Toh 710 in the Kangyur is a dhāraṇī text known in Tibetan as "Gzhan gyis mi thub pa'i rig pa chen mo," meaning the Great Dhāraṇī of the Invincible One, a title that corresponds to the Sanskrit Aparājitā-mahāvidyā. It belongs to the broad class of dhāraṇī literature within the Kangyur and consists of a series of potent mantra formulas directed toward the Tathāgata Amitābha and the bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara, invoking their blessings for the purification of karmic obscurations. The text opens with a closing mantra from a preceding dhāraṇī before presenting its own sequence of incantations, after which it goes on to describe the meritorious effects even a single recitation is said to produce. As a ritual dhāraṇī text, it is characteristic of the genre that flourished across Indian and Tibetan Buddhist traditions, offering both devotional invocation and practical instructions for its application.

Jiti jiti aparājiti parasainyapramardanīye svāhā. Here ends the great dhāraṇī of the Invincible One.

Homage to the Three Jewels. Homage to the Tathāgata, arhat, and perfectly complete buddha Amitābha. Homage to the bodhisattva, the great being, the noble Avalokiteśvara endowed with great compassion.

Tadyathā: oṃ jaye jaye mahājaye jayāvāhini jayottari kala kala mala mala cala cala kṣina kṣina sarvakarma āvaraṇa nime sarva ājñājñāna adhiṣṭhite svāhā. Namo bhagavati sahasrabhṛte sarvabuddha avalokiti cakṣuḥ śrotra ghrāṇa jihvā kāya mano vijñāna viśodhani svāhā. Phuru phuru suru suru phurā phurā praphurā praphurā sarvabuddha adhiṣṭhite svāhā. Dharmadhātugarbhe svāhā. Abhāva svāhā. Sarva dharma avabodhani svāhā.

The ritual method of this dhāraṇī is as follows. Even reciting it a single time, all karmic obscurations accumulated over a thousand eons will be exhausted. One will obtain the roots of virtue accumulated by a thousand buddhas. For a thousand eons one will turn one's back on saṃsāra. In future lives one will obtain the royal dominion of a wheel-turning king. At the time of death one will behold a thousand buddhas. One will be born in the pure buddha-fields. If one recites it twenty-one times each in the three periods of the day and the three periods of the night, whatever one wishes one will see in dreams. One will also behold the form of the Tathāgata, golden in color. One will come to have an unwavering faith in the domains of the buddhas and bodhisattvas, and so forth

Translator's Notes

- The passage opens with the conclusion of one dhāraṇī, "jiti jiti aparājiti parasainyapramardanīye svāhā," which belongs to a well-known Invincible One (Aparājitā) dhāraṇī cycle, and then transitions into a new dhāraṇī text with its own opening homages and mantra body. The Sanskrit mantra strings are transliterated as they stand in the Tibetan; some syllables show minor scribal variation from standard Sanskrit recensions, preserved here as given. The text breaks off mid-sentence at the end of the passage ("and so forth"), indicating this is a fragment of a longer text.
