it blended into one and took the form of a vajra wheel, resting in the two hands of the Blessed One. Then from that form of the vajra wheel there came forth bodies of all the tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed throughout all the world systems the turning of the wheel of Dharma as soon as the mind is raised, and the other magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the turning of the wheel of Dharma as soon as the mind is raised and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the bodhisattva, the great being called Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

"Of those who possess the supreme vajra Dharma,
How wonderful, I am the vajra wheel!
For by merely raising the mind
The wheel of Dharma comes to be turned."

Then that body of the bodhisattva, the great being Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin, came forth from the heart of the Blessed One, took its place on a moon maṇḍala to the left of all the tathāgatas, and again sat awaiting his command.

Then the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Wheel Vajra of All Tathāgatas. For the sake of these results, namely the pledge of the great maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas, the irreversible wheel by which the realm of sentient beings enters, entirely and without remainder, the experience of every happiness and mental joy, and so on up to the supreme accomplishment of the turning of the wheel of the holy Dharma by all the tathāgatas, he placed that vajra wheel in the same way into the hands of that great bodhisattva Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin. Then all the tathāgatas consecrated him with the vajra-name consecration, "Vajragarbha, Vajragarbha." Then the bodhisattva, the great being, establishing the tathāgatas in irreversibility with that vajra wheel, uttered this inspired utterance:

"This is, for all the buddhas,
What purifies all dharmas entirely;
And the irreversible wheel
Is held to be the seat of awakening."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Blessed by the Dharma Arisen from the Pledge of the Great Bodhisattva the Speechless One, and drew forth from his own heart this essence of all the tathāgatas, called the Pledge of the Speech of All Tathāgatas:

vajrabhāṣ

Then, as soon as it had come forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that very Blessed One Vajrapāṇi. Becoming the syllables of the nature of reality of all the tathāgatas, it came forth, entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, and blended into one. Then it became the form of vajra speech and rested in his two hands. Then from that form of vajra speech there came forth bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the fine atoms of all the world systems. They performed the nature of reality of all the tathāgatas and so on, and the magical feats and miraculous displays of all the buddhas and so on, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is utterly beyond words and utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the great bodhisattva the Speechless One. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the secret of the self-born ones,
Held to be intentional speech,
For the teaching of the holy Dharma
Is utterly free from verbal proliferation."

Then that body of the great bodhisattva the Speechless One came forth from the heart of the Blessed One, took its place on a moon maṇḍala behind all the tathāgatas, and sat awaiting his command.

Then the Blessed One entered into the samādhi arisen from the vajra pledge of the speech of the Speechless One of all the tathāgatas. For the sake of the pledge of the wisdom of the speech of all the tathāgatas, the accomplishment of the speech of the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, the experience of every happiness and mental joy, and so on up to the supreme accomplishment of attaining the secret of the speech of all the tathāgatas, he placed that vajra speech in the same way into the hands of that bodhisattva, the great being the Speechless One. Then all the tathāgatas consecrated him with the vajra-name consecration, "Vajrabhāṣa, Vajrabhāṣa." Then the great bodhisattva Vajrabhāṣa, speaking rightly to all the tathāgatas with vajra speech, uttered this inspired utterance:

"This, for all the buddhas,
Is declared to be vajra recitation;
The mantras of all the tathāgatas
Will swiftly be accomplished."

The wisdom of the vajra nature of reality, the wisdom of the discernment of all the tathāgatas, the wisdom of turning the great wheel of Dharma, and the wisdom that turns back the verbal proliferation of all the tathāgatas: these four are the wisdom beings of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Blessed by Action, arisen from the pledge called All the Activities of the Great Bodhisattvas of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this essence of all the tathāgatas, called the Pledge of the Activity of All Tathāgatas:

vajra karma

Then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva thoroughly realizes the wisdom of the sameness of all actions, as soon as it had come forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, this was that very Blessed One Vajradhara. Becoming rays of light of the activity of all the tathāgatas, it came forth, and with those rays of light of the activity of all the tathāgatas it illuminated all the world systems and became like the form of the activity of all the tathāgatas. Then that form of the activity of all the tathāgatas also entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana and became of a size that pervades evenly the whole expanse of space. From that form of the activity of all the tathāgatas, it became the form of the vajra of all actions and rested in his two hands.

Then again from that vajra form there came forth the bodies of all the tathāgatas, as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems. They performed throughout all the world systems the activities of all the tathāgatas and the rest, and the magical feats and miraculous displays of the buddhas, and then, because the samādhi of Vajrasattva is the boundless activity of all the tathāgatas and is utterly firm, they blended into one and became the body of the great bodhisattva called All the Activities of All the Tathāgatas. Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

The vajra activity comes into play."

Then that body of the great bodhisattva called All the Activities of All the Tathāgatas came forth from the heart of the Blessed One, took its place on a moon maṇḍala in front of all the tathāgatas, and again sat awaiting his command.

For the sake of these results, namely the pledge of all the unfailing, immeasurable and extensive ritual actions, such as making offerings to all the tathāgatas, the accomplishment of all actions by the realms of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, the experience of every happiness and mental joy, and so on up to the accomplishment of the vajra activity, the wisdom and the supreme superknowledges of all the tathāgatas, he consecrated the great bodhisattva, with the vajra consecration of all the tathāgatas, as the universal monarch of all the activities of all the tathāgatas, and placed that action vajra in the same way into his hands. Then all the tathāgatas consecrated him with the name consecration, "Vajraviśva, Vajraviśva." Then the great bodhisattva called Vajraviśva placed that vajra at his own heart and, applying himself to the activity of all the tathāgatas, uttered this inspired utterance:

Dwelling in the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, he uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! The armor of diligence,
Firm by nature, I am supremely firm;
Because it is firm, though it has no body,
It is supreme at making a vajra body."

Without exception it performs good actions."

The pledge of the wisdom of all the tathāgatas, the great consecration, the vajra nature of reality, and all offerings: these are the great vajra perfections of all the tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One Vairocana entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Offering that Delights All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this great goddess of the family of all the tathāgatas:

vajra lāsye

Then, as soon as this had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, it became a vajra mudrā and came forth, and it was that very Blessed One Vajradhara. From the points of that vajra mudrā, moreover, there arose the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. The body of the great goddess, the vajra-holding goddess, was in every way like Vajrasattva, with manifold colors, forms, signs and postures, adorned with every ornament, gathering in all the tathāgata families. Having become the goddess of Vajrasattva, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala on the left side of the maṇḍala of the Blessed One Akṣobhya and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! Among the self-born ones
There is no other offering like me,
For through the offering of delight in desire
Every offering comes to be made."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Consecration with the Jewel Garland of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this great goddess of the family of all the tathāgatas:

vajra māle

Then, as soon as this had come forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, it became the mudrā of a great jewel and came forth, and it was that very Blessed One Vajradhara. From those mudrās of the great jewel, moreover, there arose the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having likewise become the great goddess Vajramālā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala on the left side of the maṇḍala of the Blessed One Ratnasaṃbhava and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! None is renowned like me,
Who am called the jewel offering,
For even to the supreme victors of the three realms
I come to make offering in full."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Supreme Song of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his heart this great goddess of the family of all the tathāgatas:

vajra gīti

Then, as soon as this had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, it became the Dharma mudrā of all the tathāgatas and came forth, and it was that very Blessed One Vajradhara. From those Dharma mudrās of all the tathāgatas, moreover, there arose the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the great goddess Vajragītā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala on the left side of the maṇḍala of the Blessed One Lokeśvararāja and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the offering
To the all-seeing ones in the manner of supreme song;

For, being like an echo,
I delight them with offerings."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Dance Offering of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this great goddess of the family of all the tathāgatas:

vajra nṛti

Then, as soon as it had come forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, it became the extensive rite of the dance offering of all the tathāgatas and came forth, and it was that very Blessed One Vajradhara. From all those extensive rites of the dance offering of all the tathāgatas, moreover, there arose the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the great goddess Vajranṛtyā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala on the left side of the maṇḍala of the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the vast offering
That accomplishes the aim of every offering;
For through the rite of vajra dance
I make offering to the buddhas in full."

The unsurpassed pledge of the happiness and mental joy of all the tathāgatas, the garland of all the tathāgatas, the song of all the tathāgatas, and the unsurpassed offering action of all the tathāgatas: these are the secret offerings of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, in order to make offering in return for the offering made by the Tathāgata Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Utter Satisfaction of All Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this chief of the handmaidens of all the tathāgatas:

vajra dhūpe

As soon as this had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, it was that very Blessed One Vajradhara; it came forth pervading everything in vajra form with many clouds of incense offering of many kinds. From those oceans of clouds of incense offering, moreover, there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the goddess Vajradhūpā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala in the left corner of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the great offering,
The virtuous one, full of utter satisfaction;
For through beings being endowed with the descent,
Awakening is swiftly attained."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Ratnasaṃbhava, in order to make offering in return for the offering made by the Tathāgata Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called the Vajra Arisen from the Pledge of the Offering of Jewel Ornaments, and drew forth from his own heart this attendant of all the tathāgatas:

vajra puṣpe

As soon as this had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as an array of offerings of every kind of flower, pervading all the world systems. From that array of offerings of every flower there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the goddess Vajrapuṣpā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala in the left corner of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I, the offering of flowers,
Am the adornment of all;
For by making offering one swiftly
Attains the jewel-nature of the tathāgatas."

Then the Blessed One, the tathāgata Lokeśvararāja, in order to make offering in return for the offering of the Blessed One Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called the vajra arising from the samaya of the offering of illumination to all the tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this female messenger of all the tathāgatas:

vajra āloke

Then, as soon as she had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as an array of offerings of illumination everywhere, pervading the entire sphere of reality

(dharmadhātu). From that array of offerings of illumination everywhere there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the goddess called Vajrālokā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala on the left side of the Blessed One, in the corner of the multistoried pavilion whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the lamp of offering,
The vast virtue;
For one who possesses its light swiftly
Obtains the eye of all the buddhas."

Then the Blessed One, the tathāgata Amoghasiddhi, in order to make offering in return for the offering made by the Blessed One, the tathāgata Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called the vajra arising from the samaya of the scent offering of all the tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this female servant of all the tathāgatas:

vajra gandhe

Then, as soon as she had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as an array of offerings of every kind of scent, pervading all the world systems. From that array of offerings of every scent there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the goddess called Vajragandhā, she took her place on a moon maṇḍala in the corner on the left side of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the delightful scent
Of the offering of divine substances;
The scent of the tathāgatas
Will be bestowed upon all bodies."

The scents that bring down the wisdom of all the tathāgatas, that gather the limbs of great awakening, that illuminate everywhere the Dharma of all the tathāgatas, and that reveal moral discipline, samādhi, wisdom, liberation, and the wisdom and vision of liberation, carry out the command of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One Vairocana again entered into the samādhi called the sattvavajra arising from the samaya of the hook of the samaya of all the tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this lord of all the many mudrās of all the tathāgatas:

vajra aṃkuśa

Then, as soon as he had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as all the many mudrās of all the tathāgatas. From those many mudrās of all the tathāgatas there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the great bodhisattva called Vajrāṅkuśa, he took his place on a moon maṇḍala within the vajra gatehouse of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and, summoning all the tathāgatas by their samaya, uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the steadfast
True summoner of all the buddhas;
For when I have summoned them,
They will attend every maṇḍala."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the vajra arising from the samaya of the great being, which leads into the samaya of all the tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this attendant who draws in the mudrās of all the tathāgatas:

vajra pāśa

As soon as he had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as many mudrās that draw in the samaya of all the tathāgatas. Then from those many mudrās that draw in the samaya of all the tathāgatas there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the great bodhisattva called Vajrapāśa, he took his place on a moon maṇḍala within the gatehouse of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and, drawing in all the tathāgatas, uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the firm
Vajra noose of all the buddhas;
Even all who dwell in the minute atoms

I shall draw in once again."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the sattvavajra arising from the samaya of the great being, the chain of the samaya of all the tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this messenger of all the tathāgatas, who binds the samaya of all the tathāgatas:

vajra sphoṭa

Then, as soon as he had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as many mudrās that bind the samaya of all the tathāgatas.

From those many mudrās that bind the samaya of all the tathāgatas there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one again. Having become the body of the great bodhisattva called Vajrasphoṭa, he took his place on a moon maṇḍala within the vajra Dharma gatehouse of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and, binding all the tathāgatas, uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the firm
Vajra chain of all the buddhas;
Those who are freed from every bond
I wish to bind for the sake of beings."

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the sattvavajra arising from the samaya of the great being, called causing all the tathāgatas to enter, and drew forth from his own heart this servant of all the mudrās of all the tathāgatas:

vajra āveśa

Then, as soon as he had been drawn forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, that very Blessed One Vajradhara came forth as all the many mudrās of all the tathāgatas. From all those many mudrās of all the tathāgatas there came forth the bodies of tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, and they blended into one. Having become the body of the great bodhisattva Vajrāveśa, he took his place on a moon maṇḍala within the vajra karma gatehouse of the multistoried pavilion of the Blessed One, whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, and, causing all the tathāgatas to enter, uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the steadfast
Vajra entering of all the buddhas;
Though I have become the master of all,
I have also become a servant."

The summoning, the drawing in, the binding and the bringing under control of all the tathāgatas carry out the command of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One, in order to bless the gathering of all the tathāgatas, gave the signal with a vajra snap of the fingers and spoke this blessing that gathers all the tathāgatas:

vajra samājaḥ

Then in an instant, a moment, a second, at that very time, roused by the signal of the finger snap of all the tathāgatas, from all the clouds of the boundless oceans of world systems, tathāgatas as numerous as the finest atoms of all the world systems, together with their many maṇḍalas of bodhisattva retinues, set out and went to where the multistoried pavilion with its pinnacle made of gems and jewels stood, to where the Blessed One, the tathāgata Vairocana, was, and uttered this inspired utterance:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata pāda vandanaṃ karomi

So they said. Reciting as they wished that mantra, accomplished by its own nature, and bowing at the feet of all the tathāgatas, they uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful the bodhisattvas'
Supreme conduct of Samantabhadra!
Beautiful is the circle of the tathāgatas;
Beautiful the tathāgata at its center."

When they had said this, all those tathāgatas who had gathered from all the world systems of the ten directions, together with all their maṇḍalas of bodhisattva retinues, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, entered into the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana. Then they came forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas, each together with his own maṇḍala of bodhisattva retinue, and, having formed maṇḍalas in all directions of the Blessed One's multistoried pavilion whose pinnacle is made of vajra, gems and jewels, they remained there in meditative absorption and uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! The vastness of all the buddhas
Has from the very beginning been unborn;

The buddhas, as many as all the atoms, Become one."

Then all the blessed tathāgatas assembled once more, and, in order to protect fully the realm of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, to bestow benefit and happiness upon all, and so on up to accomplishing the wisdom of equality of all the tathāgatas, the superknowledges, and supreme, perfect and complete awakening, they petitioned the Blessed One, the lord of all the tathāgatas, their own Vajrasattva, without beginning or end, the great Vajradhara, to bless this great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, with these hundred and eight names:

"Vajrasattva, great being,

Whoever holds these names,
These hundred and eight peaceful ones,
Is empowered by all the supreme ones
With the vajra name empowerment and the rest.

Whoever, with these names of qualities,
Constantly sings in praise
Of the great Vajradhara,
Will himself become like Vajradhara.

With these hundred and eight names
We have praised you.
Please expand once more the great way
Of realizing the Great Vehicle.

Protector, we beseech you:
Please explain the supreme rite
Of the great and sacred maṇḍala,
The great circle of all the buddhas."

Then the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, having heard the words of petition of all the tathāgatas, entered into the samādhi called blessed by the vajra blessing arising from the samaya of all the tathāgatas, and explained this great maṇḍala called Vajradhātu:

"Next I shall properly explain
The sacred vajra maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the vajra sphere,
It is known by the name Vajradhātu.

Meditating vastly on the mudrā
Of the great being, and performing the blessing,
Having entered the very center
Of the maṇḍala in the proper way,

Abiding in the mudrā, one rises up just so,
And having looked all around,
Saying 'Vajrasattva,'
One circles it in a stately manner.

Having stretched a new cord,
The wise one, as well as he can,
With a line well proportioned and beautiful,
Should mark out the lines of the maṇḍala.

Make it square, with four gates,
Beautify it with four portals,
Endowed with four lines,
And adorn it with silk and garlands of flowers.

In all the corners
And within the gate recesses,
Adorned with vajras and jewels,
Mark out the outer enclosure of the maṇḍala.

Moving within that enclosure,
Encircle it, like a wheel,
With a line of vajras.
Beautify it with eight pillars.

On the inner side of the vajra pillars
Adorn it with five moon maṇḍalas.
In the center of the central maṇḍala
Set the image of the Buddha.

In the centers of the maṇḍalas
On all sides of the Buddha,
In due order, the four supreme samayas
Should be properly set.

Into those four maṇḍalas,
Going with vajra steps,
Set all four buddhas,
Akṣobhya and the rest.

In the maṇḍala of Akṣobhya
Set Vajradhara and the others with him;
In the maṇḍala of Ratnasaṃbhava

Set Vajragarbha and the others, complete;

In the maṇḍala of Amitāyus
Set Vajranetra and the others, pure;
In the maṇḍala of Amoghasiddhi
Set Viśvavajra and the others.

In the corners of the wheel
Set the vajra goddesses as well;
In the corners of the outer enclosure
Set the offering goddesses of the buddhas as well.

Within the gates
The four gatekeepers too should be set;
On the sides of the outer enclosure
Set the great beings as well.

Then the vajra master,
Having bound and entered, according to the rite,
The mudrā of the supreme samaya,
Should cause the descent with the bell mudrā."

Here the heart mantra that causes everyone to descend is this:

aḥ

With "Bless me" and the rest, one receives the command just as it is given.

"Having done so, one states one's own name.
Then, accomplishing with the vajra,
The vajra master, having bound
The vajra hook of the sattva,

Should strike many snaps of the fingers
And gather all the buddhas.
Then all the buddhas,
Together with Vajrasattva and the rest,

Filling all the maṇḍalas,
Will assemble in the maṇḍalas.
Then, meditating on
The great mudrā of Vajrasattva,

One should recite a little
Of the sacred hundred and eight names.
Then, because the assembly is pleased,
The tathāgatas become steadfast.

Vajrasattva, accomplished of himself,
Abides close by as a friend.
Then, at all the gates,
Having performed the actions of the hook and the rest,

With the mudrā of the supreme great action
One should set the samayas.
With the mudrā of the supreme samaya
And with 'sattvavajra' and the rest,

Accomplish the great beings in this way,
Saying jaḥ hūṃ vaṃ hoḥ.
Then, to gather all the great beings,
The buddhas and the rest,

Invite them and cause them to enter fully;
When they are bound, they come under one's control.
Then, having pleased the great beings
With the secret offering,

For the accomplishment of everything, one should request,
'Please accomplish all the aims of beings.'"

In all the maṇḍalas the vajra master performs the rite in the same way.

Then, in this great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, there is an extensive rite for the vajra disciple's entering the maṇḍala and so on. Here, first, there is the entering. It is for the sake of fully protecting the realm of sentient beings, entirely and without remainder, and of accomplishing the supreme benefit and happiness of all beings. For entering this great maṇḍala one need not examine whether a person is a fit vessel or not. Why is that? Blessed One, there are some beings who commit great evil; if they enter that great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu and see it, they will be freed from all the lower realms.

Blessed One, there are also beings who are attached to wealth and gems, to food and drink, and to all the objects of sensual pleasure, who take no delight in the samaya, and who are incapable of the preliminary practices and the like. They too, entering there and acting as they wish, will have all the aspirations of those who enter completely fulfilled.

Blessed One, there are some beings who delight in dance, song, laughter and play, in food and enjoyments, and who, because they have not understood the nature of reality, the realization of the Great Vehicle of all the tathāgatas, enter the families and maṇḍalas of other gods. And there are also those who, frightened and terrified by the words of the precepts, do not enter that maṇḍala of the family of all the tathāgatas, where, because all hopes are truly and completely fulfilled, unsurpassed joy, satisfaction and delight arise. So that they too, who stand facing toward entering the path of the maṇḍala of the lower realms, may accomplish everything sublime in joy and satisfaction, may experience happiness and mental ease, and may be turned back from the path that faces toward entering all the courses of the lower realms, it is fitting that they enter that great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu.

Blessed One, there are also beings with an affinity for the Dharma who, seeking the awakening of the buddhas through the means of accomplishing the sublime moral discipline, samādhi and wisdom of all the tathāgatas, strive through the dhyānas, the liberations and the grounds, and grow weary. For them too, as soon as they enter that great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, even the accomplishment of becoming all the tathāgatas is not difficult; what need, then, to speak of other accomplishments?

Here, first of all, one should make four prostrations to all the tathāgatas. It is done as follows. Stretching out the vajra joined palms, one prostrates with the whole body and says this mantra:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata pūjopsthānāya ātnānaṃ niryātayāmi sarvva tathāgata vajra satva adhitiṣṭha svamāṃ

Then, remaining in the same way, placing the vajra joined palms at the heart, one prostrates with the forehead and says this mantra:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata būjā abhiṣekāya ātpānaṃ niryātayāmi sarvva tathāgata vajra ratna abhiṣiñca maṃ

Then, remaining in the same way, joining the vajra palms at the crown, one prostrates with the mouth and says this:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata pūjā pravartanāya ātmānaṃ niryātayāmi sarvva tathāgata vajra dharmma pravartaya maṃ

Then, remaining in the same way, lowering the vajra joined palms from the crown and placing them at the heart, one prostrates with the crown of the head and says this:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata pūjā karmmaṇe ātmānaṃ niryātayāmi sarvva tathāgata vajra karmma kuru māṃ

Then the disciple puts on a red upper garment, the face is bound with a red cloth, and, binding the mudrā of the sattvavajra, he recites this heart mantra:

sam yastvaṃ

Then, having him hold a garland of flowers between his two middle fingers, one leads him in, reciting this heart mantra:

samaya hūṃ

Then, as soon as he has entered, instruct him thus: "Today you enter the family of all the tathāgatas. I shall generate in you such wisdom that by it you will attain even the accomplishment of becoming all the tathāgatas; what need, then, to speak of other accomplishments? Do not speak of this to those who have not seen the great maṇḍala, lest your samaya be broken."

Then the vajra master himself should bind the mudrā of the sattvavajra, shown turned inward and turned outward, place it on the crown of the vajra disciple's head, and say this: "This is your vajra samaya. If you speak of it to anyone, your head will split."

Then, having consecrated the water of the oath with that same samaya mudrā and with the heart mantra of the oath, he has the disciple drink it. The heart mantra of the oath is this:

"Today Vajrasattva
Enters truly into your heart.
If you speak of this way,
At once he will burst forth and depart.

oṃ vajrodkatha"

Then instruct the disciple thus: "From this day on I am your Vajrapāṇi. Whatever I command you, saying, 'Do this,' you must do."

"Do not despise me, lest, by not avoiding what is perilous, you die and fall into hell." Having said this, one has him say: "May all the tathāgatas bless me, and may Vajrasattva descend upon me."

Then the vajra master quickly binds the mudrā of the sattvavajra and has him say this:

"This is the vajra samaya,
Renowned as Vajrasattva.
May the unsurpassed vajra wisdom
Descend this very day!

oṃ vajra āveśa aḥ"

Then, in wrathful mode, one binds the mudrā, knots and draws the mudrā of the sattvavajra, and has him utter, as far as he is able, words of the realization of the Great Vehicle. Then one causes the descent, and as soon as it has descended, divine wisdom arises in him. Through that wisdom he comes to know the minds of others. He comes to know all the intentions of the past, the future and the present. Through it his mind becomes firm in all the teachings of the tathāgatas. Through it all his suffering comes to an end. Free of every fear, he becomes beyond harm. He becomes blessed by all the sattvas and by all the tathāgatas. All accomplishments become directly manifest to him. Without cause, every bliss arises in him that brings joy, satisfaction and delight never known before. Through some of these blisses samādhi is accomplished; through some, dhāraṇī; through some, all hopes are completely fulfilled; and so on, up to: through some, the state of all the tathāgatas is accomplished.

Then, binding that mudrā and releasing it at his own heart, one has him say this heart mantra as well:

tiṣṭha vajra dṛḍho me bhava śāśvatyo me bhava dridayame adhitiṣṭha sarba siddhimme brayacca hūṃ ha ha ha ha ho

Then one has him cast the garland of flowers onto the great maṇḍala and utter this heart mantra as well:

pratīccha vajra hoḥ

Then whatever it falls upon, through that he will attain accomplishment. Then, taking up the garland, one ties it on his head and has him say this heart mantra:

oṃ pratigrihṇa svamimāṃ satva mahvabala

Because it has been tied on, he has been made his own by that great being, and so he will swiftly attain accomplishment.

Then, while the descent is still upon him, one unties the covering of his face and has him say this heart mantra as well:

oṃ vajra satva sayaṃ tetya cakṣurgatana tatpara utghaṭa yati sarvvākṣo vajra cakṣu anuttaraṃ he vajra pāśya

Then one shows him the great maṇḍala in due order. As soon as he sees the great maṇḍala he becomes blessed by all the tathāgatas, and Vajrasattva too abides in his heart. Then, because of the blessing of all the tathāgatas, he sees maṇḍalas of light rays of many kinds and the like, and he also sees miraculous powers and wondrous displays. It may be that the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara himself, or the body of a tathāgata, will appear to him. From then on, every aim, every wish of the mind, every accomplishment, up to the very state of Vajradhara or of a tathāgata, will be accomplished.

Then, after he has seen the great maṇḍala, one should empower him with the scented water in a vase blessed with the vajra, and with this heart mantra:

oṃ vajra abhiṣiñca mī

Then, binding whichever mudrā or garland is suitable, and placing his own emblem in his hand, one should say this:

"The vajra empowerment of all the buddhas
I shall confer on you today.
For full accomplishment as all the buddhas,
Take up this vajra.

oṃ vajra adhipati stvaṃ abhiṣiñcāmi tiththa vajra samaya stvaṃ"

Then, with this heart mantra, one should confer the empowerment called the vajra name:

oṃ vajra satva stvaṃ abhiṣiñcāmi vajra nāma abhiṣeka ta

Whatever name he is given, as "O Vajra so-and-so," one should address him with "O."

This is the extensive rite for entering all the maṇḍalas.

Then one says to him: "What do you wish: the wisdom of the accomplishment that brings forth wealth, the wisdom that achieves the accomplishment of miraculous power, the wisdom that achieves the accomplishment of a vidyādhara, and so on up to the wisdom that achieves the supreme accomplishment of all the tathāgatas?" Then one should explain to him whatever each one wishes.

Then one should teach the mudrā wisdom that achieves the accomplishment of all aims:

"One should meditate fully, at the heart,
On the Vajradhātu, where treasure abides.
Having meditated, he will see
The treasures that lie in the earth.

Having drawn the shape of a vajra,
One should meditate on it on the face of the sky.
Wherever it is seen to fall,
There, one should know, is treasure.

When a wise person meditates
On the shape of a vajra upon his tongue,
He himself will say, truthfully,
'It is here.'

Having meditated on one's own body,
Wholly, in the shape of a vajra,
Wherever one stands once the descent has come,
There, it is taught, treasure lies."

Their heart mantras are these:

oṃ vajra nidhī oṃ ratna nidhī oṃ dharmma niddī oṃ karmma nidhī

Then one should teach the mudrā wisdom that achieves the accomplishment of vajra miraculous power:

"Having performed the vajra descent,
And meditated on the water as having the shape of a vajra,
One swiftly gains the accomplishment
Of going across upon the water.

Having performed the descent in this way,
If one meditates on one's own body
In the form of anyone at all,
One becomes even the body of a buddha.

Having caused the descent upon oneself in this way,
If one meditates on oneself as space,
For as long as one wishes,
For so long one becomes invisible.

Having become one into whom the vajra has descended,
If one meditates on oneself as being a vajra,

For as long as one wishes to soar from where one stands,
For so long one travels through the sky."

Their heart mantras are these:

vajra jvala vajra rūpa vajra ākāśa vajra mahūṃ

Then one should train in the gnosis of the mudrās that accomplish the siddhi of a vajra vidyādhara:

Having drawn the shape of a moon,
One should leap up into the sky above.
If one meditates on a vajra in one's hand,
One becomes a vajra vidyādhara.

Remaining seated upon the shape of a moon,
If one meditates intently on the vajra jewel,
For as long as one wishes oneself to rise,
For so long, in an instant, one soars aloft.

Seated upon the shape of a moon,
If one meditates on abiding on the vajra lotus,
The vajra eye
Bestows the rank of a vidyādhara.

Abiding in the center of the moon maṇḍala,
If one meditates on the action vajra,
Then, from holding the crossed vajra,
One swiftly becomes a universal vidyādhara.

Their heart mantras are these: vajradhara ratnadhara dharmmadhara karmmadhara

Then one should train in the gnosis of the mudrās that accomplish the supreme siddhi of all the tathāgatas:

If one imagines the samādhi of all vajras
In the expanse of space,
Then, as a vajra self, for as long as one wishes,
For so long one soars aloft.

If one meditates on the samādhi
Pure of everything, likewise unsurpassed,
Through accomplishing gnosis one swiftly

Attains the five superknowledges.

If one recollects all of space
As resembling Vajrasattva,
Oneself endowed with stable mindfulness,
One swiftly becomes Vajradhara.

Focusing on the whole expanse of space
As the forms of buddhas,
Through the samādhi of all buddhas
One is accomplished as a buddha.

Their heart mantras are these: vajra vajra śuddha śuddha satva satva buddha buddha. These are the accomplishments of the gnosis of all the siddhis.

Then, since this is a matter of keeping secret, one should first pronounce to him the heart of the oath: oṃ vajrasatva svayandye hṛdyes mabsta tani vīryā tata kṣaṇāṃ yāyā dyati bruyad idam nayaṃ. Then one should command him thus: "Do not transgress this heart of the oath. Should you do so, not having avoided harm, you will die an untimely death, and in this very body you will fall into hell."

Then one should train in the gnosis of the secret mudrās:

Having performed the vajra descent,
If, composed, one gently strikes
With the face of the vajra palms,
Even a mountain comes under one's control.

This is the mudrā of the vajra palms.

By the rite of the vajra descent,
Through the practice of striking gently
With the face of the vajra bond,
One summons even a mountain entirely.

Likewise, by the rite of the descent,
Having extended the vajra bond,
If one strikes the fingertips together,
A hundred families are destroyed in a moment.

By the rite of the subtle descent,
Placing all the fingers evenly

And releasing them from the vajra bond
Is supreme in dispelling all suffering.

Then comes the accomplishment of their secret:

One should cause it to enter
The opening of a woman or a man.
Having entered thus by means of the mind,
Imagine it pervading their entire body.

The heart mantras of the palms for this are these: vajrapāśa vajra āveśa vajra hana vajra hara

Then one should train in the gnosis of the four mudrās of the deity of one's own family. As to the rite, one should command thus: "Do not show any mudrā whatsoever to anyone else who does not know the mudrās. Why is that? Because if beings who have not seen the great maṇḍala bind the mudrās, they will not then be accomplished in that way. Then they will fall into doubt, and, not having avoided harm, they will die very swiftly and fall into the great hell called Avīci. And you yourself will go to the lower realms."

Then there is the gnosis of the great mudrā that accomplishes the being of all the tathāgatas:

Beginning from the realization of the mind,
Reciting "Vajradhātu,"
Transforming oneself into the body of a buddha,
One should meditate on the vajra sun.

As soon as one is accomplished, by that
One gains gnosis, life, strength, youth,
And the power to go everywhere;
Even the accomplishment of buddhahood is not hard.

This is the mudrā of the complete and manifest awakening of all the tathāgatas.

Then there is the binding of the great mudrā that accomplishes Vajrasattva:

With body, speech, and mind as vajra,
Generating the mind of vajra pride,
If, with that pride, one brandishes the vajra,
One becomes Vajrasattva oneself.

Thereby the power to go everywhere,
Lordship over all desires, blissfulness,
Great miraculous power, strength, and supreme form
Become like those of Vajrasattva.

With body, speech, and mind as vajra,
In conformity with the painted image,
Endowed with the mudrās of the emblems,
One should accomplish oneself as the great being.

Here the practices of all the sections,
The siddhis, and the great acts
Of those who are accomplished
I shall explain in their proper order.

First, as at the daily sessions,
Having performed self-blessing and the rest,
One should accomplish everything;
After that, one may do as one pleases.

Here is the extensive rite for accomplishing the great mudrā:

Having performed the vajra descent,
And bound the great mudrā according to the rite,
One meditates on that great being
In the space before oneself.

Having seen that gnosis being,
One should meditate on it in one's own body.
Summoning it, causing it to enter, binding it,
And bringing it under control, one should accomplish it.

Their heart mantras are these: vajrasatva aḥrdo, the heart mantra of the vajra descent. vajrasatva dṛśya ho, the heart mantra for recollecting the great being. jaḥ hūṃ baṃ hoḥ, the heart mantra for inviting, causing to enter, binding, and bringing under control the great being.

By saying samaya stvaṃ,
Having accomplished a moon behind oneself,
There one meditates on one's body as the being,
And says samaya stvaṃ ahaṃ.

Whatever mudrā belongs to whichever being,
Having meditated on that as oneself,

One should accomplish it through vajra recitation.
This is the accomplishment of all the mudrās.

Furthermore, as the great accomplishment,
One says jaḥ hūṃ baṃ hoḥ,
And by the excellent rite, by means of the mind,
Causes all the buddhas to enter one's body.

Then come the unsurpassed vajra actions;
I shall explain their actions.
If the recollection of the buddhas is accomplished,
One swiftly becomes a buddha.
If the sattva vajra is accomplished,
One becomes the lord of all the mudrās.
Through the mudrā of the jewel vajra,
One gains power over all jewels.
If the Dharma vajra is accomplished,
One becomes a holder of the Dharma of the buddhas.
Through the mudrā of the action vajra,
One performs the vajra actions.

Through binding the mudrā of the being,
One accomplishes Vajrasattva.
Through the rite of the vajra that draws in,
Vajradhara is invited into one's presence.
The great mudrā of the vajra of desire
Delights all the buddhas.
Through the rite of Vajrasādhu,
One gladdens all the buddhas.

Through the rite of vajra song,
One sings vajra songs.
Through the practice of vajra dance,
One thereby makes offerings to all the buddhas.
Through the rite of vajra incense,
One satisfies all beings.
By applying the vajra flower,
One thereby brings beings under control.
The great mudrā of the vajra lamp
Bestows the most supreme eye.
Through the rite of vajra perfume,
One dispels all suffering.
By drawing in with the vajra hook,
One becomes supreme among all who draw in.
Through the rite of the vajra noose,
One causes everything to enter.
Through the practice of the vajra chain,
One becomes able to bind everything.
Through the rite of the vajra descent,

One fully succeeds in making everything descend.

Then the gnosis of the vajra samaya mudrās of all the tathāgatas is explained:

From palms firmly joined,
Interlacing all the fingers
Is declared to be the vajra palms;
Because it is firmly bound, it is the vajra bond.
Since all the samaya mudrās
Arise from the vajra bond,
I shall explain their binding,
The unsurpassed binding of the vajra.

Having made the vajra bond firm,
Raise the middle fingers together like a sprout.
The middle fingers laid together inside
Is declared to be that of the second buddha.
The middle fingers are made like a jewel,
And the middle fingers bent like a lotus.
The mudrā of the fifth buddha
Is likewise the bent index fingers.

Next, of the families of the tathāgatas,
I shall rightly explain the binding
Of the mudrās that hold the samaya,
And their siddhis and actions.

Of the two hands, like the moon,
With the middle fingers released,
Raise the thumbs and the little fingers separately:
This is the sattva vajra; raised, it is the vajra.
The index fingers as a hook, the index fingers joined,
And as though giving "Excellent!":
These are the siddhis of the many mudrās
Of the four vajra beings.

Lay the thumbs together and bend the two index fingers,
Their tips touching: this is the jewel vajra.
That same, with the middle and ring fingers
And little fingers crossed and extended;
From that, the ring and little fingers

Laid evenly together is the banner.
Then, turning this around,
It is placed toward the mouth.

Both thumbs laid evenly together,
Both index fingers bent,
And the middle fingers raised with their tips bent:
That itself is the vajra sword.
From that, the ring and little fingers laid together
Is declared to be the wheel.
Bound, the two thumbs released,
Extended and placed toward the mouth.

Thumbs and little fingers raised with tips touching
Is declared to be the action vajra.
From that, the two index fingers laid together
Are extended and placed at the heart.
The tips of the two index fingers bent,
With the little fingers laid together, is the fang.
The two thumbs upon the two little fingers,
Pressed by the two index fingers.

The thumbs placed together at the heart
And fully extended is the garland.
The joined palms, their tips released from the mouth;
From dance, the joined palms placed at the crown.
The vajra bond poured downward;
The joined palms scattered upward;
The thumbs together, firmly bound;
Fully extended, it is the anointing.

One index finger bent in summoning;
The two thumbs, the knot cast off;
Thumbs and index fingers bound as a fetter;
The vajra bond with the index fingers closed.

Then their accomplishment is explained,
The sublime accomplishment of the vajra:
Through the samādhi of Vajrasattva,
One places one's own mudrā at the heart.

Then their actions are explained,
The unsurpassed vajra actions.
The mudrā of the five of the Vajradhātu,
Through the assembly of the tathāgatas,
Immediately blesses
The maṇḍala master together with the disciple.

By binding the sattva vajra,
One becomes like Vajradhara.
By binding the vajra hook,
One summons even all the buddhas.
By applying the vajra of desire,
One delights the perfect buddhas.
Through vajra joy, one praises
All the Victors with "Excellent!"
By binding the jewel vajra,
One is empowered by all the buddhas.
By binding the vajra sun,
One becomes like the radiance of the buddhas.
Through the vajra banner being raised,
One fulfills all hopes.
In the manner of vajra laughter,
One laughs together with all the buddhas.
By binding the Dharma vajra,
One becomes like the vajra Dharma.
By wielding the vajra sword,
One thereby cuts through all afflictions.
By holding the vajra wheel firm,
One becomes the lord of the maṇḍala.
Through the practice of vajra speech,
One accomplishes supreme vajra speech.
By binding the action vajra,
One becomes like the vajra action.
By making the vajra armor firm,
One's body becomes like a vajra.
The supreme mudrā of the vajra fang
Thereby crushes the savage māras.

By firmly binding the vajra fist,
All the mudrās too come under control.
By the smile, the joys of the gods;
By the garland, the ornaments;
By song, a voice ever clear;
By dance, one obtains offerings.
Incense gladdens the world;
By flowers, a beautiful form;
By the lamp, pure light;
By perfume, divine fragrant substances.
Vajrāṅkuśa summons;
Vajrapāśa causes to enter;
Vajrasphoṭa binds;
And the vajra bell causes descent.

Then the Dharma mudrās are explained.

vajra jñāna: the buddhas
Make the Vajradhātu firm.

Then, further, there is explained
The rite of the Dharma mudrās:
If one says samaya stvaṃ,
One becomes the lord of all the mudrās.
If one says ānaya sva,
One summons the buddhas without fail.
If one says aho sukha,
The buddhas too are delighted.
If one says sādhu sādhu,
One gladdens them with words of praise.
If one says sumahattvaṃ,
One obtains the empowerment of all the buddhas.
If one says rūpa dyot,
One becomes the very splendor of the Dharma.
If one says artha prāpta,
One fulfills all hopes.
If one laughs ha ha hūṃ he,
One obtains the laughter of the buddhas.
If one says sarvva kari,
One accomplishes even what cannot be done.

If one says duḥkh ccheda,
That cuts through all suffering.
If one says buddha bodhi,
One becomes the lord of the maṇḍalas.
If one says prati śabda,
One speaks together with the buddhas.
If one says subhāṣitvaṃ,
One comes to have power over all.
If one says nirbhaya stvaṃ,
One becomes fearless immediately.
If one says śatruṃ bhakṣa,
One devours all enemies.
If one says sarvā siddhi,
One becomes accomplished in everything.

mahā rati: the joy of the gods;
rlupa śobhe: a beautiful form;
śotra saukhya: it bestows happiness;
sarvva pūja: it makes offerings;
prahlādani: one becomes glad of mind;
phalāgāmi: one obtains the fruit;
su tejāgri: great splendor;
sughandhāṃgi: supremely fragrant; āya ha jiḥ: it summons;
āyāhi hūṃ: it causes to enter;
he sphoṭa baṃ: the great binding;
ghanḍā a aḥrab: it rings out.

Then the virtuous accomplishment of their Dharma mudrās is explained:

Having meditated on a vajra upon the tongue,
One will perform all actions.

Then the binding of the action mudrās is explained:

Having firmly bound the vajra fist,
Through composure, make it twofold.
Having bound the two vajra mudrās,
The binding is then fully explained.
The index finger of the left vajra

Should be raised within the right.
This is the mudrā of supreme awakening,
Which bestows the supreme awakening of the buddhas.
Akṣobhya's touching of the earth;
The jewel one's bestowing of the supreme gift;
The supreme samādhi of Amitāyus;
The granting of fearlessness of Amoghasiddhi.

Then the action mudrās
I shall explain in brief.
The beings, Vajrasattva and the rest,
Perform the vajra actions:
Brandishing proudly with both hands;
Remaining as though holding a hook;
The manner of shooting an arrow;
"Excellent!" placed at the heart.
For empowerment, the two vajras;
The sun made firm at the heart;
On the left, the shape of an elbow;
Likewise turned toward the mouth;
With the right, opening the left;
At the heart, the left; the sword and spear;
Whirling the wheel like a firebrand;
Both vajras released from the mouth;
The vajra dance whirled and released;
The palms at the cheeks, placed at the crown;
The armor; the little fingers as fangs;
And the two fists pressing down.
In the manner of the vajra proud posture,
One torments with stirred-up thought;
Binding the garland, releasing it from the mouth;
And the vajra dance is the whirling.
In the manner of the vajra fist,
Likewise give incense and the rest,
Performing the mudrā offerings
That are offerings to all the buddhas.
Binding the hook with the index finger;

From the little fingers, the great hook;
The wrist knot; the two index fingers a ring;
And the two backs pressed evenly together.

Then their accomplishment is explained,
Equal to performing vajra actions:
The vajra that is the reality of all vajras
Should be meditated upon in one's own heart.

Then the action mudrās,
The vajra actions of many kinds:
By binding the wisdom fist,
The gnosis of the buddhas enters.
By the binding of Akṣobhya,
The mind becomes unshaken.
Through the mudrā of Ratnasaṃbhava,
One brings benefit to others.
Through the mudrā of the wheel of the sacred Dharma,
One turns the wheel of Dharma.
Through supreme fearlessness one swiftly
Grants fearlessness to all beings.
By making the vajra proud posture firm,
One obtains the bliss of Vajrasattva.
With the vajra hook, in an instant,
One summons even all the tathāgatas.
With the mudrā of the arrow, I
Delight the vajra goddess.
Through vajra joy, all the Victors
Also bestow the words "Excellent!"
Binding the great vajra jewel,
One is empowered by the Teachers.
By binding the vajra sun,
One becomes like the vajra sun.
By raising the vajra banner,
One makes a rain of jewels fall.
By binding the vajra smile,
One swiftly laughs like the buddhas.
By binding the vajra flower,

One thereby sees the vajra dharmas.
If one firmly binds the vajra sword,
That cuts through all suffering.
By binding the vajra wheel,
One turns the wheel of Dharma.
The words of all the buddhas
Are accomplished through vajra recitation.
Through the offering of vajra dance,
Even the buddhas come under control.
By binding the body with the vajra armor,
One obtains the vajra essence.
By binding the vajra fang,
I crush even the vajra.
The vajra fist seizes all,
And finds all the accomplishments of the mudrās.

The vajra holder bestows joy;
Vajramālā, a beautiful form;
Vajragītā, melodious song;
Vajranṛtyā brings under control;
Incense, gladness of mind;
Flowers, the ornaments;
The lamp, great splendor;
Vajragandhā, excellent fragrance;
Vajrāṅkuśa summons;
Vajrapāśa causes to enter;
Vajrasphoṭa binds;
And the vajra bell rings out.

Then the extensive rite for binding the mudrā common to all the mudrās is explained. First of all, one should strike the fingers of the vajra bond at the heart and recite this heart mantra: vajra bandha traṭa. Then all the mudrās one binds come under the control of the vajra of one's own body, speech, and mind.

Then, binding the samaya mudrā of the vajra descent, one recites this heart mantra: a. Then, having descended, it remains close by as a friend.

Then one should recollect the great being of the samaya of the mudrā, reciting this heart mantra: mahā samaya satva aḥ. By that all the mudrās are accomplished. This is the extensive rite for accomplishing all the mudrās.

Then the extensive common rite of accomplishment is explained. First, having bound one's own mudrā, one meditates on oneself as the being of one's own mudrā with this heart mantra: samayo haṃ. Then, having meditated on oneself as the being of one's own mudrā, one blesses oneself with this mantra: samaya satva adhitiṣṭha svamāṃ. Then one should accomplish it. This is the extensive rite of accomplishment.

Then the extensive rite of the siddhis is explained. First, if one wishes to accomplish wealth, this is the heart mantra: artha siddhi. When the mudrā is accomplished by it, great wealth is held to arise. Then, if one wishes to accomplish the vajra, this is the heart mantra: vajra siddhi. By it the vajra will be accomplished just as one wishes. Then, if one wishes for the accomplishment of a vidyādhara, this is the heart mantra: vajra vidyādhara siddhi. By it one accomplishes the state of a vidyādhara just as one wishes. Likewise, if one wishes to accomplish the supreme, one accomplishes it with the heart mantra of one's own mudrā. This is the extensive rite of the siddhis.

Then the extensive common rite, common to all the mudrās, for making one's own body, speech, and mind vajra is explained. Whenever the blessing of the mudrā has grown slack, or if one wishes to give oneself up, one should then make it firm with this heart mantra: oṃ vajra satva samaya manupālaya vajrasatva tvenopa tiṣṭha dṛḍho me bhava sutoṣyo me bhava anurakto me bhava supoṣyo me bhava sarvva siddhi mme prayaccha sarvva karmmasu ca me cittaṃ śreyaḥ kuru hūṃ ha ha ha hoḥ bhagavān sarvva tathāgata vajra māme muñca vajrī bhava mahā samaya satva aḥ. By it, even one who has committed the acts of immediate retribution, deceived all the tathāgatas, reviled the sacred Dharma, and committed every wrong, because Vajrasattva has been made firm by one who practices the mudrās of all the tathāgatas, will swiftly accomplish in this very life all the siddhis just as he wishes: the supreme siddhi, the vajra siddhi, the siddhi of Vajrasattva, up to the siddhi of a tathāgata. So spoke the Blessed One, the Vajrasattva of all the tathāgatas.

Then the extensive common rite for releasing all the mudrās is explained. First, one releases each of the mudrās from the very place where it arose with this heart mantra: oṃ vajra muḥ. Then, with the jewel vajra mudrā that has arisen from the heart and remains at the place of one's own empowerment, one confers empowerment; circling the two index fingers as a garland and binding it, one likewise binds the armor too, with this heart mantra: oṃ vajra ratna abhiṣiñca sarvva mudrā me tridhī kuru vara ka bace na vaṃ. Then, again, having fixed the bound garland at the end of the armor, one strikes the palms together evenly and gives delight with this heart mantra: vajra tuṣya hoḥ. If one releases, binds, and gives delight to the mudrās by this rite, one becomes like a vajra. Or else it may also be done with Vajrasattva.

Reciting Vajrasattva once,
Whatever one wishes, with ease,
Is accomplished by mere recitation,
Just as Vajrapāṇi has spoken.

So spoke the Blessed One Samantabhadra.

For the beings, Vajrasattva and the rest,
For accomplishment and for all actions,
If here one recites as one pleases,
One obtains siddhis from all the ritual systems.
Heart mantras, mudrās, mantras, and vidyās,
In whatever manner one wishes,
Whether explained in the ritual systems or of one's own making,
All of them apply to this accomplishment.

Then, uttering the secret offering and singing the song of vajra praise, one should perform the four secret offerings:

oṃ Through the embrace of Vajrasattva,
The unsurpassed vajra jewel;
Through singing the vajra Dharma,
One performs the vajra action.

Then, in the central maṇḍala, with that very song of vajra praise, one should perform the vajra dance with the hands joined side by side, and make the offerings of incense and the rest. Then, in the outer maṇḍala, one makes offerings with vajra incense and the rest, and places those offerings each in its own place. Then one commands, "All of you, make offerings as best you can!", and, having made request to all the tathāgatas, one has them make offerings of incense and the rest as they wish. One gratifies those who have entered with all the flavors, foods, and so forth that are available, and with all the requisites offered to the great maṇḍala, and then gives them the vajra vow, the siddhi of all the tathāgatas:

This is all the buddhas,
Abiding in the hand of Vajrasattva.
You too must always hold it:
The vow of Vajrapāṇi is firm.

oṃ sarvva tathāgata siddhi vajra samaya tiṣṭha eṣa tvāṃ ddārayāmi vajra satva hi hi hi hi hūṃ

One commands them, "From this day on, do not speak of any of this to anyone," and one also teaches the heart mantra of the oath.

Then one dismisses those who have entered. The request to all the tathāgatas is this: binding the mudrā of the sattva vajra, one shows it facing upward, recites this heart mantra, and releases it:

oṃ You have accomplished every aim of beings;
Grant the siddhis that accord with it.
Please depart to the realm of the buddhas,
And then I pray you to come again.

vajra satva muḥ

One should do the same for all the maṇḍalas. The supreme samaya mudrās too should be released.

This completes the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, from the King of the Realization of the Great Vehicle of All the Tathāgatas.

The third fascicle.

Then the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called "the vajra arisen from the samaya of the vajra dhāraṇī of all the tathāgatas." As soon as he had entered into it, from the hearts of all the tathāgatas that very Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, holding the form of Vajradhara, became the goddesses of the samaya mudrās of the vajra dhāraṇī, the all-blazing essence, and came forth. All the tathāgatas of all the buddhas of all the world realms accomplished the gnosis of the vajra dhāraṇī of all the tathāgatas; and they, having become the dhāraṇīs of the samaya mudrās of all the tathāgatas, were arrayed upon moon disks in the manner of the array of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu of all the tathāgatas, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! Because the mind of awakening
Wishes to benefit all beings,
The hero, by the power of taming them,

Has taken on the form of a woman.

Then the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the Vajradhātu, the samaya of the gnosis mudrā of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ vajra dhātvīśvari hūṃ vajriṇi

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya too entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the maṇḍala of the mudrā of the samaya gnosis of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ vajra vajriṇi hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Ratnasaṃbhava entered into the samādhi called "blessed by the maṇḍala of the mudrā of the gnosis of the samaya of the vajra jewel of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ ratna vajriṇi hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amitāyus entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the maṇḍala of the mudrā of the gnosis of the samaya of the vajra Dharma of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ dharmma vajriṇi hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the maṇḍala of the mudrā of the gnosis of the samaya of the vajra action of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ karmma vajriṇi hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi explained the four samaya mudrās of the great dhāraṇī of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra satva guhya samye ha oṃ guhya ratna aṃkuśi hūṃ oṃ guhya rāgi rāgāya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya vajra sādhvīśvari hūṃ. Samantabhadrā, Tathāgatāṅkuśī, the Joyful Passionate One, and the Excellent One: these are the great vajra dhāraṇīs.

oṃ vajra guhya ratna samaya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya prabhe hūṃ oṃ vajra dhvaja agra guhya hūṃ oṃ vajra hāsa vajri hūṃ. Ratnottamā, Ratnolkā, Dhvajāgrakeyūrā, and Hāsavatī: these are the dhāraṇīs of the vajra jewel.

oṃ vajra dharmma guhya samaye hūṃ oṃ vajra koṣa guhya samaya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya maṇḍale hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya vaca samaye hūṃ. The Vajra Lotus, the All-Holding One, Samantacakrā, and the One Who Echoes Above: these are the dhāraṇīs of the Dharma.

oṃ vajra guhya karmma samaye hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya kapace hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya daṃṣṭā dhāraṇī hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya muṣṭi hūṃ. Siddhottarā, Sarvarakṣā, the One Who Steals Back Radiance, and the Dhāraṇī Mudrā: these are the dhāraṇīs of all.

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi explained the four samaya mudrās of the vajra secret of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra guhya satva vajriṇi hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya ratna vajriṇi hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya dharmma vajriṇi hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya karmma vajriṇi hūṃ. These, the vajra perfections themselves and the rest, are the samaya mudrās that gather the dhāraṇīs of the samaya of the vajra secret of all the tathāgatas. In the great maṇḍala of Vajradhātvīśvarī they are placed, ablaze, seated upon moon disks.

Then Vajrapāṇi explained the four samaya mudrās of the secret offering of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra guhya rati būjā samaye sarvva pūjā pravarttanāya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya abhiṣeka pūjā samaye sarvva pūjā pravarttanāya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya gīti pūjā samaye sarvva pūjā pravarttanāya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya nṛtya pūjā samaye sarvva pūjā pravarttanāya hūṃ. These, the vajra-holding goddess and the rest, ablaze, in the form of the mudrās of their own emblems, are arranged in the corners of the wheel maṇḍala.

Then again Vajrapāṇi explained this great vajra maṇḍala called Vajraguhya:

Next I shall fully explain
The sublime vajra maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is called Vajraguhya.

In the manner of the great maṇḍala
All the maṇḍalas should be drawn.
In the center of all the maṇḍalas
One should draw the mudrā of the Buddha.
Seated well upon a stūpa throne,
It is declared to be the Sovereign Lady of the Vajradhātu.
Upon a throne, a vajra laid upon a vajra
Is declared to be Vajrasattva.
Upon the throne of the vajra jewel
Is declared to be the conferring of one's own empowerment.
Upon the throne of the vajra lotus
Is declared to be what is called the weapon.
Upon the throne of the action vajra
Is declared to be what is called the all-vajra.
What is drawn upon the lotus
Rests upon a maṇḍala of light.

Upon the throne draw a vajra;
Likewise two raised hooks;
A vajra resting against a vajra;
Likewise two giving "Excellent!"
The jewel should blaze with rays of light;
Likewise the mudrā of the sun;
The tip of the banner too, with its blaze;
Between two vajras, a row of teeth;
In the center of a vajra draw a lotus;
Likewise a sword with its blaze.

A vajra wheel with vajra spokes;
A blazing tip, full of rays of light;
A vajra with points on every side;
Armor perfectly endowed with vajras;
Likewise draw the vajra fangs;
Make the two hands into the mudrā of fists.
Draw the sattva vajra and the rest.
Just as in the Dhātu maṇḍala,
So is the drawing of the symbol mudrās:
In the maṇḍala, Vajradhara and the rest,
And outside it as well, as is fitting,
Draw their own symbols too.
Maitreya and the others, their own emblems,
Draw just as one pleases.

Next comes the extensive rite of entering this Vajraguhya maṇḍala and so forth. First the vajra master should himself bind the mudrā of Sattvavajrī and enter. Having entered, he circumambulates once, offers that mudrā to the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, releases it properly at his own heart, and at the four gates performs the actions as they should be done with Vajrāṅkuśa and the others; then he comes out. Having come out, he leads the vajra disciples in, in the same manner as leading them into the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala. Then, having led them in, he gives them the secret vajra symbol of accomplishment covered with liquor, and they are to be trained in the wisdom of the Vajraguhya mudrās. Of these, they are first to be trained in the wisdom of the body mudrā of Vajraguhya.

In the center of a moon disk,
Joining hands and feet palm to palm,

Opening the mouth and meditating on a vajra,
One makes even the vajra lady fall in love.
With a hook formed by the bent arms,
One should meditate on a vajra upon the head;
Making an opening with the hand,
One summons even the hook lady.
In the manner of shooting an arrow,
Drawing the bow and loosing it at the heart,
One oneself delights even the lady of vajra joy,
In the manner of Māra.
At the heart of one's own body,
In the manner of vajra armor,
If one binds with arms crossed,
One protects even the buddhas.

Here their heart mantras are these: vajrarāga maho vajra aṃkuśa jaḥ vajra māraya māraya phaṭ vajrabandha rakṣa haṃ

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the gaze mudrā of Vajraguhya.

With the passion of the vajra gaze,
Opening the eyes wide with joy,
If one looks at a woman thereby,
She always comes under one's power.
Moving the eyes very swiftly
And summoning with the eyelashes,
This is declared to be the radiant gaze;
It summons all beings.
Drawing the wrathful frown tightly together,
The wrathful eyes are narrowed;
If one makes the wrathful gaze,
One terrifies even the three realms.
Like a crag of Mount Meru, king of mountains,
Steady, with eyes that do not blink:
This is declared to be the loving gaze;
It dispels disease, grahas, and poison.

Then their heart mantras are these: vajradṛṣṭi maṭ dīptadṛṣṭi aṃkuśa jaḥ krodhadṛṣṭi hrīḥ dṛḍha tiṣṭha phaṭ

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the speech mudrā of Vajraguhya.

If one says ho ho ho ho,
Being free of sound, at once
It delights all sentient beings;
That is the bestowal of the vajra word.
If one utters jja jja jja jja,
The wrathful word is clear;
It summons all people,
Even those who are like Vajradhara.
If one utters hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ hūṃ,
Through the clarity of what is spoken,
It becomes a māra to all sentient beings,
Even to those who are like Mount Meru.
If one says haṃ haṃ haṃ haṃ,
The subtle word is clear;
It protects those of the world,
And protects even the Victor whose nature is vajra.

Here the heart mantras are these: vajra hoḥ vajra jaḥ vajra hūṃ vajra haṃ

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the mind mudrā of Vajraguhya.

If one meditates on oneself
As you, Vajrapāṇi,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
One brings all the buddhas under one's power.
If one meditates on oneself
As Vajragarbha himself,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
One summons Vajrapāṇi.
If one meditates on oneself
As the very Dharma Eye,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
One thereby gathers all phenomena.
If one meditates on oneself
As Vajraviśva himself,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
One thereby protects all the vajra ones.

Here the heart mantras are these: vajrabāṇi sarvva śamānaya sarvva buddha ho vajragarbha vajrapāṇi śīghraṃ ākarṣaya hūṃ jaḥ vajranetra sarvva dharmma māraya hūṃ phaḍ vajraviśva rakṣa sarbhān hūṃ

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the Vajraguhya mudrās.

At the heart of one's own body,
Bind the sattva vajra,
And if one looks with the vajra eye,
One brings down all beings.
At the heart of one's own body,
Bind the jewel vajra,
And if one looks with the blazing eye,
One brings all under one's power.
At the heart of one's own body,
If one binds the Dharma vajra
And looks with the wrathful eye,
One thereby gathers all beings.
At the heart of one's own body,
Bind the action vajra,
And if one looks with the loving eye,
One protects all beings.

Then these are the heart mantras of those Vajraguhya wisdom mudrās: vajraguhyasamaya hūṃ vajraguhyasamya haṃ vajraguhyasamaya hūṃ vajraguhya samya haṃ

Then one is to be trained in binding the great mudrās of Vajraguhya.

What arises from the vajra joining of palms
Is declared to be the great secret.
The great mudrās, in brief:
Their binding is explained.
Crossing the two thumbs,
And bending the two index fingers,
Make the middle fingers even, joined at the joints:
This is declared to be the Sovereign Lady of the Vajradhātu.
From that same one, make the middle fingers a vajra;
Make the two middle fingers a jewel;
For the lotus, the ring, little, and middle fingers,
With the fingers of the hand fully stretched out.

For the index finger vajra, the tips of the two index fingers,
That same one adorned by the two thumbs.
Giving "Excellent!", and the index finger jewel;
The index finger jewel is made to blaze.
The ring fingers side by side, the little finger jewel;
That same one is also turned around.
At the tips of all, spread them fully apart;
Insert the thumbs and little fingers well;
The fingers fully stretched out as a wheel;
That same one is drawn forth from the mouth.
Extending the thumbs, cover the vajra;
Making the index fingers even, insert them inside;
From that very one, separating the two little fingers,
Then inside, make a vajra.
The actions of Vajraguhya
Arise from the vajra binding.
The Dharma secret ones, with their signs,
Are made with the palms bent inward.

The action secret ones, by the signs abiding within,
Are shown as the actions.
Then further, it is fully explained:
The Dharma mudrās, explained in brief:
a ja ho sa oṃ oṃ trāṃ ha hrīḥ dhaṃ maṃ raṃ kaṃ haṃ hūṃ vaṃ
Having made the secret mudrās twofold,
Make them into the action mudrās.
However many supreme samayas there are,
Separate them into two, and do likewise.

Then their accomplishment is explained.

Saying samaya stvaṃ,
What is accomplished by binding them oneself
Is the self of bliss, attached to desire.
Of these, not even a single one, above all,
Should be bound at all times;
For a secret, or for a great purpose,
The wise should apply them.
The self of all of these abides;

The goddesses of the self-arisen ones are steadfast;
Through one's own passion for the accomplishments,
The eternal lord is sent forth.

Then come the actions of binding and so forth for all these mudrās.

Whether for oneself or for another,
When one performs the Vajrāveśa, the vajra possession,
This is the heart mantra to employ,
Whether one binds or causes another to bind:
vajra hūṃ bandha

Then comes the release.

In brief, all the mudrās,
By this very heart mantra,
From whatever place each one arose,
Should be released into that same place:
oṃ vajra muḥ

Then comes the making firm.

Making firm the jewel vajra,
Release it at the place of the heart and at the crown of the head;
With the index fingers bind the armor;
This is the heart mantra to employ:
oṃ dṛḍta vajra kavaco dṛḍha

Then comes the samaya of binding.

Release them into the places where they abide;
Make them firm with the armor;
By clapping the palms, join them all;
This is the heart mantra to employ:
oṃ guhya samaya tra
Recite Vajrasattva as you wish;
In the maṇḍala and in all actions
Apply it at that very time;
It is supreme for accomplishing everything.

This completes the extensive rite of the Vajraguhya mudrā maṇḍala, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals, the Realization of the Great Vehicle of All the Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle vajra wisdom mudrā of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sūkṣma vajra jñāna samaye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle wisdom of the Vajrasattva of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ vajrasatva sūkṣma vajra jñāna samaye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Ratnasaṃbhava entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle wisdom of the vajra jewel of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ ratna sūkṣma vajra jñāna samaya hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amitāyus entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle wisdom of the vajra Dharma of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃdharmma sūkṣma vajra jñānasamaye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle wisdom of the vajra action of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ karmma stukṣma vajra jñāna samaye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata, the Blessed One Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called "the subtle wisdom vajra of all the tathāgatas." The very moment the Blessed One had entered into it, at that very time, those rays of light of subtle vajra wisdom came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas and illuminated all the world systems. They made firm for all sentient beings the equipoise of all the tathāgatas in the samādhi of subtle vajra wisdom. Then, becoming one again, they were focused into a vajra body of the wisdom of samādhi; gathered into one, they became the wisdom of the Tathāgata and entered the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, having entered the wisdom heart of all the tathāgatas, spoke this great samaya vajra of the subtle wisdom of all the tathāgatas: sūkma vajra

The very moment he had spoken it, that same Blessed One Vajrapāṇi came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, blessed himself into the form of the subtle wisdom vajra of all the tathāgatas, and, abiding at the tip of the noses of all the tathāgatas, uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the subtle vajra
Of all the buddhas, and I am great.
Because, though subtle, I am great,
I fill even the three realms."

When he had spoken thus, the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, from the tips of the noses of all the tathāgatas, in the manner of expanding the signs of extremely subtle wisdom, pervaded the bodies of all the tathāgatas; and in the manner of pervading the entire dharmadhātu, he pervaded the entire expanse of space with the signs of subtle vajra wisdom. Having pervaded the entire expanse of space, he remained there, having blessed himself into the form of the wisdom vajra of all the tathāgatas.

Then, at that very time, all the tathāgatas focused on the vajra dharmatā at the center of the wisdom vajra of all the tathāgatas, and entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the subtle vajra wisdom of all the tathāgatas." Then from that vajra of all the tathāgatas there emerged this heart of the samādhi wisdom of all the tathāgatas: vajra nābī tathāgatā hūṃ

The very moment it had emerged, the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, in the manner in which subtle wisdom enters, entered the bodies of all the tathāgatas, and, as their heart essence, took the form of a vajra and abided there.

Then from that vajra of all the tathāgatas there emerged these four hearts of great wisdom: vajra ātmaka dṛḍḍha vajra aṃkuśa tiṣṭharāga vajra prabeśa hṛdayaṃ a ho vajra duṣṭi

The wisdom mudrā of Vajrasattva, the wisdom mudrā of the blessing that gathers all the tathāgatas, the wisdom mudrā that delights all the tathāgatas, and the wisdom mudrā of great joy: these are the great samādhis of all the tathāgatas.

Then Vajrapāṇi, the heart of all the tathāgatas, in the manner in which subtle wisdom enters, entered his own heart and remained there, having blessed himself into the form of the heart vajra. Then from that vajra form there emerged these four hearts: vajra ratna ātmaka hṛdaya vajra sūrya tiṣṭha vajra dhājāgra baṃ hṛdaya vajra hāsa

The wisdom mudrā of the vajra empowerment of all the tathāgatas, the wisdom mudrā of the ornament of the maṇḍala of great light, the wisdom mudrā that fulfills the hopes of all the tathāgatas, and the wisdom mudrā from which the force of the joy of all the tathāgatas arises: these are the jewel samādhi of all the tathāgatas.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, in the manner in which subtle wisdom enters, entered the vajra heart at his own heart and remained there, having blessed himself into the form of a vajra. Then from that vajra form there emerged these four hearts: vajra padma ātmaka hṛdya vajra koṣa tiṣṭha vajra cadakra hṛdyaṃ prabeśa vajra jitvāgra hṛdaya

The wisdom mudrā of the sameness of all phenomena, the wisdom mudrā of the discernment of all the tathāgatas, the wisdom mudrā of entering the great wheel, and the wisdom mudrā of the Dharma words of all the tathāgatas, free of elaboration: these are the Dharma samādhi of all the tathāgatas.

Then again Vajrapāṇi came forth from the vajra at the heart, his own heart vajra, and, in the manner of entering subtle wisdom, entered that vajra heart and remained there, having blessed himself into the form of an extremely subtle vajra. Then from that subtle vajra form there emerged these four hearts: sarvva vajra ātmaka hṛdaya vajra kavaca tiṣṣa vajra rakṣa hṛdaya vajra muṣṭi hṛdaya

The wisdom mudrā of the action of all the tathāgatas, the wisdom mudrā of invincible diligence, the wisdom mudrā that destroys the maṇḍalas of all the māras, and the wisdom mudrā that binds all the tathāgatas: these are the action samādhi of all the tathāgatas.

Moreover, the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, in the manner of pervading with the signs of subtle wisdom, came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas and became the body of the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi. Then again he became the bodies of the bodhisattvas Vajrasattva and the rest. Each placed his own hand emblem at his heart, and, in the manner of arranging the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala, they abided upon moon disks and remained settled in equipoise in the samādhi of their own hearts.

Then again Vajrapāṇi, in order to accomplish the samādhi, the wisdom, and the higher knowledges of all the tathāgatas, explained this subtle vajra wisdom maṇḍala.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime Dharma maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is called the Subtle Vajra.
Then, in the manner of the maṇḍala,

Place the great beings as well.
In the center of the vajra draw the Buddha;
In the buddha maṇḍalas too
Draw the great beings;
Likewise, at their hearts, their own mudrās,
Abiding in samādhi,
The two hands bound in the vajra binding.

Then comes the extensive rite of summoning and so forth for this subtle vajra Dharma maṇḍala. Having performed extensively the rite of entering and so forth in the manner of the great maṇḍala, one places the wisdom mudrā in the disciple's hand, and they are to be trained in the wisdom of the great mudrā that makes one's own mind workable.

Pressing the tongue against the palate,
One should contemplate at the tip of the nose.
Through touching the bliss of the subtle vajra,
The mind becomes settled in equipoise.
If the sign of touching
The bliss of the subtle vajra arises,
That sign is to be made to pervade;
The mind should be made to pervade everywhere.
When the mind has pervaded as far as one wishes,
It will pervade even the three realms.
Then, as for withdrawing it again:
As far as the tip of the nose,
Settle them in perfect equipoise.
Whatever one meditates on,
All of it becomes stable.
This is the testing of samādhi and discernment.

Then their heart mantras are these: sūkṣma vajra spharṇa saṃharaṇa vajra vajra hṛda tiṣṭha

The being who, with great steadfastness,
Has made loving-kindness even,
In the manner in which the mind pervades,
Pervades all sentient beings with it.
In the manner of pervading with loving-kindness,

Whoever is compassionate
Should pervade with a practice
Endowed with benefit for all sentient beings.
All things are by nature luminous,
Pure from the beginning, like space;
Whether Dharma or not Dharma,
Pervading them with intention, one becomes joyful.
Those hard to tame and their like
Are not vessels for a buddha's awakening;
For the sake of understanding them,
One should meditate on great equanimity.

Here the heart mantras are these: mahā maitri spharṇa mahā karuṇā spharaṇa sarvva buddhopramoda spharaṇa sarvva satpaṃ saṃbodhaya

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of recollecting all the tathāgatas.

In space, or in another direction,
In the manner of the subtle vajra,
Whether standing or sitting,
One should cultivate the form of the vajra.
Likewise, in all places,
Through the yoga of the subtle vajra,
Settled in equipoise, at the heart
Meditate on the bodhisattva vajra.
In the sequence just described,
In the manner of the subtle vajra,
The great form of Vajrapāṇi
Should be meditated on in all places.
The buddha body endowed
With the supreme of all aspects, at all times,
In its proper order, just as it is,
Should be meditated on in equipoise.

Here the heart mantras are these:

vajra mukhi ghaga mahā bodhi satva ābeśa vajra paṇi dhārśaya svarūpaṃ buddha anusmṛti ābeśa

In the manner of the subtle vajra,
What one should cultivate oneself

Is oneself in the form of the moon:
This is the meditation of the awakening mind.
In the center of the moon disk
One should meditate on oneself
As having become the form of a vajra:
This is the meditation of the sattva vajra.
Applying the manner of the subtle vajra,
One should meditate on oneself
As Vajrasattva at one's own heart:
This is the meditation of Vajrasattva.
One should meditate on oneself
As the form of a buddha
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects:
This is the meditation of a buddha's awakening.

Here the heart mantras are these: samanta btadra ābeśa vajra satva vajra ābeśa vajrasatva samādhi jñāna ābeśa tathāgato hūṃ

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the Dharma secret mudrās of all the tathāgatas.

"I am equal to the Tathāgata":
Uttering this once in vajra words,
And joining the two organs in union,
One makes all sentient beings impassioned.
"I am equal to the Great Vajra":
Uttering this once in vajra words,
And joining the two organs in union,
One unfailingly summons the world.
"I myself am equal to Vajradharma":
Uttering this once in vajra words,
By joining the two organs in union,
One thereby destroys the whole world.
"I am equal to the vajra, without remainder":
Uttering this once in vajra words,
By joining the two organs in union,
One thereby accomplishes all actions.

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the samādhi mudrā called "the blessing of the wisdom vajra of all the tathāgatas."

In the manner of the subtle vajra,
One should meditate, in the center of the vajra,
On oneself as the very body of the Buddha;
Thereby one attains buddhahood itself.

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the samādhi mudrās of Vajrasattva and the rest.

Applying the manner of the subtle vajra,
With the vajra and the others set at the heart,
Having meditated, through the vajra and the rest
One bestows one's own accomplishment.

Then one is to be trained in the wisdom of the samaya mudrās of the samādhi of the families of all the tathāgatas.

Arising from the vajra binding,
They are explained as sixteen;
Samādhi is the supreme samaya;
Their binding is explained.
Sitting cross-legged, lying on the back,
The right ten likewise inserted back again,
Resting at the heart is the fourth:
This is the maṇḍala of Vajrasattva and the rest.
Placed at the forehead, and at the nape of the neck,
And at the shoulders, and joined with laughter;
Placed at the mouth, at the heart the sword,
Spread at the heart, and drawn forth from the mouth;
At the crown, the seeing, placed at the mouth;
The two index fingers bent, likewise in front.

Then further one should train in the Dharma mudrās: ṭakki gra gra maṭa agra trāṃ trāṃ aṃ aṃ baṃ baṃ tiṭa hīḥṭa bhṛṭa kraśa ha ha ba ba baṃ baṃ phaṭ grasa

Then the supreme of the subtle wisdoms of Dharma action is explained.

From the samaya of the wisdom fist,
Making it twofold, one should apply them.

This completes the extensive rite of the vajra wisdom Dharma maṇḍala, from the King of the Great Realization of the Great Vehicle of All the Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya wisdom of action that pervades with the extensive rite of the unsurpassed offering of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarvva tathāgata vajra dhātu anuttara pūja karmma spharaṇa samye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Akṣobhya entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya vajra of action that pervades with the extensive rite of the unsurpassed offering of the Vajrasattva of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarvva tathāgata vajrasatva anuttara būjā karmma spharṇa samye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Ratnasaṃbhava entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya vajra of action that pervades with the extensive rite of the unsurpassed offering of the vajra jewel of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarvva tathāgata vajra ratna anuttara pūjā karmma spharaṇa samaye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amitāyus entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya of action that pervades with the extensive rite of the unsurpassed offering of the vajra Dharma of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarvva tathagata vajra dharmma anuttara pūjā karmma spharaṇa samye hūṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi entered into the samādhi called "the blessing of the samaya vajra of action that pervades with the extensive rite of the unsurpassed offering of the vajra action of all the tathāgatas," and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarvva tathāgata vajra karmma anuttara pūjā karmma spharaṇa samaye hūṃ

Then again the Blessed One Vairocana entered into the samādhi called "the samaya vajra of action that pervades the entire dharmadhātu with the extensive rite of offering of all the tathāgatas." The very moment he had entered into it, that same Blessed One Vajrapāṇi came forth from the hearts of all the tathāgatas, having become goddesses: oceans of clouds of the extensive rite of the ornaments of every kind of offering, of many varieties, filling the whole expanse of space and pervading the entire dharmadhātu with the extensive rite of offering of all the tathāgatas. Then, as oceans of clouds throughout the boundless world systems, in the maṇḍalas of the retinues of all the tathāgatas, they brought about the generation of the great, unsurpassed awakening mind of all the tathāgatas, the delighting of the families of all the tathāgatas, the accomplishment of the conduct of Samantabhadra, the approach to the seat of great awakening, the taming of all the māras, the full and perfect awakening to the sameness of all the tathāgatas, and the generation of the great maṇḍala of all the tathāgatas, the gaining of complete victory over all the three realms, the turning of the wheel of the sublime Dharma, and the acting for the benefit of the realms of sentient beings, all of them without exception or remainder. Having displayed all these and the other miraculous powers and magical displays of the buddhas, they remained there.

Those goddesses of the oceans of clouds of offerings, too, holding their own mudrās with both hands, made offering to all the tathāgatas according to the rite. Abiding upon moon disks in the manner of the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala, they uttered this inspired utterance:

"How wonderful! I am the offering to the buddhas;
I am the one who performs all offerings.
For, endowed with the blessing of the buddhas,
I bring all the buddhas to accomplishment."

Then Vajrapāṇi explained this action maṇḍala called Vajra, the extensive rite of the actions of offering and so forth to all the tathāgatas:

oṃ sarvva tathāgata sarvva ātmānana ryitrana pūjā spharaṇa karmma vajriṇi hūṃ ā oṃ sarvva tathāgata sarvva ātān niryātna pūjā spharaṇa karmma gri jaḥ oṃ sarvva tathāgata sarvva ātmānana ryītana anurāgapūjā spharaṇa karmma pāṇe hūṃ ho oṃ sarvva tathāgata sarvva ātmān niryātana sādhukār pūjā spharaṇa karmma tuṣṭi aḥ

The blissful lady of the supreme joy of all the tathāgatas, the lady who invites all the tathāgatas, the lady who pleases all the tathāgatas, and the lady who delights all the tathāgatas: these are the great offering of all the tathāgatas.

oṃ namaḥ sarvva tathāgata kāyābhiṣeka ratnebhyo vajra maṇi oṃ oṃ namaḥ sarba tathāgata sūryebhyo vajra tejeni jvāla hrīḥ oṃ namaḥ sarvva tathāgatāśā paripūraṇi cindāmaṇi dhvaja agrebhyo vajra dhvaja agri trāṃ oṃ namaḥ sarvva tathāgata mahā prīti pramodya karebhyo vajra hāsye ha

The great lady of empowerment, the lady of great illumination, the lady who rains down great jewels, and the lady of supreme joy and delight: these are the empowerment offering of all the tathāgatas.

oṃ sarvva tathāgata vajra dharmatā samādhibhi stunomi mahā dharmāgri hrīḥ oṃ sarvva tathāgata prajñāpāramitā nirhāraiḥ stunomi mahā ghoṣānuge dhaṃ oṃ sarvva tathāgata cakra akṣaraṃ paribarthādi sarba sūtrāntanyaiḥ stunomi sarba maṇḍale hūṃ oṃ sarba tathāgata sandhi bhāṣa buddha sadgīti bhirga yaṃ stunomi vajra bāce baṃ

The lady who sings of great wisdom, the lady who follows the great melody, the lady who enters all maṇḍalas, and the lady of mantra conduct: these are the Dharma offering of all the tathāgatas.

oṃ sarba tathāgata dhupa megha spharaṇa pūjā karme karakra oṃ sarba tathāgata pūṣba prasara spharaṇa pūjā karme kiri kira oṃ sarba tathāgata āloka jvala spharaṇa pūjā karme bhara bhara oṃ sarba tathāgata gandha samudrā spharaṇa pūjā karma kuru kuru

The fragrant lady, the lady endowed with the limbs of great awakening, the lady endowed with eyes, and the lady endowed with scent: these are the action offering of all the tathāgatas.

Then the Vajra Activity, the action maṇḍala for making offering to all the tathāgatas without exception or remainder, is explained.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime action maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is also known as Vajra Activity.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Set out the bodies of the buddhas;
In the manner of Vajrasattva and the rest,
Draw the goddesses together with their mudrās.

Then this extensive rite of leading disciples into this action maṇḍala, Vajra Activity, and so forth is explained. First one should lead them in, in the manner of the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala. Having led them in, one should instruct them thus: "This is the samaya of offering to all the tathāgatas; therefore, each and every day, perform these sixteen offerings as best you can." Then one removes the face covering, shows them the action maṇḍala, and gives the symbols of all of them into their two hands. Then, since even all the tathāgatas make offering to such a one, what need is there to speak of others?

Then one should train in the wisdom of the offering mudrās that accomplish the great awakening mind.

Through firmly generating the awakening mind,
Thinking, "I am the Buddha,"
I, as joy, make offering,
And attain even the bliss of the buddhas.
Through firmly generating the awakening mind,
Thinking, "I am the Buddha,"
If one makes offering with offerings such as garlands,
One is thereby empowered as well.
Through firmly generating the awakening mind,
Thinking, "I am the Buddha,"
When I make offering with sweet songs,
That offering becomes delight.
Through firmly generating the awakening mind,
Thinking, "I am the Buddha,"
When I make offering with the offering of dance,
The buddhas, too, will make offering to me.

Here the heart mantras are these: buddha ātmako'taṃ buddha abhiṣiñcami buddha stuti karomi buddha pūjā karomi

Then one should train in the wisdom of the mudrās of offering to all the buddhas.

Prostrating in the supreme manner
Of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
If one likewise makes offering to all the buddhas,
One becomes forever worthy of homage.
All the buddhas, of great merit,
Their body, speech, and mind born of vajra:
If one makes offering to them by rejoicing,
One will swiftly attain buddhahood.
With all the offerings, such as offering oneself
As divine substance of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,
If one makes offering to the buddhas,
One also becomes an object of offering.
All the accumulations of virtue
Of the vajra of body, speech, and mind,

Through the offering of complete dedication,
Make one equal to all the buddhas.

Here the heart mantras are these: praṇāmāmi anumode buddha pūjā pañcama

Then one should train in the wisdom of the mudrās of Dharma offering.

Phenomena are luminous by their intrinsic nature as well;
By their essential nature they are pure from the very beginning.
By making offering with those dharmas,
One will attain the bliss of joy.
Of all phenomena gathered together,
The syllable a is declared to be the gateway.
Through that Dharma mudrā,
All of one's suffering is cut off.
Here the cause of all phenomena
Is the Tathāgata.
Through the offering of the wheel of the sublime Dharma,
By making offering, one will come to expound the Dharma.
All phenomena, by their intrinsic nature,
Are said to be like melodious sounds;
If one makes offering with those Dharma offerings,
One also attains the speech of the Buddha.

Here their heart mantras are these: sarva śuddha samanta bhadra dharma cakra niṣpra pañca

Then one should train in the wisdom of the mudrās of the offering of meditative absorption.

The subtle particles of one's own
Vajra of body, speech, and mind:
If one meditates on them as the Vajradhātu,
One swiftly attains the vajra nature.
The subtle particles of one's own
Vajra of body, speech, and mind:
If one meditates on them as all the buddhas,
One swiftly achieves the Dharma body.
The subtle particles of one's own
Vajra of body, speech, and mind:

If one meditates on them as Vajrasattva,
One becomes equal to Vajrasattva.
The subtle particles of one's own
Vajra of body, speech, and mind:
If one meditates on them as the body of the Buddha,
One becomes a perfectly awakened buddha.

Here their heart mantras are these: vajra kāya dharma kāya satva kāya buddha kāya

Then one should train in the wisdom of the mudrās of secret offering.

The offering of the bliss
Of embracing the Self-Arisen One with the whole body:
If one presents it, one will swiftly
Become like Vajrasattva.
The bliss of sublime holding
In the union of intense passion:
If it is presented to the buddhas,
One becomes like Vajraratna.
The supreme bliss of union
Brought about through great delight and blissful passion:
If it is presented to the buddhas,
One becomes like Vajradharma.
The bliss of complete union
In the joining of the two organs:
By presenting it as an offering,
One becomes like Vajrakarma.

Their secret heart mantras are these: rati vajra rāga vajra prati vajra karma vajra

Then one should train in the wisdom mudrā of the great mudrā of the activity of offering of all the tathāgatas:

Joining them at the heart, the sides, and the back,
And likewise at the forehead and so on,
The mouth, the ears, and the nape of the neck,
One places them at the crown, the shoulders, and the waist.

One should train in the wisdom of the samaya offering mudrās of all the tathāgatas:

In the manner of the great mudrā,
Make the vajra binding firm,
Place it in the manner of the sites, at the heart and so on,
And then make offering to the Victors.

Then one should train in the wisdom of the Dharma mudrās of offering to all the tathāgatas: oṃ kra sayya sā dṛ raṃ kraṃ khaṃ śaṃ ha hūṃ hūṃ śa no śīsāṃ

To summarize the karma mudrās,
The karma mudrā is to be made twofold.

From the Great Vehicle Realization of All the Tathāgatas, the extensive maṇḍala rite of the great ritual king, called Vajrakarma, is complete.

Then the Blessed One Vairocana, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, generated the family of all the tathāgatas, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of the family of all the tathāgatas, he spoke this heart mantra of the mudrā of all the tathāgatas: oṃ sarva tathāgata muṣṭi vaṃ

Then, again, the Tathāgata Akṣobhya, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, generated the family of all the tathāgatas, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of the family of all the tathāgatas, he spoke this heart mantra of the mudrā of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra satva muṣṭi a

Then the Tathāgata Ratnasaṃbhava, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, generated the family of all the tathāgatas, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of the family of all the tathāgatas, he spoke this heart mantra of the mudrā of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra ratna muṣṭi trāṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amitāyus, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, generated the family of all the tathāgatas, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of all the tathāgatas, he spoke this heart mantra of the mudrā of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra dharma muṣṭi khaṃ

Then the Tathāgata Amoghasiddhi, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, generated the family of all the tathāgatas, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of all the tathāgatas, he spoke this heart mantra of the mudrā of all the tathāgatas: oṃ vajra karma muṣṭi haṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, through his own blessing, generated the family of all the tathāgatas of the Blessed One Vairocana, and in order to gather all the accomplishments of this extensive rite of the great ritual king of the family of all the tathāgatas, he taught this maṇḍala of the four mudrās, called Vajrasiddhi.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime mudrā maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is also known as Vajrasiddhi.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
The wise should fully bestow it.
First set down the image of the Buddha,
And then draw the four mudrās as well.
In the center of the moon disks,
Draw the vajra mudrā and the others.

Then, having performed in full the rites of summoning and the rest in this mudrā maṇḍala of Vajrasiddhi, one should likewise lead the disciple in and say this: You must not show this secret chapter to anyone at all. Why is that? Because there are also beings, people who hold wrong views and commit evil deeds.

There are also beings of little diligence, without application, and who do not know how to draw, and because of their little diligence they do not remain in the great maṇḍalas of the families of all the tathāgatas, such as the Vajradhātu. For their sake, this mudrā maṇḍala of Vajrasiddhi, which has become the samaya of the maṇḍalas of the families of all the tathāgatas, has been blessed to protect completely the realms of beings without exception, to bring them to experience every benefit, happiness, and mental joy, up to the supreme vajra accomplishment of all the tathāgatas. Do not lack trust and faith in these secret samaya mudrās of the families of all the tathāgatas, lest you fall into the realms of hell beings, animals, or hungry ghosts, or die an untimely death without having abandoned unhappiness.

Having charged the disciple thus, one removes the covering from the face and shows the maṇḍala.

Then one recites this samaya of the mudrās of all the tathāgatas:

Whatever great being it may be,
Whatever mudrā is bound,
For the sake of the heart mantra of recitation,
One should meditate on oneself as that one.
Through the way of this wisdom,
Just as Vajrapāṇi has taught,
All the mudrās of the great beings
Will be accomplished by all of them.

Then the secret of all the mudrās should be declared:

Having released one's own faculty,
One should hold it with the vajra binding.
Whatever mudrā one touches with it,
Immediately comes under one's power.

Then the nature of reality of all the mudrās should be declared:

Joining them in the manner of the subtle vajra,
One should bind the wisdom mudrā.
Through the way of this rite,
The wisdom mudrā comes under one's power.

Then the activity of all the mudrās should be declared:

Song and dance, food and dance,
The pleasures of enjoyment and the rest:
If one presents them to the buddhas,
The karma mudrā comes under one's power.

Then one should train in the wisdom of the secret mudrās of accomplishment in all the maṇḍalas:

Having oneself made the sign stable,
One dwells upon a cloth that has become white.
Blessing the sign as a stūpa,
One meditates on oneself as the Vajradhātu.
Making the vajra binding firm,
One sets the middle fingers side by side like a sprout,
And raises the little fingers and the tips of the index fingers:
This is the samaya of the supreme samaya.
In the manner of the subtle vajra,

One meditates in perfect equipoise.
This is the maṇḍala of the subtle vajra,
The way by which samādhi comes under one's power.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
One holds the two firmly as a vajra;
Crossing the index fingers and the little fingers
Is the maṇḍala of supreme vajra accomplishment.

Then, having trained in the four great mudrā bindings of Sattvavajra and the rest, one should perform the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu just as it is. Just as with the four-mudrā maṇḍala of Vajrasiddhi, if one draws all the maṇḍalas, such as the maṇḍala of Akṣobhya, in the manner of a four-mudrā maṇḍala, each with its own mudrās, all accomplishments will be achieved. Likewise, if one draws them on cloth, on walls, in the sky, or in any place at all, all accomplishments will be achieved.

Counting from the examination of the maṇḍala, some succeed as they wish at that very time in the maṇḍala; some, beginning from then, within one day and night; some within four days; some within sixteen days; and some, even those who have committed the five acts of immediate retribution, accomplishing every aim with ease, just as they wish, and experiencing the bliss of every joy, dance, food, and enjoyment, attain the supreme within one year. Thus spoke the Blessed One.

Then again the Blessed One Vairocana entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called the samaya vajra of the supreme accomplishment of all the tathāgatas, and this heart mantra of all the tathāgatas, called the Great Vehicle Realization of All the Tathāgatas, came forth from his own heart: vajra satva

Then the Blessed One, the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, taught this maṇḍala of the full perfection of the Great Vehicle, in order to protect completely the realms of all beings, without exception and with none left out, to bring them to experience every benefit, happiness, and mental joy, up to bringing about the supreme accomplishment of all the tathāgatas.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime maṇḍala of the sattva.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is also called Vajrasattva.

In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
One should lay down the lines of the outer tier of the maṇḍala.
In the center of the moon disk,
One should place Vajrasattva.

Then, having performed the summoning, the bringing in, and the rest just as they should be done, one should generate the wisdom that attains the accomplishment of all the tathāgatas. One should then charge the disciple, saying: Do not speak of this secret to anyone at all who has not seen the samaya and has not understood it, lest you fall into all the lower realms, or die an untimely death through not having abandoned unhappiness.

Then one should train in the wisdom that accomplishes the supreme accomplishment of Vajrasattva:

Seated upon the full moon,
Having taken up the great mudrā,
If one meditates on oneself as Vajrasattva,
One will swiftly attain accomplishment.

Then one should train in the wisdom of the secret samaya of all the maṇḍalas:

There is no other evil in the three realms
Like being parted from passion.
Therefore you, too,
Must never be parted from desire's passion.

mahā samaya hana phaṭ

Then one gives this heart mantra of the oath. Then, in the extensive rites of the maṇḍalas of all the tathāgatas, one should bestow the vow of samaya. Then one should train in binding the four, beginning with the great mudrā of Vajrasattva. The accomplishments are likewise. Having performed the rite as one wishes on drawings and the like, and on all cast images as well, all accomplishments will likewise be achieved. It should also be done just as the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu is performed.

Then again all the tathāgatas gathered together as one and praised the Blessed One, lord of all the tathāgatas, the great awakening mind, Vajrasattva, the great Vajrapāṇi, with this heart mantra of vajra delight:

oṃ Vajrasattva, you are excellent!
Excellent are you, Jewel Vajra!

You are Vajradharma;
Vajrakarma, you are excellent!
The unsurpassed vajra vehicle,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
This sūtra, the compendium of the manifest Great Vehicle,
Has been well taught.
The characteristics of Vajrasattva, too,
Become the supreme of all accomplishments.
If one practices having been purified,
One attains buddhahood itself with ease.
The union of Vajradharma
Is blissful with the bliss of all desires;
Because it is accomplished in this very life,
Its bliss is inexhaustible and will not cease.

From the Compendium of the Reality of All the Tathāgatas, the first section of the great ritual king called the Great Vehicle Realization of All the Tathāgatas is complete.

The fourth fascicle.

Then again the blessed tathāgatas all gathered together as one and petitioned the Blessed One, lord of all the tathāgatas, who turns the great wheel, with these hundred and eight names:

The true limit, the way of greatness,

Knower of all as supreme and as equality,

Tamer who says vajra hūṃ,
Vajraviśva, supreme vajra,
Vajrapāṇi, homage to you!
Homage, offering, and praise,
And service have been rendered by the tathāgatas.
Because your vajra mind is steadfast,
You are called Vajrasattva.
Perfect awakening depends on you;
You are the father of the All-Seeing One;
The tathāgatas who have come and who are yet to come
Have been accomplished by you.
Whoever praises with this king of praises
With intense devotion,
Whoever praises it by singing it as a song,
Will become like Vajradhara.
O protector who holds sway over all the buddhas,
We beseech you:
For the sake of accomplishing the aims of all beings,
Please generate your own family.

Then Vajrapāṇi, lord of all the tathāgatas, having heard the words of petition of all the tathāgatas, placed the vajra at his own heart, called all those tathāgatas, and spoke thus: "Blessed tathāgatas, I cannot."

All the tathāgatas said, "Why not?"

Vajradhara said, "Blessed Ones, there are wicked beings such as Maheśvara (Śiva), whom even all the tathāgatas do not set about taming by peaceful means. How am I to accomplish this with them?"

Then the Blessed One Vairocana, through the blessing of all the tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called the vajra of the wisdom of the great means of all the tathāgatas. As soon as he had entered into equipoise, all the tathāgatas streamed out, equal in number to the most subtle particles of the whole expanse of space, and gathered together once more in the peaked pavilion made of vajra, gems, and jewels on the summit of Mount Meru, its vajra peak. Focusing on equality, all the tathāgatas entered the śrīvatsa at the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana.

Then again the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, blessed himself as the mind of all the tathāgatas. In order, through the vajra equality of all the tathāgatas, to protect completely the realms of beings without exception and with none left out, to accomplish every benefit and supreme happiness, and to tame all the wicked, he focused on the wisdom of the meditative absorption of the means of the great compassion of all the tathāgatas, and entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called the samaya vajra of the great wrathful one, the means of the great compassion of all the tathāgatas. As soon as he had entered into equipoise, this heart mantra of all the tathāgatas, called the vajra samaya of all the tathāgatas, came forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas: hūṃ

Then, as soon as it had come forth, from the vajra at the heart of Vajrapāṇi there came forth the form of Vajrapāṇi, the Blessed One Vajradhara himself: the essence of all-blazing fire, wrathfully scowling, his brows knitted and his forehead furrowed, his fangs bared and his teeth clenched, holding in his hands weapons blazing with vajra flames, such as the vajra, the hook, the sword, and the noose, and wearing the garb of many colors and ornaments. Having tamed all the utterly wicked in all the world systems, he took his seat on a moon disk on every side of the Blessed One Vairocana, in the manner of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! I am the one
Endowed with the great means that tames through means:
Because it is a means of taming beings,
I have become a stainless wrathful one.

Then the Tathāgata Vairocana, focusing on the nature of reality, free of elaboration, of all the tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called the vajra blessing of the vajra samaya of the great wrathful one of all the tathāgatas, and spoke this supreme knowledge mantra, the heart of all the tathāgatas, called the vajra hūṃ of all the tathāgatas: oṃ sumbha ni sumbha hūṃ gṛ hṇa gṛhṇa hūṃ gṛhṇāpaya gṛhṇāpaya hūṃ ānaya hoḥ bhagavāṃ vajra hūṃ phaṭ

Then, as soon as it had come forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas, it became the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi. Having come forth, in all the clouds of the boundless ocean of world systems he blessed all the tathāgatas together with their maṇḍalas of bodhisattva retinues, invited them, brought them into the great maṇḍala of the vajra samaya, and bound them with the samaya. Then they gathered together as one again, became the body of Vajracaṇḍa, took their place at the heart of the Blessed One Vairocana, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! This awakening mind
Is all-good and free of evil;
Because it is for the sake of taming beings,
Even wrath becomes delightful.

Then that body of Vajracaṇḍa descended from the heart of the Blessed One and stayed upon a moon disk before all the tathāgatas, and remained there, again awaiting command.

Then the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the meditative absorption called the vajra that summons through the samaya of all the tathāgatas, and this heart mantra of all the tathāgatas, called the samaya hook of all the tathāgatas, came forth from his own heart: hūṃ ḍakki jaḥ

Then, as soon as it had come forth, in all the clouds of the boundless ocean of world systems, all the lords of the three worlds, Maheśvara and the rest, however many there were, without exception and with none left out, surrounded by their hosts dwelling in all the worlds, were summoned by the samaya vajra hook of all the tathāgatas. They came to where the peaked pavilion made of vajra, gems, and jewels stood on the summit of Mount Meru, and took their places all around the Blessed One's peaked pavilion made of vajra, gems, and jewels.

Then Vajrapāṇi took the vajra from his own heart, and, brandishing it, he looked upon the circle of the three worlds, all those of the three realms however many there were, and declared: "Friends, enter the teaching of all the tathāgatas, and listen also to my command."

Then they said, "How should we practice?"

The Blessed One Vajrapāṇi said:

"Practice going for refuge
To the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha.
In order to attain all-knowing wisdom,
Friends, you must practice."

Then in this world system the Great God (Śiva), lord of all the three worlds, who had become lord of all the three worlds, grew arrogant, displayed great wrath, and spoke thus: "Listen, yakṣa! I am the chief of all the three worlds, Maheśvara, the creator and destroyer, lord of all bhūtas, the great god even of gods. Why should I listen to the words of you, a yakṣa?"

Then again Vajrapāṇi, brandishing the vajra, declared: "You wicked being, swiftly enter the maṇḍala and abide properly in my samaya!"

Then the great god of gods said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, who is this being who speaks thus to Īśvara?"

Then the Blessed One called all the hosts of the three worlds, Maheśvara and the rest, and spoke thus:

"Friends, go for refuge to the Three Jewels and practice the samaya and the vow. This Vajrapāṇi is a great bodhisattva who is a fierce, savage, wrathful yakṣa. Beware, lest he destroy all these three realms with his blazing vajra."

Then Maheśvara, who had become the lord of all the three worlds, together with his great retinue, by the power of his own knowledge, in order to frighten the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, sent forth a great blazing form, utterly terrifying, as a great and furious wrathful one, and displaying great savagery with peals of laughter like the neighing of horses, he spoke thus: "Listen! I am the lord of all the three worlds. Why do you give orders to me?"

Then Vajrapāṇi, proudly brandishing the vajra and smiling, spoke thus: "Listen, you of foul body, eater of human flesh, who eats the ashes of burned corpses as food and makes your food, your bed, and your clothing from them as well: do as I command!"

Then the Great God Maheśvara blessed all the three worlds and the realms of space to be overwhelmed by wrath, by great wrath, and spoke thus: "You too, listen to his command and take up the samaya!"

Then Vajrapāṇi, the great king of the wrathful ones, said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, this god called the Great God, arrogant through the power of his own knowledge and by the might of Maheśvara, will not bow to the teaching of all the tathāgatas. What is fitting to do with him?"

Then the Blessed One called to mind the great vajra samaya that had come forth from the heart of all the tathāgatas: oṃ ni sumbha vajra hūṃ phaṭ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi pronounced this vajra heart mantra: hūṃ

Then, as soon as he had pronounced it, all the lords of the three worlds, the Great God and the rest, who had gathered from all the three realms, fell flat on their faces, uttering cries of distress, and went for refuge to the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi. The god called the Great God fell to the ground, lost consciousness, and died.

Then the Blessed One, knowing full well, said to the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, "Vajrapāṇi, grant refuge to this entire circle of the three worlds, and do not kill them."

Then Vajrapāṇi, the great king of the wrathful ones, having heard what the Blessed One had said, called all the gods and spoke thus: "If you want your lives, go for refuge to the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha, and listen also to my command."

Then they said, "We go for refuge to the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha, together with the hosts of the mudrās. But we do not understand the command that you have taught."

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, called them and declared: "Listen, gods! This is the lord of us and of all the tathāgatas, the father of all the tathāgatas, the one who carries out the command of all the tathāgatas, the eldest son of all the tathāgatas: the Blessed One, the bodhisattva, the great being Samantabhadra. In order to accomplish the aim of taming all beings, he has been empowered as the great king of the wrathful ones. Why is that? Because among you too there are wicked beings, such as the Great God, and since even all the tathāgatas, acting peacefully, cannot turn them back from evil, he has been blessed in order to subdue those evil beings. Therefore you must abide in his samaya." So he declared.

They said, "Blessed One, please protect us from losing our lives. We too will do as you have commanded."

The Blessed One declared, "Listen, friends! Go for refuge to this very one. It is this one who protects you completely, and no other."

Then those lords of the three states of existence, gathered from all the three realms, looked over toward where the Blessed One Vajradhara was, and with one voice raised a great cry of distress and said, "Blessed One, please protect us completely from this suffering of death! Sugata, please protect us completely!"

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi called those gods and the rest and declared: "Listen, you savage ones! Enter my teaching, lest this blazing vajra blaze up all at once and reduce you all to ashes."

They said, "You are the Blessed One Samantabhadra, the awakening of mind of all the tathāgatas, peaceful and disciplined, wishing to benefit all beings, granting fearlessness to all beings. Why then would the Blessed One burn us?"

Then Vajrapāṇi, the great king of the wrathful ones, declared to them: "Listen, friends! Because I carry out the command of all the tathāgatas, I am Samantabhadra. In order to purify the evil minds of beings like you, of savage disposition, if you do not abide in my samaya, I shall destroy you."

They said, "We shall do so."

Then Vajrapāṇi, the great king of the wrathful ones, in order to revive and raise up the other gods, apart from Maheśvara, spoke this heart mantra of all the tathāgatas called the vajra raising: oṃ vajrottiṣṭha

Then, as soon as he had spoken it, all those lords of the three states of existence gathered from the three realms, together with their retinues, apart from Maheśvara, recovered their minds from their swoon and breathed again. Experiencing the bliss of the gods, free of fear, dread, and bristling hair, they looked at the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi and rose up.

Then the Blessed One said to the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, "Great being, if this Great God, lord of the gods, is not raised up, his life will be wasted, and what good is that? If he is revived, he too will become a holy being."

Then Vajrapāṇi, thinking, "I shall do so," spoke this heart mantra for reviving the dead: vajra āyuḥ

As soon as he had spoken it, the Great God, lord of the gods, was revived from death; but though he wished to rise, he was unable to rise. Then he said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, are we to be tamed in such a way?"

The Blessed One said, "Since you will not consent to obey the command of this great being, this is precisely the taming for you, is it not? So it is."

Maheśvara said, "Blessed One, will you not act to protect me from that ferocious being?"

The Blessed One said, "I cannot protect you from him."

He asked, "Why is that?"

He said, "Because he is the lord of all the tathāgatas."

He said, "I do not understand the meaning of what the Blessed One has said. Why? Since I know of no lord of the three realms other than the tathāgatas, who is this?"

Then the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, called again to the Great God and said, "O ferocious being, will you not obey my command?"

Then the Great God, hearing the words of Vajrasattva, became agitated and furious, and even while lying felled like that, he displayed a form of great terror and said, "I can bear to die, but I will not obey your word."

Then the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi displayed intense wrath, and from the soles of his own feet there emerged this attendant: oṃ patakariṣaṇa vajra hūṃ

Then from the soles of the Blessed One's feet there emerged the all-blazing vajra essence, frowning in wrath, its fangs bared, a great-faced vajra attendant, and it remained before the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, receiving his commands.

Then Vajrapāṇi, in order to purify Maheśvara, said this: oṃ patakariṣaṇa vajra hūṃ oṃ patakariśa sarva vajradhar anucarakata vajra hūṃ jaḥ

When he had said this, the Great God, together with the goddess Umā, was dragged out naked with his feet turned upward, while all the people laughed. The attendant who drags by the feet hauled them in and set them before the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, at his feet.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, what shall I do with this ferocious being and his followers?"

The Blessed One said: oṃ vajrakramaho

When he had said this, the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi pressed down the Great God with his left foot and pressed down upon the goddess Umā with his right foot, and spoke this heart mantra of his own: oṃ vajra āveśa hana pataṃ traṭ

As soon as he had spoken it, the Great God was possessed, and with his own thousand hands he beat his own thousand faces. Then, outside the tiered pavilion of the vajra, jewel and gem peak, built of vajras, jewels and gems, all the beings of the three states of existence raised a great cry: "That great being has tamed our lord!"

Then the Blessed One, moved by great compassion for the Great God, spoke this heart of loving-kindness of all the buddhas: oṃ buddha maitri vajra rakṣa haṃ

As soon as he had spoken it, all the suffering that had befallen the Great God was stilled. Then again, through the touch of the soles of Vajrapāṇi's feet, he attained the unsurpassed empowerment of accomplishment, the samādhis, the liberations, the dhāraṇīs, the wisdoms and the superknowledges, and so on, up to the point of being accomplished as a tathāgata. Then the Great God, touched by the soles of the feet of the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, experienced the bliss of the samādhi, dhāraṇī and liberation of all the tathāgatas. He offered up the body of the Great God at the feet of Vajrapāṇi, and below, beyond as many world systems as there are atoms in world systems as numerous as the grains of sand in thirty-two Ganges rivers, in the world system called Bhasmacchannā, Covered with Ash, he was born as the tathāgata named Bhasmeśvaranirghoṣa, Voice of the Lord of Ash.

Then from the body of the Great God came forth this inspired utterance:
How wonderful! The unsurpassed buddha wisdom
Of all the buddhas,
Having pressed one down with a host of syllables,
Sets one in nirvāṇa.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi said to all the others, Mahābala and the rest, the lords of the three worlds, "Friends, enter this great maṇḍala of the vajra samaya of all the tathāgatas! And once you have entered, keep the samaya of all the tathāgatas!"

They replied, "We shall do just as you command."

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi summoned those who had gathered from the three states of existence and said, "Friends, take up also the going for refuge to the Three, the training, the samaya and the vow, and abide in my samaya as well!"

They said, "If that is how it is, we have not understood the Blessed One's command and samaya."

Then Vajrapāṇi gave them this samaya of his own:
Having generated the awakening mind
In due order, after that
One should strive, as far as one is able,
In deep meditative equipoise for great awakening.

Then the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi had those gods and the others bind the mudrā of the great samaya of entry and so forth, and had them bind it with this heart mantra of the mudrā of the great samaya:

oṃ vajra samaya gṛhṇa stvaṃ bandha samya vajra satva samaya manusmara sarva tathāgata samaya stvaṃ dṛḍho me bhava sthiro me bhava āhāryo me bhava apratihāryo me bhava sarva karma su ca me cittaṃ śreyaḥ kuru hūṃ ha ha ha ha hoḥ

As soon as he had spoken it, the mudrā of Vajracaṇḍa Tirintiri descended into the hands of all the beings of the three states of existence of the three realms who had gathered there, and they were bound fast. Then Vajrapāṇi led them in according to the rite, showed them all the great maṇḍalas in their proper order, and empowered them with the empowerment of the vajra jewel. He also placed vajra emblems in their hands and empowered them with the empowerment of vajra names, and then all the tathāgatas set them to work for the benefit of sentient beings.

Then there were the lords of the three worlds, namely these. Maheśvara became Krodhavajra, Vajra of Wrath. Mahābala became Māyāvajra, Vajra of Illusion. Karṇika, the Youth of Sound, became Vajraghaṇṭa, Vajra Bell. Brahmā became Maunavajra, Vajra of the Sage. Indra became Vajrāyudha, Vajra Weapon. These and the others were empowered under the name of vidyārājas, kings of knowledge.

Then what was bestowed on all the lords of the gods who move in the atmosphere was this. The Sun became Vajrakuṇḍalī, the Coiled Vajra. The Moon became Vajraprabha, Vajra Light. The Lord of the Great Staff became Vajradaṇḍa, Vajra Staff. Piṅgala became Vajrapiṅgala. These and the others were empowered under the name of Vajracaṇḍas.

Then what was bestowed on all the lords of the earth's surface was this. Koṣapāla, Guardian of the Treasury, became Vajra Hammer. Agni became Vajrānala, Vajra Fire. Vāyu became Vajrānila, Vajra Wind. Kubera became Vajrabhairava, Vajra Terror. These and the others were empowered under the name of vajra messengers.

Then what was bestowed on all the lords, the gods beneath the earth, was this. Varāha, the Boar, became Vajrāṅkuśa, Vajra Hook. Yama became Vajrakāla, Vajra Time. Earth-Crest became Vajravināyaka, Vajra Lord of Obstructors. Varuṇa became Nāgavajra, Nāga Vajra. These and the others were empowered under the name of vajra servants.

Then all the goddesses of the lords of the three worlds were empowered with the empowerment of the vajra jewel. Their own emblems were blessed as vajras, they were empowered with the empowerment of vajra names, and they were set to work by all the tathāgatas for the benefit of sentient beings, namely as follows. Umā became Krodhavajrā, Wrathful Vajra Lady. The Golden Lady became Vajra Gold. She of the Six became Vajrakumārī, Vajra Maiden. Brahmāṇī became Vajraśāntā, Peaceful Vajra Lady. Indrāṇī became Vajramuṣṭi, Vajra Fist Lady. These and the others were empowered as vajra queens.

Then what was bestowed on all the women who move in the sky was this. Amṛtā, the Deathless, became Vajrāmṛtā, Deathless Vajra Lady. Rohiṇa became Vajra Radiance. Daṇḍadhāriṇī, Holder of the Staff, became Supreme Vajra Staff Lady. Jātāpahāriṇī, Stealer of Births, became Vajramekhalā, Vajra Girdle Lady. These and the others were empowered under the name of wrathful women.

Then what was bestowed on all the women who move in the atmosphere was this. The Slayer became Vajra Seizer. The Eater became Vajra Deep Lady. The Clothed One became Vajra Clothed Lady. Joy became Vajrahāsa. These and the others were empowered as mistresses of the hosts.

Then what was bestowed on all the women who move on the earth was this. Śivā became Vajradūtī, Vajra Messenger Woman. Vāyavī became Vajravegā, Swift Vajra Lady. Āgneyī became Vajrajvālā, Blazing Vajra Lady. Kauberī became Vajra Attendant Lady. These and the others were empowered as vajra messenger women.

Then what was bestowed on all the women who dwell beneath the earth was this. Vārāhī, the Sow, became Vajramukhī, Vajra Mouth. Cāmuṇḍī became Vajrakālī, Vajra Time Lady. Great Light became Vajra Putrid Lady. Vāruṇī became Vajramakarī, Vajra Sea-Monster Lady. These and the others were empowered as vajra maidservants.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi generated the wisdoms of the buddhas in all those who had entered, taught them all the bindings of the mudrās, and gave them this heart mantra of the oath of the vajra samaya:

This vajra is the great vajra,
Blessed by all the buddhas.
If you transgress this samaya,
It will swiftly burn your families to ash.
oṃ hana samaya hūṃ phaḍ

Then he gave this mudrā for seizing the heart:

Binding the two vajra mudrās,
And binding the index fingers as hooks,
Twist them, and twist them back again.
Before whoever thinks of an aim that he needs,
You must be present
So that what is needed is accomplished.
Otherwise that samaya
Will surely bring your lives to ruin.
Binding the vajra bond tightly,
Bend the index fingers and press them down firmly;
Joining the tips of both thumbs,
Press both middle fingers down firmly.
This is the vajra vidyādhara.
If anyone transgresses
The bound mudrā of samaya,
This samaya will kill you.
Binding the little fingers
Of both vajra mudrās,
Knot the index fingers behind the fingers,
Turn it back and place it on the head.
This is the samaya of the great-souled one.

Having bound the vajra vidyādhara,
Whoever one looks at in wrath
Will stand before one just so.
With the vajra of the clasped vajra,
Binding the protection fast and pressing it down:
That is the samaya of protection,
Which protects all sentient beings.

In order to protect someone,
Having bound the wrathful one,
You are set to remain at the back
Of whichever being is to be guarded.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
Bind the index finger of the left vajra
With the little finger;
Twist it, twist it again, and release the net.
Having joined that samaya,
Which is wrathful equipoise,
You shall be present before him
For the supreme of all siddhis.
In the joined vajra binding,
Join both index fingers tightly;
Binding the two tips of thumb and middle finger
Into the vajra mudrā,
Turn it back and place it on the forehead.
If you wish to live,
Before whoever summons you
Always be present.

Then this is the heart mantra for holding the samaya of the samaya mudrā that holds the hearts of all the three worlds without exception: oṃ balitod balita vajra ākarṣaya hūṃ ja ja

This is the heart mantra for summoning the gods with the mudrā of the twisting vajra.
oṃ vajra agradhipaya samaye hūṃ This is for those who move in the atmosphere.
oṃ vajra māla agra vaṃ This is for the garland-bearers.
oṃ vajra bandha haṃ This is for those who move on the earth.

oṃ vajra pātāla bhañja bhañja hūṃ phaṭ This is for those who dwell beneath the earth.
oṃ heruka vajra samaya sarva duṣṭa samaya mudrā bhañjaka hūṃ phaḍ This is for the women.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, since all the tathāgatas have empowered me as the tamer of the ferocious, please explain well how I should deal with all those ferocious ones of the bound maṇḍalas."

When the Blessed One had heard this, he said: oṃ vajra sumbhani sumbha hūṃ phaṭ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, in order to protect all sentient beings, spoke this heart mantra for summoning all the maṇḍalas: oṃ vajra samya ākarṣaya sarva maṇḍala vajradhāra satya mātikrama hūṃ phaṭ
Binding both with vajra hooks,
Circle them around the heart.
The two index fingers as hooks
Are the supreme summoning of the outer maṇḍalas.

As soon as he had explained this, all the maṇḍalas settled, encircling the outside of the summit of Mount Meru. Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi called all those assembled maṇḍalas and said, "O friends, give up killing and devote yourselves to taking up the samaya."

Then those beings of the samaya of the outer maṇḍala said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, we are ferocious beings who eat flesh, and our life depends on stealing vitality. Blessed One, tell us how we are to live."

Then the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this Ferocious Vajracaṇḍa: oṃ duṣṭa vajra krodha hana daha paca vidhvanasya vikari sarva duṣṭa samaya mudrā maṇḍal bhañja bhañja mardha mardha khāda khāda bar mantra vajra samaya hūṃ phaṭ
The vajra wrathful index fingers, properly
Bringing the nails together and twining them,
And joining the two tips tightly:
That mudrā crushes the ferocious.

As soon as he had spoken it, all the ferocious maṇḍalas, gathered into one, were tormented and torn apart by many, and their bound samaya mudrās were torn apart. Those beings of the ferocious samaya also burned and were thoroughly cooked, so that they raised great cries and sounds of distress, and, joining their palms toward where the Blessed One, the great Vajradhara, was, they said, "Blessed One, please protect us, so that we are not parted from our lives."

Then Vajrapāṇi again said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, please tell me what I should do with those ferocious maṇḍalas."

Then the Blessed One said: oṃ nisumbha hana daha paca gṛhṇa bandha hūṃ phaṭ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this unbearable Vajracaṇḍa: oṃ mahā vajra khura krodha vataya sarva duṣṭa maṇḍalaṃ vināśaya sarva duṣṭa samyaṃ bhigakira vidhvansaya sphoṭaya bhañjaya sarva duṣṭa samaya mudrā bandha gṛhṇa hana daha paca sarva duṣṭa samaya satvaṃ vajra samaya hūṃ phaṭ

As soon as he had spoken it, all the ferocious samayas, mudrās and maṇḍalas gathered into one and sank into the great ocean.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi again said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, since the Blessed One has commanded me, 'Tame all the ferocious ones,' what am I to do with all those grahas, the sorceresses, the grahas and the rest?"

Then the Blessed One said: oṃ hana hana vajra hūṃ phaṭ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this heart mantra for summoning all the ferocious grahas, the sorceresses and the rest: oṃ vajra ākarṣaya śīghraṃ sarva duṣṭa grahaṃ vajradhara satvana hūṃ ja

As soon as he had spoken it, all the ferocious grahas, the sorceresses and the rest, settled, encircling the outside of the summit of Mount Meru. Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi called all the ferocious grahas, the sorceresses and the rest, and said, "O sirs, take up the training of giving up killing, and the samaya and the vow! Otherwise the vajra streaming with light will blaze up as one, and your families will surely be burned up without remainder!"

Then all the ferocious grahas, the sorceresses and the rest, joined their palms toward where the Blessed One was and said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, we are eaters of flesh. Please tell us what we are to do."

Then the Blessed One said to Vajrapāṇi, "Vajrapāṇi, generate great compassion for those beings and give them a means."

Then the great Vajrapāṇi spoke this mudrā and heart mantra for knowing the signs of death of all sentient beings: oṃ vajra pratigṛhṇa hṛdaya mākarṣaya yaddyayaṃ mato māmaddāradhenmiyate tadyasya hṛdayaṃ niskramitu samaya hūṃ jaḥ

Then the binding of its mudrā is explained.

At the heart, the two vajra fists are bound together very firmly;
then with the tips of the vajra index fingers one should rub one's own armpits.

"With that mudrā, you are to eat the heart-essence of all sentient beings."

Then all the ferocious grahas, the sorceresses and the rest, hearing that joyful word, leapt and bounded about and went off to their own abodes.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi again said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, since all the Tathāgatas have declared that the taming of the wicked is mine to do, Blessed One, please tell me what I am to do about these illnesses, fevers and the rest."

Then the Blessed One said, oṃ hūṃ phaṭ.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke the heart mantra for summoning the illnesses, fevers and the rest: oṃ vajra samaya ānaya sarva duṣṭa jvara dhani nāśaya hūṃ phaṭ

As soon as he had spoken it, all the illnesses, fevers and the rest gathered round outside the summit of Mount Meru and stayed there. Then Vajrapāṇi called the illnesses, fevers and the rest and spoke these words: "O good sirs, take up the vow that holds to the training of refraining from killing sentient beings."

They replied, "Blessed One, we live by stealing the vital luster of sentient beings. Blessed One, please tell us properly what we are to do."

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this heart mantra of the wisdom mudrā by which one's own actions become purified: oṃ vajra karma viśodhaya sarva āparṇāni buddha sattyena samaya hūṃ

Then the binding of the mudrā is explained.

Firmly joining the vajra palms,
bending both index fingers,
and placing the thumbs together, even,
one presses: this is the stealer of sin.

"When one whom any of the illnesses, fevers and the rest have struck performs the rite and shows that mudrā, you must let him go; otherwise you will be parted from your lives."

Then they said, "We shall do so," and went back.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi said to all the Tathāgatas, "Blessed Ones, since I came forth from your own hearts in order to remove all obscurations and to purify completely all the obscurations of karma, then, Blessed One, please tell me what I am to do about all those beings of the lower realms, the hells and the rest."

The Blessed One said, oṃ kṣapaya vajra svāhā.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this heart mantra for summoning all the wheels of the lower destinies, Raurava and the rest: oṃ sarva avāya ākarṣaṇa viśodhana vajra samya hūṃ phaṭ

As soon as he had spoken it, those dwelling in the lower realms, Raurava, Mahāraurava and the rest, gathered round outside the summit of Mount Meru and stayed there. Then the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi called all the sentient beings who had fallen into the lower realms and spoke these words: "O good sirs, go for refuge to the Three Jewels, and take up the samaya, the vow, and the mudrā and heart mantra of liberation from all the lower realms."

Then with one voice they said these words: "Blessed One, please protect us from this torment of suffering. We go for refuge to the Buddha, to the Dharma, to the Saṅgha, and to you."

Then Vajrapāṇi spoke this heart mantra called Destroyer of All Lower Realms: oṃ vajrapāṇi visphoṭaya sarva apāya bhandhanāni pramokṣaya sarvāpāya gatebhyaḥ sarva satvaṃ sarva tathāgata vajra samaya trāṭ

Then the binding of its mudrā is explained.

Firmly forming the vajra binding,
joining both the middle fingers,
the last four are joined at their tips:
this is known as the destroyer of sin.

Then all the sentient beings dwelling in the wheel of the three lower realms, on seeing that mudrā of Vajrapāṇi, died and passed from all the lower realms and were born at the feet of the Blessed One Vairocana. Those lower realms were cast into the great ocean.

Then the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi said to the Blessed One, "Blessed One, the Blessed One, all the Tathāgatas, gave me the vajra of accomplishment of all the Tathāgatas, saying, 'Seek the means, from bringing refuge, benefit and every happiness to the realm of sentient beings, entire and without remainder, up to bringing them to attain the supreme fruit of accomplishment of all the Tathāgatas.' Since all the Tathāgatas have so commanded, may all the Tathāgatas tell me what those people are to do."

All the Tathāgatas then gathered as one and declared: oṃ vajrapāṇi mahāmaṇḍalaṃ praveśaya sarva duṣṭa rodranni varya pravevya pramaśaya trura dṛṣṭa paryva paṃ maṃ viśodhaya nāśaya vināśaya ha ha ha ha hūṃ

Then, having heard those words declared by all the Tathāgatas, in order to protect the realm of sentient beings, entire and without remainder, and to bring them benefit and every happiness, from the supreme accomplishment up to the attainment of the fruit of the wisdom and superknowledges of all the Tathāgatas, Vajrapāṇi taught this great maṇḍala called Victorious over the Three Worlds, arisen from the great vajra samaya of all the Tathāgatas.

Now I shall fully explain
the supreme great maṇḍala,
like the Vajradhātu,
the best, which brings every accomplishment, called Victorious over the Three Worlds, arisen from the vajra samaya, which brings forth the awakening of the buddhas and utterly destroys all the wicked.

For it, the cord should be drawn with this mantra: oṃ vajra samaya sūtraṃ mātikrama ho

Make it square, with four gates, beautifully adorned with four archways,
furnished with four cords,
and richly adorned with silks and garlands.
At the corners of the whole maṇḍala and inside the frames of the gates, adorn it with vajras and jewels.

Lay the cords of the maṇḍala's outer tier.
Within it, the one of wisdom makes a square with four gates, with eight pillars and archways.
In the supreme place of the vajra pillars
it is adorned with five maṇḍalas.
Lay the cords of the maṇḍala in this way.
Once the cords are laid, fill it with colors.

For that, the recitation over the colors is this.

oṃ vajra citra samaya hūṃ

Then, seated in the center,
the vajra master, in meditative equipoise, should open with the mind
the four vajra gates.

For that, the mantra for opening the gates is this: oṃ vajrodghaṭya samaya praveśaya hūṃ

On a square slab made of gold or silver, or else of clay, well drawn,
one should set an image of the Buddha.

For that, the heart mantra for inviting all the Tathāgatas is this: oṃ vajra jvāla agni pradrīpta ākarṣaya sarva tathāgatānā mahāvajra samaye hūṃ jaḥ

Before the Buddha, a vajra should be placed, encircled with flames;
likewise a jewel ringed with light,
and the lotus and the vajra, all in the same way.

Then this is the heart mantra for setting out the vajra samaya mudrās: oṃ satva vajrā jvāla māla hūṃ phaḍ oṃ ratna vajrī jvāla māla huṃ trāṃ oṃ dharma vajrī jvāla māla hūṃ hrīḥ oṃ karma vajrā jvāla māla hūṃ aḥ

Having stepped across with the vajra stride, likewise before the Buddha,
the knowing one draws according to the rite:
this is the maṇḍala called Vajra hūṃ.

For that, the heart mantra of the vajra stride is this: oṃ vajra vegākrama hūṃ

In the same way, in all the maṇḍalas, the Vajradhātu maṇḍala and the rest, one should step across the cords and move about everywhere.

Then its essential point is explained.

Lifting the lines with the mind,
whether they are vajra cords or anything else, though one goes out or comes in,
one does not thereby break the samaya.

In its center, the great being Vajrapāṇi is to be drawn,
the gleaming color of a great blue utpala, embodied as the one called Vajra hūṃ,
his mouth with fangs slightly bared,
his face smiling yet wrathful,
standing with one leg stretched and one drawn in,
his light wreathed in a garland of flames.
With the sole of his left foot
he is to press down Maheśvara (Śiva); with his right foot, upon the breasts of Umā, draw him pressing down.

Its heart mantra is this: hūṃ

In all the directions around him,
the vajra wrathful ones are placed,
baring their fangs in wrath,
their light wreathed in garlands of flame.

Then their heart mantras are these: oṃ vajra satva krodha hūṃ phaḍ oṃ vajra krodha āveśaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra karma krodha rāgaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra duṣṭi krodha sādhu sādhu hūṃ phaṭ

In the second supreme maṇḍala,
having stepped across with the vajra stride,
there draw the Vajra Empowerment, surrounded by the vajra wrathful ones.

Then their heart mantras are explained: traṃ oṃ vajra bhṛkuḍī krodha hara hara huṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra sūrya mahā jvala māla krodha jvalaya sarvaṃ hūṃ

phaṭ oṃ vajra krodha ketu dehi hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra hāsa krodha ha ha ha ha hūṃ phaṭ

In the third supreme maṇḍala,
having stepped across with the vajra stride,
one should draw the Vajra Host, surrounded by the great-souled wrathful ones.

Then their heart mantras are explained: hrīḥ oṃ vajra dharma krodha vināśaya vīśodhaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra tīkṣṇa krodha cchinda cchinda hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra hetu krodha praveśaya maṇḍale sarvaṃ hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra krodha bhāṣa vata vata hūṃ phaṭ

In the fourth supreme maṇḍala,
having stepped across with the vajra stride,
one should draw the Vajra Descent, surrounded by the host of vajra wrathful ones.

For that, their heart mantras are explained: aḥ hūṃ vajra karma hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra kavaca krodha rakṣa hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra yakṣa krodha khādā khada hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra krodha muṣṭi sādhaya samaya hūṃ phaṭ

In the corners of the maṇḍala, following the manner of the Vajradhātu,
each in its proper sequence, draw all the secret offerings.

Then these are the heart mantras of their mudrās: oṃ vajra rāsye rāgaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra māle abhiṣiñca hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra gīte gada gada hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajri nṛdye vaśi kuru hūṃ phaṭ

Outside the supreme maṇḍala,
having stepped across with the vajra stride,
in its very corners
place the four offering goddesses.

Then their heart mantras are these: oṃ vajra dhupe pūjā spharaṇa samaye hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra buṣpa pūjā spharaṇa samaye hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra āloke pūjā spharaṇa samaye hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra gandhe pūjā spharaṇa samaye hūṃ phaṭ

In the middle of the four gates
one should place the Hook and the rest;
in the places outside the maṇḍala,

the outer vajra families.

Then their heart mantras are explained: oṃ vajra aṃkuśa mahā krodha ākarṣaya sarva samayaṃ hūṃ jaḥ oṃ vajra pāśa mahā krodha prapeśaya sarva samaya hūṃ hūṃ oṃ vajra sphoṭa mahā krodha bandha bandha sarva samaya hūṃ vaṃ oṃ vajra āveśa mahā krodha āveśaya sarva samaye hūṃ aḥ

Then here the rite of the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds is explained in full.

For that, first of all, the vajra master himself should bind the mudrā of the vajra wrathful one Tirintiri and enter. Having entered, he should make this supplication to all the Tathāgatas: "Blessed Ones, I have come under the power of the wrath of all the Tathāgatas. Those who deserve to be subdued, I subdue. As for those who deserve to be gathered in, may the Blessed Ones tell me how I am to gather them in."

Having said this, he places the mudrā of the vajra wrathful one Tirintiri at his own heart, just as it is, and performs the rite with Vajrāṅkuśa and the rest. Then he should again bind the mudrās of all the samayas, and by that all of them will come. Then again he performs the four secret offerings, and incense and the rest likewise.

Then by this rite he should make the vajra disciple enter. The vajra master himself binds the mudrā of the vajra wrathful one Tirintiri, and he should have the disciple too bind it with these heart mantras: oṃ gṛhṇa vajra samaya hūṃ vaṃ

Then, having him put on blue clothing, binding his head with a blue crown-band and wrapping his face in blue silk, he should make him enter with this mantra: oṃ vajra samyaṃ praveśāme

Then, having made him enter, he should bring about the descent upon him by this mudrā and heart mantra of the samaya of vajra descent: oṃ vajra āveśa āḥ

Then, once it has descended, because it has descended in this way, all the Tathāgatas bless him.

He knows in an instant all of the past, the future and the present. He also becomes free of harm. He becomes invincible to all of them. And by hūṃ he becomes able both to subdue and to benefit all sentient beings. Vajrapāṇi, too, constantly accomplishes all his purposes.

Then give him the heart mantra of the oath. Then remove the covering from his face and show him the great maṇḍala just as it is. Merely by seeing the great maṇḍala he is freed from all sins. He becomes able to be victorious over the three worlds in their entirety. By hūṃ he becomes able to summon, to make enter, to bind, to bring under control and to crush all the gods, the Great God (Śiva) and the rest. And through the blessing of all the Tathāgatas, the Blessed One, the bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, constantly follows him and bestows his own accomplishments.

Then, empowering him with the vajra empowerment, he gives into his two hands his own emblem, the sharp vajra, just as it is, with this mantra: oṃ vajrapāṇi vajra karma karod bhava

Then with this mantra he confers the vajra name empowerment: vajra krodha tvaṃ abhiṣiñcāmi vajra nāma abhiṣekata he vajra nāma

Then whatever name is given to anyone should be joined with the call "O."

Then the wisdoms are generated.

Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
imagine at the heart the form of a vajra whose light is many blazing flames:
it makes all people undergo the descent.
Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
and likewise imagining
a vajra jewel at the forehead,
one brings all sentient beings under control.
Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
imagine at the throat a vajra lotus whose light is many blazing garlands:
it destroys all sentient beings.
Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
place the universal vajra at the crown,
whose light is many blazing garlands:
it protects all those people.

Then the heart mantras of those wisdom mudrās are these: huṃ sarva vajra krodha āveśa aḥ ho ratna vajra krodha bhāṣa mānaya traṃ hūṃ vajra dharma krodha nāśaya phaṭ hūṃ karma vajra krodha rakṣa

Then the wisdom mudrā for summoning the gods is taught.

Having bound the hūṃ mudrā, imagine the hand as a vajra hook;
crooking the index finger in wrath becomes the supreme summoning of the gods.
Having drawn a vajra hook
in the middle of the sole of one's own foot,
if one constantly presses down with it,
the gods are summoned without fail.
The vajra hook mudrā itself,
well opened out and set in place, when it is urged on, summons
all women, Umā and the rest.
Placing the vajra hook
likewise upon the index finger itself, whatever of the gods it presses down,
that is the supreme summoning.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ vajra krodha ākarṣaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra karma aṃkuśa krodha ākarṣayaṃ huṃ phaṭ o vajra krodha daṇḍa āgra ākarṣaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra krodha si gaccha ākarṣaya mite vajra samaya manusmara hūṃ phaṭ

Then the wisdom of the four kinds of mudrā is taught.

Standing with one leg stretched and one drawn in,
in the manner of the vajra descent,
by hūṃ alone, in an instant, one makes all people undergo the descent.
The vajras have spoken well:
by that which has the four hūṃ syllables,
the heart of all the buddhas,
all are surely summoned.
Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
through the supreme deity of vajra wrath
one slays all people:
this is the yoga of vajra hūṃ.
Donning armor on the body with the mind,
for oneself or for others,

by the application of the great armor
one protects all those people.

Then their heart mantras are these: oṃ vajra krodha kāya āveśaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra vidyottama mahā krodha ānaya ho bhagavān vajra hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra krodha tiṣṭha hana daha paca vināśaya hūṃ kareṇa pātaya vajra samaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ mano dṛḍha vajra kavaca krodha rakṣa hūṃ phaḍ

Then the wisdom of the mudrā that seals all sentient beings.

Placed in equipoise as the vajra wrathful one,
by reciting vajra hūṃ,
whatever and whomever it enters becomes sealed with the seal.
One should utter it in a great voice: ḍakki hūṃ phaḍ
Whomever one addresses once in wrath, the blazing vajra draws him forth.
In the samādhi of the vajra wrathful one,
by looking with the vajra gaze, whatever sentient beings there may be,
each and every one will die.
Having set the mind on the stillness of slaying,
one meditates on a vajra at the heart.
With hūṃ, by the mind,
one intends to set one's own seal.
This, whereby one sets the seal of the mind on any sentient being by any means:
by this mudrā, most thoroughly,
one should accomplish all the rites.

Then their heart mantras are these: ṭakkia ṭakki ja ṭakki hūṃ ḍakki haṃ

With each mudrā, too, the four heart mantras of the mudrās are applied to the four activities.

Then the wisdom of the secret wrathful mudrā is taught.

Embracing with all the limbs,
one should direct hūṃ at the object;
having joined the two organs,
that one's life is ruined.

Joined with hūṃ,
meeting the lips and holding the lip with the teeth,
whoever fully joins the two organs,
that one becomes directly present.
Whoever makes the union with hūṃ, that one experiences bliss.
If the two organs are joined,
whoever it is meets with suffering.
Fully applying hūṃ,
and having joined the two organs,
if one presses tight with all the limbs,
that one's body will be protected.

Then their heart mantras are these: hūṃ a hūṃ ja hūṃ ho hūṃ haṃ hūṃ he

Then the wisdom of the mudrā of the very samaya of the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds is taught.

Whoever, for the benefit of sentient beings,
in the manner of the Vajradhātu,
practices the recollection of the Buddha will attain buddhahood.
Drawing Īśvara and Umā too
upon the ground, press them down in the same way;
following the sequence in which they were drawn,
one should bind the sattva mudrā.
Merely by binding it,
one is victorious over the three worlds,
and accomplishments and magical powers like those of Vajra hūṃ are swiftly attained.
Just as it is drawn in the picture, seated in the center, encircled by flames,
with body, speech and mind as vajra,
one should bind the sattva mudrā.

Then from these it is explained:
the vajra activity is unsurpassed.
By accomplishing the recollection of the Buddha one swiftly attains buddhahood itself.

If one binds Victorious over the Three Worlds,
one becomes victorious over the three worlds.
One becomes a great vajra and goes everywhere,
like the one called Vajra hūṃ.
By the vajra empowerment one becomes a king;
possessing the good Dharma, one has power over the world.
The karma vajra, the great wrathful one,
performs the vajra activities.
The sattva, utterly steadfast as the wrathful one,
truly summons with the wrathful hook.
The wrathful one of passion makes others passionate;
the wrathful one of goodness bestows joy;
with the wrathful frown he makes all fierce;
the wrathful sun has supreme splendor;
the wrathful one of glory gathers in riches;
laughing ha ha, he acts as a māra;
the wrathful one of Dharma overpowers all dharmas;
he cuts with the vajra sword;
the wrathful one of cause steals away suffering;
the wrathful one of speech steals away words;
the wrathful one of karma excels in activities;
with protection he protects;
the wrathful yakṣa devours even enemies;
the wrathful fist bestows accomplishments.

Then the binding of the vajra samaya mudrās is explained.

It becomes the twofold vajra, renowned as the supreme samaya.
I shall explain how they are bound:
the binding of the wrathful one is unsurpassed.
Making the fists into vajras, bind the little fingers as a hook;
threatening with the two index fingers:
this is called Victorious over the Three Worlds.
Likewise, joining the sides of the index fingers, curve them fully like a jewel.
Raise the middle fingers evenly to make a lotus;

threaten with both the middle and the index fingers.
Make both index fingers into a vajra;
with the right, as a hook, one should summon.
Knot that same one as hūṃ;
likewise for bestowing goodness.
Place two fingers at the furrow of the brow;
at the heart, circle the index finger as a sun.
Stretching out the hand, place it on the crown;
with the index finger at the mouth, act as if laughing.
Joining the nails of the index fingers,
with the right, the sword is bound.
Raising the middle and index fingers evenly, draw them out from inside the mouth of the wheel;
make the index and middle fingers into a vajra;
the two index fingers are the great fangs;
the bent index finger is bound as a vajra.
Vajra lāsye and the rest,
with the mudrās of the female sattvas, that very hūṃ:
the Dharma mudrās so distinguished go together with hūṃ.

Then the Dharma mudrās of the vajra samaya are explained.

hūṃ is of the Buddha Vajra;
tāṃ is of Vajragarbha;
hrī is of the Vajra Host;
a is of all the vajras.

hūṃ he traṃ taṃ hi hi deha bhik dhi hūṃ grā kripaṃ dṛ a

These fully accomplish the Dharma mudrās of the many vajra wrathful ones.

Then the karma mudrās of the vajra samaya are explained.

To summarize the karma mudrās
of the great vajra family:
in the manner of the vajra swagger and the rest,
they are explained as the two wrathful fists.
Whatever the mudrās may be,
for whatever kind of activity they are to be done,

one should turn them to that purpose and apply the mudrā accordingly.
This is the rite of all the mudrās.

Then here the binding of the general mudrā of the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds is explained.

The mudrā of Victorious over the Three Worlds is the samaya of the vajra index fingers;
its mantra is vajra hūṃ;
by it all accomplishments are obtained in a moment.
Bind both little fingers as hooks, above and below both vajras:
that samaya hook mudrā
summons all in an instant.
Of all the supreme vidyās
it is declared to be Victorious over the Three Worlds.
It harms all
and likewise performs all activities.
Setting the two vajra index fingers well in full equipoise, so that they are even,
it raises up all the dead:
it is called the Vajra Raiser.
Binding both vajras well with the vajra binding,
and placing it reversed upon the crown,
it increases life and freedom from illness.
Firmly forming the vajra binding, evening the thumbs, insert them within;
crooking the index fingers firmly,
inserted, it summons at the feet.
Having bound Victorious over the Three Worlds, whatever sentient being's image
one presses down well with the left foot, that being is won over within half a month.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
if one strikes them against each other,
upon whatever sentient being's body

it falls, that one too is struck.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
make armor for oneself or for others;
if one binds it with the two index fingers,
one will surely be protected.
Binding the vajras at the palms,
one should cover them, wrathful in mind;
the thumbs firm as a vajra:
the great vajra family is accomplished.
Make Sattvavajra firm:
press the middle fingers with both thumbs;
the little fingers as the vajra tips,
sharp, hold the samaya.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
crooking and binding the two index fingers, twisting them and twisting them back is the supreme summoning of the gods.
Firmly forming the vajra binding,
crooking the two index fingers, press hard;
by joining both thumbs,
the binding in the middle is that of the sky.
From the two vajra mudrās,
binding both little fingers,
linking the two index fingers back to back,
turning it about is that of the sky-goers.
Tightening the vajra binding,
one should bind it with the vajra protection:
this is the samaya of those of the earth;
it does all things and is hard to transgress.
Binding the two vajra mudrās,
on the left vajra index finger
the little finger embraces and constantly hooks:
this summons those beneath the earth.
Linking with the vajra binding,
both index fingers held firm,
the middle fingers and thumbs as a vajra:
this destroys the mudrās of the wicked.

Binding the two vajra mudrās
in equipoise, place them at the heart; squeezing with the wrathful fist destroys outer maṇḍalas.
Upon the left vajra index finger,
hold it with the crooked right index finger;
if, in fierce wrath, one strikes forcefully,
it makes even Mount Meru fall.
Upon the left vajra index finger,
hold with the right index finger as a hook;
by crooking it in fierce wrath,
one gains power over all the grahas.
Having made the vajra binding,
tighten the fists firmly at the heart;
by rubbing one's armpits with the vajra index fingers,
one gives the heart.
With the tips of the two index fingers,
at the base of the two thumbs,
one should squeeze, wrathful in mind:
supreme for summoning fevers and the rest.
Firmly joining the vajra palms,
bending both index fingers,
joining the thumbs fully even,
and pressing: this steals away sin.
Within the two vajra mudrās, hiding the two index fingers,
and casting them well upward:
supreme for raising up the fallen.
Firmly forming the vajra binding,
joining the sides of both middle fingers, and bringing together the sides of the last four,
in an instant it tears sin apart.

Then the binding of the mudrās for accomplishing the great maṇḍala of all the Tathāgatas is explained.

Holding with the vajra mudrā, first lay the cords of the maṇḍala;
having laid the cords, then laying the cords as they should be is explained.

With both vajra mudrās
fully joined at the tips of the index fingers, one should then, with a blazing gaze, summon all the colors.
Joining the vajra index fingers well,
bending them back and tightening them,
then opening them in fierce wrath:
this is the best for opening the gates.

Then the accomplishment of all the mudrās of the vajra families is explained.

Taking the posture with the left leg extended, uttering the cry of the wrathful one,
if one looks with the wrathful gaze,
one accomplishes all the rites.

From the Great King of Rituals of the vajra samaya of all the Tathāgatas, the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds is complete.

The fifth fascicle.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the samādhi called the vajra blessing arising from the vajra dhāraṇī samaya of all the Tathāgatas, and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own: oṃ sarva vajriṇi vajra māte ānaya sarva vajra satyena hūṃ ja

Then, as soon as it was spoken, from the heart of Vajrapāṇi the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi himself, the lord of the net of Vajrapāṇis, his whole body ablaze, came forth transformed into the goddesses of the mudrās of the secret samaya of the vajra wrathful ones. Having accomplished the aims of all the Tathāgatas in all the world realms, in order to keep secret the consorts of the Blessed One Vajrasattva, they took the forms of the vajra mudrās of body, speech and mind, and, sitting on moon disks in the manner of the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds of the Blessed One Vairocana, they uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The unsurpassed secret wisdom of all the buddhas, for the bliss of the Tathāgatas, has become the consorts themselves.

hrīḥ

Then again Vajrapāṇi spoke this maṇḍala of the samaya mudrās of his own family, called the Vajra Secret Samaya.

Now I shall fully explain
the supreme vajra maṇḍala;
because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
it is called the Secret of the Wrathful Ones.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
lay the cords of all the maṇḍalas.
In the places of the five maṇḍalas
one should set the secret mudrās.
In the center of the vajra maṇḍala
one should set the images of the buddhas.
The samaya of the buddha wrathful one, too,
the skilled one draws as it should be.
Having stepped across with the vajra stride,
in that maṇḍala of Vajrapāṇi draw at the center a spear point with lips, and firmly set a vajra there;
draw it in the middle of blazing light.
In their proper sequence:
the vajra, the vajra hook,
the arrow, and Joy likewise.
Having stepped across with the vajra stride,
in the second supreme maṇḍala also one should draw a vajra jewel dwelling in the center of a wheel.
Draw a vajra in the middle of a frown;
likewise the vajra sun and banner,
and likewise its garland of teeth:
one should draw them in actual vajra form.
Having stepped across with the vajra stride,
in the third supreme maṇḍala also draw the vajra lotus, the divine emblem, dwelling in the center of a lotus.

Draw a lotus in the middle of flames;
the sword and the wheel likewise.
The vajra tongue too, as is proper,
is always set at its side.
Having stepped across with the vajra stride,
in the fourth supreme maṇḍala also draw a vajra upon a vajra laid flat, encircled by great vajra light.
In all its directions is light wreathed in every kind of flame:
the universal vajra, the supreme armor,
the vajra fangs, the supreme fist.
In the corners and the outer places one should draw them as is proper.

Now I shall fully explain,
summarizing the mudrā vidyās:

jhiḥ oṃ vajra krodhe samaye jhiḥ oṃ vajra krodhe roṣaṃkuśavanaya sarvana jhiḥ oṃ vajra roṣe kāma vajriṇi vaśamme ānaya hi jhiḥ oṃ vajra duṣṭa krodhe toṣaya sarvana jhiḥ

This is the maṇḍala called Vajra jhiḥ.

jiḥ oṃ vajra bhṛkuśī krodhe hara sarva arthana jiḥ oṃ vajra jvāla mālā praveśa mahā krodha agni jvālaya sarva nara viroṣe jiḥ oṃ vajra dhvaja agre keyūra mahā krodhe dehi me sarva arthana jiḥ oṃ vajra aṭṭāhāsani hāsa hāsa aṭṭāṭṭe hāsena māraya jiḥ

This is the maṇḍala called Vajra jiḥ.

diḥ oṃ vajra śuddha krodhe hana hana māraya duṣṭana diḥ oṃ vajra tīkṣṇa krodhe cchinda vajra koṣena sarvani deḥ oṃ vajra hetu mahā krodhe praveśa cakra praveśaya sarvan diḥ oṃ vajra jihā mahā krodhe vaśe vaca muñca diḥ

This is the maṇḍala called Vajra diḥ.

hrīḥ oṃ vajra sarvan mukhe karma vajraṇi mahā krodhe kuru kuru sarvana hrīḥ oṃ vajra kavac krodhe rakṣa mama hiḥ oṃ vajra caḍṇa krodhe mahā yakṣini vajra daṃṣṭa kārāla bhīṣne paya hiḥ oṃ vajra krodhe muṣḍi bandha hiḥ

This is the maṇḍala called Vajra hiḥ.

Then, for the corners of the maṇḍala, he spoke the heart-mantras of the vidyās of the secret offerings, Vajranṛtyā and the rest:
oṃ vajra hūṃ khe vajra hūṃ ghāṃ vajra hūṃ te vajra hūṃ tvaṃ

For the outer corners one should recite the heart-mantras of the cymbal offerings:
oṃ vajra trite vajra ḍaṃḍa vajra dhātu vajra ḍaummudha

Then he spoke the heart-mantras of the offerings of the gatekeepers:
vajra jaḥ jaḥ vajra hūṃ hūṃ vajra vaṃ vaṃ vajra aḥ aḥ

Next, this extensive rite of entry into the secret maṇḍala of the vajra family is explained. First of all, one should have the disciple enter in accordance with the words for entering the great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds. Then, in order to make offering to Vajradhara, one should make offering with dance, by means of the samaya mudrās of the vajra family of the vajra secret, the counterpart mudrās, the subsidiary mudrās, and the wisdom mudrās.

Here, this is the wisdom of the mudrās of offering by means of the dance, the responding dance, the subsidiary dance, and the wisdom dance. First of all, singing the vajra song with the heart-mantra of the Vajradhātu compendium, and making offering by praising all the tathāgatas, the vajra master should forcefully snap the vajra mudrā of Sattvavajrī. Then the mudrās should be made to descend properly upon all who are present.

In the manner of the vajra dance,
The two fingers of Vajracaṇḍa,
In the mudrā made by Vajra Hūṃ,
Should be bound firmly at the heart.
Then, by the rite of the dance,
With the Hook of Vajracaṇḍa
Invite all the buddhas.
Let the vajra arrow be shot.
And having shot the vajra arrow,
Accomplish it with Vajra Joy.
Releasing the mudrā according to the rite,
Clap the palms and bind them.
By this rite of offering
Vajrapāṇi is pleased,
And once he is pleased, all one's aims
Are accomplished at will in an instant.

Here the heart-mantras of the dance mudrās are these:
sidhya vajra ānaya vajra rāgaya vajra sādhu vajra

After that, one should perform the offering of the responding dance.

Likewise, the left hand of the dance
Is seized by the right fist,
And, turning it, with the face of the fingers
One should place it on the forehead.
Likewise, the dancer, the sun too
Having circled, should properly summon.
Raising the vajra banner,
Laughing with vajra ha ha,
By the rite of this offering,
The king and all other people
Will gratify one with power, supreme splendor,
Gifts, and all that one needs.

Here these are the heart-mantras of the responding mudrās:
ahi vajra jvālaya vajra dehi vajra hāsa hāsa vajra

Likewise, releasing the dance,
With the joined lotus bud
Place the fingertips at the heart,
And bow with a heart that is moved.
Likewise, the dancer with the vajra
Acts as if cutting obstructors with a sword.
Whirling a wheel of firebrand,
Circle in the manner of a wheel maṇḍala.
As if singing in vajra words,
Make offering to Vajrapāṇi.
By the rite of this offering
All things become certain.

Here these are the heart-mantras of the subsidiary mudrās:
gāmaya vajra cchindaya vajra brāhmiya vajra bruhi vajra

Bending the fingers of Vajracaṇḍa properly
And joining their tips,
Then turning them, at the crown of the head
Place the fingertips.

In the manner of vajra action,
In the supreme maṇḍala of the whole body,
Display it by the rite of the dance,
And set it firmly at the heart.
Likewise, according to the rite of the dance,
Bind Vajra Protection.
Having bound Vajra Fang,
Press down with the vajra binding.
By the rite of this offering
One becomes able to perform all rites.
Having made the fourfold offering,
Release the mudrā according to the rite.

Their heart-mantras are these:
nṛtya vajra rakṣa vajra khāda vajra banda vajra

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the secret mudrās of the wrathful ones.

With the two hands of the vajra secret,
With a wrathful mind, snap forcefully:
Whatever person's name is spoken,
That one's heart will burst.
Holding the lower lip with the teeth,
Tormenting the one whose name is spoken,
His head too will swiftly split,
The one who has transgressed the command.
With the gaze of the wrathful one, the greatly wrathful,
Screwing up the eyes:
Whoever's name is spoken as one looks,
That one's eyes will burst.
Absorbed in Vajracaṇḍa,
If at one's own heart as well
One binds the vajra binding,
That one's mind will be destroyed.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
hūṃ vajra sphoṭa thaḥ hūṃ vajra muka vajra thaḥ hūṃ vajra netrā thaḥ hūṃ vajra mane thaḥ

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the secret mudrās of the great vajra family. Here, first of all, the binding of the great mudrās is explained.

Binding the little fingers as a hook,
Set up Vajracaṇḍa.
On the left, with the trident behind,
It is called Victorious over the Three Worlds.
The left index finger stretched out straight,
And likewise bent, is the lotus.
And likewise turning it,
Place it on the left vajra.
Binding the vajra at the palm,
Make joy with wrath.
The thumbs with the firm vajra
Are called the wrathful Tirintiri.
The index fingers as a hook are the summoning.
The faces of the index fingers are joined.
Likewise, the two fingers give well.
Joining the fingers, place them at the forehead.
At the heart, the sun stands firm.
With fingers evened, place it on the crown of the head.
Turning it, place it for laughter.
With fingers evened, like a lotus bud.
Both hold the sword straight.
Two fingers bound as a wheel.
With fingers evened, bring them out from the mouth.
With the fingers well extended,
Bind them at the neck with the fingers.
Those two are placed at the cheeks as fangs.
The fist bound tightly
Is said to be the great mudrā.

Next, the binding of the secret samaya mudrās of the vajra family is explained.

Arisen from the secret fist,
They are renowned as the supreme samayas.
Their binding I shall explain:
The vajra binding is unsurpassed.
Placing it at the heart, twist it at the sides of the ribs.
Drawing the arrow from the left,

One should draw it out from the heart.
Turning it into a wrathful frown,
Showing the disk of the sun,
Stretching the hand out at the crown of the head,
And turning it, place it for laughter.
Placed well in the middle of the mouth,
It is like planting a sword at the finger.
Showing the turning of the wheel,
And bringing it forth from the mouth:
At the crown of the head is the maṇḍala of the supreme body.
The shoulders, the heart and the sides of the ribs:
Do Vajra Protection in the same way.
Placing it at the place of the fangs,
And the fist tightly clenched.
The mudrās of the outer maṇḍala
Bind according to the sequence of their signs.
From the samaya vajra binding,
Likewise set the vajra fist.

Next, the secret Dharma mudrās of the vajra family are explained:
phaṭaḥ śaṭaḥ maṭaḥ saṭaḥ raṭaḥ haṭaḥ dhiṭaḥ haṭaḥ phadṭaḥ tadṭaḥ kadṭaḥ dhaḍṭaḥ kuṭiḥ riṭaḥ khaṭaḥ paṭaḥ

Next, the binding of the mudrās of the secret karma family of the vajra family is explained.

In brief, the karma mudrā:
Making two vajra fists,
One should place them at whatever their place is,
With the wrathful gaze, full of wrath.

Here is completed the extensive rite of the maṇḍala of the great mudrās of the secret of the wrathful ones, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called Empowerment of the Wisdom Mudrā of the Samādhi of the Vajra Family of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this supreme vidyā:
oṃ sarva tathāgata sūkṣma vajra krodha hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajrapāṇi, king of the wrathful ones, Victorious over the Three Worlds, spoke this supreme vidyā of the subtle vajra:
oṃ sūṣma vajra krodhe krama hūṃ phaṭ

Then the bodhisattva Vajragarbha spoke this supreme vidyā of the subtle vajra of Victorious over the Three Worlds:
oṃ sūkṣma vajra ratna krodha krama hūṃ phaḍ

Then the bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this supreme vidyā of the subtle vajra of Victorious over the Three Worlds:
oṃ sūkṣma vajra padma krodha krama hūṃ phaḍ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraviśva, spoke this supreme vidyā of the subtle vajra of Victorious over the Three Worlds:
oṃ sūkṣma vajra karma krodha krama hūṃ phaḍ

Then again the Blessed One, Vajrapāṇi, in order to generate his own family, took his place in the manner of the great maṇḍala of Vajradhātu and spoke their heart-mantras:
oṃ vajra satva sūkṣma jñana krodha krama hūṃ phaḍ oṃ sūkṣma vajra aṃkuśa ākarṣaya mahā krodhā hūṃ phaḍ oṃ vajra sūkṣma rāga krodhā anurāgayati vikrama hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra sūkṣma vajra puṣṭi krodhā hūṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra bhṛkuṭī krodhā hara hara hūṃ phaḍ oṃ sūkṣma vajra jvāla maṇḍala krodhā sūryajvāla hūṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra cakra krodhā sarva artha māme prayaccha śrī krama hūṃ phaḍ oṃ vajra sūkṣma hāsa krodhā mahā ṭṭaṭṭa hāsa ha ha ha ha hūṃ phaḍ oṃ sūkṣma vajra dharma vajra krodhāya hūṃ phaḍ oṃ sūkṣma vajra chceda krodha cchinda bhinda huṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra krodha mahā cakra cchinda patāya śrī praveśaya hṛdayaṃ bhinda huṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra hūṃ kār hana tāya lvāka matrenna huṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra karma krodha sarva karma kāroṅ bhava sarva kāraya sādhaya huṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra sūkṣma kavaca krodhā rakṣa rakṣa huṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra yakṣa krodhā hana bhaya sarva duṣṭi ñcitta mātre vajra daṃṣṭrā huṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra muṣṭi krodha bandha bandha hūṃ phaṭ

Then again Vajrapāṇi spoke the samaya maṇḍala of the subtle wisdom of the vajra family.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime Dharma maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is also called the Wisdom of the Wrathful Ones.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Mark out the whole maṇḍala with cords.
In its center draw the Buddha,
Set in the center of a wisdom vajra.
In all directions around the Buddha
Draw all those very buddhas.
Having crossed over with vajra force,
In the four maṇḍalas as well
Victorious over the Three Worlds and the rest
Should be set out in their order.
In all directions around them,
Follow the rite of Vajracaṇḍa.

Then here the extensive sequence of the rite of the subtle wisdom maṇḍala of the vajra family is explained. First of all, having had the disciple enter, the charge is this: "Today the Blessed One, Vajrapāṇi, empowers you as the very vajra wrath of all tathāgatas, so apply yourself to it well and diligently. From acting for the complete protection of the realm of sentient beings, entirely and with none left out, up to the result of attaining the welfare, the happiness and the supreme accomplishment of all tathāgatas, you are to purify even all sentient beings thoroughly by vajra wrath; what need is there even to mention all the vicious ones who act as māras?"

Having given this charge, untie the face covering, show him all their maṇḍalas, and give the vajra into his two hands in the proper way. Then teach him the subtle wisdoms of Vajracaṇḍa.

Through the yoga of Vajra Hūṃ,
Having displayed the subtle vajra,
Whoever "hūṃ" is applied to,
His life will be destroyed.
Having displayed the subtle vajra
And spread it forth according to the rite,

As far as it spreads,
So far is this enemy destroyed.
Through the yoga of Vajra Hūṃ,
Applying the method of the subtle vajra,
As far as it spreads, filled with wrath,
So many does it bring to ruin.
Likewise, its withdrawal too:
If the yogin so wishes,
To all of them without exception
He should give back their life again.

Here their heart-mantra is this:
hūṃ hūṃ nāśaya vajra hūṃ vināśaya sarva sūkṣma vajra pratyanāśaya śīghrāṃ hūṃ

Whoever greatly shows himself
As joined with a being's enemy,
In the manner of spreading loving-kindness
Destroy him with vajra emanation.
Through the yoga of vajra emanation,
Whoever is compassionate,
Through that yoga of compassion,
Surely destroys all the vicious.

Whether dharma or non-dharma,
By its very nature it is luminous.
When one has meditated in this way,
One destroys beings with hūṃ.
Whatever beings are hard to tame,
Not vessels for the awakening of the buddhas,
Then, in order to purify them properly,
One should destroy them with huṃ.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
bhaira vajre krodha huṃ phaṭ huṃ viśuddha vajra krodha huṃ phaṭ oṃ viśodhana vajra krodha huṃ phaṭ

Having drawn the shape of a vajra,
If one imagines, even in the mind,
That it falls in the middle of someone's house,

That person's family will be destroyed.
Likewise, by the subtle rite,
Having meditated on a vajra at the heart,
If the form of a great bodhisattva
Falls there, the family will be destroyed.
If one meditates on the great form of Vajrapāṇi,
Then wherever it falls, that person's
Whole world of appearance and existence, together with his queens,
Will be destroyed by all manner of ills.
Having meditated on the form of the Buddha,
Endowed with the supreme of all aspects,
Whatever appearance it falls upon,
Its whole world will surely be destroyed.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
hūṃ vajra pravata hūṃ bodhisatva pravata hūṃ vajradhara pravata huṃ buddha pravata

By applying the subtle vajra well,
Having meditated on oneself
In the form of the moon,
Wherever it falls, one falls there too.
Having meditated on oneself
As a moon vajra,
Wherever one falls in fierce wrath,
That person's family falls at once.
Having meditated on oneself
As Vajrapāṇi,
Wherever one falls, that land
Will be destroyed before long.
Having meditated on oneself
As the very form of the Buddha,
Wherever one falls, its whole world
Of appearance and existence will be destroyed before long.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
bodhāgra pratuya hūṃ svastva vajra pravataya hūṃ vajrasatva pravata huṃ buddha pravataya hūṃ

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the secret Dharma mudrās of the vajra family.

Absorbed in Vajracaṇḍa,
Encircling with one's own body,
Embracing from Vajra Hūṃ,
Whoever's name one speaks will die.
Absorbed in the subtle vajra,
Subtly from the nose, without a moment's pause,
By means of the breath and hūṃ,
Even the three worlds will fall.
Applying the method of the subtle vajra,
Whoever one looks at in wrath
With the vajra gaze will become blind,
Or else will die.
Having entered the womb,
If with the mind one draws out
The heart of anyone at all,
That one comes under one's own power or that of another.

Here he spoke their heart-mantras:
hūṃ vajra valita krodha māraya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ sūkṣma vajra śvasa viśra patāya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra dṛṣṭi viśa viśa vināśaya hūṃ phaṭ hūṃ hṛdaya kāna krodha praviśa kayi hṛdaya cchinda bhinda kata kata hūṃ phaṭ

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the Dharma mudrās of the vajra family. Here, first of all, the binding of the great mudrā is explained.

Through union with vajra wisdom,
With light massed in a blazing garland,
If one meditates on oneself as Vajracaṇḍa,
One will succeed at once.

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the Dharma samaya mudrās of the vajra family.

From the wisdom of samādhi and samaya,
Endowed with two syllables hūṃ,
Set in their respective places,
It is the supreme giver of all accomplishments.

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the Dharma mudrās of the Dharma samaya of the vajra family.

phaṭ śaṭ maṭ saṭ raṭ taṭ hṛṭ haṭ praṭ traṭ daṭ bhaṭ kṛṭ riṭ khaṭ vaṭ

This is the concise explanation of the Dharma mudrās.

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the karma mudrās of the Dharma samaya of the vajra family.

Making two Dharma fists,
Join them at their proper places.
In brief, the karma mudrā
Brings success in accordance with the rite.

Here is completed the explanation of the extensive rite of the wisdom samaya maṇḍala of the vajra family, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Great Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One entered the samādhi called Empowerment of the Arising of the Vajra Karma Samaya of All Tathāgatas and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ sarva tathāgata karmeśvara hūṃ

Then again the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ sarva tathāgata dharma dhātu spharaṇa mahā būjā karma vidhi vistāra samaye trailokya vijaya kira sarva duṣṭaṃ samaya vajriṇi hūṃ

Then again the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ sarva tathāgata kāya śadu samaya spharaṇa mahā būjā karma vidhi stāraya samaye hūṃ

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ sarva tathāgata dharma dhātu spharaṇa mahā būjā karma vidhi vistāra samaye hūṃ

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ sarva tathāgata sarva avaloka dhātu ma vi mahā pujā karma vidhi vistāra samaye hūṃ phaḍ

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi generated from his own heart the goddesses of the extensive rite of offering of his own family. Throughout all world systems they performed the buddha miracles and magical displays of all the tathāgatas, such as the perfect applications that serve the purposes of inviting all the tathāgatas, bringing them under control, pleasing them, and accomplishing all rites. Then they returned and took their places, abiding on moon disks, in the manner of the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala of the Blessed One, Vairocana.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this karma maṇḍala of the extensive rite of the vajra karma samaya.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime karma maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is called the Karma Vajra.

In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Mark out the whole maṇḍala with cords.
In the place at the center of the maṇḍala
One should set the image of the Buddha.
In all directions around the Buddha
One should set the supreme samayas.
Having crossed over with vajra force,
In the four maṇḍalas as well
The four, the Vajra Lord and the rest,
Should be set in their proper order.
In all directions around them
The great offerings are set.
Then, for this karma maṇḍala,
The vajra karma mudrās are explained:

oṃ vajrasatva siddhi jñāna karma samaye hūṃ ja oṃ vajra ākarṣaṇa karma jñāna samaye hūṃ ja oṃ vajra rati rāga karma jñāna samaye hūṃ ja oṃ vajra sādhu karma jñān samaye hūṃ ja oṃ vajra bhṛkuṭī vaśiṃ kuru hūṃ oṃ vajra sūrya maṇḍale vaśiṃ kuru hūṃ oṃ vajra dhvajagra keyūre vaśiṃ kuru hūṃ oṃ vajra data hāse vaśiṃ kuru hūṃ oṃ vajra padma rāge rāgaya hūṃ oṃ vajra tīkṣṇa rāge rāgaya hūṃ

oṃ vajra maṇḍala rāge rāgaya hūṃ oṃ vajra vāka rāge rāgaya hūṃ oṃ vajra karma samaya caya hūṃ oṃ vajra kavaca vaṃdha rakṣa rakṣa hūṃ oṃ yakṣiṇi māraya vajra daṃṣṭaya bhinda bhindaya mugasya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajra karma muṣṭi siddhi hūṃ phaṭ

Then, in this karma maṇḍala, in accordance with the extensive rite, one generates the wisdoms of the vajra family. Here, first of all, one should learn the wisdom of the mudrās of pacifying and the rest.

Kindling well a fire of sweet kindling sticks,
In equipoise, absorbed in Vajracaṇḍa,
By burning sesame one burns away one's sins.
With those very kindling sticks
Having kindled the fire well,
If one constantly burns rice,
The household will without doubt prosper.
With sweet kindling sticks as well
The wise one kindles the fire well;
If one burns sprigs of dūrvā grass with butter,
One's life will increase.
With those very kindling sticks
Having kindled the fire well,
If one burns sprigs of kuśa grass with sesame oil,
One will surely be protected.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
oṃ sarva pāpaṃ dahana vajrāya svāhā oṃ vajra buṣṭaye svāhā oṃ vajra āyuṣe svāhā oṃ vajra apratihata vajrāya svāhā teva ruva miṃ dhidhulya gani samahri sajuhe tarigataya laṃkuto mati pūtapataye ta

First, with pungent kindling sticks,
Through the samādhi of Vajracaṇḍa,
Having kindled the fire, with thorny wild rose
One will summon.
With those very kindling sticks,
If one kindles the fire filled with wrath

And performs the fire offering with many red flowers, or with fruits,
People will be transfixed.
The yogin, in wrath,
Kindles the fire with those sticks;
If he burns iron filings,
It becomes the very vajra binding.
With those very kindling sticks,
In equipoise, blow upon the fire,
And burn bitter fruits as if in wrath:
In an instant there will be death.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
hūṃ vajra ākarṣā karṣaya svāhā hūṃ vajra rāgāya svāhā hūṃ vajra bandhāya svāhā hūṃ vajra māraṇāya svāhā

The wise one, with sour kindling sticks,
Having kindled the fire in wrath,
If he burns sour fruits and leaves,
That is the supreme bringing under control.
With those very kindling sticks,
In equipoise, kindling the fire,
If one burns desired fruits in wrath,
One produces forms just as one wishes.
With such kindling sticks
Having kindled the fire well,
If one wishes to make the fire offering with stalks of the invisibility flower,
One becomes invisible.
With those very kindling sticks,
In equipoise, kindling the fire,
If one makes the fire offering with flowers of the sky creeper,
One travels through the sky.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
oṃ vajra vaśaṃ karāya svāhā oṃ vajra karma rūpa vajrāya svāhā oṃ adyaśya vajrāya svāhā oṃ vajra kha varcariṇi svāhā

In equipoise as the wrathful one, with kindling sticks
That are very bitter, kindle the fire;
If one burns vajri flowers,

The vajra beings will do as commanded.
With those very kindling sticks,
Filled with wrath, kindle the fire;
Whatever hero's garland one burns,
He too will obey one's commands.
In equipoise as the very wrathful one,
Kindle the fire with those sticks,
And burn the garland of Vajrapāṇi:
He too will act as commanded.
With those very kindling sticks,
In fierce wrath, kindle the fire;
By burning Dharma robes, even the buddhas
In an instant will act as commanded.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
hūṃ vajra vaśaṃ karāya svāhā hūṃ sori vaśaṃ kara vajrāya svāhā hūṃ vajra pāni vaśaṃ karāya svahā huṃ buddha vaśaṃ karāya vajrāya svāhā

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the secret karma mudrās.

Dwelling together with a lovely woman,
Placing eye ointment in her secret opening,
And having stimulated it,
When one anoints one's eyes with that, she comes under one's control.
Placing realgar in the opening,
And covering it with the vajra binding,
Through the four kinds of signs
There will be the four kinds of accomplishment.
Placing gorocana in the opening,
If one presses it with the secret fist,
And what was placed there blazes,
One becomes like a vajra holder.
Placing saffron in the opening,
With the sattva vajra in the opening,
If, being pressed, it blazes,
One becomes like a vajra holder.

Here their heart-mantras are these:
oṃ guhya rati vajra vaśaṃ kāraṃ siddhya hūṃ oṃ vajra guhya siddhya hūṃ

oṃ guhya vajra siddha hūṃ oṃ vajradhara hya siddhya hūṃ

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the great karma mudrās of the vajra family.

In the manner of the vajra intention,
The great mudrā, in brief,
Is to be in equipoise as Vajracaṇḍa
In the manner of the vajra fist.
With hūṃ, in the manner of the finger,
So too is the supreme samaya here;
So too is the Dharma mudrā here:
With oṃ, the first, by the letter a.
The karma mudrā, in brief:
Making the karma mudrā twofold,
It is pure and accomplishes everything,
In the manner of vajra karma.

Here is completed the extensive rite of the karma maṇḍala of the vajra family, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called Empowerment of the Vajra Samaya Mudrā of All Tathāgatas and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:
oṃ sarva tathāgata vajra samaye hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this vajra samaya mudrā of his own:
hūṃ vajra matha

Then the great bodhisattva Vajragarbha spoke this jewel samaya mudrā of his own:
hūṃ bhṛkuṭī vajra rata

Then the great bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this Dharma samaya mudrā of his own:
hūṃ mahā padma vajra dṛḍha

Then the great bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this karma samaya mudrā of his own:
hūṃ vajra karma agra kṛte

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi explained the maṇḍala of the four mudrās of Victorious over the Three Worlds.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime maṇḍala of the mudrās.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is called Vajracaṇḍa.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Mark out the whole maṇḍala with cords.
In all directions around the Buddha
Draw Victorious over the Three Worlds and the rest.

Then, in this maṇḍala, having performed the extensive rite of summoning and so on in the manner of the great maṇḍala, and having had the disciple enter, one should learn the wisdom of the secret mudrās of the maṇḍala of the four mudrās.

Having drawn the maṇḍala of the four mudrās oneself,
And recited the purity of the nature of reality,
By dwelling together with a woman,
One will attain accomplishment.
Having drawn the maṇḍala of the four mudrās oneself,
And recited the purity of the nature of reality,
By gazing at a woman with desire,
One will attain accomplishment.
Having drawn the maṇḍala of the four mudrās oneself,
And recited the purity of the nature of reality,
One succeeds by adorning a beautiful woman.
Having drawn the maṇḍala of the four mudrās oneself,
And recited the purity of the nature of reality,
If one embraces her, one attains every accomplishment.

Here the mudrās of the purity of the nature of reality are these:
oṃ sarva tathāgata viśuddha dharmate ho oṃ vajra viśuddha dṛṣṭi ja oṃ sarva viśuddha tri hūṃ oṃ sarva viśuddha kāya vaṃ mana karma vajrī hūṃ

Next, one should learn the wisdom of the secret and hidden mudrās of the maṇḍala of the four mudrās.

Having entered this maṇḍala,
And delighted a supreme woman
With the five qualities of sense pleasure,
One will attain the highest accomplishment.

Then its heart-mantra is spoken:
ho vajra kāma

Then, having learned with the extensive rite the four samaya mudrās, beginning with the trident mudrā pressed down by the vajra, in the proper way, and having struck vajra cymbals, drums and percussion in the manner of these four mudrās, one should sing and offer the heart-mantra of the Vajrasattva compendium, and then make offering with the mudrās, the responding mudrās, the subsidiary mudrās, the wisdom mudrās and the offering of dance. Here the offering made with the offering of dance is this:

Through the application of the vajra dance,
The two fingers of Vajracaṇḍa
In the mudrā of Vajra Hūṃ
Should be bound right at the heart.
Likewise, dancing, the left hand
Should be grasped by the right fist,
And turning it, on the forehead
One should place the face of the fingers.
Likewise, releasing the dance,
Join an even lotus bud,
And placing the fingers at the heart,
Bow with a heart that is moved.
Evening the fingers of Vajracaṇḍa,
Bending them, join their tips,
And turning them from there, at the crown of the head
Place the fingertips.

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this wrathful samaya of his own vajra samaya:
hūṃ

Then its maṇḍala is explained.

Next, what is to be fully explained
Is the sublime secret maṇḍala.
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
It is called Vajra Hūṃ.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala
One should draw the whole maṇḍala.
In its center, drawn well,

Is the vajra holder on a moon disk,
With the great mudrā of Vajra Hūṃ,
Holding a vajra in his hand,
Standing in the posture with one leg extended and one drawn in,
With color and form made as they should be.

Then here, having performed the whole extensive rite of the maṇḍala of the secret mudrās, one should learn the wisdom of the secret mudrā called Vajra Hūṃ.

Having entered this maṇḍala,
And having practiced by placing
The finger of Victorious over the Three Worlds in the opening,
One will accomplish all rites.

Then this heart-mantra of practice is spoken:
hūṃ vajra samaya krita

Then one should learn the wisdom of the mudrā called Vajra Hūṃ.

Having duly entered the maṇḍala,
Abiding in the supreme great mudrā,
When one abides in it, it is called Vajra Hūṃ:
One will perform all rites.

Here he spoke its heart-mantra of practice:
hūṃ vajra samya hūṃ

Then, having learned the binding of the four mudrās in the proper way, one will in the same way gain accomplishment. The accomplishments are shared by everything drawn on cloth and the like as in the maṇḍala, and by all images, cast ones and the rest. This is the maṇḍala of the single mudrā.

Then Vajrapāṇi called upon all the tathāgatas and spoke these words: "Blessed Ones, may all the tathāgatas empower this family of mine, so that all sentient beings, even when they act just as they please, may attain all accomplishments."

Then again the Blessed Ones, all the tathāgatas, gathered together and, in order to empower the King of Ritual Manuals of Victorious over the Three Worlds, declared:

"Vajrasattva, excellent are you!
Vajraratna, excellent are you!
Vajradharma, you too are excellent!
Vajrakarma, you are most excellent!
This sūtra has been well taught:
The unsurpassed Vajra Vehicle,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The very essence of the Great Vehicle."

Here is completed the extensive rite of the Ritual Manual of the Great Vajra, from the Great Ritual Manual of the Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed Ones, all the tathāgatas, gathered together and, though they knew, spoke these words to the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi: "Listen to the command of the Blessed Ones, all the tathāgatas: you too must release this body of Maheśvara (Śiva) from beneath your foot."

Then the Blessed Vajrapāṇi addressed all the tathāgatas with these words: "The Blessed One empowered me as the wrathful one who tames all the wicked, and I have pressed him down. How then am I to release him?"

Then, in order to restore life to the body of Maheśvara, lord of all three worlds without exception, all the tathāgatas drew forth from their own hearts this heart mantra that summons the consciousness of the dead:

oṃ vajrasatva hūṃ ja

Then the binding of its mudrā was explained:

Bind the Secret Hook tightly,
And extend the little fingers together;
When it is placed on the head of the dead,
Life will be regained once more.

Then, the instant it was obtained, the Blessed One, the tathāgata Bhasmeśvaranirghoṣa, came back from the world system called Covered with Ashes, entered that body of Īśvara, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The wisdom of the buddhas
Of all the buddhas is unsurpassed,
Since even this dead body
Has become an element of life.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this heart mantra called Lifting the Foot:

oṃ vajra muḥ

Then the binding of its mudrā was explained:

Joining the tips of the vajra-wrath fingers well,
Binding them tightly and placing them,
One turns those vajras around
And draws them out from beneath.

Then, the instant these were spoken, the Great God (Śiva) knew for himself that he was freed from beneath the feet of the great Vajradhara. Then that tathāgata blessed the body of Maheśvara to revive and, for the benefit of all sentient beings in this world system and in order to tame all the wicked, installed it as his own regent.

Then from the sole of Vajrapāṇi's foot there arose the mudrā of the awakening mind of all the tathāgatas, called Moon Foot:

oṃ candrottāre samantabhadrakiraṇi mahāvajriṇi hūṃ

Then the binding of its mudrā was explained:

Binding the vajra bond tightly,
With thumbs and little fingers joined evenly,
When, so joined, they are well extended,
It is known as the Vajra Line.

Then, the instant it arose, the tathāgata Candrottara emerged from that sole of the foot, and on the head of Maheśvara, at the mark where Vajrapāṇi's foot had pressed, a half moon came to rest and remained there on the left side.

Then all the tathāgatas, as a companion to Vajrapāṇi, placed a vajra trident in his hand and consecrated him with the vajra name "Vajravidyottama, Vajravidyottama," conferring the consecration. Then Vajravidyottama, the bodhisattva, the great being, whirling that vajra trident like a wheel of firebrand, made offering with the offering of dance and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The awakening mind
Of all the buddhas is unsurpassed:
Touched in the dance by the supreme foot,
One gains accomplishment as buddhahood.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, rose from that samādhi of the wrathful one and addressed the Blessed One with these words: "Blessed One, all the tathāgatas placed the vajra in my hand and consecrated me as Vajrapāṇi. Therefore I shall arrange the outer vajra family, the gods and the rest, in their stations within this great maṇḍala of Victorious over the Three Worlds, and so make those beings irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening."

Then the Blessed Vairocana, the tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly and completely awakened buddha, spoke this uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas:

oṃ vajrasatva uṣṇīṣa hūṃ phaṭ

Then, the instant this was spoken, from the uṣṇīṣas of all the tathāgatas that Blessed Vajrapāṇi became rays of light of many colors, illuminated all world systems, and then gathered together again and settled on the crown of the Blessed Vajrapāṇi in the form of the uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas. Then from that mass of splendor there arose this uṣṇīṣa of all the tathāgatas:

oṃ sarvatathāgatoṣṇīṣa anavalokite mūrdhani tejorāśi oṃ hūṃ jvala jvala dhaka dhaka dara dara vidara vidara cchinda cchinda bhinda bhinda hūṃ hūṃ phaḍ phaḍ svāhā

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ nisumbha vajra hūṃ phaḍ

Then Vajrapāṇi drew forth this heart mantra from his own heart:

oṃ ṭakki jaḥ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajraratna uttama jñālaya hūṃ phaṭ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ svabhāvaśuddhāḥ vajrapadma śodhaya sarvaṃ vidyottama hūṃ phaṭ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajrakarma uttama vajradhara samayamanusmara sumbha nisumbha ākarṣaya praveśaya āveśaya bhanadhaya samayaṃ grahaya sarvakarmāṇi mai kuru mahāsatva hūṃ phaṭ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajravidyottama, offered his own heart mantra in order to pay homage at the feet of the Blessed Vajrapāṇi:

oṃ sumbha nisumbha vajravidyottama hūṃ phaṭ

Then the bodhisattva Vajracaṇḍa, king of vidyās, bowed at both feet of the Blessed One and spoke this heart mantra of his own:

Then Vajrāyudha offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajrāsphudhadāmaka hūṃ phaṭ

These are the kings of vidyās.

Then Vajrakuṇḍalī, the vajra wrathful one, bowed at the feet of the Blessed Vajrapāṇi and offered him this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ vajrakuṇḍali mahāvajrakrodha gṛhṇa hana hana daha daha paca vidhvansaya vajreṇa mudanaṃ balayati bhṛtasahṛdaya vajrakrodha hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajraprabha, the vajra wrathful one, offered this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ vajraprabha māraya syoma krodha hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajradaṇḍa, the vajra wrathful one, offered this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ vajradaṇḍaya sarvāduṣṭa mahākrodha hūṃ phaḍ

Then the vajra wrathful one Vajrapiṅgala offered this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ vajrapiṅgala viśaya sarvaduṣṭaṃ ṣḍaṃ vi mahākrodha huṃ phaṭ

These are the vajra wrathful ones.

Then Vajra Elephant Trunk, lord of hosts, offered this heart mantra to the Blessed Vajrapāṇi:

oṃ vajraśodha mahāgaṇapati rakṣa sarvaduṣṭebhyo vajradhara ājñāvaya hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajramālā offered this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ māla gaṇpati mālaya ākarṣaya praveśaya vaśaṃ kuru māraya hūṃ phaḍ

Then Vajravaśī offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajravaśi mahāgaṇapati vaśaṃ kuru hūṃ phaḍ

Then Vijayavajra, lord of hosts, offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajravijaya vijaya mahāgaṇapati hūṃ phaḍ

These are the lords of hosts (gaṇapatis).

Then Vajramusala, the vajra messenger, offered this heart mantra of his own to Vajrapāṇi:

oṃ vajramusala kuru sarvaduṣṭaṃ huṃ phaṭ

Then Vajrānila, the messenger, offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajranīla mahāvega gaṇapati sarvaduṣṭa hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajrānala, the messenger, offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajra anala mahāduṣṭa jvālaya sarva bhasmi kuru sarvaduṣṭaṃ hūṃ phaḍ

Vajrabhairava, the great messenger, offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajrabhairava vajra hūṃ davaśala sarvaduṣṭana mahāyakṣa hūṃ phaṭ

These are the messengers.

Then Vajrāṅkuśa, the vajra servant, offered this heart mantra of his own to the Blessed Vajrapāṇi:

oṃ vajra aṃkuśa ākarṣaya sarvaṃ mahācitta hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajrakāla offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajrakāla mahāmṛtyu mutbāda hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajravināyaka offered his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajravināyakasya vighnan kuru hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajra Nāgavajra bowed at the feet of Vajrapāṇi and offered this heart mantra of his own:

oṃ vajranāgavajra ānaya sarvadanadane hiryagarnane mukta aladkāravini sarvopakāraṇani vajradhara samayamanusmara kata bhinda bhinda hara hara prāṇāṃ mahāccheda hūṃ phaṭ

These are the servants.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this samaya for summoning the whole vajra family:

oṃ vajra aṃkuśa ākarṣaya hūṃ phaṭ

Then he spoke this samaya for making them enter:

oṃ vajravāśākaḍḍhya hūṃ

Then he spoke the binding of all:

hūṃ vajrasphoṭa vaṃ

Then he spoke the heart mantra of action:

oṃ vajrakarma samaya krita

Then the Blessed Vajrapāṇi explained this great maṇḍala of all the families:

Next I shall fully explain
The supreme great maṇḍala.
Like the wheel of Dharma,
Lay out the whole maṇḍala with the cord.

For that, this is the heart mantra for laying out the cord:

oṃ sarvavajrasūtraṃ ākarṣaya sarvamaṇḍala hūṃ

In the very center of the maṇḍala
Drive in a peg of khadira wood;
Then make the cord twofold,
And with it lay out the lines.

For that, this is the heart mantra of the peg:

oṃ vajra kīlaya kīlaya sarvavighāṃ bandha hūṃ phaṭ

Having four cords,
Lay out a circular maṇḍala with the cord.
Then, going outside it,
Do the same at twice the measure.
In three tiers of it
Lay out the outer maṇḍala with the cord.
In the intermediate directions, like the spokes of a wheel,
Lay out the corner lines with the cord.
This is the rite of laying out the cord.

Then, into what has been laid out with the cord,
Fill in pure colors.
Holding them in the left vajra fist,
Take them up according to the rite.
First draw, and afterward as you please.

For that, this is the heart mantra of the colors:

oṃ vajraraṅga samaya hūṃ

Then the vajra master as well,
Resting in meditative equipoise and seated at the center,
Should open the four vajra doors,
Even with the mind alone.

For that, this is the heart mantra for opening the doors:

oṃ vajra udghaṭa samaya praveśaya śīghaṃ smara vajrasamaya hūṃ phaṭ

Of gold, or else of silver,
Or else drawn on the ground in the middle,
Or upon a square slab,
Set an image of the Buddha.

For that, this is the heart mantra of all the buddhas:

oṃ sarvavid

On all sides of the Buddha
The four great beings are placed.
In front is Vajrapāṇi,
Who is called Victorious over the Three Worlds.

For that, these are the heart mantras of the great beings:

oṃ sumbha nisumbha hūṃ gṛhṇa gṛhṇa hūṃ gṛhṇāpaya gṛhṇapaya hūṃ ānaya ho bhagavāṃ vajra hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajrabhṛkuṭṝ krodha ānaya sarvaṃ ratna hīḥ hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajradṛṣṭi krodha dṛṣṭa māraya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vajraviśva krodha kuru sarva viśvarūpataya siddhaye hūṃ phaṭ

When entering or coming out,
Imagine slipping beneath the cord,
And pronounce the Vajra Force:

With it, step across the line.

For that, this is the heart mantra of Vajra Force:

oṃ vajra vaigākrama hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
Likewise, in the first maṇḍala,
Above and below, in their proper order,
Draw Vajramāyā and the others.

For that, these are the samaya heart mantras:

oṃ vajracakra hūṃ oṃ vajraghaṇṭa hūṃ oṃ vajradaṇḍakaśa hūṃ oṃ vajra āyudha hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
Likewise the second maṇḍala:
Vajrakuṇḍalī and the others,
The vajra wrathful ones, should be placed there.

For that, these are their heart mantras:

oṃ prajvalita dīpta vajra hūṃ oṃ vajrasaume hūṃ oṃ vajradaṇḍa hūṃ oṃ vajravikṛha hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
In the four doors as well,
Vajra Elephant Trunk and the others,
All of them, draw in their order.

These are their samaya heart mantras:

oṃ vajradhama hūṃ oṃ vajramāla hūṃ oṃ vajra artha hūṃ oṃ vajra asi hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
What is drawn in the third maṇḍala,
Above and below in their proper order,
Is Vajramusala and the others.

These are their heart mantras:

oṃ vajramusala hūṃ oṃ vajrapāta hūṃ oṃ vajrajvāla hūṃ oṃ vajragraha hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
What is drawn in the fourth maṇḍala
Is Vajrāṅkuśa and the other servants,
Above and below in their order.

These are their heart mantras:

oṃ vajradaṃṣṭrā huṃ oṃ vajramāraṇa hūṃ oṃ vajravega hūṃ oṃ vajraharaṇa hūṃ

Having stepped across with the Vajra Force,
In laying out the outer maṇḍala,
Above and below in their proper order,
Draw all the mātṛkā goddesses.
Then at the four vajra doors as well
Place the doorkeepers likewise.
Then what is further explained
Accords with the extensive rite.

Then, having performed in this great maṇḍala of the wheel of the three worlds all the actions such as summoning, the vajra master himself binds the mudrā of the vajra wrathful one Tirintiri and commands the disciple thus: "I shall generate in you the wisdom of the vajra samaya. Do not speak of it to anyone, lest, by failing to avoid calamity, you meet your death and fall into hell." Having commanded this, he gives this heart mantra of the oath. Also show the mudrā of the vajra wrathful one Tirintiri:

If you transgress the samaya,
The samaya of the great vajra wrathful one
Will burn your family,
And, beginning from the brain,
Will bring ruin upon your bodies.

This is the binding of the samaya.

Then one binds with this heart mantra, the karma mudrā of holding the vajra:

oṃ sarvatathāgata vajradhāra gṛhṇa bandha samaya hūṃ

Then the binding of this mudrā is explained:

Place the two hands one above the other,
And link thumbs and little fingers:
This samaya, the karma mudrā,

Is also called the Vajra Bond.

Then one consecrates with vajra water. The heart mantra is this:

oṃ vajra abhiṣeka abhiṣiñca vajradhāratasamagragraṃ

Then one covers the face with a veil and makes the disciple enter with this heart mantra:

oṃ vajra braveśaya vajra āveśaya adhitiṣṭha vajra hūṃ

Then, once the disciple has entered, a flower is cast with this heart mantra:

oṃ pratīccha adhitiṣṭha vajra hoḥ

Then, by whichever deity the flower falls upon, he will attain accomplishment. Then the face veil is removed and the maṇḍala is shown in its proper sequence, but the deity that is his is not shown to him. Why is that? Because there are sentient beings of wrong view who would not have faith, thinking, "How could this be the unfailing wisdom of the buddhas, the blessed ones? How could one whom Vajrapāṇi consecrated as a tathāgata in the vajra family be a tathāgata at all?" This is the samaya. Otherwise, it should be shown to those who have faith in the deities, after this heart mantra of the oath has been given to them.

Then he consecrates the disciple with the garland of vajra jewel insignia, places the karma vajra in both hands, bestows a vajra name, and does everything just as in the great maṇḍala of the vajra samaya.

Then the binding of the great mudrās is taught:

Binding the vajra bond tightly,
And joining the thumbs inside,
Bend the index fingers and cover them with both:
This is called the Sattva Uṣṇīṣa.

Having made the vajra bond,
Raise thumbs, middle fingers and little fingers:
This is called the Mass of Splendor,
The noble one of great splendor.

Binding the two vajra mudrās,
Linking thumbs and little fingers,
Bind the Hook tightly:
This belongs to the Great Supreme Vidyā.

Having bound the mudrā
Of the Great Supreme Vidyā, bind it firmly
At the heart with the faces of the thumbs:
This is declared the heart of the Sattva.

From that same mudrā, the middle and ring fingers,
These digits firmly bound,
Turned in the manner of Vajraratna,
Should be placed at the face.

Producing that same mudrā and placing it,
Turn it again at the heart:
This is called the Fourfold Flower,
The supreme vidyā of the lotus.

That same, beginning from the crown of the head,
Circle around the maṇḍala of the body:
This mudrā of the crossed vajra
Fully accomplishes Vajrakarma.

Binding the Sattvī Vajra tightly,
And raising the little fingers as a vajra:
This is the heart of all the vidyās;
This mudrā accomplishes everything.

Binding thumb and little finger,
The three middle fingers of the left
Form the three prongs, with the middle one as the tip,
Holding the vajra mudrā:
This supreme vajra vidyā
Is called Vajraśūla.

Then what is further explained
Is the examination of Vajramāyā and the others.
Binding the vajra bond tightly,
One should bind the left vajra:
This is declared the Vajra Fist,
And it belongs to the whole vajra family.
Making that vajra twofold,
With it all the emblems are placed as well.
The mudrās of the entire vajra family

Arise from it as well:
Fingers extended and placed above,
Index finger joined with thumb,
Placing it generally with "oṃ,"
And placing it above the vajra.

These are the assemblies of the great mudrās of the kings of vidyās.

The hand held well extended,
Likewise on the back of the hand,
The fist clenched and placed, the arm fiercely bent,
And turned toward the mouth.

This is the assembly of the mudrās of the vajra wrathful ones.

The left thumb placed above,
Joined in the manner of binding a garland,
The right in the gesture of giving wealth,
And the sword mudrā, the supreme fist.

These are the great mudrās of the lords of hosts, gathered together.

The right hand holding a pestle in front,
Likewise the hand extended,
With the right showing blazing light,
And the vajra fist shaken.

This is the assembly of the great mudrās of the messengers.

Fangs at the tips of the index fingers, with a scowl,
Striking with the staff and holding firm,
Bending the arm and drawing it out,
And the right drawn by the left.

This is the great assembly of the mudrās of the servants.

When they are shown throughout the maṇḍala,
It is done holding the vajra with the left hand.
Then what is further explained
Is accomplishment and action.

Whatever sattva, whatever his mudrā,
If one, oneself and by oneself,
Becomes thoroughly familiar with it as oneself,

The supreme mudrā will be accomplished.

The great uṣṇīṣa is a great protection;
The Mass of Splendor bestows full accomplishment;
The one called Vajra Hūṃ accomplishes everything;
Placed at the heart, it summons all.

These are the mudrās of the Buddha.

The vidyā of all accomplishes all:
It is the Supreme Vajra Vidyā.
Vajraśūla, the great mudrā,
Bestows the great accomplishment.
The vajra of illusion bestows full accomplishment;
With the bell one brings about true descent;
With the wooden staff one passes into nirvāṇa;
The vajra of vajras slays.

These are the kings of vidyās.

The supreme blazing one tames the wicked;
The supreme gentle one slays all;
The supreme staff is slaying;
The terrifying eye strikes fear.

These are the mudrās of the vajra wrathful ones.

The intoxicating one makes utterly intoxicated;
The garland is declared to do all things;
The one who makes desire brings joy;
The slayer slays all.

These are the mudrās of the hosts.

The pestle crushes the vicious;
Likewise the woven cloth;
The supreme blazing one burns the vicious;
The yakṣiṇī calls the grahas.

These are the mudrās of the messengers.

The vajra fang devours;
The slayer slays all;
The obstructress thoroughly obstructs;

And Hārītī carries off all.

These are the mudrās of the servants.

Here is completed the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala of the wheel of the three worlds, from the King of Ritual Manuals of the Great Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the Blessing Arisen from the Samaya of the Vajra Dhāraṇī of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajraghaṇḍake hūṃ

Vajramuni said:

oṃ vajradantakaṣṭhe hūṃ

Vajrāyudha said:

oṃ vajre hūṃ

These are the samaya mudrās of the kings of vidyās.

Then Vajrakuṇḍalī, the vajra wrathful one, spoke this samaya mudrā of his own heart mantra:

oṃ vajrajvāle hūṃ

Then Vajraprabha said:

oṃ vajrasaume hūṃ

Then Vajradaṇḍa said:

oṃ vajradaṇḍe hūṃ

Vajrapiṅgala said:

These are the samaya mudrās of the vajra wrathful ones.

Then Vajra Elephant Trunk spoke his own samaya mudrā:

oṃ vajramede hūṃ

Vajramālā said:

oṃ vajramāle hūṃ

Vajravaśī said:

oṃ vajra abhiṣe hūṃ

Vijayavajra said:

oṃ vajra aparājita hūṃ

These are the samaya mudrās of the lords of hosts.

Then Vajramusala spoke his own samaya mudrās:

oṃ vajramusalagrahe hūṃ

Then Vajrānila said:

oṃ vajravāte hūṃ

Vajrānala said:

oṃ vajrajvāle hūṃ

Vajrabhairava said:

oṃ vajragrahe hūṃ

These are the samaya mudrās of the vajra messengers.

Then Vajrāṅkuśa said:

oṃ vajradaṃṣṭre hūṃ

Vajrakāla said:

oṃ vajravaśe hūṃ

Vajravināyaka said:

oṃ vajravighnan hūṃ

Vajra Nāgavajra said:

oṃ vajraharaṇi hūṃ

These are the samaya mudrās of the vajra servants.

Then again Vajrapāṇi spoke this vajra maṇḍala of the whole vajra family:

Next, what is to be explained
Is the supreme vajra maṇḍala.
For peaceful accomplishment, the door is to the north;
Lay out the outer maṇḍala with the cord.
Within it, there as well,
Likewise make the door first to the east.
In its center, as is fitting,
An image of the Buddha should be placed.
Victorious over the Three Worlds and the others,
Those four, are placed on all its sides.
Likewise, as the principal of the maṇḍala,
The vajra mudrā should be drawn.
In all of its directions
The mudrās of the family should be drawn.
Vajra Elephant Trunk and the others,
Those four, are placed on all its sides.
Likewise, as the principal of the maṇḍala,
The vajra mudrā should be drawn.
In all of its directions
The mudrās of the family should be drawn.

Vajra Elephant Trunk and the others,
The four, are the guardians of the doors.
Bhīmā, Śrī, the Mistress of Sound,
And Durgā, from the left-hand corners:
The mudrās of the outer corners,
These very ones, should be drawn.
In the outer maṇḍalas
The goddesses should be drawn.
Then the extensive rites
Shall be explained just as they are.

Then, in this vajra maṇḍala, having done everything as one wishes and having performed the samaya actions with Vajrāṅkuśa and the others, bind the disciple according to the rite of holding the vajra, and command him: "Do not speak of these samaya mudrās in front of anyone who has not seen the samaya. Do not spread the secret." Then place the karma vajra upon the mudrā of holding the vajra and make him enter according to the rite. Once he has entered, have him let fall that vajra in the same way. Whichever deity it falls upon, he comes under the power of that one's samaya mudrā, and by it he performs all actions. Then remove the face veil, show him the maṇḍala in its order, and tell him the secret of the samaya mudrās:

This samaya mudrā of yours
Will always perform every action:
It is like mothers and sisters,
Like wives and daughters.

For that, these are its heart mantras:

oṃ sarvagamani sarvavāktre svadhaya guhyavajriṇi hūṃ phaṭ

By reciting this once, one brings all women under one's power, and if one has relations with them it will not become contrary to the Dharma. Having enjoyed whatever one pleases, one should practice. Then, knowing all the mudrās with the mind for the purification of all sentient beings, one also performs all the supreme actions. Thus spoke the Blessed Vajradhara.

Then the samaya mudrās are to be learned:

The samaya wrathful one, index fingers raised as a crest,
Should be bound tightly at the heart as well.

From the ūrṇā at the brow, draw it out from the mouth;
Placing it at the crown, make it twofold.
With the index finger of the left vajra
Press down the three-pointed spearhead.
By binding this, perfectly,
The Supreme Vidyā will be accomplished as well.
The whole vajra family
Is gathered in the left vajra as its principal.
In accordance with the samaya rite,
I shall explain the binding of the mudrās.
For all, the wheel, with fingertips drawn together;
The bell mudrā likewise;
Likewise the mudrā of oṃ,
And making the lion's ears.

These are the mudrās of the kings of vidyās.

Holding the blaze all around,
And light, perfectly gathered,
Holding the fist of the staff,
And circling the cheek mudrā.

These are the samayas of the wrathful ones.

The drinking mudrā and the garland,
Pressing the vajra, which is the knot,
And placing at the crown, which belongs to the hosts:
These are the protection of the maṇḍala.

These are the samayas of the hosts.

The hand bent and placed at the mouth,
And circled to the back as well;
The blazing one emitting sparks,
Opened and then held at the mouth.

These are the samayas of the female messengers.

The two last fingers placed in the mouth,
Squeezing and pressing hard,
Crossing by crossing the arms,
And swiftly snatching likewise.

These are the samayas of the female servants.

Here is completed the extensive rite of the vajra dhāraṇī maṇḍala of the whole vajra family, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered the samādhi called the Blessing of Vajradhātu Arisen from the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas, and spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajravid

Then again Vajrapāṇi spoke this Dharma samaya of his own:

oṃ hana hana vajra hūṃ phaṭ

Then again Vajragarbha spoke this Dharma samaya of his own:

oṃ hara hara hūṃ phaṭ

Then again Vajranetra spoke this Dharma samaya of his own:

oṃ mara mara hūṃ phaṭ

Then again Vajraviśva spoke this Dharma samaya of his own:

oṃ kuru kuru hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajravidyottama spoke this Dharma samaya of his own:

oṃ hūṃ hūṃ phaṭ

Then Vajramāyā said:

oṃ cchinda cchinda hūṃ phaṭ oṃ āviśa āviśa hūṃ phaṭ oṃ bhūrbuvasvaḥ hūṃ phaṭ oṃ bhindha bhindha hūṃ phaṭ

These are of the kings of vidyās.

oṃ dama dama hūṃ phaṭ oṃ māraya māraya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ ghātaya ghātaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ bhaya bhaya hūṃ phaṭ

These are of the wrathful ones.

oṃ dama dama hūṃ phaṭ oṃ bandha bandha hūṃ phaṭ oṃ vaśāṃ bhava hūṃ phaṭ oṃ jaya jaya hūṃ phaṭ

These are of the hosts.

oṃ bhyo bhyo hūṃ phaṭ oṃ ghu ghu hūṃ phaṭ oṃ jvāla jvāla hūṃ phaṭ oṃ khāda khāda hūṃ phaṭ

These are of the messengers.

oṃ khana khana hūṃ phaṭ oṃ mara mara hūṃ phaṭ oṃ gṛhṇa gṛhṇa hūṃ phaṭ oṃ pibha pibha hūṃ phaṭ

These are of the female servants.

Then again Vajrapāṇi spoke this Dharma samaya maṇḍala of the whole vajra family:

Next, what is to be explained
Is the maṇḍala of the great samaya.
Like the wheel of the three worlds,
All the maṇḍalas should be drawn.
The Buddha, Vajradhara and the rest,
All of them are in union.
In the manner of the Dharma maṇḍala,
Place the emblems properly at the heart.

Then, having performed the actions according to the rite in this Dharma samaya maṇḍala, bind the mudrā of holding the vajra, the binding of the vajra bell, and say this: "Do not speak of it to anyone who has not seen the samaya and has not seen the family of the deity." While commanding him so, have him ring the bell. Having given this command, give him the heart mantra of the oath as well, saying:

Just as this bell is rung,
And just as its sound is,
So you, O karma vajra,
Will surely come to ruin,
If you show no respect to the vajra master,
Are unfriendly to your vajra companions,
Or are cruel to the kind and bring them grief:
If you should do these things.

Then remove the face veil, show him the maṇḍala, and teach him the wisdom of the Dharma samaya mudrās:

The Buddha, Vajradhara and the rest
Are just as in the Dharma maṇḍala.
Contemplating the sameness of all,
The Supreme Vajra Vidyā is born.
These beings are like an illusion;

Likewise suffering is like a bell;
All suffering passes into nirvāṇa;
The vajra destroyer is unsurpassed.

These are the samādhis of the kings of vidyās.

To tame beings, the supreme wrathful one;
By the peaceful one, one surely slays;
Like a staff, one strikes them down;
One terrifies those of wrong view.

These are the samādhis of the wrathful ones.

There is no hero like the intoxicated one;
There is no bond like the garland;
Through desire for women one masters beings;
By mere reliance, others are defeated.

These are the samādhis of the hosts.

It is the supreme of punishments by striking;
Among touches, it is that of the wind;
The splendid one is the supreme eater of offerings;
Among foods, blood is the finest.

These are the samādhis of the messengers.

Having entered as the lord of fangs,
All the lords of death dwell in his abode;
There is no obstructor beyond terror;
There is no taste beyond water.

These are the samādhis of the servants.

These are those of the vajra servants.

Then Vajrapāṇi again spoke this karma maṇḍala of the whole vajra family.

Next comes the full explanation:

The supreme karma maṇḍala:
In the manner of the vajra maṇḍala,
Lay out all the maṇḍalas with cord.

Lay out all the maṇḍalas with cord.
In all the supreme maṇḍalas
The Buddha should be set, seated in the center.
In their directions, in due order,
The great sattvas are placed.

In its center, together with his consort,
Is Vajravidyottama himself.
The secret ones, Vajralāsyā and the rest,
Worship with dance offerings and the like.
There, following the sequence of the goddesses,
In the manner of the wheel maṇḍala,
Their own mudrās, resembling the mudrās,
Should be drawn performing whatever they do.
For the worship of the buddhas and the vajra holders,
It is done in the manner of the vajra dance.
In the corners and in the quarters of the gates,
Incense and the rest, in due order.

Then, having performed in this karma maṇḍala the rites of summoning and the rest, bind the samaya mudrā of the karma of the vajra holder exactly as it should be, and say this: "You must not speak of this secret rite to anyone at all who has not seen the order of the deities and does not know the rites, lest your samaya be broken." Say that. The vajra master binds the samaya mudrā of the holder of his own karma vajra, looks with a wrathful gaze, and says this:

oṃ vajra tvarya āveśaya praveśaya nṛte vaya sarva karma siddhi mi prayaccha hūṃ āḥ hūṃ a la la la la vajri

Then again, when it has descended upon oneself, one enters by oneself, and one should worship with the dance offerings of the mudrās that resemble the mudrās. From then on, with body, speech, gaze, mind, and the vajra mudrās, one performs all rites as one wishes.

Then remove the covering of the face, and teach the wisdom of the mudrās of the dance offering:

Of the Buddha, the vajra holder, and the rest,
Making the supreme samaya twofold,
To Vajravidyottama
Offer Vajralāsyā and the rest.

All these vidyās as well,
In order, upper and lower, as is fitting,
With the mudrās of the dance offering,
Should worship the karma maṇḍala.
By way of the vajra dance
The great mudrās are summarized.
Having made the supreme samaya twofold,
One should release the karma mudrā.
If with this dance offering
One worships all the lords,
The rites of the great Vajradhara and the rest
Will surely be accomplished.

Here is completed the extensive rite of the maṇḍala of the whole vajra family of all tathāgatas.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi, having appointed all those of his family for the sake of all sentient beings and established them on the ground of irreversibility, though he knew, addressed the Blessed One thus: "Blessed One, if all the tathāgatas empower me to hold all secrets, what is that secret of the tathāgatas? Please tell me."

Then the Blessed One, all the tathāgatas, entered into the samādhi called the Secret Vajra and spoke this secret of all the tathāgatas:

In whatever way the nature of sentient beings
Leads them to be tamed,
In just that way, for the sake of beings,
Act through attachment and the rest, made pure.

Then Vajrapāṇi spoke this vajra secret of his own:

For the benefit of all sentient beings,
And for the sake of the buddhas' teaching,
Even if one kills all sentient beings,
One will not be stained by wrongdoing.

Then the bodhisattva Vajragarbha spoke this jewel secret of his own:

For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Through application for the buddhas' purpose,
Even if one steals the wealth of others,

One will not be stained by wrongdoing.

Then the bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this lotus secret of his own:

There is no bliss like that of passion.
Offering that to the Victors,
By resorting to the wives of others for the sake of beings,
One will gain merit.

Then the bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this karma secret of his own:

For the benefit of all sentient beings,
And for the sake of the buddhas' teaching,
By performing every kind of action,
One gains exceedingly great merit.

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, praised the Blessed One Vajradhara, the holder of secrets, saying "Excellent!":

Excellent are you, Vajrasattva!
Vajraratna, you are excellent!
Vajradharma, you are excellent!
Vajrakarma, you are excellent!
This sūtra has been well spoken:
The unsurpassed Vajra Vehicle,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The manifest gathering of the Great Vehicle.

Here is completed the Great King of Ritual Manuals called the Vajra Samaya of All Tathāgatas, from the Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas.

The sixth fascicle.

Then again all the tathāgatas gathered together as one, and the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi himself entreated Avalokiteśvara, the lord of all dharmas, with these hundred and eight names:

Eye of the buddhas, great eye,

Possessor of every samādhi and wisdom,
Vajra eye, homage to you!
These qualities that embody all,
Your hundred and eight names:
When one praises with them and grows familiar with them,
One will attain the state of the Lord of the World.
Hero, we entreat you:
Having brought forth your own family,
The holy wheel of Dharma,
We ask you, great Sage, to teach it.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Avalokiteśvara, having heard the words of entreaty of all the tathāgatas, sat facing toward where the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Śākyamuni, was, placed that vajra lotus at his heart, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful!
This utterly pure vajra lotus of mine:
It is the father, and this is my son.
Please bless this family!

Then the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Vairocana, entered into the samādhi called the Lotus Blessing Arising from the Vajra Dharma Samaya of All

Tathāgatas, and drew forth from his own heart this heart of all the tathāgatas, called the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas:

hrīḥ

The very moment it emerged, from the hearts of all the tathāgatas there emerged lotus-like rays of light, of many kinds of colors, forms, signs, modes of conduct, and radiance. In all world systems they purified attachment and the rest and thoroughly refined the wisdom of dharmatā, and then they turned back again and entered the heart of the noble Avalokiteśvara.

Then the Blessed One, by means of what is called the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajra padmodtama hrīḥ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajra vidyā hūṃ phaṭ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajra ratnottama tī

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajranetra, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajra vidyottama hrīḥ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraviśva, spoke this supreme vidyā of his own:

oṃ vajra vidyottama aḥ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble Avalokiteśvara, entered into the samādhi called Displaying All Forms, and spoke this heart mantra of his own, called the Samaya of Taming All Beings:

oṃ vajra hūṃ hrīḥ ho

The very moment it was uttered, from the heart of the noble Avalokiteśvara that very Blessed One Vajradhara, holding the form of the noble Avalokiteśvara, entered the lotus. Holding the forms of all the sattvas, the tathāgatas and the rest, with the color, form, attire, and manifold ornaments of one who holds a lotus as the emblem of his mudrā, he took the body of a great bodhisattva and emerged. In all world systems he displayed individual forms according to how each sentient being is to be tamed, and tamed the realm of sentient beings entirely, leaving none out. Then he turned back again and, in the manner of the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala, took his seat upon the moon disks in all the directions of the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Śākyamuni, and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The skillful means of all the buddhas
Is compassion itself.
Wherever they tame by skillful means,
They become even gods.

Then again the Blessed One, the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble Avalokiteśvara, brought forth his own family and offered it to all the tathāgatas, so that the cause might be found for the result of giving fearlessness to all sentient beings, of benefit, of supreme attainment, of the wisdom of the vajra dharmatā, and of the superknowledges; and he spoke this great maṇḍala called Taming All Beings.

Next comes the full explanation:

The great maṇḍala, the supreme,
Because it resembles the Vajradhātu,
Is called Taming Beings.
It is four-sided, with four gates,
Adorned with four archways,
And endowed with four cords,
Adorned with silk banners and garlands.
At all the corners of the maṇḍala,
And at the junctions of the gates and their enclosures,
Adorned with vajra jewels,
Lay out the outer maṇḍala with cord.
Within it, the cord
Should be drawn as a square.
The second, its corners opening into gates,
Is to be made like a lotus.
In the manner of eight pillars,
Draw a lotus of eight petals.
In the center of its anthers
Place an image of the Buddha.

For that, the heart mantra for placing the Buddha is this:

buddha hūṃ

The drawing of the buddhas in all directions:
Abiding in the centers of lotuses,
The vajra, the jewel, the lotus,
And the manifold lotus likewise.

For that, their heart mantras are these:

oṃ hūṃ hrīḥ kṛ

In the maṇḍala of Taming Beings,
Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
There draw Avalokiteśvara,
Emanating every form.
In all the directions around him,
In the manner of the vajra swagger and the rest,
Draw the great sattvas, the Buddha and the rest,
Holding lotuses as their emblems.

Their heart mantras are these:

āḥ oṃ tathāgata dharma hūṃ oṃ vajra padma aṃkuśa koṣa dhāra vajra satva hūṃ phaṭ oṃ māraya māraya padma kusuma āyudha dhara amogha śara ho oṃ padma sambha padma hasta sādhu hūṃ

Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
The second maṇḍala is likewise.
What is drawn in its center:
In the midst of a topknot, the Tathāgata too.
In all the directions around it,
In the manner of Bhṛkuṭī and the rest,
Draw them holding lotuses as emblems,
Arranged upper and lower in due order.

For that, their heart mantras are these:

hūṃ oṃ padma bhṛkuṭī ṭi ṭi tra oṃ padma sūrya jrāla hūṃ oṃ padma maṇi ketu dhara candra prahadala avalokiteśvara dehi me sarva artana śrīghraṃ samaya hūṃ oṃ padma aṭṭahāsa eka darśa muka ha ha ha ha hūṃ

Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
The third maṇḍala too is likewise.

The great sattva, in union,
Should be drawn seated upon a lotus.
In all the directions around him,
Arranged upper and lower in due order,
In the manner of the Lotus and the rest,
Place the great sattvas too.

For that, their heart mantras are these:

hrīḥ oṃ tārā padma avalokaya māma samayasatā hūṃ oṃ padma kumāra padma śakti dhara khaḍgena cchinda cchinda hūṃ phaṭ oṃ padma nīla kaṇtha śarak cakra gata padma pāṇi vyāghra carmma nivasani kṛṣṇa sarva kṛta yajño vavāti ajina rmma pa ca ca ntot dhari ya nārāyaṇa rūpa dhare tṛni mukha aṭṭā ṭṭa hāsana praveśaya samayana dehi me siddhi avalokiteśvara hūṃ oṃ brahma padma saṃbhava japa java padma pta śa hūṃ

Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
The fourth maṇḍala too is likewise.
There draw the four-faced Lotus One,
Holding a lotus spear.
In all the directions around him,
In the manner of Vajranṛtyā and the rest,
Draw those holding lotuses as emblems,
Following the rite of the great sattvas.

Their heart mantras are these:

hrīḥ oṃ padma narteśvara nātha pūjaya sarva tathāgata vajra karma samaya ākarṣaya praveśaya bandhaya āveśaya sarva karma siddhi me prayaccha avalokiteśvara hūṃ oṃ vayana dhatada avalokiteśvara rakṣa bandhaya kavace samaye hūṃ oṃ mahā pracaṇṭe viśva rūpa cika padma daṃṣṭa ākarāla viśvan vajra hṛdaya sarva padma yakṣa khāda khāda dhi kdhi kdhi kdhi ke oṃ padma muṣṭi samaya stvaṃ bandha hūṃ phaṭ

Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
What is drawn at all the corners:
In the manner of Vajralāsyā and the rest,
The goddesses Padmalāsyā and the rest.

Their mudrās are these:

oṃ padma lāsye rāgaya mahā devi rāga mahā pūja samya hūṃ oṃ padma mśale abhiṣiñca abhiṣeka pūjā samaya hūṃ oṃ padma gīte gīte pūjā samaya hūṃ oṃ padma nretye nretye sarva pūja pravartan samaye hūṃ

Having stepped across with Vajra Force,
At the corners of the outer maṇḍala,
The four, the Lotus Offering and the rest,
Draw the offering goddesses.

For that, their offering mudrās are these:

oṃ padma ddūpe pūja samaye prahādaya padma kula deyite mahā gaṇi padma rati hūṃ oṃ padma puṣpe pūjā samaya padma vāsini mahā śriye padma kula pratihara sarva artha sādhaya hūṃ oṃ padma dīpa pūjā samaye padma kula sunri mahā dutya āloka vajra vacinaya padma sarasvati hūṃ oṃ padma gandha pūjā samaye mahā padma kula cite kuru sarva karmāṇi me padma siddhi hūṃ

Then at the four lotus gates,
With the whole assembly and the rest, as is fitting,
Draw them well, exactly as they should be,
And draw their heart mantras according to their meaning.

oṃ hayagrīva mahā padma aṃkuśaya ākarṣaya śīghā sarva padma kula samayaṃ padma aṃkuśa dhāra hūṃ jaḥ oṃ amogha pāśa krodha ākarṣaya praveśaya mahā paśupati yama varuṇa kuvera brahma veśa dhāra padma kula samayāṃ hūṃ hūṃ oṃ padma sphoṭa sphoṭa bandha sarva padma kula samayāṃ śīghraṃ hūṃ vaṃ oṃ ṣaṃmukha sanadkumāra veśa dhara padma ghaṇṭe āveśaya sarva padma kula samayāṃ sarva mudrāṃ bandhaya sarva siddhi mme prayaccha padma āpeśa aḥ aḥ aḥ aḥ

Next, the extensive rite of the lotus maṇḍala called Taming All Beings is explained. First of all, the lotus master himself binds the vajra lotus samaya mudrā and enters as is proper; then, in the manner of the great Vajradhātu maṇḍala, he should perform the rites with this heart mantra:

oṃ mahā padma sphoṭa adhitiṣṭha a

Then, having likewise received the command, he empowers himself with the samaya mudrā, learns the lotus emblem, pronounces his own lotus name, and should perform the rites with the Lotus Hook and the rest. Then, with those same Dharma mudrās, he should accomplish the great sattvas. The accomplishments, too, are then obtained in the same way.

Then the lotus disciples should be brought in. First of all, give the lotus disciples the heart mantra of the oath and instruct them thus:

Today, within your heart
The Lotus Sattva himself abides.
Should you speak of this way,
He will at once split it open and depart.

Then instruct them further thus: "Do not speak of this extensive secret rite to anyone at all, lest, not having escaped misery, you die and fall into the hells." Then one should bind the samaya mudrā with this heart mantra:

oṃ vajra padma samaya stvaṃ

Then, having him put on white clothing and covered his face with white silk, he should be brought in. The heart mantra is this:

oṃ padma samaya hūṃ

Then, having performed the rites as is proper, place the lotus emblem in his hand:

oṃ padma hasta vajra dharma hana palaya heni

He in turn should ask, "What is the dharmatā of the lotus?" To him one should reply thus:

Just as this red lotus
Is not stained by the faults of desire,
So, if one meditates on all as pure,
One will not be stained by wrongdoing.

This is the dharmatā in this case.

Then one should teach the wisdom of the mudrās of the lotus family:

Having drawn a lotus at the heart,
If one meditates on the lotus of the heart,
Even the Glory of the Lotus comes under one's power,
So what need is there to speak of ordinary women?
Having drawn the form of a buddha on the forehead,
If one constantly meditates on it,
Through that meditation, swiftly,
One will obtain empowerment.
Within the mouth, upon the tongue,
If one meditates well on the form of a buddha,

The goddess of speech herself
Will always dwell in one's mouth.
At the center of the crown protuberance, a lotus,
Placed there in union:
If one meditates on the crown lotus,
Even flight through the sky comes under one's power.

Their heart mantras are these:

oṃ padma śreyaṃ bhāṣaya ho oṃ padma abhiṣeka prayaccha vaṃ padma sarasthi viśodhaya hūṃ oṃ padma udhagraṃ vaśiṃ kuru jaḥ

Whether on a wall or in the sky,
If one meditates on the holy lotus,
This is the supreme means
Of bringing all sentient beings under one's power.

In the sky or else in another quarter,
Having meditated on the holy lotus,
Whenever one sees it, take it up then,
And one becomes invisible at will.
On a wall or else in the sky,
Having drawn a crossed lotus,
Whenever one has seen it and taken it up,
Then one takes on manifold forms.
In the sky or else in another quarter,
Having meditated on the vajra lotus,
By taking it up, in a single instant
One becomes a lotus vidyādhara.

Their heart mantras are these:

oṃ vajra jagad vaśi jñāna padma āveśaya oṃ jñāma padma tiṣṭha aśana va kuru vaṃ oṃ samādhi viśva padma tiṣṭha rūpaṃ nedharaśaya bhagavāṃ vaṃ oṃ samādhi vajra padmoṣṭha adhitiṣṭha śīghraṃ hri

In all maṇḍalas and the like,
Having drawn Avalokiteśvara,
Before him, with the supreme mudrā
Of Hayagrīva, one should draw beings in.
In all maṇḍalas and the like,

One should draw Avalokiteśvara;
With the mudrā of the unfailing noose
He brings all beings under control.
In all maṇḍalas and the like,
One should draw Avalokiteśvara;
Before him, of the lotus,
Bind the mudrā of the supreme chain.
In all maṇḍalas and the like,
Draw Avalokiteśvara; before him,
By means of the lotus bell,
Is the supreme causing all to be possessed.

For that, their heart mantras are these:

oṃ padma ākarṣaya sarva mahā satvaṃ hūṃ jaḥ oṃ amogha pāśa krodha hūṃ ho hi oṃ padma sphoṭa vaṃ oṃ padma ghanṭa āveśaya sarva aḥ

By oneself, oneself
As the four-faced Lotus sattva
Meditating, and then accomplished,
In an instant one takes on that form.
Thus, oneself by oneself
Abiding in the samādhi of Vajradharma,
If one meditates on the lotus of lotuses,
One attains the inexhaustible state.
At the center of Avalokiteśvara's crown,
If one meditates on oneself, by oneself,
In the form of a buddha,
One becomes equal even to Amitāyus.
Abiding in samādhi through manifold forms,
If in the samādhi of manifold forms
One meditates on oneself,
One becomes equal to Avalokiteśvara.

For that, their heart mantras are these:

padma viśva dharma kaya padma buddha abhiṣeka avalokiteśvara

Next, the wisdom of the mudrās of all the great maṇḍalas is taught. First of all, there is the wisdom of the great mudrā:

Just as in the manner of a painting,
Abiding at the center of a moon disk,
As the sattva abiding upon a lotus,
Meditate on oneself by oneself.

Then their actions are these:

If one binds the great buddha mudrā,
One becomes equal to Amitāyus.
If one binds the vajra lotus,
One becomes equal to Avalokiteśvara.
If one binds with the buddha empowerment,
The Sugata empowers that one.
Through the Lotus one gains the lotus samādhi.
Through the Manifold, the supreme manifold:
One tames by manifold forms
And is empowered with the buddha jewel.
Through the samādhi of the Lotus Sattva,
The Lotus Wrathful One, lordly glory.
Through Vajra Lokeśvara,
The supreme accomplishment of the lotus of desire.
Through the buddha empowerment, buddhahood itself;
The Vajra Lotus grants the supreme attainment.
The Lotus of Desire is endowed with great desire;
Through Joy, excellence is granted.
Through Bhṛkuṭī, wrath is pacified.
The Lotus Sun, supreme splendor;
The Lotus Moon, great beauty;
Through Laughter one laughs aloud and gains attainment;
Through the Liberated One the supreme accomplishment is gained.
Through the Lotus Sword, enjoyments are gained;
Through Nīlakaṇṭha, great summoning;
Through Pāṇḍaravāsinī, accomplishment is gained;
Through the Lotus Lord of Dance it is achieved;
Through the Fearless One, ever free of fear;
Through Pracaṇḍa all, without exception, are tamed;
The Lotus Fist fully accomplishes.
Lāsyā delights, and the Garland is wealth;
Song is sung, Dance gives bliss, Incense satisfies;

Flower is beautiful, and Lamp gives sight;
Through Scent one becomes a supreme fragrance too.
Through Hayagrīva, perfect summoning;
Without any doubt one brings under control.
The Lotus Chain is great at binding;
The Bell causes all to be possessed.

Next is the wisdom of the samaya mudrās of the lotus family:

Having bound the vajra binding,
Raise the thumbs and little fingers evenly.
This mudrā is the Dharma samaya:
It makes one fully attain the Dharma of the buddhas.
Having bound the vajra binding,
Index, middle, and ring fingers even:
That mudrā of the supreme buddha family
Brings about buddhahood itself.
Having bound the vajra binding,
The middle fingers fully even as a vajra:
This is the mudrā of the holy vajra family,
And the vajra is accomplished.
From that, the middle fingers shaped like a jewel
Fully accomplish the vajra jewel.
The middle fingers made in the manner of a lotus
Bring the attainment of the lotus accomplishment.
Having joined the vajra palms,
One comes to perform vajra action.
If one binds the Dharma vajra,
In an instant the samaya is accomplished.
From the vajra binding, by making the index fingers even,
One attains the buddha accomplishment.

Next comes the full explanation:

The sattva mudrās in particular:
Having joined the vajra palms,
And joined the middle fingers evenly,
The thumbs and little fingers spread apart:
This is declared the manifold lotus.

From that, crossing the two thumbs,
Join the tips of the two index fingers and bend them;
The central vajra, the crown topknot:
The topknot is declared to be the Buddha.
Firmly making the vajra binding,
The thumbs even and bowed,
Join the tips of the two index fingers and bend them;
Pressing down, set it into samādhi.
Joining the palms evenly as a lotus,
If the index fingers are even as a vajra,
With the thumbs joined at the sides,
This is the mudrā of the Lord of Certainty.
Having bound the vajra binding,
Pressing well and binding,
Raise the two thumbs as a lotus:
This is declared the Buddha Lotus.
The two thumbs even as a vajra;
Make the index fingers a hook and a sword;
Separate the two little fingers each apart;
Make the middle and ring fingers a lotus.
Joining the lotus fully and evenly,
Grasping index finger with index finger,
And drawing: this is the lotus arrow.
Joining the palms evenly and pressing,
If one binds the mudrā of excellence,
It grants the words "Excellent!":
It is known as the Lotus Excellence.
Joining the palms fully and evenly,
The tips of the index fingers even and bent,
The little fingers spread and placed at the ūrṇā hair:
This is called the Lotus Bhṛkuṭī.
Firmly making the vajra binding,
All the fingers in a circle,
Stretched out fully at the heart:
This is declared the Lotus Sun.
Firmly joining the palms,
Make the two index fingers like a jewel,

Fully adorning the tops of the shoulders:
The Lotus Jewel, the tip of the banner.

Placing the vajra binding at the crown of the head,
Stretching it out fully together with the mouth,
Laughing from one's own mouth,
The faces become eleven.
Binding the lotus of meditative absorption,
The two thumbs are held apart.
From the mudrā of Lotus Tārā,
Bend the two index fingers in the manner of a lotus.
This mudrā of Lotus Tārā
Brings about every accomplishment.
This, made in the manner of a sword,
Is the mudrā of the Lotus Sword.
Make the little fingers a great lotus,
Likewise raise the two thumbs like a staff,
Make the tips of the index fingers a great conch,
Make the middle and ring fingers a wheel.
Making the vajra palms firm,
Insert the right hand inward as oṃ,
And with the left thumb and index finger perform the recitation,
All the gaps like a water-born lotus opening.
Joining the vajra palms evenly,
Likewise from the left and from the right,
Circling them while dancing with grace,
And placing them at the crown: this is she of the lotus.
Making the vajra palms firm,
All the fingertips opened,
Circling, and placing them
At the lotus heart: this is the one who shows.
Making the vajra palms firm,
In the manner of the secret yakṣa,
Stretching out the palms and then drawing them in,
And placing them at the mouth: the Lotus Yakṣiṇī.
Binding the Vajra Fist,
Bend the two middle fingers outward,

And press their backs with one's own thumbs:
This is also called the Lotus Fist.
In the manner of the Vajradhātu,
Arising from the vajra palms,
Are bound the supreme samayas
Of all the offering goddesses.
Making the vajra binding firm,
Joining the two index fingers evenly,
Bending them and joining their tips:
This is declared to be Hayagrīva's.
Joining the lotus palms evenly,
When the two index fingers are knotted in a knot,
That is surely the mudrā of the noose.
Make the thumb and index finger like a chain.
In the manner of the vajra descent,
Joining the lotus palms evenly,
Between the ring and little fingers
Insert the two thumbs and squeeze them tight.

Next, this is the wisdom of the Dharma mudrās of the Lotus family: hrīḥ gṛ kṛ hi śṛ śi dhi hi gṛ ti kṛ bi khi miṣṭi a

Making the two lotus fists,
One should accomplish the karma mudrās.

This completes the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala called Taming All Beings, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called "The Blessing Arising from the Samaya of the Dharma Dhāraṇī of All Tathāgatas," and uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba tathāgata dharma samaya hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi uttered this Supreme Vidyā arising from his own family: oṃ bajra samaye hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajragarbha uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ maṇi ratna samaye hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajranetra uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ padma samye hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajraviśva uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ karma samaye hūṃ

Then the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara, uttered this mudrā maṇḍala of his own family:

Next I shall fully explain
The excellent mudrā maṇḍala,
Which resembles the Vajradhātu
And is called the Lotus Secret.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Lay out the whole maṇḍala with the cord.
In its center, upon a lotus,
Draw the Sovereign Lady of the Vajradhātu.
In all of its directions,
The supreme samayas, as before,
Each endowed with its own vidyā:
Draw the Dharma Vajra and the rest.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ sarba tathāgata dharmeśvari hūṃ oṃ dharma samaye bajra padmani hūṃ oṃ buddha abhiṣeka ratna samaye hūṃ oṃ tārā samaye hūṃ oṃ biśva mukhe hūṃ

In the maṇḍala of supreme various forms,
Having crossed over with Vajra Force,
In its center one should draw
A lotus encircled by lotuses.
In all of its directions
One should draw the lotus emblems,
Where the two lotus mudrās abide:
The very mudrā of the Sugata himself.

Their mudrās are these: hrīḥ oṃ padma tathāgato oṃ padma samatna bhadre padma bajra aṃkuśo koṣa dhāriṇī hūṃ oṃ padma rati oṃ padma duṣṭi

Likewise in the second maṇḍala,
Having crossed over with Vajra Force,
One should draw the Buddha Abhiṣeka,
With a topknot, abiding on a great lotus.

In all of its directions,
In their proper order, above and below,
One should place the supreme samayas
Endowed with lotus emblems.

Their heart mantras are these: śrīḥ oṃ bhṛkuṭī betāḍi padme hūṃ oṃ padme jvāle oṃ saumeni padmeni hūṃ oṃ padma hāsini ekedaśa bakatre diri diri i aṭṭe baṭṭe cale pracale kusuma dhare ile prabeśa siddhi me prayaccha hūṃ

Likewise in the third maṇḍala,
Having crossed over with Vajra Force,
In its center, a beautiful lotus:
There one should place the lotus mudrā.
Likewise in all the directions,
In their proper order, above and below,
Draw them, endowed with lotus emblems,
Abiding upon lotuses.

Their heart mantras are these: bhi dhīḥ jti oṃ tāre tuttāre hūṃ oṃ dhi hūṃ padma cakra śaṃkha dhāraṇī nīla kaṇṭha siddhya siddhya hūṃ oṃ paṇḍara pāsena padma saṃbhabe badha badha hūṃ

Likewise in the fourth maṇḍala,
Having crossed over with Vajra Force,
In the center of a lotus, draw a lotus,
Radiant, encircled by a garland of flames.
In all of its directions,
In their proper order, above and below,
Draw them, endowed with lotus emblems,
Abiding in the centers of lotuses.

Their heart mantras are these:

stri oṃ padma nṛtyeśvari pūjaya sarba tathāgatānāṃ nata nata huṃ oṃ abeśaya padma kabaca bandha rakramana hūṃ ham oṃ mahā pracaṇḍi padma yakṣiṇi biśvarūpa ṅhāraṇī biśva paya sarba duṣṭa khāda khāda hūṃ phaṭ oṃ padma muṣṭi a mu

Having crossed over with Vajra Force,
One draws the offerings to the buddhas:
The Lotus Hook and the other mudrās,

In short, all bearing lotus emblems.

Then their mudrās are these: oṃ padma rati pūje ho oṃ padma abhiṣeke pūje rati oṃ padma gīte pūje gi oṃ padma nṛtye pūje ho oṃ padmani puṣpa hūṃ padma kula sundari dharma āloke pūjvaya hūṃ oṃ padma gandhe hūṃ These are the offerings. oṃ padma aṃkuśa ākarṣaya mahā padma kulana hayagrība samaye hūṃ jaḥ oṃ amogha pāśa krodha samaye prabeśaya sarba satva samayaṃ hūṃ oṃ padma śvaṃkale baṃ oṃ padma gandha dhāri śrī ghraṃ ābeśaya samayaṃ śa na mu ki a

Then, having performed in full in this mudrā maṇḍala the rite of summoning and the rest, one should bring the lotus disciples in, each as is fitting, and say this: "You must not speak of this secret to anyone at all. Otherwise you would fall into hell; you would come to suffering for a whole lifetime." Then, having brought about the descent, one asks, "What appears before your eyes?" Just as the disciple answers, so will the accomplishment be. If he sees the sky as white, then he should be trained in the wisdom of the supreme accomplishment. If instead he sees yellow, he should be trained in the wisdom of gaining wealth. If he sees red, he should be trained in the wisdom of bringing others to delight. If he sees black, he should be trained in the wisdom of fierce rites. If he sees many colors, then, knowing that he is ready to be trained in the wisdom of all accomplishments, one should remove the face covering in the proper way, give rise to wisdom in him according to his capacity as a vessel, and train him in the wisdom of the mudrās. In the same way, in all the maṇḍalas, the Vajradhātu and the rest, the training in the wisdom of the mudrās according to the capacity of each vessel should be determined in just this way.

Then this is the wisdom of attaining the supreme accomplishment:

If one meditates on oneself as the great being,
The Lord Avalokiteśvara, in his various forms,
One will gain the supreme accomplishment
Of the great mudrā.
Making the samaya of the Buddha Abhiṣeka
Firm through meditative equipoise,
If one meditates on oneself in this way,
One will gain the supreme accomplishment.
If one meditates on oneself in equipoise

As Lotus, the great Lotus Sattva,
One will, by oneself, come to gain
The supreme accomplishment.
The karma mudrā of the self-born
Lord Amogheśvara,
When performed according to the rite,
Swiftly brings the supreme accomplishment.

Then their heart mantras are these: oṃ padma satva haṃ siddhya ho oṃ buddha abhiṣeka krodho haṃ siddhya ho oṃ dharma samādhi ra haṃ siddha ho oṃ amogheśvaro haṃ siddhya māṃ

Then this is the wisdom of gaining wealth:

Placing something precious within the mouth,
If one meditates on oneself
As the great mudrā of Viśveśvara,
What was one becomes a thousand.
Taking an eighth of a measure of gold,
With the supreme samaya held very firm,
If one meditates on oneself in this way,
What was one becomes a thousand.
Placing a pearl seed in the mouth,
If one meditates on oneself
As Lokeśvara,
What was one becomes a thousand.
If, with the karma mudrā, with both hands,
One takes up every kind of jewel,
And meditates on oneself in this way,
What was one becomes a thousand.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ padma mahā ratna pradha hūṃ ja oṃ padma supradha hūṃ ja oṃ padma mukuṭa pradha hūṃ ja oṃ padma sarba ratna pradha hūṃ ja

Then this is the wisdom of bringing others to delight:

If one meditates on oneself
As the great mudrā of Viśveśvara,
And takes a lotus, whoever is present before one
Is won over by it.

With the mudrā of the great samaya,
Holding a red lotus firmly,
If one meditates on oneself in this way,
All women will be delighted.
Having meditated on oneself,
Taking a lotus just so,
And looking with the vajra gaze,
One wins over the whole world by it.
In the manner of the karma mudrā,
Holding a lotus according to the rite,
If one circles it with both hands,
All women are won over by it.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ biśveśvara mahā padma ho oṃ padma samaya padma ho oṃ yoga padmo ho oṃ padma karma ho

As the great Lord of Various Wisdoms,
A pure lotus before oneself,
By that very lotus mudrā
His death comes in an instant.
Holding the lotus and making it firm,
Just as the excellent rite prescribes,
By that very supreme samaya
One should tear it apart with all earnestness.
To destroy the one whose name is spoken,
Joining the mudrā of meditative absorption,
And holding the lotus just so,
That act will surely be accomplished.
If one is angered and would destroy someone,
Joining the karma mudrā,
And circling and striking,
His life will burst apart.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā padma ccheda māraya ho phaṭ oṃ samaya padma sphoṭa nāśaya rata phaṭ oṃ dharma padma ccheda bināśaya pratiya phaṭ oṃ karma padma sphoṭaya jībita masya kṛta phaṭ

Then this is the wisdom of the secret mudrās of the Dharma samaya:

Upon a lotus imagine a woman,
And upon her transform oneself into a vajra.
Playing with the lotus, the supreme lotus,
In meditative equipoise one gains accomplishment.
Upon a lotus imagine a woman,
And upon her transform oneself into a buddha.
Playing, if one meditates on the crowned buddha,
Through that one accomplishes it.
Upon a lotus imagine a woman,
And upon her transform oneself into a lotus.
Playing, lotus with the supreme lotus,
One gains the pure accomplishment.
Upon a lotus imagine a woman,
And upon her transform oneself into the manifold.
Playing with the supreme manifold lotus,
One gains manifold accomplishments.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ bajra padma saṃyoga sādhaya hrīḥ oṃ buddha makuṭa saṃyoga sādhaya śīḥ oṃ padma padma saṃyoga sādhaya dhṛ oṃ biśva padma saṃyoga sādhaya stri

Then one should be trained, as is fitting, in the wisdom of the great secret mudrās of the Lotus family.

Joining the fingertips, make a lotus.
The two index fingers of Vajracaṇḍa touch the ground,
The two tips like a jewel lotus.
The vajra binding is likewise.
Binding the vajra bond tightly,
Raise the two middle fingers like a sprout,
And bend the two index and ring fingers:
This mudrā is the steadfast one of Śākyamuni.
Place the Dharma Vajra at the heart;
Turning it, place it at the forehead;
In the manner of meditative absorption, place it in the lap;
Turning it, place it at the crown of the head.
Binding the Sovereign Lady of the Vajradhātu,
If the two middle fingers are bound
In the form of a stūpa lotus,
This is declared to be the Buddha Lotus.

From that, make the thumbs a vajra
And the two index fingers a sword and a hook:
That is the Lotus Vajradhara,
Declared to be the secret mudrā.
From that, crossing the thumbs,
Index finger firmly grasping index finger,
When they are drawn apart, this is declared Great Joy.
"Excellent!" is likewise.
From the vajra binding made firm,
Inserting the two thumbs evenly,
Bend the tips of the two index fingers,
Place the tips at the forehead, and make the middle fingers a lotus.
From that very one, at the heart,
One displays the disk of the sun;
From that very one, bind the banner,
And stretch it out fully at the nape of the neck.
Making the vajra binding firm,
Bend the tips of the two index fingers into a lotus.
Likewise the Lotus Sword:
Join them by making the index fingers a lotus.
Making the vajra binding firm,
Insert the left thumb inward:
This is the conch. Raise the thumb like a mallet,
Bend and stretch the fingers, the little fingers a lotus.
From that, closing them all,
Make the little fingers like a lotus,
And with the index finger joined to the right thumb,
Count the jewels.
Making the vajra binding firm,
Make the little fingers like a lotus,
Raise the index fingers and dance:
This is declared to be that of the Lotus Eye.
Making the vajra binding firm,
Make the little fingers like a lotus,
Bend the two index fingers tightly,
And make the two thumbs into armor.
From that, make the two thumbs into fangs,

And insert the two thumbs inward.
Next I shall fully explain
The unsurpassed supreme samayas.
Binding the vajra inward,
Making the two index fingers like a lotus,
And crossing the thumbs over each other:
This is declared to be the Secret Viśveśvara.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Raise the little and middle fingers evenly,
And join the thumbs as a vajra:
The Tathāgata in the center of the topknot.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Make the thumbs like a lotus,
As though drawing it out from the mouth,
And place it in the lap as in meditative absorption.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Binding the faces of all the fingers
Evenly and firmly,
The two index fingers are made even as a vajra.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Make the two index fingers like a lotus,
Cross the two thumbs as well,
And bend the two middle fingers with their tips joined.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Join the two thumbs firmly as a vajra,
Make the index fingers a sword and a hook,
And make the little fingers like a lotus.
Likewise, turning it over,
Raise the left index finger,
Join the tips of the index finger and thumb,
Hold it firmly, and act as though summoning.
Then, bending the two index fingers,
And pressing them down with the two thumbs:
This is the great-souled Lotus Delight,
Who grants the word "Excellent!"
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Join the faces of all the fingers,

Press them down with the two thumbs,
And join the index fingers evenly.
That very one, at the heart, is made the sun;
At the crown it is made the Lotus Banner;
Lowered and placed at the cheek beside the mouth,
It is the laughter of the Lotus Great Laughter.
Binding the vajra inward,
In the manner of the Dharma Vajra,
The little fingers and thumbs made fully even:
This is the samaya of Tārā.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Make the index and middle fingers a lotus sword;
Likewise, inward, make a wheel.
Recitation and giving are likewise.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Touching thumbs and index fingers, make them two;
Then, joining them at the heart:
This is declared to be the secret protection.
Likewise, from the vajra binding,
Make the little fingers like a lotus,
Bend the two index fingers deeply,
And extend the two thumbs outward, with fangs.
From that, in the manner of a fist,
Squeezing with the sides of the two thumbs:
The great Fist of the Lotus Secret,
Fully established as the supreme samaya.
The Lotus Lāsyā and the rest,
All the others among them,
Should be bound in the same way,
Binding the vajra inward.

Next, these are the Dharma mudrās of the Lotus Secret: hrāḥ grāḥ pāḥ hrāḥ śāḥ sāḥ dhāḥ hrāḥ gāḥ dhāḥ krāḥ bāḥ dāḥ rāḥ ṣṭāḥ sāḥ

In brief, the karma mudrās are to be made with the two fists.

This completes the extensive rite of the maṇḍala of the secret Dharma mudrās, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called "The Lotus Blessed to Arise from the Samaya of the Dharma Wisdom of All Tathāgatas," and uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ dharma samādhi jñāna tathāgata hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā, arising from the Dharma of his own family: oṃ bajra dharma hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajragarbha uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ ratna dharma hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajranetra uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ dharma dharma hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajraviśva uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ karma dharma hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva, the noble Samantāvalokiteśvara, uttered this, his own Dharma maṇḍala:

Next I shall fully explain
The excellent wisdom maṇḍala,
Which resembles the Vajradhātu
And is called the Dharma Wisdom.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Lay out the whole maṇḍala with the cord.
In its center one should draw
The Wisdom Vajra Tathāgata.
In all of its directions,
According to the rite, draw the great beings,
Viśveśvara and the rest,
Absorbed in meditative absorption.

Their heart mantras are these:

oṃ jñāna buddha hūṃ oṃ jñāna biśveśvare hūṃ oṃ jñān buddha mukuṭa hūṃ oṃ jñāna dharmeśvare hūṃ oṃ jñāna amogheśvare hūṃ oṃ jñana padma buddha hūṃ oṃ jvāna padma bajra ddhāra hūṃ oṃ jvāna padma māra hūṃ oṃ jvāna padma duṣṭi hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma bhṛkuṭī hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma sūrya hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma candra hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma hāsa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma tārā hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma kumāra hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma nārāya hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma hāsa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma nṛtyeśvara hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma rakṣa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma yakṣa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma muṣṭi hūṃ oṃ jñāna

padma lāsye hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma māle hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma gīdye hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma nṛtye hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma dhūpe hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma puṣpe hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma dīpe hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma gandhe hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma aṃkuśa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma amogha pāśa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma sphoṭa hūṃ oṃ jñāna padma ābeśa hūṃ

Then, having performed in full in this Dharma maṇḍala the rite of summoning and the rest, and having brought the disciples in as is fitting, one should say this: "You must not speak of this to anyone else. Otherwise you would fall into hell and come to suffering." Then one should give rise to wisdom in him:

Absorbed in equipoise as Lokeśvara,
If one meditates on a lotus at the heart
And attains the lotus absorption,
At once one swiftly soars aloft.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
If one meditates on a lotus at the forehead,
And through practice it becomes very firm,
At once one soars into the sky.
Through the absorption of Lokeśvara,
If one meditates on a lotus upon the tongue,
When it is accomplished, swiftly
One travels through the sky.
Through the absorption of Lokeśvara,
If one meditates on a lotus at the crown of the head,
When it is accomplished, swiftly,
In an instant, one soars upward.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ padma jñāna hṛdaya ābeśa oṃ padma jñāna abhiṣeka ābeśa oṃ padma jñāna bidyottama ābeśa oṃ padma jñāna uṣṇīṣa ābeśa

In the sky or in some other direction,
If one meditates on the shape of a lotus,
And this rite is accomplished,
In an instant one becomes invisible.
In the sky or in some other direction,
If one meditates on the shape of a lotus
And meditates on oneself
Seated upon it, one becomes invisible.

In the sky or in some other direction,
Meditating on the shape of a lotus,
Whenever one sees it, take it up:
Swiftly one becomes invisible.
In the sky or in some other direction,
Meditating on the shape of a lotus,
If one eats the lotus that one sees,
At once one becomes invisible.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ padma ākarṣa oṃ padma tha oṃ padma jñāna grahāna oṃ padma rasayana hūṃ phaṭ

Binding the great mudrā,
If one holds in the hand the shape
Of a lotus with its many colors and forms,
One will bear every form.
Drawing the shapes of many lotuses
In the colors and forms of lotuses,
If one meditates on just that,
One will come to bear many forms.
In the sky or in some other direction,
If one meditates on the colors and forms of a lotus
As many different shapes,
One will take on a form made of sound.
Making the colors and forms of a lotus
Into many different shapes,
And mounting it, one travels through the sky,
And surely takes whatever form one wishes.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ padma dhari biśvarūpa prabartaya ābeśa oṃ biśva padma prabartaya māṃ oṃ samādhi biśva padma ābeśa oṃ biśva padma manoṭṭhipa ākaśa biśvarūpaṃ adhitiṣṭha māṃ

Binding well, through meditative absorption,
Any great mudrā at all,
If one takes up a lotus and gives it,
Without fail one brings that person under one's power.
If one binds any mudrā at all
Of those called the samaya mudrās,

And then takes up a lotus
And gives it, one brings that person under one's power.
Binding any mudrā at all
Of the virtue born from meditative absorption,
Whoever is given the wisdom lotus
Is swiftly won over by it.
Endowed with any samaya at all,
If one binds the karma mudrā,
Whoever is given a lotus
At once comes under one's power.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā jñāna padma ho oṃ samaya padma ho oṃ jñāna padma ho oṃ karma padma ho

Then one is trained in the wisdom of the great mudrās of the wisdom maṇḍala.

In the manner of the Dharma maṇḍala,
One should accomplish the great mudrā.
Next I shall fully explain:
The supreme samaya is to be accomplished,
And in the manner of the Dharma maṇḍala
The lotus of the lotus is to be placed.
Making the Dharma fist firm,
One should make the karma mudrā twofold.

This completes the extensive rite of the wisdom maṇḍala, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into the meditative absorption called "The Lotus Blessed to Arise from the Samaya of the Dharma Karma of All Tathāgatas," and uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba tathāgata karma kṛ hūṃ

Then Vajrapāṇi uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā, arising from the karma of his own family: oṃ hūṃ dhi

Then the bodhisattva Vajragarbha uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ ratna karma samaye hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva Vajranetra uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ padma karme hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva Vajraviśva uttered this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ biśva karme hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, explained this, his own karma maṇḍala:

Next I shall fully explain
The excellent karma maṇḍala,
Which resembles the Vajradhātu
And is called the Lotus Karma.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Lay out the whole maṇḍala with the cord.
Draw all the buddhas in every direction,
Each holding the emblem of a lotus.

Their vidyā heart mantras are these:

oṃ puriṇi hūṃ biśva karmeśvari hūṃ oṃ tathāgateśvara abhiṣeka karma pidyā hūṃ oṃ dharma karmeśvara jñāna pūjā samaye hūṃ oṃ amogha karmeśvari hūṃ oṃ padma karma buddhe hūṃ oṃ padma karma bajriṇi huṃ oṃ padma karmiṇi māraṇa pūjā karma samaye hūṃ oṃ padma karma duṣṭi hūṃ oṃ padma karma bhṛkuṭi hūṃ tra oṃ padma karma sūrye hūṃ oṃ padma karma dhvaje hūṃ oṃ padma karma hāsa huṃ oṃ padma karma tāre hūṃ oṃ padma karma kumāri hūṃ oṃ padma karma nārāyani hūṃ oṃ padma karma bradmi hūṃ oṃ padma karma nṛteśvari hūṃ oṃ padma rakṣa rakṣa karma samye hūṃ oṃ mahā pracaṇḍa gītini padma daṃṣṭrā karma kari hūṃ oṃ padma karma muṣṭi gatāya hūṃ oṃ rati pūje hūṃ jaḥ oṃ abhiṣeka pūje hūṃ ja oṃ gīte pūje hūṃ dha oṃ nṛtye pūje hūṃ baṃ oṃ dhupe pūje hūṃ aḥ oṃ puṣpe pūje hūṃ tra oṃ āloke pūje hūṃ dhiḥ oṃ gandhe pūje hūṃ baṃ oṃ hayagrviba ānaya hūṃ ja oṃ amogha pāśa krodha pīḍaya hūṃ phaṭ oṃ padma śāṃkala bandhe hūṃ phaṭ oṃ padma ghandha ābeśaye hūṃ phaṭ

Then, having performed in full in this karma maṇḍala the rite of summoning and the rest, one should bring the disciple in as is fitting and instruct him thus: "Son of good family, you must not speak of this method to anyone. Otherwise you would fall into hell." Then one should give rise to wisdom in him.

Then one should be trained in the wisdom of confessing misdeeds:

Meditating in deep equipoise
On the great mudrā of Lokeśvara,
By confessing his misdeeds, swiftly

He is cleansed of every misdeed.
Through the absorption of Lokeśvara,
Binding the supreme samaya,
If he confesses all his misdeeds,
He is freed from the five deeds of immediate retribution.
Meditating in deep equipoise
In the absorption of Lokeśvara,
If he confesses all his misdeeds,
He utterly crushes every misdeed.
In short, binding well
Any karma mudrā at all,
If he confesses all his actions,
He is fully cleansed of all his actions.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ sarba pāpaṃ saṃśodhana mahā padma oṃ sarba ānantatya śodhan samaya padma oṃ sarba pāpaṃ praṇaśaṇa dharma padma oṃ sarba padma ābarṇa biśodhaka karma padma

Then one is trained in the wisdom by which all obscurations are completely exhausted:

Meditating in deep equipoise
On the great mudrā of Lokeśvara,
If one says śuddhya śuddhya,
One is purified of all actions.
Through the absorption of Lokeśvara,
If one binds the karma samaya
And says buddhya buddhya,
One is purified of all actions.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Meditating as the Dharma mudrā,
If one says dhi dhi dhi dhi,
One is purified of all actions.
Through the absorption of the Lord of the World,
Binding the karma mudrā,
If one says hī hī hī hī,
One is purified of all actions.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ pāpaṃ kṣaya padma oṃ ābarṇa kṣaya padma oṃ karma kṣaya padma

Then one is trained in the wisdom of making offerings to all the tathāgatas:

Binding in perfect equipoise
The great mudrā of Lokeśvara,
If one says oṃ oṃ oṃ oṃ,
One performs every offering.
Through the absorption of the Lord of the World,
Binding the supreme samaya,
If one says bhu bhu bhu bhu,
All the buddhas are honored by it.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Meditating on the Dharma lotus,
If one says he he he he,
All the buddhas are honored by it.
Binding in deep equipoise
The karma mudrā of the lotus,
If one says dhe dhe dhe dhe,
All the buddhas are honored by it.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ kāra padma oṃ bhūkāra padma oṃ hekāra padma oṃ dhekāra padma oṃ nibarṇa kṣaya padma

Then one is trained in the wisdom of accomplishment:

Binding in equipoise
The great mudrā of the Lord of the World,
If one says hrī hrī hrī hrī,
One is accomplished as the Lord of the World.
Through the absorption of the Lord of the World,
Binding the one called the samaya,
If one says śrī śrī śrī śrī,
One gains the supreme accomplishment.
Meditating in equipoise
In the equipoise of the Lord of the World,
If one says dhig dhig dhig dhig,
One is accomplished as the Lotus Wrathful One.
Binding the karma mudrā
Of the virtuous Great Lotus,

If one says ssi ssi ssi ssi,
One gains every accomplishment.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ hrīḥ sidhya oṃ śrī sidhya oṃ dhṛka siddha oṃ si siddhya

Then this is the wisdom of the secret karma mudrās:

Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Making love with all women,
If one says aho sukha,
All the buddhas are honored by it.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Making love with all women,
If one says priya priya,
The buddhas, the blessed ones, are delighted.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Making love with all women,
If one says aho rati,
One will always be joyful.
Absorbed in equipoise as the Lord of the World,
Making love with all women,
If one says sukha sukha,
One's bliss will never decline.

Their heart mantras are these: oṃ sarba buddha pūja prabartana padma oṃ prītikāra padma oṃ rati prabartana padma oṃ mahā sukha padma dṛḍha hūṃ

Then one should be trained in the karma mudrās as is fitting:

Then, joining the lotus palms,
Contemplating the samaya mudrā, the vajra,
In the manner of the karma maṇḍala,
Place them in all the locations.

Then the Dharma mudrā of the Lotus family is to be spoken as dra.

Making the two karma mudrās,
One accomplishes through that karma mudrā.

This completes the extensive rite of the karma maṇḍala, from the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called Blessing of the Samaya Mudrā of Vajradharma, and spoke this heart of the mudrā: oṃ bajri dharma padma hūṃ

Then Vajrapāṇi spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ bajra jhi

Then the bodhisattva Vajragarbha spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ bajra ratna mukuṭi hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ dharma padma dhi

Then the bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ sarba mukhe hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, spoke this maṇḍala of the four mudrās.

Next it shall be fully explained:
The supreme maṇḍala of the four mudrās
Is like the Vajradhātu,
And should be made like the great maṇḍala.
In the center of the mudrā maṇḍala
An image of the Buddha should be placed.
In all of its directions
Draw the vajra, the lotus, and the rest.

Then, having performed in this maṇḍala the rites of summoning and so forth in their extensive form, one should bring the disciple in as is proper and command him thus: "Do not tell this to anyone, lest you suffer always, and, never having cast off unhappiness, fall into hell when you die."

Then one should generate his wisdom:
Holding a lotus with the hand,
Grip it and bind it firmly.
If one offers that fragrance to the buddhas,
One will swiftly gain accomplishment.

Resting in equipoise, at the center of the crown
Place well an image of the Buddha;
If, while walking, one displays the vajra swagger,
One brings the whole world under one's power.

The lotus, the form of the Great Lotus:
Abiding in samādhi just as it is,
Whoever is struck by the mind is slain.
Wherever it strikes, it performs
The works of increase, of the earth, and the rest.

The lotus, the form of the Great Lotus:
Making the lotus into a crossed lotus
And holding it with the hands,
Whirling it, one performs the bringing down and the rest.

Then their heart mantras are these: oṃ bajra ratna hūṃ oṃ sarba tathāgata āśa paripūraṇa mahā ratna hūṃ oṃ bajra hūṃ tra oṃ gandha pūjā gri sādhaya hrīḥ oṃ padma mukuṭa tathāgata baśaṃ kuru sarbāna lokeśvara abhiṣeka samaya ho oṃ padma padma māraya sarba dra tyarthi kan samādhi jñāna dhṛk oṃ biśva padma sarba karma kāro bhāba la li lu la la li hūṃ phaṭ

Then one trains in the secret wisdom of the mudrās:
Through passion, all one's purposes
Should be accomplished; by this samaya
Even mudrās hard to accomplish
Are swiftly accomplished by the yogin.

Here the heart of its samaya is this: oṃ sādhaya padma rāga samya a

Then one should train in all the great mudrās, beginning with the great mudrā.

This completes the extensive rite of the maṇḍala of the four mudrās.

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, spoke this heart mantra called Taming All Beings: oṃ sarba jagatpi nāya mahā satva a āgaccha śīghraṃ biśva rūpaṃ sandhārāya mame ca sarba sidhāya prayaccha hrīḥ

Then the bodhisattva, the noble Avalokiteśvara, spoke this maṇḍala called Taming All Beings.

Next it shall be fully explained:
The maṇḍala of taming beings:
In the manner of the great maṇḍala
The outer maṇḍala should be drawn.
Within it a lotus as well
Should likewise be drawn.
Upon it, pervading all the petals,
Manifold forms should be drawn.

Then, having brought the disciple into this maṇḍala according to the extensive rite, as is proper, and having commanded him in the same way, one trains him in the wisdom of taming all beings:

Having properly drawn the maṇḍala
Called Taming Beings,
If one meditates on the great mudrā,
One becomes like Viśvadhara.

Then one trains in the wisdom of the secret mudrā of taming beings:

In the samādhi of manifold form,
Having meditated in equipoise,
One should join the two organs;
Thereby that maṇḍala is accomplished.

Then one should train in the bindings of the mudrās, beginning with the great mudrā. The accomplishments, too, are likewise. Likewise one should also do this on cloth and the like. The other mudrās as well, in the manner of the single mudrā maṇḍala, the mudrās and the rest will also be accomplished.

Then again all the tathāgatas gathered together and gave their "Excellent!" to the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara:

The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The full realization of the Great Vehicle,
This sūtra of the unsurpassed Vajra Vehicle
Has been well spoken.
Excellent, you Vajrasattva!
Vajraratna, you are excellent!
Vajrakarma, you are excellent!

This completes the third section, the Great King of Ritual Manuals of the Dharma Samaya of All Tathāgatas, from the Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas.

The seventh fascicle.

Then again all the tathāgatas gathered together and, with these hundred and eight names, supplicated the very one who is the vajra holder of the jewel of the empowerment of all the tathāgatas, the great bodhisattva, the noble Ākāśagarbha:

Ākāśagarbha, the aim of sentient beings,

Offering jewels, most supreme of all,
Jewel ornament, treasury of jewels,
Great in radiance through the radiance of jewels,
Jewel renown, homage to you!

Heap of jewels, source of jewels,
Gem, vajra, wealth and virtue,
Source of jewels, blazing with empowerment,
Jewel body, homage to you!

Greatness itself, the tree, lord of jewels,
You who fulfill every hope,
Who well delight every intention,
Heap of jewels, homage to you!

Supreme light, all-pervading self,
Supremely bestowing the supreme, greatly supreme,
The wealth of every excellence,
Vajragarbha, I pay homage to you!

These peaceful hundred and eight names:
Whoever it may be that holds them,
Empowered by all the buddhas,
In an instant attains freedom from evil.

Jewel, we beseech you:
Please explain the gathering of wealth!
Supreme empowerment of all the buddhas,
Please bring forth the certain family!

Then the bodhisattva Ākāśagarbha, having heard this command of all the tathāgatas, spoke this, his own heart mantra, called the Samaya of the Empowerment of All Tathāgatas: oṃ bajra ratna hūṃ

The tathāgata Vairocana spoke this Supreme Vidyā called the Samaya of the Gem of All Tathāgatas: oṃ sarba tathāgata āśa paripūraṇa mahā ratna hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this Supreme Vidyā, the arising of his own family: oṃ bajra hūṃ tra

Then the great bodhisattva Vajragarbha spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ maṇi hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajranetra spoke this Supreme Vidyā, the arising of his own family: oṃ padma hrīḥ

Then the great bodhisattva Vajraviśva spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ biśva ratna hūṃ

Then the great bodhisattva, the noble Ākāśagarbha, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called Jewel of the Empowerment of All Tathāgatas. The very instant he had entered into equipoise, from the hearts of all the tathāgatas there came forth rays of light like vajra gems and jewels. They illuminated all the world realms, and, having empowered all sentient beings with the empowerment of all the tathāgatas, they became one again and entered the heart of the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Ākāśagarbha.

Then from the heart of Ākāśagarbha that very Blessed One, Vajrapāṇi, came forth, having become the forms of great bodhisattvas, their bodies adorned with arrays and ornaments such as an essence vajra blazing all around with rays of light, gems, and the empowerments of various jewels, and holding in their hands the emblem of the mudrā of the vajra gem jewel. Throughout all the world realms they delighted sentient beings with acts that cared for their wealth, such as letting fall a great rain of jewels. Then they came back again and, in all the directions around the Blessed One Vairocana, in the manner of the great maṇḍala of the Vajradhātu, they dwelt upon moon disks and uttered this inspired utterance:

How wonderful! The gathering
Of all the jewels of all the buddhas
Has, for the sake of beings,
Become the very family of Vajraratna.

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Ākāśagarbha, having brought forth his own family, offered this, which fulfills every intention of all the tathāgatas, and spoke this maṇḍala called Accomplishment of All Aims.

Next it shall be fully explained:
The sacred great maṇḍala,
Which is like the Vajradhātu,
Is declared to be the All-Accomplishing.
Square, with four gates,
Adorned with four porticoes,
Furnished with four cords,
It is adorned with hanging silks and garlands.
At the corners of the great maṇḍala
And within the gate enclosures,
Embellished with vajra jewels,
Lay out the outer maṇḍala with the cord.
Within it, make a seat
Arisen from vajra jewels,
And in the manner of eight pillars,
Adorned with five maṇḍalas
Blazing with the light of various jewels,
There the cord should be stretched out.
Encircled by their own mudrās,
There the buddhas should be placed.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ buddha ratna hūṃ oṃ bajra maṇi hūṃ oṃ bajra ratna aṃ kuru hūṃ oṃ bajra ratna padma hūṃ oṃ bajra ratna parṣa hūṃ

In the maṇḍala that fulfills all hopes,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
Draw Vajragarbha dwelling there
Bestowing the supreme jewel.
In all of its directions,
In due order, above and below,
Draw the great beings
Bearing the jewel mudrās.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ sarba artha siddhi prada hūṃ oṃ bajra maṇi cindhya hana ākāśagarbha bhagabāna siṅ dhya siddhya hūṃ oṃ ratna aṃkuśa ākarṣaya sarba arthāna samaya śīghraṃ sarba tathāgata satva manusmara hūṃ oṃ ti rāga baśi kuru sarba na kṣa śagarbha hūṃ oṃ ratna duṣṭi hūṃ

In the maṇḍala of the jewel garland,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
Draw well, right in the center,
The supreme one who holds the jewel garland.
In all of its directions,
In due order, above and below,
Draw the great beings
Holding gem emblems in their hands.

Their heart mantras are these:

oṃ ratna tiṣṭha tra oṃ sarba tathāgata abhiṣeka ratna māle hūṃ oṃ ratna maṇi sūrye hūṃ oṃ candra maṇi dhvaja sarbāśā paripūra ākāśagarbha hūṃ oṃ ratnāṭṭa hā sa hā sa hūṃ

In the maṇḍala of the jewel lotus,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
The pervader who holds the jewel lotus
Should be drawn dwelling in its center.
In all of its directions,
In due order, above and below,
Draw the great beings
Who bear gem emblems.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ratna padma hūṃ oṃ he gas mādhi jñāna garbha hūṃ oṃ ratna koṣa gra hūṃ oṃ maṇi cakra prarttāya hūṃ oṃ ratna baśī hūṃ

In the maṇḍala that rains down jewels,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
There too draw the great being
Who lets fall a rain of jewels.
In all of its directions,
In brief, the great beings,
With mudrās in their hands
Bearing jewel emblems, according to the rite.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ratna bṛṣṭi barṣaya sarba barta sambha dha bhagabān maṇi hasta hūṃ oṃ maṇi pūja samaya hūṃ oṃ maṇi bandha kabaca hūṃ oṃ maṇi daṃṣṭa karāla mahā yakṣa hara hara sarbārthān tiśaya hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna bandha samaya hūṃ

Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
In all the directions of the corners,
In due order, above and below,
Draw the Jewel Lāsyā and the rest.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ratna rati hūṃ oṃ ratna māle hūṃ oṃ ratna gīti hūṃ oṃ ratna nṛtye hūṃ

As for the sacred outer maṇḍala,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
In the corners of the outer maṇḍala
Draw the incense offering and the rest.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ratna dhūpe ratne oṃ puṣpe maṇi oṃ ratna āloke oṃ maṇi gandhe

In the middle of the four gates
The gatekeepers should be placed.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ sarba ratna ākarṣa aruṇa mahā sahā bhagabāna tvaṃ ākāśagarbhaṃ codāya ākarṣaya śīghraṃ ho ja oṃ sarba ratna prabeśaya samaya prabeśaya samaya mahā maṇi rājā kulaṃ ratna pāśa hūṃ oṃ maṇi banadha hūṃ baṃ oṃ maṇi ratna ābeśa a

Then the master of the gem jewel himself enters this great maṇḍala as is proper and performs the extensive rite himself. Then, with water from a full vase blessed with jewels, he empowers the gem disciple, binds the samaya mudrā of the vajra gem, and recites this heart mantra: oṃ bajra maṇi rat samaya baṃ

Then, draping over one shoulder an upper robe of whatever color can be found, and covering the disciple's eyes with something similar, one should have him recite this heart mantra and lead him in: oṃ hūṃ maṇi rāja kulaṃ

Then, having now brought him in, one should command him thus: "Do not tell this to anyone, lest you be poor in all your lives, lest you never be freed from suffering, lest you dwell long in hell." And the samaya should be made twofold. The Full Realization of the Great Vehicle should also be recited.

Then one should ask him, with vajra words: "Where are the things wished for and the great treasures? How will they be obtained?"

Then, as soon as he has said, "May the Blessed One, the bodhisattva mahāsattva Ākāśagarbha, grant that I tell everything!", the face covering is removed, and the samaya of the empowerment of all the tathāgatas is also shown. The great maṇḍala should be shown to him all the way up to the Blessed One, the Tathāgata. Then, having made offerings according to one's means, one should accomplish all one's purposes.

Then the wisdom mudrās are these:
The great mudrā of Vajragarbha
Is bound in perfect equipoise.
When one digs for treasure, wherever
There is treasure, one will see it.
Binding the supreme samaya,
Wherever there are treasures,
If one presses the mudrā there,
Then it will come forth of itself.
If, in the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
One meditates in perfect equipoise,
Wherever the treasures lie
Will be known by the mind itself.
Through the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
Having bound the karma mudrā,
Wherever the mudrā comes to fall,
Know that treasure lies there.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā maṇi ratna ābiśa hūṃ oṃ maṇi piṇḍa pariśaya hūṃ oṃ ratna samādhi brūhi oṃ ratna ābiśa darṣaya hūṃ

If one meditates on the great mudrā,
Wherever the body comes to turn,
That a treasure of jewels lies there
Is to be known by the samaya itself.
Having bound the supreme samaya,
Wherever it falls and becomes two,
There, of great jewels,
It should be known, a treasure lies.
Having bound the samādhi mudrā,
Wherever it falls, by itself,
The great jewel, by itself,
Declares where the treasure lies.
Having bound the karma mudrā,
When the two hands, toward each other,

Fall, and the samaya becomes bound,
That, it is taught, is where treasure lies.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā ratna kāya darśaya ratna oṃ ākāśagarbha maṇi ratna oṃ sphoṭa sphoṭaya tra nidhi oṃ maṇi ratna jñāna svayaṃ brūhi oṃ buna samaya bandha darṣaya svāhā

Having meditated on the great mudrā,
Likewise, wherever one comes to suspect,
There a treasure that is a source of jewels
Lies, one should know by wisdom.
Wherever there is suspicion, there too
Bind the supreme samaya, most supreme;
Whenever it comes loose of itself,
There, it is taught, is treasure.
Having bound the samādhi mudrā,
Wherever one firmly suspects,
That treasure surely lies there
One should know by generating wisdom.
Wherever one suspects again and again,
The karma mudrā, according to the rite,
Bound there, if it becomes two,
One should know that treasure lies there.

Here their heart mantras are these:

oṃ nidhi jñāna ābiśa oṃ ratna samaya muñca nidhi bandhaṃ oṃ dharma ratna bruhe nidhi naṃ oṃ sarba karma nisphoṭaya darśaya nidhiḥ bandho dākṣipa

Having meditated on the great mudrā,
And searched everywhere for treasures,
Wherever it dwells, if it falls there,
There, it is taught, treasure lies.
Having bound the supreme samaya,
And searched everywhere for treasures,
Wherever it is found on examination to dwell,
There, it is taught, treasure lies.
Having bound the samādhi mudrā,
And searched everywhere for treasures,

Wherever one constantly knows it to be,
There, it is taught, treasure lies.
Having bound the karma mudrā,
And searched everywhere for treasures,
Wherever the karma mudrā
Turns around, there, it is taught, it lies.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ratna parakṣi ābeśa oṃ ratna samaya hṛda darṣaya oṃ ratna parkṣi jñāna ābeśa oṃ maṇi karma brahmāya

Then one should train in the wisdom of the secret mudrās:
Joining the two organs together,
Searching everywhere for treasures,
If one meditates on the great mudrā,
When it falls, one finds the treasure.
Having bound the supreme samaya,
While sporting with a woman,
Wherever the mudrā becomes tight,
There, it is taught, treasure lies.
When the two organs are joined together,
Searching everywhere for treasures,
Having meditated on the wisdom mudrā,
The wisdom of treasure will enter.
Through the samādhi of the two organs,
Having bound the karma mudrā,
Wherever the mudrā becomes two,
There, it is taught, treasure lies.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā maṇi saṃyoga beśa oṃ samaya saṃyoga dṛḍho me bhaba oṃ dini jñana ābeśa saṃyoga oṃ sarba karma saṃsphoṭa saṃyoga

Then one trains in all the wisdoms of the mudrās of the great Gem family.

Then this is the great mudrā:
Dwelling in the center of a moon disk,
Just as in the painted image,
If one meditates on the great mudrā,
Every supreme aim will be accomplished.

Then the actions of the great mudrās are these:
By the Buddha mudrā, buddhahood itself;
By Vajragarbha, both are fully accomplished;
By the Jewel Hook, all are invited;
By Gem Joy, one makes others rejoice;
By Gem Satisfaction, one brings delight;
By Gem Gaze, one obtains wealth;
By Gem Garland, one is empowered;
By Gem Sun, supreme splendor;
By the Wish-Fulfilling Gem, one gives as one pleases;
By Jewel Laughter, one obtains wealth;
By Jewel Dharma, one obtains the Dharma as well;
By Glory of Giving, one finds what is sacred;
By Jewel Sword, a great weapon;
By Jewel Wheel, one becomes a lord;
By Speech, one obtains the accomplishments one seeks;
By Jewel Rain, great wealth;
By Gem Offering, offering supreme itself;
By Jewel Dharma, one makes things stable;
By Jewel Fangs, one obtains wealth;
By Gem Fist, one obtains accomplishment.

Then the wisdom of the samaya mudrās of this great maṇḍala is this:
Through the mudrā of Vajraratna
One obtains empowerment from all the buddhas.
Having bound the great vajra gem,
One will accomplish Vajraratna.
From the two vajras, forming a gem,
Through Vajradhara one obtains wealth.
From that same, with the thumbs as vajra,
Joining the gem, place it at the heart.
Binding the two forefingers as a lotus gem,
Through Lokeśvara wealth will be given.
Vajrakarma bestows the banner
Of the great gem of manifold wealth.
Through the finger gem of Vajradhātu
One obtains the Buddha jewel itself.
Evening the fingers and bending them back,

With the thumbs bound as a vajra:
Arisen from the hand of Vajragarbha,
This is declared the vajra gem.
As soon as this is bound,
One obtains the great vajra gem.
Binding the two forefingers like a jewel,
Raising the middle fingers as a sprout:
As soon as this is bound,
One will obtain one's own empowerment.
Then the middle fingers, the ring fingers
And the little fingers are made into a lotus.
By this the all-seeing Avalokiteśvara,
Holding the emblem, will give wealth.
The forefingers, thumbs and little fingers
Are formed in the manner of the vajra jewel;
Join the nails of the two middle fingers,
And raise the ring fingers like sprouts.
Making the vajra binding tight,
And forming the two forefingers as a gem,
With the two thumbs extended, their face at the heart,
It bestows the accomplishment of all aims.
Having bound the vajra binding,
Form the two middle fingers as a gem:
This mudrā of the gem emblem
Fully bestows the great gem.
From that same, the two forefingers
Formed in the manner of a hook:
This is the mudrā that summons all aims,
Declared to be the Gem Jewel Hook.
Changing from that same,
Holding forefinger with forefinger,
Making the gesture of shooting an arrow,
And drawing it, one delights beings.
From that same, the forefinger and thumb,
Joined, are called "Excellent!"
Then, with the two thumbs joined,
The tips of the two forefingers joined,

The two thumbs joined in the middle,
And the two forefingers joined at their faces:
This is declared the Gem Gaze;
It steals away the objects of sight.
The garland that accomplishes all aims
Will fully bestow one's own empowerment.
From that same, at the heart, the two thumbs
Raised and joined at their faces,
Placed at the heart of the Gem Sun,
Will fully bestow great splendor.
Evening the ring fingers and raising them,
Opening them, place them on the crown:
The great vajra gem, the chief,
Fulfills every hope.
From that same, swaggering,
And circling it, laughing, about the cheeks:
This is called Jewel Rain Laughter;
By laughter all aims are accomplished.
In samādhi meditate on the fingers
Of the one who holds the gem lotus gem;
Then, released from the ends,
It fully bestows the great giving.
Drawing the two thumbs inward,
And forming the two forefingers as a gem:
This is the Gem Sword; by its might
It steals away the wealth of beings.

From the vajra binding, form a wheel:
Inserting the two thumbs inside,
And forming the two forefingers like a gem,
It brings the attainment of a universal monarch.
Making that same in the form of joined palms,
And drawing it forth from the mouth:
Having bound it, by speech as well,
By one's own command one carries off wealth.
Having bound the great vajra gem,
It lets fall in abundance a rain of jewels;

Raising all the fingers,
It lets fall a rain of wealth from the four directions.
Having bound the great vajra gem,
Dancing, and placing it at the center of the crown,
If one makes offering to all according to the rite,
All the jewels will make offering to him.
With the mudrā of Accomplishment of All Aims
One should embrace the region of the throat;
It is called the Gem Binding,
Renowned as the rite of protection.
From that same Accomplishment of All Aims,
Placed at the mouth in the manner of a yakṣa,
It is called the Gem Fangs,
Terrifying, carrying off every aim.
Making the vajra binding tight,
Bending the forefingers, with the two thumbs
Pressing them well and squeezing:
The Gem Fist obtains accomplishment.
The supreme offerings of the samayas,
In the manner of the Vajradhātu,
Furnished with gems as is proper:
This is held to be the supreme samaya.
Form the middle fingers in the manner of a gem,
Applying them to those very ones;
By the manner of the single hook and the rest,
All actions are fully accomplished.

Then the wisdom of the Dharma mudrās of the great Gem family is this: hraḥ graḥ triḥ hrīḥ śrīḥ iḥ riḥ dhriḥ diḥ dhīḥ griḥ biḥ riḥ ḍaḥ yaḥ aḥ

Making the two jewel mudrās,
One should draw the karma mudrā.

This completes the extensive rite of the great maṇḍala called Accomplishment of All Aims, from the King of Ritual Manuals of the Karma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called Jewel Blessing Arising from the Samaya of the Dhāraṇī of the Empowerment of All

Tathāgatas, and spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ bajra ratna dhūpe hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this mudrā, the arising of his own family: oṃ bajra abhiṣeka māle abhiṣiñca samaye hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajragarbha spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ ratna abhiṣeka hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajranetra spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ bajra dharma adhiṣeka hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva mahāsattva Vajraviśva spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ sarba tathāgata abhiṣeka pūja samaye hūṃ

Then the Blessed One, the bodhisattva mahāsattva, the noble Ākāśagarbha, spoke this maṇḍala of the samaya mudrās of his own family.

Next it shall be fully explained:
The sacred mudrā maṇḍala,
Which is like the Vajradhātu,
Is declared the Jewel Secret.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala
Lay out all the maṇḍalas with the cord.
In its center, as is proper,
The Buddha mudrā should be drawn:
The chief of gems, dwelling on a throne.
In front of the Vajradhātu,
The gem garland, the gem of the lotus,
And the gems encircled by gems.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ tra oṃ maṇi samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna abhiṣekamāle hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna padma hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna pṛti samaye hūṃ

In the All-Accomplishing maṇḍala,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
In the center, as Vajraratna,
Draw the great vajra gem.
In all of its directions,
In due order, above and below,
Their own mudrās, furnished with gems,
The jewel master himself should draw.

Here their mudrās are these: oṃ sarba artha siddhi prabeśa mahā bajri ratna samaye maṇi sarba arthāna me sādhaya dhāraṇī hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna ākarṣaye svāhā oṃ maṇi ratna samaye aṃkuśa maṇi kulañja oṃ maṇi rāga samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi sādhu hūṃ

Likewise in the second maṇḍala,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
Draw in its center that gem
Which is furnished with two eyes.
In all of its directions,
In due order, above and below,
Draw their own mudrās
Furnished with gem emblems.

Here their mudrās are these: oṃ bajra maṇi ratna netra ānaya baśi kuru sarba artha sambhaba dāna śīghraṃ tiṣṭha aṃkuśi hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna ratna māle abhiṣiñca hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna sūrye jvālaya sarba mahā rājini hūṃ oṃ maṇi candra dhvajāgri hūṃ oṃ maṇi hāse hāsa hūṃ

Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
The gem lotus should be drawn.
In all of its directions,
Do it in due order, above and below.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ maṇi samādhi padmeni hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratnādya gra samaya hūṃ oṃ maṇi samaya koṣe hūṃ oṃ maṇi samaya cakra hūṃ oṃ maṇi bhāṣāgri hūṃ

In the sacred fourth maṇḍala,
Having crossed in with Vajra Force,
The one who rains down jewels, furnished
With vajra jewels, dwelling there,
Should be drawn surrounded on all sides
By the karma mudrās, as is proper.
Those furnished with gem emblems
Do in due order, above and below.

Then their mudrās are these: oṃ ratna bṛṣṭi sādhaya mahā maṇi hūṃ oṃ mahā pūjā samaye netra ā oṃ mahā pūjā samana samaye rakṣa oṃ bajra maṇi ratna daṣṭra kārāle hara hara hūṃ oṃ maṇi samaya muṣṭi hūṃ

Then, having performed the actions in this maṇḍala of the gem secret as is proper, one should bring in one's own disciples and command them thus: "Do not speak of this way to anyone, lest you become utterly poor and, when you die, fall into hell." Having commanded them, one should generate the wisdom of one's own gem samaya.

Through the samādhi of Vajraratna
Draw a vajra jewel in the sky;
If one places it also
On one's own forehead, one will surely become a king.

Having bound the jewel vajra,
Draw the vajra jewel in the sky;
If one places it
At the site of empowerment, one will surely become a king.

Through the samādhi of Vajraratna
Draw the vajra jewel in the sky;
If one places that wisdom vajra,
One becomes a king accomplished by oneself.

Having bound the karma mudrā,
Draw the vajra jewel in the sky;
If one places it in its own place,
One becomes a king accomplished by oneself.

Here their heart mantras are these: mahā bajra ratna abhiṣiñca māṃ samaya ratna abhiṣiñca māṃ dharma ratna abhiṣiñca māṃ karma ratna abhiṣiñca māṃ

At the heart of the great mudrā
One should meditate on the vajra jewel;
Having meditated, one is consecrated with empowerment
And attains what is supremely marvelous.

Absorbed in equipoise, having meditated
On the vajra jewel at the forehead,
If one binds the jewel vajra,
One becomes king of all.

Through the samādhi of Vajraratna
Meditate on the vajra jewel upon the tongue;
One will obtain the empowerment

Of becoming a king of Dharma.

Fully absorbed in equipoise, having meditated
On the vajra jewel at the crown protuberance,
And having bound the karma mudrā,
One becomes a king who performs actions well.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ bajra ratna hṛdaya abhiṣiñca ho oṃ bajra ratna abhiṣeka dra oṃ bajra ratna abhiṣiñca baṃ oṃ bajra ratna uṣṇīṣa adhiṣṭhana svamāna

If one meditates oneself as the great mudrā
And also draws the vajra jewel
On cloth and the like,
One becomes a great king.

Having drawn the unsurpassed vajra jewel
On cloth and the like,
If one meditates on the sattva vajra,
One becomes lord of the samayas.

Having oneself drawn the jewel vajra
On cloth and the like,
If one meditates on the mudrā of meditative concentration,
One surely becomes lord of the Dharma.

Having drawn the vajra jewel
On cloth and the like,
If one meditates on the mudrā of actions,
One oneself becomes lord of action.

Here their heart mantras are these: bajra ratna biṃbha adhitiṣṭhi oṃ bajra ratna bibha pratitiṣṭha oṃ bajra ratna biṃbha abhiṣeka bajra ratna biṃbha kuru

Whether of gold, or else of silver,
If one wears a vajra jewel,
Or else one of some other precious substance,
And meditates on it at the heart, one receives empowerment.

If one always places on the forehead
An unsurpassed vajra jewel
Made of gold or of another precious substance,

One becomes a king of great wealth.

Having meditated on a vajra jewel
Of gold or of other precious substances,
If one also puts it into one's own mouth,
One gains mastery over speech.

If one meditates on a vajra jewel
Of gold or of other precious substances,
And meditates on it also at the crown protuberance,
One becomes lord of all actions.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ bajra ratna hṛdaya ābarṇa hūṃ oṃ bajra ratna abhiṣeka mahā artha pāda oṃ bajra ratna pāca pāde oṃ bajra ratna mahā karma pāde

Then one trains in the secret wisdom of the samaya mudrās of the gem family.

Meditating as the great mudrā,
Bind the great vajra gem
And insert the gem into the woman's opening (bhaga);
Thus one will obtain accomplishment.

Having inserted the gem of the supreme samaya
Into the woman's opening,
And binding the supreme samaya,
There comes the accomplishment of empowerment over all.

Bind the great vajra gem,
And the gem on which the Dharma mudrā has been meditated,
Insert it into the woman's opening;
There comes unsurpassed accomplishment.

Bind the gem of the karma mudrā;
If the karma mudrā is bound
At the woman's opening, there comes
The unsurpassed accomplishment of all actions.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ mahā maṇi siddhi oṃ samaya abhiṣeka siddhi oṃ dharma siddhi oṃ karma siddhi

Then the binding of the great mudrās of this maṇḍala is explained:

Bind the jewel vajra as a sprout;
The middle fingers, ring fingers and little fingers,
Having made these fingers extended,
Placed on the crown of the head, it wins the supreme accomplishment.

Having made the vajra bond,
Knot the two index fingers, and the two thumbs
And the ring fingers, turning them into a vajra;
Placed at the hair-curl between the brows, it wins empowerment.

Having formed the shape of the vajra jewel,
Join the sides of the two index fingers and the sides of the thumbs;
Turning that very one, one obtains that empowerment.

With that same one, the two thumbs and two index fingers
Bound in the manner of the Dharma Vajra
And placed at the forehead
Confer the empowerment of the great Dharma.

Having bound the karma vajra,
The garland of all empowerments,
If one turns it and places it
At the forehead, empowerment is conferred.

The mudrā of Ratnasambhava,
The samaya born of Vajradhātu, having bound it,
If one places the jewel
At the forehead, empowerment is conferred.

Crossing the two thumbs over each other,
And bending the tips
Of the two index fingers like a gem,
One obtains the great vajra gem.

Having made the vajra bond,
In the Vajra Fist the two middle fingers
Are made like a gem;
One receives the empowerment of the gem garland.

Having made the vajra bond,
Make the middle fingers like a gem,
And the index and ring fingers
Like an opened lotus: thus it is accomplished.

Bind the two middle fingers as a gem;
If all the fingers that are raised
One meditates as gems,
One's retinues will be endowed with the supreme.

Having made the middle fingers and thumbs
In the form of a vajra jewel,
The ring fingers and little fingers made even
Are placed at the mouth: this is the tongue, the giving of gems.

There, make the two index fingers a vajra;
Likewise make those two into a hook;
Index finger drawing index finger:
That itself is the full giving of joy.

Bind the two middle fingers as a gem;
Bend the two index fingers at the sides;
The two sides of the ring fingers knotted
Are covered by the two thumbs.
That very one is turned as the vajra sun;
Extend it at the top of the shoulders.
The gem banner is the ornament of the crown;
And it is made in the manner of laughter.

Having made the vajra bond,
Raise the index and ring fingers upward
And make them like a lotus;
Make the two middle fingers a gem;
From that, at the end, perform the full giving.

Join the vajra sword
And make it in the form of a vajra wheel;
Draw that very one forth from the mouth.

Make the two index fingers a jewel sprout,
Extend all the fingers,
And place them on the crown of the head:
This sends down a rain of jewels.

That same, in the manner of armor,
Making two jewels at the heart;
The two index fingers as gem-holding fangs;

Made even in the center: this is the fist.

Then one trains in the wisdom of the samaya mudrās.

If those very great mudrās
Are bound with the palms joined,
In brief, they grant the fourfold
Accomplishment of the secret of secrets.
Just as with the giving of the vajra secret,
They should not be bound at all times.

Next I shall explain the sūtra of the Dharma mudrās: traiḥ graiḥ traiḥ kraḥ khaḥ dhaiḥ kraiḥ baiḥ kraḥ raiḥ yaḥ maiḥ

The supreme fist of the secret of secrets,
If made twofold, performs all actions.

This completes the extensive rite of the secret maṇḍala of the jewel mudrā, from the Great King of Rites on the Karma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called "the blessing that arises from the samaya of knowing the empowerment of all tathāgatas," and spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba tathāgata abhiṣekajñānottama hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ bajra jñāna abhiṣeka samaya hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ maṇi ratna abhiṣeka jñāna hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajranetra, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ dharma abhiṣeka jñāna hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraviśva, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba abhiṣeka jñān hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Ākāśagarbha, spoke this wisdom maṇḍala of his own family.

Now I shall fully explain
The supreme wisdom maṇḍala.
Like Vajradhātu,
It is called the Jewel Wisdom.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,

Lay out the whole maṇḍala with cords;
In the manner of the Dharma maṇḍala,
One should draw the emblems of the heart.

Then he spoke these, the wisdom heart mantras of this maṇḍala: oṃ jñāna sarba siddhi jñāna hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna aṃkuśa ja oṃ maṇi jñāna rāga oṃ maṇi jñāna duṣṭe oṃ maṇi jñāna duṣṭi maṇi hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna abhiṣeka oṃ maṇi jñāna sūrya oṃ maṇi jñāna dhvaja oṃ maṇi jñāna aṭṭāṭṭa hāsa oṃ maṇi jñāna padma hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna tyega oṃ maṇi jñāna koṣa oṃ jñānamṇi cakra oṃ jñāna maṇi bhāṣa oṃ jñāna maṇi ratna barṣa hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna nredye pūja samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi jñāna rakṣa oṃ maṇi jñāna muṣṭi

Then again, having performed the extensive rite of the maṇḍala as is proper, one should command the disciple thus: "Do not speak of this to anyone who has not seen the Dharma, lest you die quickly without having attained accomplishment." Having commanded thus, one should generate the Dharma Wisdom of the gem family.

Having drawn Vajragarbha
Through samādhi on cloth and the like,
And having meditated, one should make supplication,
Saying, "Precious one, grant my aims!"

Having drawn Vajragarbha
Through samādhi on cloth and the like,
And having meditated, one makes supplication,
Saying in words, "Grant jewels!"

Having drawn Vajragarbha
On cloth and the like, resting in equipoise,
And meditating thoroughly, one supplicates the wisdom,
Saying, "Grant the sacred Dharma!"

Having drawn Vajragarbha
On cloth and the like, in equipoise,
And having meditated, one should supplicate for action,
Saying, "Grant sacred action!"

Then their heart mantras of accomplishment are these: oṃ dehi sarba artha bhagabān bajra garbha oṃ dehi sarba ratna bhagabāna bajra garbha oṃ dehi

sādha dharmāmi bhagabān bajra garbha satva oṃ dehi sādha karma bhagabāna bajra garbha

Facing the sky, or in another direction,
Having meditated in equipoise
On Ākāśagarbha with a well-disposed mind,
One should request excellent aims.

Facing the sky, or in another direction,
Having meditated in equipoise
On Ākāśagarbha with a well-disposed mind,
One should request an accumulation of wealth.

Facing the sky, or in another direction,
Having meditated in equipoise
On Ākāśagarbha with a well-disposed mind,
One supplicates for abundance.

Facing the sky, or in another direction,
Having meditated in equipoise
On Ākāśagarbha with a well-disposed mind,
One supplicates for actions and the like.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ jñāna garbha dehi sarba arthana oṃ jñāna garbha dehi sarba ratna oṃ jñāna garbha dehi sarba dharmaṃ oṃ jñāna garbha dehi sarba karma māṃ

Having drawn Vajragarbha
And meditated on him fully at the heart,
When the heart throbs,
Then, being accomplished, he grants wealth.

Having drawn Vajragarbha
On the forehead and meditated on him,
When the head trembles,
By that one obtains empowerment.

Having placed Vajragarbha in the mouth
And meditated on him right there,
When he becomes active,
Then speech is accomplished.

Having placed Vajragarbha firmly
On one's own crown and meditated on him,

When he blazes,
Then one will soar into the sky.

Here their heart mantras are these:

oṃ hṛdaya garbhe dehi danaṃ oṃ ratna abhiṣeka garbha abhiṣiñcāmi oṃ bhaga garbha siddhū oṃ ratna garbhoṣṇīṣa ākāśāgaccha

Having meditated, fully absorbed in equipoise,
On Vajragarbha, the great mudrā,
Request, "Grant me accomplishment!"
Saying ili ratna, it is accomplished.

Having bound, fully absorbed in equipoise,
The samaya of Ākāśagarbha,
Supplicate for empowerment;
Saying mili ratna, one obtains it.

Having meditated, fully absorbed in equipoise,
In the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
Supplicate, "Grant me the Dharma!"
Saying cili ratna, one obtains it.

Having bound, fully absorbed in equipoise,
Ākāśagarbha, supreme in action,
Supplicate for all jewels;
Saying kili ratna, one obtains them.

Here their heart mantras are these: oṃ ili oṃ mili oṃ cili oṃ kili

Then one trains in the wisdom of the secret mudrās of the gem wisdom.

Facing the sky, or in another direction,
Having meditated on Vajragarbha,
If the two organs are joined together,
One will obtain the supreme accomplishment.

Like a drawing painted on a ground,
Having meditated on Vajragarbha,
And joining the two organs together,
One will also obtain empowerment.

Having meditated on Vajragarbha,
And joining the two organs together,

One who plays and sports with that beloved,
The whole world takes delight in him.

Having meditated on Vajragarbha
In the form of the atoms of all of space,
And joining the two organs together,
One will surely accomplish everything.

Here their heart mantras are these: ākāśa guhya jñāna samaya hūṃ bicitra guhya jñāna abhiṣiñca hūṃ priyānusmṛti jñāna guhya sarba loke rāgaya hūṃ sarba guhya jñāna sarba siddhimme prayaccha hūṃ

Then one should bind this great mudrā as is proper. The accomplishment, too, is like that.

Now one trains in the wisdom of the Dharma samaya mudrās. The vajra gem should be set out in the manner of the vajra wisdom maṇḍala. Then this is the Dharma mudrā: sā bā rā sā ra te ka hā daṃ ti he bā kan ka ra ya ma

Then, in brief, the karma mudrā should be set out according to its place.

This completes the extensive rite of the wisdom maṇḍala, from the Great King of Rites on the Karma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One entered into equipoise in the samādhi called "the blessing that arises from the samaya of the action of empowerment of all tathāgatas," and spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: sarba tathāgata karma abhiṣeka hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā that arises from action: oṃ bajra hūṃ kāra abhiṣeka

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba tathāgata samanta abhiṣeka hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajranetra, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ sarba dharma abhiṣeka ratna

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajraviśva, spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ biśva abhiṣeka hūṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble Ākāśagarbha, spoke this samaya of his own family.

Now I shall fully explain
The supreme karma maṇḍala.
Like Vajradhātu,
It is called the Jewel Purpose.
In the manner of the great maṇḍala,
Lay out the whole maṇḍala with cords.
In its center, as is proper,
One should set an image of the Buddha.
In the manner of the great sattvas,
Draw the jewel offerings.

Here their mudrās are these: oṃ maṇi ratna pūjāgra oṃ sarba artha siddha bajra ratna abhiṣeka hūṃ oṃ bajra maṇi dharma samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna ākarṣa karma samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna rāga rati karma pūje prabarta oṃ maṇi ratne sādhu kāra pūja samaye hūṃ oṃ mahā maṇi ratna dṛṣṭa ākarṣa oṃ maṇi ratna māla pūje oṃ maṇi ratna sūryāloka pūje oṃ maṇi ratna dhāja pātaka pūje oṃ maṇi ratna aṭṭāṭṭā hāsa būje oṃ padma maṇi samādhi samāye hūṃ oṃ sarba dyāgānusmṛti samādhi karmma kari hūṃ oṃ maṇi tna tīkṣṇa samaye cchinda hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna cakra samaye hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna bhāṣe bhad bhad hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna barśani hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna karmiṇi hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna kabace rakṣa māṃ oṃ maṇi ratna daṃṣṭa khāda khāda hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna karmā muṣṭi hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna lāsye pūjaya ho oṃ maṇi ratna māle abhiṣka pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna gīdye pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna nṛtye pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna dhūpe pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna puṣpe pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna āloke pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna gandhe pūjāya oṃ maṇi ratna aṃkuśa ākarṣaya jaḥ oṃ maṇi ratna pāśe hūṃ oṃ maṇi ratna sphoṭa baṃ oṃ maṇi ratna ābeśa aḥ

Then, having performed the rite in this karma maṇḍala extensively as is proper, one should bring the disciple in and command thus: "Do not speak of this to anyone, lest you be overwhelmed by the obscuration of karma and die." Having commanded thus, one should train in the wisdom of action.

Having meditated, fully absorbed in equipoise,
On Vajragarbha, the great mudrā,
If one makes offering with all offerings,
All buddhas come under one's power.

Binding any mudrā at all
Of the supreme samaya of samādhi,

If one makes offerings to all buddhas,
By that one obtains empowerment.

Having meditated, fully absorbed in equipoise,
In the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
If one makes abundant offerings to all buddhas,
One will tame the most excellent of beings.

Through the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
Having bound the karma mudrā,
If one makes offerings to all buddhas,
In an instant one obtains all aims.

Here their heart mantras are these:

oṃ ratna pūja baśi kuru oṃ ratna pūja samaya abhiṣiñca oṃ ratna pūjāya dharma nāśaya pādi oṃ ratna pūjī karma sarba arthāna me sādha

Then this is the wisdom of the secret mudrā:

Through the samādhi of Vajragarbha,
Joining the two organs together,
If one makes offerings to all buddhas,
By that the whole world is pleased.

Then, through the wisdom of the great mudrā, the supreme accomplishment will be accomplished. Then one should train in the wisdom of the samaya mudrā.

Having bound the vajra jewel,
One should place it at all the places;
In the manner of the Vajra Purpose,
Do it above and below, in due order.

Then this is the wisdom of the Dharma mudrā: tva ja ga dha tna ja tu sa rmma kṣṇa tu ṣa rmma kṣa kṣa dhi

Having made the vajra jewel twofold,
One accomplishes that karma mudrā.

This completes the extensive rite of the karma maṇḍala, from the Great King of Rites on the Karma Samaya of All Tathāgatas.

Then again the Blessed One, all the tathāgatas, entered into equipoise in the samādhi called "the jewel mudrā," and spoke this, his own Supreme Vidyā: oṃ

bajra ratna trāṃ

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ bajra māle

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajragarbha, spoke this, his own mudrā: oṃ maṇi ratne

Here, this is the extensive tantra of the requisites and rites of all the tathāgata families. Here, this is the extensive tantra of the requisites and rites of the heart: having beheld the great maṇḍala, one makes offerings with the mudrās of incense, lamp, flower and scent, and then one should begin recitation with the vajra words.

Here, this is the extensive tantra of the rite of recitation: remaining for four months in the proper manner, and having made offerings at the four times of day with incense and the rest in accordance with the rite, one praises all the tathāgatas with the hundred and eight names of the realization of the Great Vehicle of all the tathāgatas. Having paid homage by way of prostration with the four mudrās, one should offer one's own body and make offering with these four mantras.

oṃ sarba tathāgata pūjopasthānāya ātmbanaṃ niryātayāmi sarba tathāgata bajra satvā tiṣṭha sva māṃ oṃ sarba tathāgata pūjā abhiṣekāya ātmānaṃ niryātayāmi sarba tathāgata bajra ratna abhiṣiñca māṃ oṃ sarba tathāgata phūja prabartanāya ātmānaṃ nirayātayāmi sarba tathāgata najra ṅharma prabartaya māṃ oṃ sarba tathāgata pūjā karmane ātmānaṃ niryātayāmi sarba tathāgata bajra karma kuru māṃ

Then, not parted from attachment to all the qualities of desire, enjoying every food and every pleasure, one meditates for the sake of one's own heart before an image of the Buddha, even if only with words, and does as one pleases. If one recites the vajra words a hundred times, one will swiftly attain accomplishment. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

If one wishes for the unsurpassed accomplishment, then on a cloth the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, is seated in the center, and his four great sattvas are arranged in the manner of a maṇḍala, with colors and ornaments as one pleases. One draws them, with the great sattvas seated on moon discs, and one draws the goddesses of the family in the corners. Then, having made extensive offerings to the painted image, one should recite for four months in the proper manner of recitation. Then at the end, having made extensive offerings, one should recite throughout the whole night. Then, when dawn breaks, one will attain the supreme accomplishments, such as the reality of all the tathāgatas. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

Or, if one wishes to accomplish the mudrā, one binds the mudrā of Sattvavajrī of all the tathāgatas, and before the eyes of the mudrā of the painted image, binding and releasing it in the proper way as one pleases, one should recite the vajra words a hundred thousand times. Then at the end, throughout the whole night, without wearying, one releases the mudrā only slightly, binds it again in the proper way, and recites. Then the mudrā will blaze, descend, leap up, and speak a few words. Then, with the mudrā still bound, one will soar in the sky. One will also take on whatever form one pleases, become invisible, and perform every action. As soon as they are bound, all the mudrās too will perform every action in the proper way. So spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

Or, if one wishes to accomplish absorption, one begins with the subtle vajra and meditates for four months in the manner of the yoga of the heart of whichever absorption one delights in. Then at the end, throughout the whole night, one should remain in meditative equipoise without breaking the cross-legged posture. Then, when dawn breaks, all the accomplishments, such as that of the tathāgata, will become directly manifest. Then one will obtain whatever one desires. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

If one wishes to accomplish action, one likewise recites and practices for one month, and then at the end one should recite throughout one whole night. Then one will have the accomplishment of all actions. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to perform some act, merely by uttering it once, oneself and others, villages and towns, will be protected by binding on armor and the like. One may also perform the rite of descent: with fragrant sandalwood, those seized by grahas and those not seized, and all objects, such as the mudrās of the vajra, hook, arrow, hand, jewel, sun, banner, row of teeth, lotus, sword, wheel, tongue, crossed vajra, armor, fangs and fist, one causes to descend by a single utterance.

One also performs the acts of illusion. One places a vajra inside a peacock tail feather and binds it, then presses that peacock feather with the mudrā of Sattvavajrī, and should recite until the mudrā of Sattvavajrī of all the tathāgatas descends. Then various forms and so forth will appear from the peacock feather. From then on, the peacock feather, according to the rite, displays every form on one's own body; reciting once over that very feather and waving it, every form will appear from oneself. With that very feather one also displays the illusory acts of the world, and displays the images of the buddhas and bodhisattvas. It displays the deeds performed in all the buddha fields of the ten directions by the tathāgatas together with the maṇḍalas of their retinues, such as the taming of the māras with their hosts and the play of miraculous powers, up to displaying from oneself the image of the Buddha endowed with all the supreme aspects.

If one wishes to bring under one's power, one binds the mudrā of the vajrī of the mind of all the tathāgatas and should recite until that mudrā blazes. From then on, if merely by binding the mudrā one pleases all the tathāgatas and brings them under one's power, what need is there to mention other sattvas?

If one wishes to accomplish the worldly and transcendent accomplishments, then first of all one likewise recites, reciting eight thousand times for one month. Then at the end one binds the mudrā and likewise should recite throughout the whole night until the mudrā blazes. From then on, merely by binding the mudrā, any one worldly accomplishment whatsoever will come about. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

The extensive requisites and rite of the tathāgata family are complete.

Then this is the extensive requisites and rite of the vajra family. First one should perform the preliminary approach: in this way, as one wishes, one should recite the syllables a hundred thousand times. At its end, having recited throughout the whole night, from then on one will be able to benefit all sentient beings and to punish them. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

But if one wishes to accomplish it, one should draw the painted image in the proper way, and likewise make offerings. Then for one month, enjoying every pleasure and doing as one pleases, one recites with the vajra words at the four times of day so as to complete a hundred thousand recitations. When the month has come to its end, one makes extensive offerings to the painted image, binds the mudrā called Vajra Hūṃ, and should recite until the sound hūṃ arises from that bound mudrā. Then, when dawn breaks, the lord of the gods, Maheśvara (Śiva), and the others, together with their retinues, will stand before one and receive one's command.

Then the vidyādhara should command them thus: "Whenever I command you, 'Come here and do this!', at that time you must come here and do as I command."

From then on one becomes the master of the whole of the three worlds. Even in a moment one gives commands as one pleases throughout all the three realms and travels round them, and on returning one also benefits and punishes. Enjoying the three worlds of divine substances, one does as one pleases, and one delights all women, such as the consorts of the lords of all the gods, and enjoys them; yet no one at all, whoever he may be, is able to harm one. With hūṃ one subdues all the malevolent ones, gods and others, and then one will live for a thousand minor eons. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish the mudrā, one performs recitation in the proper way, and at the end of the recitation one binds the commitment mudrā called Vajra Hūṃ and should recite throughout the whole night. Then, when dawn breaks, the mudrā will be accomplished. Then, if one binds the mudrā together with hūṃ in accordance with the proper rite, one will perform every action: going through the sky, displaying various forms, becoming invisible, displaying illusions, causing descent upon all, summoning, bringing under one's control, producing joy in all, seizing all jewels, displaying great blazing light rays, displaying a rain of jewels, laughing a great laugh, purifying all sentient beings, cutting, dividing, turning the wheel of time, declaring reality as it is, engaging in all actions, protecting, stupefying, subduing, threatening, killing, sealing all sentient beings, engaging in the joy of desire, empowering, making all things sing, making them dance, summoning, causing to enter, binding, causing descent, and so forth. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish the subtle vajra, one meditates in the absorption called Vajra Hūṃ, and likewise should practice for one month in the manner of recitation. Then at the end, with that same absorption, one should recite throughout one whole night. Then, when dawn breaks, one comes to have the five superknowledges and will be able to benefit all sentient beings and to subjugate them. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish action, one likewise recites and practices for one month, and then at the end should recite throughout one whole night. Then all actions will be accomplished. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

Then, if one wishes to perform the actions, one utters it once, and by thinking of it in the mind one will perform all actions, such as protection.

The extensive requisites and rite of the vajra family are complete.

Then this is the extensive requisites and rite of the lotus family. First, if one performs a hundred thousand recitations, the approach will have been performed. Then one should practice the accomplishment: on a cloth one draws the Blessed One, Tamer of All Beings, and the rest; in all directions around him one draws the four great sattvas in the manner of four maṇḍalas, and in the corners one draws the goddesses. Then one performs the rite of recitation extensively in the same way, and at the end of the month one should recite throughout one whole night. Then the Blessed One, Tamer of All Beings, will come and, at the appropriate time, will grant the supreme opportunity. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish the mudrā, one likewise binds the mudrā of Padmavajrī and should recite at the four times of day until a full eight thousand recitations have been spoken. Then at the end, throughout one whole night, one binds the mudrā and recites, and when dawn breaks there will be accomplishment. Then, by binding the mudrā, one tames all beings as is fitting. Thus spoke the Blessed One Samantāvalokiteśvara.

If one wishes to accomplish it by way of absorption, one likewise, at the end of the month, should recite throughout one whole night with whatever absorption one delights in. Then, when dawn breaks, all absorptions will become directly manifest. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish action, one likewise recites, and at the end of the month should recite throughout the whole night. Then one will be capable of all actions. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

The extensive requisites and rite of the lotus family are complete.

Then this is the extensive rite of application of the jewel family. First of all, one performs the four kinds of homage to all the tathāgatas and should recite a hundred thousand times. Then likewise one draws on a cloth the Blessed One Sarvārthasiddhi in the manner of the four maṇḍalas. Then one practices in the same way, and at the end of the month should recite throughout one whole night. Then, when dawn breaks, the jewel of the empowerment of all the blessed tathāgatas, the bodhisattva Ākāśagarbha, will come and bestow empowerment. By that empowerment, one will become a wheel-turning sovereign of the vidyādharas in that great trichiliocosm world system. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish the mudrā, then likewise, in the manner of the Dharma Vajrī, one should accomplish the mudrā of the sprout of Vajraratna just as it is; then one will perform the works of every intention. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

If one wishes to accomplish jewel wisdom, then likewise one should meditate on the absorption of the arising of Vajraratna in its proper sequence. Meditating at the four times on this absorption called "Just as a jewel arises from insubstantial space, so the body of the bodhisattva arises from the jewel," one should recite as stated above. Then, at the end of the month, one should recite throughout one whole night with that very absorption. Then, when dawn breaks, all the tathāgatas will come and confer empowerment as one wishes. Thus spoke the Blessed One Ākāśagarbha.

Then the accomplishment of action is explained. One recites in the same way, and at the end of the month one should recite throughout one whole night. Then, when dawn breaks, through the Blessed One Ākāśagarbha all aims will be accomplished. Then one will perform all actions. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

The extensive ritual of ancillary practice for the jewel family is complete.

Then, this is the extensive account of the requisites and the rite of accomplishment common to all the families. There, first, the requisites and rite of all the heart mantras are explained in detail. If one wishes to accomplish a heart mantra, one should say, "May it be accomplished by all the tathāgatas!" and then recite the heart mantra as one likes and perform the rite of accomplishment.

There, these are the requisites and rite of the mudrās. One should say, "May all the mudrās be pleased with me!" and, binding the samaya mudrā, should recite as one likes, as much as one is able. Then accomplishment will come about just as it should.

There, this is the extensive account of the requisites and rite of all mantras. One says, "May speech free of conceptual elaboration be accomplished! May the Absorption of All Tathāgatas arise in me!" and recites the mantra as one likes. This is the accomplishment.

There, this is the extensive account of the requisites and rite of the vidyā. One says, "O, all these sentient beings are blinded by ignorance, while all the tathāgatas have realized knowledge and are restrained by the vow," and one should recite and accomplish the vidyā as one likes. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the noble Vajradhara.

Then, this is the extensive rite of vajra recitation, by which all heart mantras, mantras, mudrās, and vidyās are recited just as they are meditated upon. Whatever is to be accomplished, with whatever intention, by reciting heart mantras, mudrās, secret mantras, and vidyās, if one meditates on oneself or on the sattva, what is to be accomplished will be accomplished. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

The extensive rite of recitation common to all the families is complete.

Then, the extensive rite of accomplishment common to all the families is as follows. There, first of all, the accomplishments of the family of the tathāgatas are these: the accomplishment of gaining wealth, the accomplishment of magical power, the attainment of the state of a vidyādhara, and the great accomplishments.

There, the gaining of wealth is this. Wherever one suspects there is a treasure, one binds the mudrā and, by means of one's own absorption, looks at that treasure site with the vajra gaze. If one sees something like a vajra gleaming there, one should know that there is a treasure in that place. Then, binding the samaya mudrā of Vajrasphoṭa, one digs the earth and takes it as one pleases, and one will obtain it without dispute. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

There, this is the attainment of the accomplishment of magical power. Whatever mudrā one is accomplishing, one should say "vajra siddhi." The accomplishment of magical power is of four kinds, namely these: going to and fro and remaining upon water and the like; displaying the forms of all, the tathāgatas and the rest; becoming invisible for as long as one wishes; going through the sky; soaring a thousand leagues (yojanas) above; going and coming beneath the earth; going a thousand leagues in every direction as one likes, circling about, and coming back again; knowing the thoughts of all sentient beings for a thousand leagues all around; seeing all things with the eye and hearing them with the ear; taking upon one's lap, as one pleases, all the women dwelling within a thousand leagues around in every direction; and even after carrying off all riches, such as gold, gems, and pearls, and all wealth, no one at all is able to challenge one in the least. Since not even my vajra could prevail, what need is there to speak of others? One will have the strength of ten thousand men combined, will always be free of illness, will always enjoy all objects of desire, will always be in the prime of youth and have the form of a god, will see all the tathāgatas together with Vajrasattva, will make offerings with the unsurpassed vajra accomplishment, and will live for fourteen thousand years. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Vajrasiddhi of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the attainment of the accomplishment of the vajra vidyādhara. When accomplishing the mudrā, one says "Vajra Vidyādhara," and it is accomplished, and one becomes a wheel-turning sovereign of the vajra vidyādharas. One will enjoy all objects of desire, will circle through all the buddha fields in an instant and return, and will fully enjoy every bliss. One will have the youth of an eighteen-year-old and will wear coiled locks. Having become a great vajra vidyādhara, one will see all the tathāgatas and all the vajrasattvas and will live for a great eon. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Vidyādhara of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the attainment of the great accomplishment. If, for the sake of the heart of one's own mudrā, one accomplishes the mudrā by oneself, one becomes the form of the sattva, and even in a single instant one performs various deeds with various forms in all the world systems of the ten directions. Seeing all the tathāgatas together with Vajrasattva, one worships them perfectly with the offerings of the tathāgatas, endowed with all the supreme aspects. Having worked for the benefit of all sentient beings, without exception and without remainder, one comes back again and, throughout all the world systems, enjoys all the objects of desire, all pleasure, and all mental happiness, endowed with all the supreme aspects. Having become a bodhisattva, a great being equal to Vajrasattva, one's lifespan will reach the measure of great eons, without exception and without remainder. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Great Accomplishment of the Tathāgatas' Means.

There, these are the accomplishments of the vajra family, namely: the accomplishment of victory over the three worlds, the accomplishment of all empowerments, the accomplishment of all pleasure and mental happiness, and the supreme accomplishments.

There, this is the accomplishment of victory over the three worlds. Binding the mudrā of victory over the three realms, one should accomplish it while pressing down Maheśvara (Śiva) with the left foot. Then, when that image emits a sound, one should say "hūṃ." By merely saying "hūṃ," the lords of all the three worlds, Maheśvara and the others, together with their retinues, will obey before the practitioner and come under control. From then on one becomes Vajradhara, the lord of all the three worlds. Going through the sky, one circles through all the spheres of the three worlds and, coming back again, tames with "hūṃ" all sentient beings, such as malevolent gods. Having the form called Vajra Hūṃ of All Tathāgatas, one issues commands to all the three worlds, sees all the tathāgatas together with Vajrasattva and pleases them, and lives for a thousand years. Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrahūṃkāra.

There, this is the accomplishment of all empowerments. When accomplishing the mudrā, one should first empower oneself with the samaya mudrā of the jewel of the empowerment of all the tathāgatas, and then accomplish it. Then, once it is accomplished, the empowerment becomes fourfold: the vajra empowerment, the jewel empowerment, the Dharma empowerment, and the karma empowerment. There, if one obtains the vajra empowerment, one becomes the vajra holder of all the tathāgatas. If one obtains the jewel empowerment, one becomes the lord of all jewels. Through the Dharma empowerment one becomes the king of all dharmas. Through the karma empowerment one attains the accomplishment of all supramundane actions. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Empowerment of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the accomplishment of all pleasure and mental happiness. It is as follows: if one always makes offerings to all the tathāgatas with the secret offerings, one will attain the accomplishment of all the pleasure and mental happiness of all the tathāgatas. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the All Pleasure and Mental Happiness of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the supreme accomplishment. It is this: "I am equal to Vajradhara." Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

There, these are the accomplishments of the lotus family, namely: pleasing, bringing under control, protection, and the lotus accomplishments.

There, the accomplishment of pleasing is this. If one meditates on Padma Kāma, one will be able to please all sentient beings, beginning with all the tathāgatas. If one recollects oneself as Lokeśvara, one will be able to bring all sentient beings under control. Through the absorption of pervading with loving-kindness, one will be able to protect, conceal, and shelter all beings. If, oneself entering the lotus absorption, one takes a lotus in the hand and accomplishes it, one will have the form of Lokeśvara, be endowed with all the supreme aspects, and live for forty thousand years. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Lotus of All Tathāgatas.

There, these are the accomplishments of the jewel family, namely: the accomplishment of the empowerment of all the families, great splendor, the complete fulfillment of all wishes, and the jewel accomplishments. The accomplishment of the empowerment of all the tathāgatas is as follows. If one makes offerings to all the tathāgatas by offering empowerment oneself, by offering lamps, by perfecting the perfection of generosity as far as one is able, and by these accomplishments of accomplishing the jewel, it will be accomplished before long. Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Jewel of All Tathāgatas.

The extensive rite of the accomplishments common to all the families is complete.

Then, "I shall explain the tantra of the accomplishment of the means of all the rites," thus spoke the Blessed One, the Sattva Without Beginning or End.

There, first of all is the tantra of the accomplishment of all the heart mantras:

Just as the world is trained,
So too is accomplishment held to be.
Its means is the mudrā;

It bestows all the great accomplishments.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the means of mudrā:

The training of the world is not free of passion;
The accomplishment of mudrā is born from passion.
Its means is meditation;
It becomes the highest of all accomplishments.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the means of mantra:

Because this world has fallen away from truth,
It does not attain the accomplishment of mantra.
But through the means free of conceptual elaboration,
It becomes the highest of all accomplishments.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of all the vidyās:

For this world, sunk in the darkness of ignorance,
There is no accomplishment of the vidyā;
But through its means, which is vast,
One attains the highest of all accomplishments.

This was the tantra of the accomplishment of all the rites.

Then, "I shall explain the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of all the rites," thus spoke all the blessed tathāgatas.

There, first of all is the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of all the heart mantras:

Having made the fourfold offering,
One will gain great merit.
Even without merit, worship the buddhas;
One will succeed: of this there is no doubt.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of mudrā:

If one guards the secret samaya,
One will gain great merit.
Even without merit, swiftly,
If one guards the samaya, one swiftly succeeds.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of mantra:

If one recites the names of the buddhas and so on,
One will gain great merit.
Even without merit, swiftly,
Through the giving of the Dharma one attains accomplishment.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of the vidyā:

Among the kinds of merit, giving is supreme;
If one gives, one will gain merit.
If the perfection of generosity is completed,
One swiftly accomplishes buddhahood itself.

This was the tantra of the accomplishment of merit of all the rites.

Then, "I shall explain the tantra of the accomplishment of wisdom of all the rites," thus spoke all the blessed tathāgatas.

There, first of all is the tantra of the accomplishment of wisdom of the heart mantras:

Entering into the letter A,
Meditating on all the letters,
From one's own mouth into the mouth of the other,
If one meditates thus, one will gain merit.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the great bodhisattva Mañjuśrī.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of wisdom of mudrā:

It is renowned as the absorption
Called the Penetration of Wisdom.
If one meditates on it so the mudrā is swiftly accomplished,
It will be swiftly accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Supreme Wisdom.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of wisdom of mantra:

Wisdom follows after sound;
The words of absorption are fully elaborated.
If one meditates on that, swiftly indeed
One will attain the accomplishment of mantra.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajramati.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of wisdom of the vidyā:

Between the vidyā and the mantra
There is no particular difference.
If one meditates on wisdom, swiftly
One will surely attain accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Wisdom Gnosis of All Tathāgatas.

This was the tantra of the extensive rite of the accomplishment of gnosis of all the rites.

Then, "I shall explain the tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of all the rites," thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi.

There, first of all is the tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of all the heart mantras:

If one makes all the offerings well,
The accumulation of virtuous dharmas
Will greatly increase,
And then the accumulation will be accomplished.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of mudrā:

Because one enters many circles
And draws many maṇḍalas,
The accumulations are completed, and so
One will attain the great accomplishment of the mudrās.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of mantra:

Through the ways of rejoicing and the rest,
Likewise by reading the sublime Dharma,
And by doing much recitation,
One will surely attain the accomplishment of mantra.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of the vidyā:

Through fully abandoning ignorance
And through the way of the perfection of generosity,
The accumulations being fully completed,
One will swiftly attain accomplishment.

The tantra of the accomplishment of the accumulations of all the rites is complete.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, spoke this tantra of the accomplishment of the gnosis from which the signs of all the families arise:

There, if one asks how the vajra arises:
That very one is the Blessed One, the sattva,
The lord who is the very mind of all,
The vajra of body, speech, and mind.
The sattva is self-arisen and steadfast,
The sattva supreme among all sattvas.
If one meditates well on the vajra at the heart,
It is renowned as Vajrasattva;
In this the vajra firmly abides.
That itself is the way of the gnosis
Of the buddhas, without equal.
Arising in variety from the heart,
It becomes forms of every variety;
As many as the atoms of all the realms,
These very ones are the victors.
From them the vajra body
Truly becomes Vajrasattva.
From that very first sattva
All the signs truly arise.
From the signs comes the great sattva;
From him arises this whole way.
Whoever hears this,
Has faith, and holds it, and at the heart
Always meditates on it with joy,
They will swiftly attain accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

This was the tantra of the extensive rite of the gnosis from which arises the reality of all the tathāgatas.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this tantra of the extensive rite of the gnosis from which all the rites arise.

There, first of all, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which all the rites of all the tathāgatas arise:

The gnosis of the buddhas
Always arises from the conception of ripening.
Because it comes from nonconceptual gnosis,
It is therefore called permanent.

There, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the rite of the tathāgata family arises:

Where the nonconceptual is conceived
As conception itself, what arises from conception
Is Vajrasattva, the great sattva;
Therefore it is called a rite (kalpa).

There, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the rite of the vajra family arises:

Drawn as an image according to the ritual,
And conceived as "the rite that grants accomplishment,"
It is so through a nature free of conception;
Therefore it is called a rite.

There, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the rite of the lotus family arises:

From conception, passion arises;
In the lotus it abides.
Therefore what abides in conception
Becomes accomplishment itself.

There, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the rite of the jewel family arises:

The jewel that is free of conception
Becomes most supreme in power.
Thus, through nonconceptuality,
Divine substances and accomplishment will arise.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

This was the tantra of the arising of the rites of all the families.

Then, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the heart mantras of all the rites arise:

Through the rite of what the mind desires,
What the mind desires is accomplished.

The accomplishment of absorption abides in the heart;
Therefore it is called the heart.

Then, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the mudrās of all the rites arise:

Just as the supreme seal of a king
Is a law that cannot be transgressed or broken,
So by the image of the great being
The sign is renowned as the mudrā, the seal.

Then, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the mantras of all the rites arise:

It is not to be transgressed,
Hard to break open, and secret in itself;
Because it is uttered to accomplish what is secret,
For that reason it is called mantra.

Then, this is the tantra of the gnosis from which the vidyā arises:

In order to destroy ignorance
And to accomplish the supreme knowledge of speech,
Realizing and knowing are the accomplishment;
Therefore it is called a rite.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajradhara.

This was the tantra of the gnosis from which the heart mantras and the rest of all the rites arise.

Then, this is the tantra of the gnosis of all the rites. There, first of all, is the tantra of the arising of the gnosis of the heart mantra:

When, having recited the heart mantra,
It arises in oneself or likewise in another,
Know that whatever has happened and will happen
Will be seen and will be heard.

There, this is the tantra of the arising of the gnosis of mudrā:

Following my rite exactly,
Bind any mudrā whatever;
Having looked at a person of the world,
One will know everything, as above.

There, this is the tantra of the arising of the gnosis of mantra:

If one utters the mantra even once,
Whatever is past, is arising, or has come about,
That is spoken upon one's own tongue,
All of it will prove true.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Avalokiteśvara, who looks on all.

There, this is the tantra of the arising of the gnosis of the vidyā:

If one utters the vidyā once,
What has arisen, is arising, and will arise,
Just as by the command of the vajra,
One will know it with the mind.

The tantra of the extensive rite of the arising of the gnosis of all the rites is complete.

Then, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrās of body, speech, and mind common to all the families.

There, this is the accomplishment of the body mudrā of the tathāgata family:

Seated in whatever way one sits,
One should practice in the cross-legged posture.
Having done so in the manner of the painted image,
One will accomplish the great sattva.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajrasattva.

There, this is the accomplishment of the secret body mudrā of the vajra family:

Just as in the manner of the painted image,
One stands firm in the manner of the eightfold practice.
If one practices in fierce wrath,
One will succeed without doubt.

Thus spoke the Blessed One called Vajra Hūṃ.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret body mudrā of the lotus family:

Seated in the vajra cross-legged posture,
Binding the two hands in the vajra,
Becoming the body of absorption,

One should practice the arising of the lotus.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Padmasattva.

There, this is the accomplishment of the secret body mudrā of the jewel family:

Whether sitting or lying down,
Or walking, whichever it may be,
If one is empowered by Vajraratna,
One will succeed without doubt.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajragarbha.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret speech mudrā of the family of all the tathāgatas:

Keeping the tip of the tongue quite unmoving,
And joining the teeth and the two lips,
One should practice all the rites;
This is the soundless vajra speech.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Vajravāk.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret speech mudrā of the vajra family:

Proclaiming "hūṃ" like thunder,
The speech of wrath, profound and displayed,
Clear with the wrath of the great vajra:
The speech of Vajrakrodha is accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One called Vajra Hūṃ.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret speech mudrā of the lotus family:

Breathing out as though not breathing out,
With subtle words that are very clear,
Through the heart of the gnosis of absorption,
Those who recite will be accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Heart of the Gnosis of the Absorption of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret speech mudrā of the jewel family:

With words that are utterly clear,
Always striving in homage,
If one recites in this manner,
Everything will swiftly be accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Vajra of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret mind mudrā of the tathāgata family:

The Blessed One, ever desire itself,
Bestows bliss on all sentient beings;
If one meditates on oneself as Vajrasattva,
One will swiftly succeed.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Kāma.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret mind mudrā of the vajra family:

To benefit all sentient beings,
To tame the malevolent,
And to protect the teaching of the Buddha,
One will attain the wrathful accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One called Vajra Hūṃ of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret mind mudrā of the lotus family:

Just as a lotus, fully grown,
Is not stained by the faults of what it is steeped in,
So, even if I have the fault of passion,
That passion will become accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Blossoming Lotus.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret mind mudrā of the jewel family:

"When shall I accomplish every needed aim
Of all sentient beings,
And rain down a rain of jewels?"

When this is accomplished, it is swiftly achieved.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Ākāśagarbha.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrā of the tathāgata family:

Whether standing or sitting,
Or walking, whichever it may be,
If with the left hand one performs
All the supreme mudrās, one will succeed.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Secret Mudrā Vajra of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrā of the vajra family:

Remaining however one may remain,
And doing whatever one may do,
Binding the finger mudrā of Vajrakrodha,
If one covers it with cloth, one will succeed.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the King of Wrath of All Tathāgatas.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrā of the lotus family:

Binding the lotus fist
With the left hand and concealing it,
As one wishes, swiftly,
One will attain the lotus accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Avalokiteśvara, who looks on all.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrā of the jewel family:

Binding the jewel fist of the left hand,
And covering it with a fine hand-covering,
One performs service as one pleases;
One will attain the jewel accomplishment.

Thus spoke the Blessed One Ākāśagarbha.

There, this is the tantra of the accomplishment of the secret mudrā common to all the families:

Through the absorption of one's own sattva,
In the manner of the Great Mudrā,
The vajras and the vajra gaze:
Before long the supreme is accomplished.

Thus spoke the Blessed One, the Vajrasattva of All Tathāgatas.

The tantra of the accomplishment of the secret vajra mudrās of body, speech, and mind of all the families is complete.

Then the Blessed One Vajrapāṇi called out to all the tathāgatas and said, "Blessed tathāgatas, all of you, please consider blessing this rite."

Then all the tathāgatas gathered together once more and gave this "Excellent!":

Because you have well explained this sūtra,
The unsurpassed vajra vehicle,
The secret of all the tathāgatas,
The Realization of the Great Vehicle,
Excellent, Vajrasattva, are you!
Vajraratna, you are excellent!
Vajradharma, you are excellent,
And Vajrakarma, you are excellent!

From the Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas, the further subsequent tantra of all the tantras is complete.

Then the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, rose from his seat and supplicated the Blessed One with these hundred and eight names:

Great sattva of the vajra realm,
Whose nature is the supreme benefit of beings,
King of the Śākyas, great in gnosis,
You whose nature is vajra, homage to you.

Source of sattvas, the very meaning of reality,
Cause of sentient beings, the great way,
Great benefit of beings, the aim that is needed,
Sattva of sattvas, homage to you.

Dharma of the buddhas, the great Dharma,
Who fully turns the wheel of Dharma,
Great speaker, supreme in knowing,

Great sattva, homage to you.

Great action, great protection,
Who fully accomplishes all actions,
Great being, supreme in conduct among beings,
Cause of sattvas, homage to you.

You who have attained all the perfections,

All the sattvas, the great means,
Great wisdom, homage to you.

Great compassion, supreme of the supreme,
Whose nature is the compassion of compassion,

Maker of all, homage to you.

Lion of the Śākyas, great Śākya,
Śākya, great Śākyamuni,
Great tamer, all-pervading,
Supreme tamer for the sake of beings, homage to you.

You who have attained equality with the dharmadhātu,
The dharmadhātu, the Tathāgata,
Vajra protector, great protector,
Host of sentient beings, homage to you.

Great light, great illumination,
Great diligence, great power,
Great hero, supreme in heroism,
Hero of blissful conduct, homage to you.

Brahmā, self-arisen, Blessed One,
Hero of the Śākyas, great sage,
Lord of all, of the pure sages
The Dharma king, homage to you.

Body of space, supreme of bodies,
Meditator on the three bodies and on no body,
Body of all, great body,
Vajra body, homage to you.

Speech that is no speech, supreme of speech,
Teacher of the three speeches and of no speech,
All speech, exceedingly great speech,
Vajra speech, homage to you.

Mind that is no mind, supreme of minds,
Teacher of the three minds and of no mind,
Mind of all, great mind,
Vajra mind, homage to you.

Vajra that is no vajra, supreme of vajras,
Triple vajra, purifier of what is not vajra,
All vajras, great vajra,
Vajra of vajras, homage to you.

All-pervading, supreme summit of existence,
Lord of the sugatas, the victor,
Great king of the three realms,
Vairocana, homage to you.

These hundred and eight names:
Whoever listens to them for an instant,
Or reads them, or else meditates on them,
All of them will attain buddhahood itself.

Protector, I entreat you:
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Generating great compassion,
Fully turn the wheel of Dharma!

Then the Blessed One Vairocana, having heard the words spoken by the lord of all the tathāgatas, called out to all the tathāgatas and said, "Blessed tathāgatas, please gather together once more."

Then all the tathāgatas gathered together once more and spoke this verse:

Always, in all the worlds,
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Fully turn the wheel of Dharma,
Varied according to those to be trained!

Then, immediately after this was spoken, the Blessed Tathāgata Śākyamuni, having pervaded everywhere with maṇḍalas as numerous as all the minute atoms, before all the sentient beings of all the buddha fields and all the world systems, fully turned the wheel of Dharma.

Then again the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this verse:

Always, in all the worlds,
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Fully turn the vajra wheel,
Varied according to those to be trained!

Then, immediately after this was spoken, likewise, in maṇḍalas as numerous as all the minute atoms of all the buddha fields, the Blessed Tathāgata Vajradhātu fully turned all the vajra wheels, beginning with the Vajradhātu.

Then, at that time, the great bodhisattva Trailokyavijaya spoke this verse:

Always, in all the worlds,
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Fully turn the wrathful wheel,
Varied according to those to be trained!

Then, immediately after this was spoken, likewise, in maṇḍalas as numerous as all the minute atoms of the buddha fields, the Blessed Tathāgata Trailokyavijaya fully turned the wrathful wheel of all the tathāgatas.

Then the great bodhisattva, the noble Samantāvalokiteśvara, spoke this verse:

Always, in all the worlds,
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Fully turn the lotus wheel,
Varied according to those to be trained!

Then, immediately after this was spoken, likewise, in maṇḍalas as numerous as the most minute atoms of all the buddha fields, the Blessed Tathāgata, the King of Dharma, fully turned the lotus wheel.

Then the great bodhisattva, the noble Ākāśagarbha, spoke this verse:

Always, in all the worlds,
For the benefit of all sentient beings,
Fully turn the jewel wheel,
Varied according to those to be trained!

Then, at that time, all the sentient beings included within all the buddha fields, whether subtle or gross, all of them saw, from every direction, all the tathāgatas seated on their seats in the many-storied pavilion made of vajra, jewel and precious substances on the summit of Sumeru, king of mountains, fully turning all the wheels, beginning with the Vajradhātu.

Then, at that time, the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi spoke this verse:

Having descended among humans as well,
Because it is needed, for the benefit of all beings,
Turn the supreme vajra wheel,
And, O Protector, bring it to full accomplishment!

Then again the Blessed One summoned the tathāgatas and spoke these words: "Blessed tathāgatas, may all of you please gather into one once more."

Then again all the blessed tathāgatas gathered into one and entered the heart of the Blessed Vairocana.

Then the Blessed Vairocana, who is all the tathāgatas, knowing that he had become the very nature of the vajra of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, spoke these words to Vajrapāṇi: "Son of noble family, you too enter my heart, and all the tathāgatas, all the families, all the maṇḍalas, and the heart of all the tathāgatas."

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi, by the radiance of all the tathāgatas, spoke this verse:

In brief, the vajra of the body,
Speech and mind of all the buddhas,
Having been entered, should be accomplished
For the benefit of all sentient beings.

Then, immediately after this was spoken, in all the world systems equal in number to the most minute atoms of all the world systems, of all the tathāgatas dwelling there, each tathāgata emanated bodies equal in number to the most minute atoms of all the world systems, and these too entered the heart of the Blessed Vairocana.

Then the great bodhisattva Vajrapāṇi entered and abided in all the tathāgatas, and in all the bodies of the Blessed Vairocana, in the place where all speech enters, in every arising of the mind stream, in all the vajra modes, in the limbs and all the minor limbs, in all the places, in all the major marks, in all the excellent minor marks, in all the pores of the skin, in all the maṇḍalas as numerous as the most minute atoms, and in the hearts.

Then, not long after the Blessed One had become perfectly and completely awakened, knowing that in all the tathāgatas he had himself become the vajra of the body, speech and mind of all the tathāgatas, he went from the summit of Mount Sumeru to the seat of awakening. There, at the foot of the Blessed One's tree of awakening, in order to conform to the ways of the world, he took up grass and uttered this solemn utterance:

How wonderful! For a steadfast being,
The benefit of beings is the highest benefit of self.
Because the steadfast, as those to be trained require,
Abide even in the views of non-Buddhists (tīrthikas).
In brief, it is to purify with the light of wisdom
Worldly beings who are untamed
And blinded by wrong views
That buddhas attain awakening.

Then the gods who move in the desire realm, not knowing reality, said this to the Blessed One: "O ascetic, is it for the sake of awakening that you endure such fierce and unbearable suffering?"

Then the Blessed One spread out that grass, sat upon it, and declared to the gods: "Friends, bring about my attainment of awakening!"

Then the sons of the gods who move in the desire realm, not understanding the meaning of what the Blessed One had said, went to where Śakra (Indra), lord of the gods, was, and told Śakra, lord of the gods, what had happened.

Then Śakra, lord of the gods, surrounded by the hosts of gods who move in the desire realm, told these happenings to Great Brahmā, lord of the gods who move in the form realm.

Then Great Brahmā, together with all the gods who move in the desire realm and in the form realm, told these happenings to Maheśvara (Śiva), lord of all three worlds.

Then Maheśvara, lord of the three worlds in their entirety, spoke these words to the lords of the gods, the Mighty One and the others: "Friends, the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly complete buddha, conforms to the world, and moreover teaches unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening. Do not regard him thus: 'He is not a tathāgata in the world.' It is from being a god that one becomes a tathāgata, so he is to be accomplished as one of those very gods, and not as a tathāgata. That being well, let us set out to go there to make offerings."

Then Maheśvara, lord of all the gods, and the others went to the seat of awakening, where the Blessed Tathāgata was dwelling at the heart of awakening. There they bowed their heads at the feet of the Blessed One and said this to the Blessed One: "Blessed One, out of loving concern for us, please rise from this seat of grass, sit upon a seat of divine substance, and become fully and manifestly awakened in unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening."

Then the Blessed One declared to those lords of the gods: "Friends, bring about the bestowal of unsurpassed, perfect and complete awakening upon me!"

Then they said this: "Blessed One, we are unable to bestow it. If we were able, we ourselves would become perfectly and completely awakened buddhas."

Then the Blessed One, making that very point clear, again spoke this verse:

It is not form, nor is it not form;
It is not true, nor is it false.
This pure wisdom of the buddhas' awakening:
If one realizes it, one becomes a Victor.

Then those lords of the gods remained for a little while without saying anything at all.

Then the Blessed One rose from the seat of grass and declared to those gods: "Friends, bring about the realization of such buddha wisdom!"

They said: "Blessed One, we are not capable of it."

Then again the Blessed One, remaining on that very seat, spoke this verse:

Having fully understood with the mind,
Make firm the mind of awakening!
Having made firm the being-vajra,
Meditate on yourselves as buddhas!

Then they all said, "Such is excellent!" and departed.

Then, at dawn of that night, in order to conform to the ways of the world, the Blessed One defeated Māra together with his host and became manifestly awakened as an unsurpassed, perfect and complete buddha. Then, benefiting the entire realm of sentient beings, without exception and without remainder, he praised the noble Vajrapāṇi, who had entered his own heart, with these hundred and eight names:

Vajrasattva, great being,
Great Vehicle, great-souled one,
Great in light and great in purity,

Great pledge, great binding,
Great fist, great seal,

The Tathāgata should be bowed to,
Proclaimed, worshipped and honored,
Because, without beginning or end,
You are the mind of awakening.
Relying on you, the Victors

And all the heroes, the bodhisattvas,
Have arisen and will truly arise;
Therefore, cause of the supreme awakening of the buddhas,
Vajrasattva, homage to you!
Vajraratna, homage to you!
Vajradharma, homage to you!
Vajrakarma, homage to you!

Whatever merit there is
In rightly bowing to you
And praising you with these supreme names,
Through all of it may the awakening of the buddhas be attained!

Whoever, with full faith,
Even just once,
Properly recites these sacred hundred and eight names,
All of them will become buddhas.

Thus spoke the Buddha, the Blessed One.

Then all the tathāgatas, gathered into one, gave to the bodhisattva, the great being Vajrapāṇi, with one voice, this acclamation of "Excellent!":

The unsurpassed Vajra Vehicle,
The secret of all the tathāgatas:
Because you have well explained
This sūtra, the Realization of the Great Vehicle,
Excellent are you, Vajrasattva!
Excellent are you, Vajraratna!
Excellent are you, Vajradharma!
Excellent are you, Vajrakarma!

When the Blessed One had spoken thus, all the tathāgatas, together with the noble bodhisattvas, who had entered his heart, were delighted and pleased, and rejoiced greatly at what the Blessed Vajrasattva had spoken.

This completes the Great Vehicle sūtra called the Compendium of the Reality of All Tathāgatas, together with the abridged tantra.

Although no translators' colophon appears for this tantra, it is known to have been translated by the paṇḍita Śraddhākaravarman and the Tibetan translator Rinchen Zangpo.

Translator's Notes

• The verses are a terse list of names and emblems; the sixteen items "vajra hook" through "binding" correspond to the emblems of the sixteen vajra bodhisattvas, and many of the preceding names are epithets of those bodhisattvas. "Śiva" renders □□□□□, an epithet of Śiva. □□□□□□□□□□ and □□□□□□□□□ are translated by meaning ("Desiring Inclusion," "Desiring Victory") because their Sanskrit equivalents could not be identified with confidence. "Avalokiteśvara the all-seeing lord" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, which adds "all" to the usual form of the name.

• The opening verses continue the list of names and epithets begun in the previous piece. The lines are terse, and "the supreme ground," "the great trunk" and "lord of abodes" are rendered literally. "The Great Black One" renders □□□□□□□□ (Mahākāla) as a descriptive epithet in this list.

• The bodhisattva named □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is rendered Amogharāja ("Unfailing King"), the bodhisattva form of Vajrarāja; the one mention without □□□□□□□ ("became the body of the great bodhisattva Amogha") follows the Tibetan as it stands. The bodhisattva called Māra here is the form of Vajrarāga, the deity of passion, not the adversary Māra; "supremely the work of Māra" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, playing on the name. In "became the great bodhisattva Māra" the text reads □□□□□□□□□□, evidently for □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ "called Māra".

• The bodhisattva □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("King of Utter Joy") is given as Prāmodyarāja, and the vajra name □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ as Vajraharṣa (Vajra Delight), as in the Sanskrit of this tantra; it is not the deity Hevajra. "In his two hands" reads □□□ for the written □□□. The last line of Vajraharṣa's verse, □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, is somewhat obscure (literally "increases delight, divine substance") and is rendered by its evident sense.

• The bodhisattva □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is Mahātejas. His vajra name, written □□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Vajra Light"), is given as Vajratejas, matching his mantra and the parallel names in this series. □□□□□□□□□□□□□ / □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Jewel Glory") is given as Ratnaśrī, following the Tibetan. This bodhisattva corresponds to the one known elsewhere as Ratnaketu, whose seed mantra here is vajraketu. "The empowerment of the sprout of the vajra jewel" renders □□□□□□ literally.

• The bodhisattva □□ ("Ever-Joyful One of Delighted Faculties") is given as Nityaprītipramuditendriya. His vajra name, written □□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Vajra Joy"), is given as Vajrahāsa, matching his mantra and his emblem, the vajra smile. "Happiness of mind" reads □□□□□□□□□ for the written □□□□□□□□□.

• Mañjuśrī's verse plays on his names: the samādhi is "supremely gentle glory" (the meaning of Mañjuśrī), he calls himself the Gentle Voice (Mañjughoṣa), and the verse explains that formless discernment is perceived as voice. The bodhisattva's name Sahacittotpādadharmacakrapravartin means "he who turns the wheel of Dharma as soon as the mind is raised."

• The bodhisattva called here □□□□□□□□□□□ ("not words") is the same figure named earlier as □□□□□□□□□ (Sanskrit Avāca), so both are rendered "the Speechless One." The vajra name □□□□□□□□□□□ ("vajra word") is given as Vajrabhāṣa, the name this bodhisattva receives in the Sanskrit Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha, matching his heart mantra. The "vajra of all actions" is the crossed (karma) vajra. "Seat of awakening" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ (bodhimaṇḍa).

• □□□□□□□□□□□ is the idiom "unfailing, certain" (Skt. amogha), not a reference to seizing spirits, and is rendered accordingly. The bodhisattva's name "All the Activities of All the Tathāgatas" is translated literally from the Tibetan, as its exact Sanskrit form is not certain from this text. Duryodhanavīrya ("hard to overcome in diligence"), Vajraviśva, Vajramitra and Sarvamārapramardin ("crusher of all māras") are the Sanskrit names known for these figures in the Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha.

• The vajra name □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("vajra wrathful one") is given as Vajracaṇḍa, the name this bodhisattva bears in the Sanskrit Sarvatathāgatatattvasaṃgraha. Sarvatathāgatamuṣṭi ("fist of all the tathāgatas") likewise follows the Sanskrit tradition of this tantra.
• The name of the goddess, □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("she who holds the vajra"), is translated by meaning, since its Sanskrit form is not certain from this text. The four mudrā deities that emerge here are the vajra perfections (sattvavajrī, ratnavajrī, dharmavajrī, karmavajrī) that surround Vairocana in the Vajradhātu maṇḍala.
• In the Vajradhūpā verse, □□□ ("descent") is taken as the descent or entry of the deity into the practitioner (Skt. āveśa); the line is terse. The goddesses' names (Vajramālā, Vajragītā, Vajraṇṛtyā, Vajradhūpā, Vajrapuṣpā) are the standard Sanskrit names of these offering goddesses of the Vajradhātu maṇḍala. Ratnasaṃbhava and Lokeśvararāja appear here in slightly variant Tibetan spellings and are kept the same.
• The last two lines of Vajrapuṣpā's verse are terse; they may also be read "for by offering, the tathāgatas are swiftly accomplished as jewels." The rendering given takes the offering as the means by which the offerer swiftly attains the jewel-nature of the tathāgatas. The five scents listed (moral discipline, samādhi, wisdom, liberation, and the wisdom and vision of liberation) are the traditional five uncontaminated aggregates of the dharmakāya.
• The gatekeeper called "vajra chain" in Tibetan is given his name in this text, Vajrasphoṭa, matching the mantra spoken for him in the preceding passage. In the description of Vajrāveśa's seat, the text's "gate" (sgo gang) is read as "gatehouse" (sgo khang), as in the parallel phrases. The phrase "set out and went" renders a terse expression (literally "having stayed, went with ease") whose exact sense is uncertain; the gist, that the assembled tathāgatas came to Vairocana's pavilion, is clear.
• In the maṇḍala verses the Tibetan mi g.yo ba here names the buddha of the eastern maṇḍala, Akṣobhya ("the Unshakable"), not the wrathful deity Acala; the context (the four buddhas with Ratnasaṃbhava, Amitāyus and Amoghasiddhi) makes this certain. Many epithets in the hymn of a hundred and eight names are given in English where they are descriptive rather than established deity names. The last line of the piece is terse; it appears to mean that the disciple's request ("Bless me," and so forth) is followed by the reception of the master's command.
• In the passage on Dharma-minded beings, the Tibetan as transmitted reads "even the accomplishment of becoming all the tathāgatas is difficult" (dka' ba), which contradicts the a fortiori "what need to speak of other accomplishments?" that follows and the parallel statement to the disciple later in the passage; it has been translated as "is not difficult," taking a negative particle to have dropped out. The vajra master's actions in the opening verses are addressed in humble verb forms, as speech directed to the Blessed One.
• "What is perilous" renders mi bde ba, which here appears to stand for wrongful or hazardous conduct whose non-avoidance leads to hell; the sense is not wholly certain. The wrathful binding of the mudrā before the disciple speaks words of the Great Vehicle is described tersely, and the exact gesture is unclear.
• The verse line rendered "for as long as one wishes oneself to rise" reads □□□□□□□□□□□□□□, which is unclear as written; the sense is taken from the parallel verses, which speak of soaring for as long as one wishes. In the section on the secret mudrās, "it" that is made to enter the opening of a woman or a man is unspecified in the Tibetan; it is presumably the mudrā or the practitioner's mind. The phrase rendered "vajra pride" (rdo rje bsgyings pa) reflects the proud posture of Vajrasattva holding the vajra.
• In the line "If the sattva vajra is accomplished," the Tibetan reads ma grub, "not accomplished," which makes no sense beside the parallel lines; it is taken as a slip for grub. The descriptions of the samaya mudrās are terse hand instructions, often without naming the mudrā; they are rendered literally, following the order of the sixteen bodhisattvas and the offering and gatekeeper goddesses of the Vajradhātu maṇḍala.

• The verse listing the five buddha mudrās names the fourth only as gdon mi za ba, "the Unfailing One," taken here as Amoghasiddhi; elsewhere in this passage the same phrase is the adverb "without fail." The terse descriptions of the action mudrās follow the order of the sixteen bodhisattvas and the offering and gatekeeper goddesses, and are rendered literally; several of their hand positions are obscure without a commentary.
• The phrase rendered "if one wishes to give oneself up" (bdag gtong bar 'dod na) is terse; it may refer to the practitioner wishing to abandon the practice or the vow. The phrase "with the hands joined side by side" renders lag pa gshibs pas, followed by a word (bsad ba) that is unclear as written; the sense of performing the vajra dance is taken from context.
• The sixteen dhāraṇī goddesses are named in Tibetan by epithets. Where the Sanskrit name is well established it is given (Samantabhadrā, Tathāgatāṅkuśī, Ratnottamā, Ratnolkā, Dhvajāgrakeyūrā, Hāsavatī, Samantacakrā, Siddhottarā, Sarvarakṣā); the others (dga' ba chags ma, legs ldan ma, rdo rje padma, kun 'dzin ma, steng du zlos ma, mdangs slar 'phrog ma, gzungs kyi phyag rgya) are translated by meaning, since their Sanskrit forms cannot be fixed with confidence. Several lines of the closing verses describing the emblems are terse and are rendered literally.
• In the line "Extending the thumbs, cover the vajra," the text reads mtho bo, which makes no sense here; it is taken as a slip for mthe bo, "thumb." The female figures of the body mudrā verses (the vajra lady, the hook lady, the lady of vajra joy) are rendered descriptively rather than given reconstructed Sanskrit names.
• The line rendered "The eternal lord is sent forth" reads btang nga re, an unusual verbal ending; the sense of this closing line of the verse is uncertain.
• In the first verse, the word read here as "form" of the moon (dpas) is unclear; the line evidently refers to visualizing oneself as, or within, the moon disk. The verses listing the sixteen samaya mudrā placements are extremely terse, and the rendering of several of these lines is tentative.
• The sixteen offering goddesses are given here only by descriptive Tibetan epithets, which are rendered in English rather than with reconstructed Sanskrit names. The epithet rendered "the lady who invites" reads spyan 'dren me, evidently a slip for spyan 'dren ma.
• The concluding statement of the Vajrakarma section ends with the syllable sho where so is expected; it is read as the ordinary closing particle. The disciple is not named in the Tibetan of the final paragraph but is supplied from the context of the maṇḍala rite of entry; the speech to the disciple continues into the next piece.
• In the verse on the crossed fingers, the Tibetan reads dgos mchog, "supreme need"; this is taken as a slip for dngos mchog, "supreme accomplishment," in keeping with the Vajrasiddhi maṇḍala. The verse beginning "Having oneself made the sign stable" is terse, and its sense of sign (nimitta) and stūpa is rendered literally.
• In the hymn, rdo rje dgos, "vajra purpose," may be a slip for rdo rje dngos, "vajra accomplishment"; it is translated as written. The closing particle of the colophon is written sto for so. Vajrapāṇi's humble reply ma 'tshal lo is taken as a refusal, "I cannot," which his explanation that follows bears out.
• In Vajrapāṇi's command, the text reads da'i dam tshig; da'i is taken as a slip for nga'i, "my samaya." In Maheśvara's question, dbang phyug is rendered Īśvara, the Lord, by which he refers to himself.
• Maheśvara's words "You too, listen to his command and take up the samaya" are rendered as they stand; the Tibetan does not make clear whom he addresses or whose command is meant.
• The world system and the tathāgata into which the Great God is reborn, rendered in Tibetan as "Covered with Ash" and "Voice of the Lord of Ash," are given here under their Sanskrit names Bhasmacchannā and Bhasmeśvaranirghoṣa.

• Several of the new vajra names and some of the gods' names are translated into English because their Sanskrit forms could not be identified with confidence; these include Karṇika, the Youth of Sound, Earth-Crest, Great Light, and the women called the Slayer, the Eater and the Clothed One. "Vajra Deep Lady" renders rdo rje zab ma as written; it may be a slip for a name formed from za ba, "eater," to match the goddess's original name.
• "Heart-essence" renders □□□□□□□□ (literally "heart and bone"); the sense is that the spirits may consume the heart of those whose death is imminent, as the preceding mantra on the signs of death indicates. In the verse on the maṇḍala, □□□□ in "four archways" is read as □□□, "four." Vajrapāṇi is addressed as "Blessed One" by the spirits, following the Tibetan.
• The figures drawn at the centers of the second, third and fourth maṇḍalas are named in the Tibetan as "Vajra Empowerment," "Vajra Host," and "Vajra Descent"; I could not identify their Sanskrit names with confidence and have translated them literally. Here □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is used as a class term, "vajra wrathful ones," and as the epithet of Tirintiri, rather than as the proper name Vajracaṇḍa.
• In the verses on the secret wrathful mudrā, the four effects (ruin of life, being drawn into one's presence, bliss, suffering, protection) correspond to the ritual aims of the mantras listed after them; the verses are terse and the referents ("that one," "whoever") follow the Tibetan without supplying a subject. The phrase rendered "the stillness of slaying" (□□□□□□□□□) is obscure.
• In the list of the wrathful ones, the lines rendered "he acts as a māra" and "overpowers all dharmas" both read □□□□ ("māra"), which is obscure in this context; the sense may be that these wrathful forms overpower the māras. The four syllables and the list of seed syllables after them are given exactly as written.
• "Colors" renders □□□□, read as □□□ (the maṇḍala pigments), since the verse follows the laying of the cords; □□□□ can also mean "emblems." The line "draw at the center a spear point with lips" (□□□□□□□□□□□□□□) is obscure. The colophon spelling □□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□, "is complete."
• The verses on the mudrās are terse ritual instructions whose hand positions are often only alluded to; the rendering follows the Tibetan literally. In the responding dance, the Tibetan has an unclear "na pa" after "left," taken here as "left hand." "Mdzub me'i" is read as "mdzub mo'i" (fingertips), an evident slip.
• The mudrā verses are terse and allude to hand gestures without fully describing them; they are rendered literally. In the final verses, the line "lhan cig gyur pa cher bstan pa" is obscure; it is taken as one who shows himself allied with a being's enemy.
• Several verses are terse and obscure. The line "sna nas phra ba thang cig min" is taken as continuous subtle breathing through the nose. "Bu gnas" in the verse on drawing out the heart is read as "womb," which is uncertain; the line also lacks a syllable. The goddess generated from Vajrapāṇi's heart is given as plural, since the Tibetan does not mark number and the following actions describe a group of offering goddesses.
• "Gdon mi za bar" is the idiom "without doubt," not a reference to seizing spirits. Several homa ingredients are uncertain: "se ba'i ne ra ma can" is taken as thorny wild rose, "mi snang me tog" as a plant called the invisibility flower, and "nam mkha'i lcug ma" as the sky creeper (likely dodder, ākāśavallī). "Skye bo rengs" is literally "people become stiff" or transfixed; in the sequence of summoning, enamoring, binding and killing given by the mantras, it may stand for enthralling. "Rdo rje gtso" (the Vajra Lord) heads the four deities of the surrounding maṇḍalas and is not identified with confidence. In the verses on secret karma mudrās, "bu ga" (opening) is taken as the woman's secret organ, as the context indicates.
• In the verse on the secret mudrā of Vajra Hūṃ, "bu ga" (opening) is taken, as in the preceding passage, as the woman's secret organ, and "the finger of Victorious over the Three Worlds" as the corresponding mudrā; the language is deliberately veiled. "Mngon 'dus pa" in the closing verse is rendered "the very essence," taking it as the Great Vehicle in its condensed form.

• The world system □□□□□□□□□□□□ ("Covered with Ashes") is rendered by meaning; it corresponds to Sanskrit Bhasmacchannā. The mudrā name □□□□□□□□□□ is rendered literally as "Moon Foot", since its Sanskrit form could not be identified with confidence. The sentence in which Vajrapāṇi "becomes rays of light" from the uṣṇīṣas and settles on his own crown is translated as the Tibetan stands; the syntax is compressed. The mantra oṃ vajraśūla is introduced here as the heart of the vidyā king □□□□□□□□□□□□□□, rendered Vajracaṇḍa to match earlier pieces.

• Here □□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is used as the title of a class of deities ("the vajra wrathful ones," alongside the kings of vidyās, lords of hosts, messengers and servants), so it is translated as a class title rather than as the personal name Vajracaṇḍa used earlier. The gaṇapati □□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is rendered by meaning, "Vajra Elephant Trunk," because its Sanskrit form could not be identified with confidence (perhaps Vajraśauṇḍa). The line □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ is compressed, and "drawn on the ground in the middle" is a tentative reading.

• In the line □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, □□□□ makes no sense here and is taken as a slip for □□□□ ("held"), giving "holding the vajra with the left hand." The mudrā name □□□□□□□□□□□□ is rendered "the Fourfold Flower"; its exact Sanskrit name is uncertain.

• The phrase □□□□□□□□□□□□□□ in the verse on the messengers is obscure; "the woven cloth" is a tentative rendering. The four lines beginning "Likewise, as the principal of the maṇḍala" appear twice in the Tibetan and are translated both times as they stand. The goddess □□□□□□□ is rendered by meaning, "the Mistress of Sound," since her Sanskrit name could not be identified with confidence. The text has □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ where the sequence calls for Vajranetra (□□□□□□□□□□□□), and it is translated as Vajranetra.

• Several verses in this section are terse and their exact sense is uncertain, in particular the line □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ in the oath ("or are cruel to the kind and bring them grief"), and the opening of the verse on the servants, □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ ("having entered as the lord of fangs"). The statement that intercourse with women brought under power "will not become contrary to the Dharma" is given as the text states it, in the context of the tantra's transgressive ritual idiom.

• The Tibetan name of the wrathful goddess rendered Vajrāmṛtā reads "vajra not binding" (mi 'ching ba); this is evidently a slip for "vajra deathless" (mi 'chi ba, amṛta), which her mantra confirms. Several goddesses' Tibetan names are obscure or unidentifiable as written (rdo rje tsong tsong, rdo rje 'jums, rdo rje du sems); their names are given here as Vajramālā, Vajravalayā and Vajrakālī on the basis of the vocatives in their own mantras, and are tentative. "Vajra Tresses" (rdo rje ral ma) is a literal rendering of a name I could not identify with confidence. The line "Lay out all the maṇḍalas with cord" appears twice in the Tibetan, probably by dittography; both are kept.

• The rendering "great forefather" translates mes po chen po, an epithet (pitāmaha) usually belonging to Brahmā. The line rendered "Great dread, equal to the great" (dogs pa chen po che dang mtshungs) is obscure as written and is translated literally.

• "The vajra swagger" (rdo rje 'gying) may be a posture or the name of a deity; it is rendered literally. The line rendered "its corners opening into gates" (gru ni sgo gdod cing) is obscure as written. "Bhṛkuṭī" renders khro gnyer, "frown," identified from the padma bhṛkuṭī mantra that follows in the next piece.

• "The goddess of speech herself" renders sgra dang lha mo bdag nyid, most likely Sarasvatī. "The Glory of the Lotus" (padma dpal) probably refers to the goddess Śrī (Lakṣmī), who dwells in the lotus. The line rendered "With the whole assembly and the rest" (kun du tshogs sogs) is obscure as written.

• The first line reads kha ("mouth"), evidently a slip for mkha' ("sky"), as in the parallel line that follows; it is translated as "sky." Names of the deities in the list of actions (the Liberated One, the Fearless One, Pāṇḍaravāsinī for "White-Clad," Nīlakaṇṭha for "Blue-Throat," Pracaṇḍa for "Very Fierce") are given as identified from the Tibetan; "the Lord of Certainty" (nges pa'i dbang phyug) is a literal rendering. The phrase gdon mi za bar is the idiom "without doubt," not a reference to seizing spirits.
• The closing word of the chapter colophon is printed □□□□□□□□□, evidently a slip for □□□□□□□□ ("is complete"), and is translated so. "Crossing over with Vajra Force" seems to describe stepping into each successive maṇḍala using the Vajra Force (Vajravega) gait or mudrā. The names given to some of the mudrās in the first verses ("she of the lotus," "the one who shows") are translated literally, because the Tibetan does not plainly give them as fixed titles.
• "Having brought about the descent" translates □□□□□, taken here as the descent of wisdom into the disciple (āveśa), which is called for by the mantras and mudrās of descent just before; it could also mean letting the flower fall. In the verse on destroying, "a pure lotus" renders □□□□ as written, though the mantras that follow (ccheda, "cut") suggest the lotus is to be broken. "The great Lord of Various Wisdoms" is a literal rendering, because a fixed Sanskrit name could not be identified with confidence.
• In the second line, □□□□□□ is taken as "touch the ground"; the line is terse and may instead describe the index fingers simply being joined. "Samantāvalokiteśvara" renders □□□□□□□□□

• The Tibetan rdo rje rin chen serves both as the name of the deity Vajraratna and as the emblem he holds, the vajra jewel; it is rendered "Vajraratna" where a samādhi is named and "vajra jewel" where the object is drawn, worn or meditated upon. In the fourth verse "las kyis" is read as "las kyi", the karma mudrā, matching the series of great, samaya, Dharma and karma mudrās and their four mantras. The closing verses describe the hand gestures of the deities of the gem family, those of the sun, banner and laughter corresponding to Vajratejas, Vajraketu and Vajrahāsa.
• The colophon's closing particle is written sho, evidently a slip for so, the ordinary sentence ending; it does not affect the sense. The first supplication, rin chen don byin, could also be read "grant precious aims" or "grant jewels and wealth"; the series of mantras (all aims, all jewels, Dharma, action) supports taking don as aims or wealth.
• In the third supplication the text reads tshes bdag stsol, which makes no sense here; it is taken as chos bdag stsol, "grant me the Dharma," a similar-sounding reading that fits the series of accomplishment, empowerment, Dharma and action. The name of the karma maṇḍala, rin chen dgos pa, is rendered "the Jewel Purpose"; dgos pa may also mean "need" or "requisite." The colophon's closing particle sho is evidently a slip for so.
• "The Blessed One, all the tathāgatas" renders the Tibetan apposition literally; it may refer to the Buddha as the embodiment of all tathāgatas. The repeated line "if one does not wish it" means that a practitioner who does not seek buddhahood in this life gains the ordinary accomplishments described before. The colophon's closing particle sho is evidently a slip for so.
• The line ma rungs bdud byas dngos grub 'thob in the vajra family's Dharma verse is terse; it is taken to mean that one gains accomplishment by acting against vicious māras, though it could also be read as treating the vicious as māras to be subdued. "Radiant" renders gzi can, here an epithet of the accomplished practitioner, not the nāga king's name.
• "The Buddha Abhiṣeka" is kept for consistency with earlier pieces; in this verse the phrase may simply mean "the consecration of the buddhas," the gift-giving of the jewel family being likened to it. The verse on the vajra family's wisdom accomplishment has only three lines in the Tibetan.
• "The Great Awakening Mind" (Tibetan byang chub kyi sems chen po, perhaps Mahābodhicitta) and "Offering to the Buddhas" (sangs rgyas mchod pa) are rendered literally as epithets of the speaking deity, since a standard Sanskrit form could not be confirmed. "The mudrā of accomplishing all aims" may refer to Sarvārthasiddhi. The phrase "above and below" (ltag 'og) in the higher-knowledge verses is obscure; it seems to mean the proper sequence of the ritual. In the lotus-family samaya verse, "in no way will it come undone" reads grol mi 'gyur as the mudrā or samaya not being loosened; it could also be read "they will not be liberated at all."
• "Day by day" renders the unusual nyi rim du; the sense of a gradual or staged accomplishment is likely, but the exact reading is uncertain. The epithet kun du spyan ras gzigs kyi dbang po is rendered "Avalokiteśvara, who looks on all" (possibly Samantāvalokiteśvara). The first verse belongs to the Tathāgata family section announced at the end of the preceding piece.
• The speakers "the Samādhi of the Buddhas" and "the Great Bodhisattva" are rendered literally as epithets, as the Tibetan gives them. In the vajra-family samādhi verse, "drawing you forth from desire" follows the Tibetan as it stands; the addressee is not specified.
• The "secret accomplishment" verses speak of killing, in the idiom of the tantric rites of forceful liberation; the translation keeps the Tibetan wording. In several of these verses it is unclear whether the qualities listed (for example "without wrath," "do not tame beings") describe the targets of the rite or failings of the practitioner; they are read here as describing the targets, in parallel with the other verses. "The Fulfiller of All Hopes" (re ba thams cad skong ba) is rendered literally; it may stand for Sarvāśāparipūraka.

• "Never content with the families and the tantras" renders an ambiguous line; □□□□□ here could also mean "lineage," giving "not satisfied with family and lineage." "This sūtra in which the Great Vehicle is gathered" renders □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□, which may reflect Mahāyānābhisamaya, an alternative title of this tantra. The speaker "the Hūṃ of All Tathāgatas" reads □□□□□□□□□□□ as □□□□□□□□□□. The names □□□□□□□□□□□□ and □□□□□□□□□□□□□ could not be identified with confidence and are translated literally as "Lotus Desire" and "Jewel Desire." The section-closing □□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□, "is complete."
• □□□□□□□□□ in the vajra-family Dharma verse is obscure; it is rendered "unfit." The names □□□□□□□□□□□ and □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ could not be identified with confidence and are translated as "the Supreme Commitment" and "Vajra Delight." In the karma verse of the Tathāgata, □□□□□□□□□□□□ is taken as a cast image of a woman; in the next verse □□□□□□□□□□ is taken as "one with no inclination." The couplet "This is the consort of the All-Pervading; through giving all, I and the rest" is terse and its construal is uncertain.
• The first verse of the mudrā section ends with □□□ and reads as an instruction on when the address is used; its construal is somewhat uncertain. The names □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ and □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ could not be identified with confidence and are translated as "the Lord of Vajra Grace" and "He Who Acts on the Blessed One's Command." In "the mudrās of all the families," the Tibetan has □□□□□ ("knowledge"), read here as □□□□ ("family") to match the parallel section closings. □□□□□□□□□□ is taken as "the four mudrās"; it might also mean "the four-armed one." □□□□□□ is taken here as the state of great joy, not a name.
• □□□□□□□□□□□□□, here "the vajra charm," seems to correspond to the first of the four inner offering goddesses (Vajralāsyā), followed by garland, song and dance; the Tibetan word is unusual. The name □□□□□□□□□□ is given as Padmanetra, on the pattern of Vajranetra. The verse on the offerings of song and dance has no closing attribution in the Tibetan.
• In the lotus-family Dharma commitment verse, □□□□□ is read as □□□□, "meditating," as in the parallel verses. □□□□□□□□□□ is taken as a short form of the name Sarvārthasiddhi and given as Arthasiddhi. The speaker □□□□□□□□□□□□ could not be identified with confidence and is translated as "the Jewel Dharma." The section-closing □□□□□□□□□ is read as □□□□□□□□.
• The attribution of the first verse reads literally "the Blessed One, the noble Mañjuśrī, all the tathāgatas"; it is taken here as identifying Mañjuśrī with all the tathāgatas. The second verse under the tathāgata family in the section on the action of absorption, and the second in the section on subtle wisdom, are both headed "tathāgata family" in the Tibetan, as translated. In the vajra-family verse on the action of absorption, the first line (sdig pa dag pa rgyu ba'i phyir) is obscure and is rendered "so that sin may be purified." The name padma bzhad pa is rendered literally as "the Blossoming Lotus," since its Sanskrit form cannot be identified with confidence. "Rites" renders rtog pa in the sense of ritual manual (kalpa).
• In the lotus-family verse on the eye, ser ba is the color yellow in a list of colors, not hail. In the verse on the wall drawing, the words rendered "a likeness" (ldan 'dra ba) and "raised the sign" (mtshan bsgreng) are obscure; the sense of the rite, bringing a woman under one's power, is clear, but the exact procedure is uncertain. The speaker names rdo rje dbang rin po che ("the Precious Vajra Empowerment") and padma chags pa ("the Lotus of Passion") and the form 'gro 'dul ("the Tamer of Beings") are rendered by their meaning, since their Sanskrit forms cannot be fixed with confidence. The attribution of the final verse follows in the next piece.
• The verse after the opening of the ninth fascicle reads lta ba ngan cing chags bral, "of wrong views and devoid of passion"; in this tantric context passion is part of the path, so those without it are judged unfit, but the reading is somewhat unexpected. "Ritual systems" renders brtag pa (kalpa).
• "A hundred times" renders lan brgya rtsa, which may mean "a full hundred" or be short for a hundred and eight. The "rite of descent" (dbab pa) is the rite of causing a deity or power to descend upon persons or objects. In the list of emblems, "hand" and "row of teeth" correspond to the gestures of approval and of laughter in the series of sixteen great bodhisattvas. "To punish" renders chad pas gcad pa, not the philosophical sense of annihilation.

• "Turning the wheel of time" renders dus kyi 'khor los sgyur ba, here one of a list of magical powers, not the Kālacakra system. The Blessed One "Tamer of All Beings" ('gro ba thams cad 'dul ba) is a form of Avalokiteśvara; the name is rendered by its meaning. In the jewel-family section the text gives don thams cad grub pa, rendered Sarvārthasiddhi as the central deity of that family.

• "Ancillary practice" renders nye bar sbyong ba, apparently a subsidiary practice (upasādhana) of the jewel family; the exact Sanskrit equivalent is uncertain. The text says magical power is of four kinds but then lists many attainments; it is translated as it stands. In the vajra vidyādhara section, the instrumental rdo rje rig 'dzin gyis ("by the vajra vidyādhara") is read as rig 'dzin gyi, "a wheel-turning sovereign of the vajra vidyādharas," in line with the parallel phrase in the preceding passage.

• "Padma Kāma" renders padma 'dod pa, which may be a deity name or simply "the lotus of desire"; it is kept as a name in line with the names already used. "The Sattva Without Beginning or End" translates thog ma dang tha ma med pa'i sems dpa', an epithet whose Sanskrit form could not be confidently identified. The opening phrase "for the sake of the heart of one's own mudrā" is awkward in the Tibetan and is rendered literally.

• The final section plays on the Tibetan rtog pa, which renders both "rite" (Skt. kalpa) and "conception" (Skt. kalpa, vikalpa), and in the first verse also on rtag pa, "permanent"; the English cannot keep the pun, so "rite" is used in the headings and "conception" in the verses. The opening line reads kyi yi for kyi, an evident scribal slip. "Supreme Wisdom" translates shes rab mchog and "Vajramati" renders rdo rje blo; neither epithet could be identified with full confidence.

• In the verse on the vidyā, the last line reads rtog pa, "rite" (also playing on rtogs, "realizing"), where the pattern of the preceding verses would lead one to expect rig pa, "vidyā"; it is translated as written. "The eightfold practice" renders brgyad bsgrub, whose exact sense here (perhaps a stance or posture) is uncertain. "Vajravāk" renders rdo rje gsung and "Padmasattva" renders padma'i sems dpa'.

• "The Realization of the Great Vehicle" renders theg pa chen po mngon 'dus pa, which appears to reflect Mahāyānābhisamaya, an alternative title of this tantra. In the hymn, "Host of sentient beings" renders sems can tshogs, which is terse in the Tibetan; "Teacher" reads ston pa for ston pa pa po, an evident duplication of a syllable.

• The lines "Because the steadfast, as those to be trained require, abide even in the views of non-Buddhists" render a terse Tibetan couplet whose sense is not fully certain; it may also mean that the steadfast cause beings to abide in such views for the sake of training them. The god addressed by Maheśvara, rendered "the Mighty One," translates a Tibetan epithet whose Sanskrit original (possibly Mahābala or Nārāyaṇa) could not be identified with confidence. Maheśvara's closing speech expresses the worldly gods' mistaken view, which the text goes on to refute.

• The seat the gods ask the Buddha to leave is called a "ran" seat in the Tibetan; since the text elsewhere calls it the seat of grass, it is rendered so here, though the word itself is unusual. In the sixth stanza "great brilliance" renders an obscure term (lham pa chen po) whose exact sense is uncertain. The name in the first line of the sixteenth stanza, literally "Vajra Bound," is translated rather than given a Sanskrit form, as its Sanskrit original is not certain from the Tibetan. The closing title phrase may also be read as "the sūtra and its abridged tantra." The final syllable of the closing title is written "sho," an evident slip for the usual "so" ending, and is read as such.
