This short work, catalogued without a clearly preserved title in its opening lin

Toh 1030 · Derge Kangyur

This short work, catalogued without a clearly preserved title in its opening lines, is a dhāraṇī, a sacred incantation in Sanskrit-based syllables, introduced by homage to the Three Jewels, the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha. After the spell itself, which invokes a series of goddess-like names and leaves blanks where the practitioner inserts the name of the person concerned, the text sets out a brief rite. It claims that merely reading or recalling the formula accomplishes all aims without further practice. It promises protection from brain diseases, fevers, and harmful spirits such as vetālas and grahas, along with everyday benefits like obtaining food when hungry and prevailing in debate. It is Toh 1030 in the Kangyur, where it belongs among the collected dhāraṇī texts, short ritual and protective formulas valued for their practical and apotropaic power.

---

Homage to the Three Jewels!
Homage to the Buddha!
Homage to the Dharma!
Homage to the Saṅgha!

namo haridhiye haridhi kumāri gauri gandhāri caṇḍali mataṃgi kali kali, so-and-so's mohehi khara khara paca paca abadhaya mūrcāya, so-and-so's meśamanāya svāhā oṃ bhurbhubā jvala jvala jvalimanāni debi sarba saṃskārakariṇija tale tale jvala jvala svāhā

This is its rite. Merely by reading it, all actions will be accomplished without any need for practice. Diseases of the brain, smoky fevers, vetālas, and grahas will be defeated. Merely by bringing it to mind, all of them will let go.

If one is hungry, one should go to a village and recite it seven times. If one then rubs one's face, one will obtain food.

If one recites it over one's tongue, one will have a winning reply when engaged in a dispute.

Whoever is given a leaf, a flower, or a fruit over which it has been recited will be pleased.

The Dhāraṇī for Accomplishing Actions is complete.

Translator's Notes

• "So-and-so's" renders a Tibetan phrase inserted into the dhāraṇī. It marks the place where the practitioner says the name of the person concerned. The phrase "smoky fevers" is a literal rendering of a fever type described as "having smoke," which cannot be identified with certainty. In the hunger rite the text does not say what is smeared on the face. It is probably the hand or breath after recitation, or simply the face itself, so the translation keeps it general. Here the glossary term for "defeat" is used in its ordinary sense of spirits being overcome, not as the monastic root downfall.

---

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.