Toh 674 in the Kangyur is a Mahāyāna sūtra known in Sanskrit as the Ārya-aparimita-āyurjñāna-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra and in Tibetan as the Phags pa tshe dang ye shes dpag tu med pa zhes bya ba theg pa chen po'i mdo, rendered in English as "The Noble Great Vehicle Sūtra Called Immeasurable Life and Wisdom." The text belongs to the sūtra class of the Kangyur and concerns the immeasurable life and wisdom of a transcendent buddha named King of Resplendent Glory, who dwells in a distant world-realm called Immeasurable Qualities, as revealed by Śākyamuni Buddha in discourse to the bodhisattva Mañjuśrī at Śrāvastī. Its teachings are closely associated with the practice and veneration of Amitāyus, the buddha of boundless life, and the text has long been important in traditions focused on longevity and the cultivation of merit. The opening mantra and homage formula situate it within a devotional and ritual context characteristic of Mahāyāna sūtras dedicated to overcoming the obstacles of untimely death and ignorance.

Jñānasambharopacite svāhā.

In the language of India: Ārya-aparimita-āyurjñāna-nāma-mahāyāna-sūtra.

In the Tibetan language: The Noble Great Vehicle Sūtra Called Immeasurable Life and Wisdom.

Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear. At one time the Blessed One was dwelling in Śrāvastī, in the Jeta Grove, the garden of Anāthapiṇḍada, together with a great Saṅgha of one thousand three hundred monks and with a great many bodhisattvas, great beings.

Then the Blessed One declared to Mañjuśrī, the youthful: "Mañjuśrī, in the direction above there exists a world-realm called Immeasurable Qualities and so forth. There dwells a Tathāgata, an arhat, a perfectly and fully awakened buddha named King of Resplendent Glory, Most Perfectly Determined in Immeasurable Life and Wisdom. He abides holding life, having brought it to perfection, and he also teaches the Dharma to sentient beings.

Mañjuśrī, the youthful, listen. The human beings of this Jambudvīpa have short lives — they can sustain life for at most one hundred years. And even of those, the greater part are shown to die before their time.

Mañjuśrī, whatever sentient beings shall copy out this Dharma teaching called the Comprehensive Recitation of the Qualities and Praises of the Tathāgata Amitāyus, or shall have it copied, or shall merely hear or read even its name, or having written it in a book shall keep it in their home, or shall make offerings to it with flowers, incense, perfumes, and garlands — for those whose life is running out, it shall become possible for them to sustain life for one hundred years.

Mañjuśrī, for those sentient beings who come to hear the one hundred and eight names of King of Resplendent Glory, Most Perfectly Determined in Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, their life too shall increase. For those sentient beings who, at the point of death, bear in mind these names, their life too shall greatly increase.

Mañjuśrī, therefore those sons of good family and daughters of good family who desire longevity should listen to or copy out, or have copied, these one hundred and eight names of the Tathāgata Amitāyus. The qualities and benefits they shall thereby gain are these:

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Mañjuśrī, whoever shall copy out these one hundred and eight names of the Tathāgata, or have them copied, or shall write them in a book and keep it in their home, or shall read them — for that person, from the point where their life is running out, they shall attain one hundred years of life; and passing from this world, they shall be born in the buddha-field and world-realm of the Tathāgata Amitāyus, in the realm called Immeasurable Qualities and so forth.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Then at that time, nine hundred and ninety million buddhas, with a single intention and a single voice, proclaimed this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom:

In whatever place and wherever this precious sūtra is copied out, that very place shall become a stūpa, and it shall be worthy of veneration. All birds and wild animals born into the animal realm, in whose hearing the sound of this sūtra resounds, shall all awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, and complete awakening.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimita-āyurjñāna-suviniścita-tejo-rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate, samyaksambuddhāya. Tadyathā: Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimita-āyurpuṇya-jñāna-sambhāropacite. Oṃ

Whoever shall copy out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, or cause it to be copied out, shall never again be born in a female body.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

If someone gives so much as a single kārṣāpaṇa coin for the sake of this Dharma discourse, it shall be as though that person had given an offering filling the great trichiliocosm — the vast world-system of three thousand great thousands of worlds — entirely with the seven precious substances.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Whoever makes offerings to this Dharma discourse shall thereby make offerings to all the sacred Dharma.

Oṃ namo bhagavate aparimita-āyurjñāna-suviniścita-tejo-rājāya, tathāgatāya, arhate, samyaksaṃbuddhāya. Tadyathā: Oṃ puṇye puṇye mahāpuṇye aparimita-āyurpuṇya-jñāna-sambhāropacite. Oṃ
sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Consider this: the accumulated mass of merit from making offerings of the seven precious substances to such Tathāgatas as Vipasīyin, Śikhin, Viśvabhū, Krakucchanda, Kanakamuni, Kāśyapa, and Śākyamuni — that mass of merit can be measured and counted. But the accumulated mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom cannot be measured or counted.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Consider this:

For example, one might pile up a heap of precious substances as great as Mount Meru and give it all as an offering — the measure of that mass of merit can be counted. But the measure of the mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom cannot be counted.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Consider this further. One might count, drop by drop, every drop of water filling the four great oceans — that can be counted. But the measure of the mass of merit of this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom cannot be counted.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

Whoever writes out this sūtra of Immeasurable Life and Wisdom, or causes it to be written, or venerates it and makes offerings to it — that person has paid homage and made offerings to all Tathāgatas in all the buddha-fields of the ten directions.

sarva-saṃskāra-pariśuddha-dharmate gagana-samugate svabhāva-viśuddhe mahānaya-paripāre svāhā.

The Blessed One was delighted and, having spoken these words, Mañjuśrī in his youthful form, together with that entire assembly, and the gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas, all rejoiced at what had been said.

This was spoken by the Blessed One.

Translator's Notes

- The opening dhāraṇī syllables "Jñānasambharopacite svāhā" appear to be the tail end of a dhāraṇī from a preceding section of the text; they are carried over as-is, since they form part of the transmitted recitation unit.

The title of the world-realm, rendered "Immeasurable Qualities and so forth," follows the Tibetan convention of abbreviating a long proper name with "and so forth" (la sogs pa); the full Sanskrit would be something like Aparimita-guṇa, but the exact full form is not given in this passage.

The phrase rendered "Most Perfectly Determined" (shin tu rnam par nges pa) could also be translated "most perfectly ascertained" or "most supremely definite." It is an unusual epithet; the rendering chosen reflects the established meaning of nges pa as certainty or determination in a strong doctrinal sense.

The final dhāraṇī appears twice with a minor variant: paripāre in the first occurrence and paribāre in the second. Both are transliterated as they stand in the Tibetan, preserving the textual difference. The intended Sanskrit is most likely paripāre in both cases, with the second being a scribal variant.

- The text is a repetitive liturgical series in which successive groups of buddhas, numbered in descending multiples of ten million, each proclaim the same dhāraṇī in unison. The Tibetan numbers are rendered literally: bya ba phrag dgu bcu rtsa dgu is nine hundred and ninety million, bya ba phrag brgyad cu rtsa bzhi is eight hundred and forty million, and so on in the pattern established by the text. The passage breaks off mid-mantra at the end of the supplied Tibetan, and the translation faithfully reflects that cutoff.

- The Tibetan reads "bye ba phrag nyi shu rtsa lnga" for the second group of buddhas, which is twenty-five times ten million, that is, two hundred and fifty million. This differs from the preceding passage's "three hundred and thirty-six million," and both figures appear to be distinct iterations within the sūtra's escalating pattern of proclamation.

The phrase rendered as "aggregates of Dharma" translates chos kyi phung po, the standard Tibetan equivalent of Sanskrit dharmaskandha, referring to the traditional enumeration of the entirety of the Buddha's teaching as eighty-four thousand collections or sections of Dharma.

- The five acts of immediate retribution (Skt. pañcānantarya-karma) are the five gravest karmic offenses: killing one's father, killing one's mother, killing an arhat, wounding a buddha, and causing a schism in the Saṅgha. Their purification through this sūtra's merit is a standard claim of this text's genre.

The number "nine hundred and ninety million buddhas" renders bye ba phrag dgu bcu rtsa dgu, literally "nine hundred and ninety-nine ten-millions," which is 9,990,000,000 in strict arithmetic; however, bye ba phrag is conventionally rendered as "hundred million" in Tibetan-English Buddhist contexts, giving approximately 9.99 billion. The rendering "nine hundred and ninety million" follows a common but slightly compressed convention; the precise figure is noted here for accuracy.

- The seven Tathāgatas listed in the Tibetan are the seven buddhas of antiquity: འཕགས་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Vipaśyin), སྤུངས་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Śikhin), འཕྲུབ་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Viśvabhū), འཕྲུབ་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Krakucchanda), འཕྲུབ་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Kanakamuni), འཕྲུབ་པ་ལྷ་མོ་ (Kāśyapa), and Śākyamuni. These are the standard Seven Buddhas of the Past (saptabuddha). The Tibetan epithets are their traditional translations of the Sanskrit names.

The benefit of never again being born in a female body reflects a conventional formulation found in many sūtras and dhāraṇī texts of this genre; it should be understood in its traditional soteriological context of liberation from rebirth altogether.

- The phrase "city of the compassionate one" renders the Tibetan literally. In context this is a standard Mahāyāna poetic image for the realm or domain of a compassionate buddha or bodhisattva, possibly evoking the pure land or the state of awakening itself. The verse stanza structure repeats identically for each of the six perfections, which is faithfully reflected in the translation.

- This is a closing colophon formula. The phrase means literally "by the Blessed One" and signals the end of a sūtra text, indicating that what preceded was the word of the Blessed One. It is essentially a scribal closing that mirrors the opening "Thus did I hear" formula.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
