

Toh 460 in the Kangyur is a short dhāraṇī text known in English as the Dhāraṇī C

Toh 460 · Derge Kangyur

Toh 460 in the Kangyur is a short dhāraṇī text known in English as the Dhāraṇī Called Seeing Dreams, with Vajrapāṇi — the fierce great lord of the yakṣa hosts — as its presiding deity. The text consists primarily of a series of sacred mantra syllables accompanied by a brief ritual instruction directing the practitioner to recite the dhāraṇī over a vessel of water, drink it, and lie down with a composed mind in order to receive dream visions from Vajrapāṇi. It belongs to the dhāraṇī class of canonical literature, a genre dedicated to the preservation and transmission of potent ritual formulas believed to confer specific spiritual and practical benefits. As a compact, self-contained ritual text, it sits within the broader collection of dhāraṇī and mantra works found in the Kangyur.

Homage to the Three Jewels. Homage to Vajrapāṇi, the fierce great lord of the yakṣa hosts.

Oṃ mucini svāhā. Mukhe se svāhā. Mohāni svāhā. Danti svāhā.

Whoever recites this rite over a vessel of water, drinks it, and then lies down with a composed mind will receive dream visions from Vajrapāṇi.

This concludes the dhāraṇī called Seeing Dreams.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables are transliterated as they appear in the Tibetan; their Sanskrit forms are uncertain or corrupt in places, which is common for dhāraṇī texts of this type. The opening line references a colophon from the preceding text that has been requested, translated, and finalized, but only its final phrase appears here and has not been separately rendered. The title "Seeing Dreams" renders the Tibetan phrase meaning a dhāraṇī for obtaining dream revelations through Vajrapāṇi's blessing, consistent with the genre of oneiromantic ritual texts in the canon.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.