

The True Names of Mañjuśrī, the Wisdom Being, in Their Ultimate Sense — a Song of Praise

Mañjuśrījñānasattvasya paramārthanāmasaṃgīti · Toh 360 · Derge Kangyur

འཇམ་དཔལ་ཡེ་ཤེས་སེམས་དཔའ་དྲོ་དམ་པའ་མཆན་ཡང་དག་པར་བརྗོད་

Toh 360 in the Kangyur is the Mañjuśrī-jñānasattvasya-paramārthanāma-saṃgīti, known in Tibetan as the Jampal Yeshe Sempe Döndam Tshen Yangdakpar Jöpa, and rendered in English as "The True Names of Mañjuśrī, the Wisdom Being, in Their Ultimate Sense — a Song of Praise." It is a celebrated tantric praise-hymn, or nāmasaṃgīti, devoted to the bodhisattva Mañjuśrī in his aspect as the embodiment of non-dual wisdom, and it recounts his names and attributes in verse as a means of conveying the deepest nature of awakened mind. The text opens with the great Vajrapāṇi, lord of secret mantra, addressing the Buddha and requesting the teaching, establishing the work firmly within the Vajrayāna liturgical and doctrinal tradition. Widely regarded as one of the most important texts in Indo-Tibetan tantric Buddhism, it sits within the tantra section of the Kangyur and has generated an exceptionally rich commentarial literature across multiple schools of Tibetan Buddhism.

In the language of India: Mañjuśrī-jñānasattvasya paramārthanāmasaṃgīti. In the language of Tibet: The True Names of Mañjuśrī, the Wisdom Being, in Their Ultimate Sense — a Song of Praise.

Homage to Mañjuśrī, the Ever-Youthful.

Then the glorious Vajradhara, supreme tamer of the difficult to tame,
the hero victorious over all three worlds,
the lord of vajra power, king of secrets,
with eyes wide-open like full-blown white lotuses, his face like a fully blossomed lotus,
wielding the supreme vajra in his own hand,
brandishing it again and again,
with his waves of fierce, furrowed-browed wrath and so forth, Vajrapāṇi, boundless in his qualities, hero and tamer of the difficult to tame,
heroic one of awesome form,
he whose vajra tips blaze with radiance,
who wields it in his own hand,

supreme among those who accomplish the welfare of beings through great wisdom, skillful means, and compassion, endowed with a mind of delight and joy,
bearing the form of a wrathful body,
the protector who performs the enlightened activity of the buddhas — together with those who had bowed their bodies down, he prostrated to the protector, the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the perfectly awakened buddha,
and having joined his palms together,
sat in his presence and spoke these words:

"O all-pervading Lord, for the sake of healing me,
and out of your loving care for my welfare, please grant me the perfectly accomplished awakening of the net of magical display, just as you yourself have attained it.
And in order to heal all sentient beings whose minds are disturbed by afflictions and who have sunk into the mire of ignorance, and so that they may attain the unsurpassed fruit, may you, the Blessed One, the Teacher, the perfectly awakened buddha, the supreme guide of beings, please speak.

You who know the great pledge in its reality,
supreme lord who perceives the intentions of sentient beings,
the wisdom body of the Blessed One,
the sovereign of the words of the great uṣṇīṣa,
the wisdom body of Mañjuśrī, the wisdom being,
self-arisen —
profound in meaning, vast in meaning, supremely great in meaning, incomparable, utterly peaceful, wholesome at the beginning, the middle, and the end —
the supreme genuine proclaiming of the names:
the buddhas of the past have spoken it,
those of the future too shall speak it,
and the perfectly awakened buddhas of the present have spoken it again and again, whatever they have said.
In this great tantra, the net of magical causation,
the great Vajradhara, holder of secret mantra, has with delight spoken it thoroughly and correctly, countless though they are.

I too shall hold to this with a mind firm in its resolve and certain in its going-forth.
How shall I, O protector, become the keeper of secrets of all the perfectly awakened buddhas?
In order to dispel all afflictions without remainder and to abandon all ignorance without remainder, please, clearly explain to me in full the distinctions among the intentions of sentient beings."

Thus did Vajrapāṇi, the lord of secrets, the greatly powerful one, address the Tathāgata in those words,
having joined his palms together,
and sat with bowed body in his presence.

These were the sixteen verses of supplication.

Then the Blessed One, Śākyamuni,
the perfectly awakened buddha, supreme among those with two feet, extended from his own mouth his beautiful, auspicious, and excellent tongue
—

long and broad — illuminating all three worlds
and subduing the enemies that are the four māras, and displaying a smile that purifies the three lower realms (naraka, preta, and animal) of beings,
filling all three worlds with his melodious Brahmā-voice,
he spoke again to the greatly powerful Vajrapāṇi,
the lord of secrets:

"Excellent! O glorious Vajradhara,
Vajrapāṇi, well done!
You who are endowed with great compassion for the welfare of beings,
you who strive to hear from me the true proclamation — so meaningful — of the names of Mañjuśrī's wisdom body, which purifies and dispels misdeeds —

well done, O master of secrets!
Therefore I shall now explain this.
Listen, you, with one-pointed mind."

"Excellent!" said the Blessed One to him in reply.

These were the six verses of reply.

Then the Blessed One, Śākyamuni,
the great family of all secret mantras, the family of holders of mantra knowledge —

surveying the three families, the families of the world and those beyond the world, the great family of the Illuminator of the World, the supreme family of the great seal, and the great family of the great ushnīsha.

These were the two verses surveying the six families.

Endowed with the six royal mantras of secret mantra, arising as non-dual, this one possessed of the quality of non-arising — so spoke in verse the lord of words:

A Ā. I Ī. U Ū. E AI. O AU. AṂ AḤ. Sthitohṛdi. Jñānamūrtir ahaṃ buddho buddhānāṃ. Tryadhvavartīnāṃ. Oṃ vajratīkṣṇa duḥkhaccheda prajñājñānamūrtaye jñānakāya vāgīśvara arapacanāya te namaḥ.

These were the three verses of the sequence of awakening through the net of magical display.

In this way, the Blessed One, the buddha, the fully awakened one, arose from the syllable A. The syllable A is the supreme of all syllables, the sublime, the unchanging of great meaning. It is the great vital essence — unborn, free from verbal expression, yet the supreme cause of all expression, illuminating all words. The great offering of intense desire — it brings joy to all sentient beings. The great offering of fierce aversion — the supreme enemy of all afflictions. The great offering of profound delusion — the intelligence of delusion that clears away delusion. The great offering of intense wrath — the great wrathful one, the supreme enemy. The great offering of passionate attachment — it clears away all attachment. The great desire of great bliss. The great joy of great delight. Vast in form, great in body, great in color, great in stature. Great in name and great in extent, with a vast and expansive maṇḍala. Wielding the weapon of great wisdom, the supreme great hook of the afflictions. Of great fame and great renown, of great radiance and great luminosity. The skilled holder of the great magical display — the great magical display that accomplishes all aims. The great magical display rejoicing in joy. The great magical display possessed of magical illusion. The great lord patron, the supreme one, the supreme holder of great moral discipline. Firm in bearing great patience, prevailing over others through great diligence. Established in great meditative concentration and samādhi, bearing great wisdom in body. Great in power and great in skillful means, an ocean of aspirational wisdom. Great loving-kindness of immeasurable nature, great compassion, supreme in intelligence. Possessed of great wisdom and great intelligence. Great in method, great in activity, great in miraculous power and strength. Of great force and great swiftness, greatly renowned through great miraculous power. Of great strength, one who prevails over others, destroyer of the great mountain of existence. Bearing the great firm vajra, wrathful and fierce with great ferocity. Greatly terrifying, one who strikes terror. The protector, the supreme of great families — the supreme and greatest guru of secret mantra. One who abides in the conduct of the Great Vehicle, the supreme of the Great Vehicle's conduct.

These were the fourteen verses of the great maṇḍala of the vajra expanse.

The great buddha Vairocana, the great sage (muni) possessed of great fortitude, arising from the great manner of secret mantra, embodying the great manner of secret mantra. One who has attained the ten perfections, abiding in the ten perfections, pure in the ten perfections, embodying the conduct of the ten perfections. The lord and protector sovereign over the ten grounds, perfectly established in the ten grounds. Embodying the ten pure knowledges, the bearer of the ten pure knowledges. The meaning of the ten aspects and the ten aims, the lord pervaded by the ten powers of the sovereign of sages. The one who, without remainder, accomplishes the aim of all — the great one endowed with dominion over the ten aspects. The lord of no beginning, free from conceptual elaboration, the lord of suchness, the lord who is purity itself. Speaking only what is true, with no other word, doing exactly as declared. Speaking non-duality and the non-dual, perfectly abiding at the true limit. Endowed with the lion's roar of selflessness, striking fear into the wild beasts of the non-Buddhists (tīrthikas).

Traversing with purposeful aim throughout all realms, swift as the mind of a Tathāgata. Victor, conqueror of enemies, triumphant in every way, the wheel-turning sovereign of great power. Master of the assembly, chief of the assembly, lord of the assembly, master of the assembly, endowed with sovereignty. Holding what is precious with great might, the great exemplar who is led by no other. Lord of words, master of words, skilled in speech, sovereign over words, with words without limit. Speaking words of truth, speaking truthfully, the Teacher of the Four Noble Truths. The non-returner, the once-returner, the rhinoceros-like solitary traveler. With diverse definitive emergence, one who has definitively emerged, the single cause of the great elements. The monk, the arhat (Skt. arhat) whose defilements are exhausted, who is free from attachment, whose faculties are tamed. Who has found happiness, attained fearlessness, become cool, unstained. Endowed with knowledge and [right] conduct, the Sugata (well-gone one), the supreme knower of the world. Not grasping at "mine," not grasping at "I," abiding in the way of the two truths. Dwelling at the far shore, the final end of saṃsāra, resting on dry ground, one whose task is accomplished. Definitively emerged into wisdom alone, destroyer of all through the weapon of wisdom. Clearly endowed with the sacred Dharma, the king of Dharma, the supreme illuminator of the world. Lord of Dharma, king of Dharma, teacher of the excellent path. All conceptuality having fully accomplished its aim is utterly relinquished — all conceptual thought without exception abandoned. The inexhaustible expanse of non-conceptuality, the sacred dharmadhātu without exhaustion. Endowed with merit, an accumulation of merit, great primordial wisdom, a great source of wisdom. Endowed with wisdom, knowing existence and non-existence, fully endowed with the two accumulations and their collections. Perpetually all-victorious, the possessor of yoga, the sovereign of mind, the object of meditation. Innate self-knowing awareness, utterly unmoved, supreme from the very beginning, bearing the three kāyas. Being of the nature of the five buddha bodies (Skt. pañcakāya), the pervading sovereign, master of the five wisdoms (Skt. pañcājñāna), crowned with the five buddhas. Bearing the five eyes free from attachment, the progenitor of all buddhas. The supreme noble son of the buddhas, the birthplace of wisdom arising in existence, the source of Dharma-birth, who brings saṃsāra to its end. The solitary and adamant one, the sole vajra-sovereign, who swiftly generates and is lord of all beings. Born from space, self-arisen, the great fire of wisdom and gnosis. Causing the great light to illuminate all, the blaze of the light of wisdom. Lamp of beings, torch of wisdom, of great splendor and clear luminosity. Supreme king of knowledge, lord of mantra, king of secret mantra, working great purpose. Great uṣṇīṣa, wondrous crown, lord of the sky, displaying manifold forms. Sovereign of all buddhas, supreme among existents, possessing the eye that brings joy to beings. Progenitor of manifold forms, worthy of veneration, worthy of worship, great sage. Bearing the three lineages, endowed with secret mantra, holding the great sacred commitment, holding secret mantra. Chief who holds the Three Jewels, teacher of the supreme three vehicles. Victorious noose of purposeful aim (Amoghapāśa), the great holder, the vajra noose, the vajra iron hook, the great lasso.

These are the twenty-five deficient-foot verses of the wisdom of the dharmadhātu (Skt. dharmadhātu), entirely pure.

Vajrabhairava, the terrifying, the Frightening One. King of the wrathful ones, terrible with six faces, endowed with six eyes and six arms and great power. Skeleton-like, gnashing his fangs. Halāhala, the hundred-faced. Yama, the Destroyer, king of obstructors. Possessing vajra-force, the terrifying one. Vajra-fame, vajra-heart, illusory vajra, of great girth. Vajra-origin, vajra-sovereign, vajra-essence, sky-like. Immovable, with a single lock of hair tied up. Wearing a freshly-flayed elephant hide. Roaring with great ferocity "Hā Hā!" Crying "Hī Hī!" and causing terror. With great laughter, resounding with loud laughter, roaring with a great vajra laugh. Vajrasattva (Skt. vajrasattva), the great being, vajra king of great bliss. Fierce vajra, of great joy.

Vajra-Hūṃ-maker, embodiment of Hūṃ.

Bearing the weapon of the vajra-arrow.

Cutting with the vajra-sword.

Holder of all vajras, the one who is vajra.

The single vajra that disperses battle.

Blazing vajra, with eyes like lightning.

Hair-born blazing vajra.

Vajra-hurler, great in the casting down.

The hundred-eyed one, with eyes of vajra.

Whose hairs are like sprouts,

Whose vajra-hairs form one body.

Who begins with the tip of the vajra nail.

Vajra-essence, with a tough hide.

Bearing a vajra garland, endowed with splendor.

Adorned with vajra ornaments.

Who resoundingly roars "Hā Hā!"

The syllable of six, the sound of vajra.

Mañjughoṣa, great in sound.

A single great roar throughout the three worlds.

The sound that reaches the end of the realm of space.

The supreme among all those endowed with sound.

These are the ten verses with their feet constituting the mirror-like wisdom section.

Truly selfless, suchness itself.

The perfect limit, beyond syllables.

The supreme leader who proclaims emptiness.

Resounding with the sound of depth and vastness.

The Dharma-conch, greatly resounding.

The Dharma-gong, of great sound.

The nirvāṇa of non-abiding, beyond sorrow.

The great Dharma-drum in the ten directions.

Formless, yet supremely form-endowed.

Mind-natured, possessed of manifold forms.

The splendor of the appearing of all forms.

The bearer of all reflections without exception.

Without appearance, yet renowned as great.

The great sovereign of the three realms.

Dwelling on the highest noble path.

The great rising pinnacle of Dharma.

One body yet young in all three worlds.

The elder of stability, sovereign of all beings.

Bearing the thirty-two marks.

Beautiful, lovely throughout the three worlds.

The teacher who knows the qualities of the world.

The fearless teacher of the world.

Protector and guardian pervading the three worlds.

The refuge and protection without superior.

Pervading space in his enjoyment.

The ocean of omniscient wisdom.

Who opens the hollow of the gate of ignorance.

Who destroys the net of conditioned existence.

Who pacifies all afflictions without remainder.

Who crosses to the far shore of the ocean of saṃsāra.

Crowned with the diadem of wisdom-empowerment.

The ornament of the perfectly and fully awakened buddhas.

Who pacifies the suffering of the three sufferings.

Liberated at the infinite extremes of the three — the third liberation.
Definitively liberated from all obscurations.
Dwelling in equality like the sky.
Transcending all the stains of affliction.
Abiding in the realization of the three times and the timeless.
The great nāga of all sentient beings.
The topknot among those possessed of quality-topknots.
Completely liberated from all remainders.
Supremely abiding on the path of the sky.

Holding the great wish-fulfilling jewel.
The all-pervading sovereign, supreme among all precious ones.
The great wish-fulfilling tree in full bloom.
The excellent vase, supreme in its greatness.
In action, accomplishing the aim of all sentient beings.
Benefiting and pleasing all sentient beings.
Knowing what is good and what is bad, knowing the time.
All-pervading sovereign, knowing sacred commitments, possessing samaya.
Knowing the time, knowing the faculties of sentient beings.
Skilled in the three liberations.
Endowed with qualities and knowing qualities.
Knowing Dharma, supremely wise, auspicious, bringing forth good fortune.
The most auspicious of all that is auspicious.
Of glorious repute, melodious, excellent.

Great relief, great celebration.
Great joy, great sport.
Perfect honor and service, complete in all.
Supremely delighted, glorious lord of renown.
Endowed with the supreme, bestower of the supreme, the foremost.
The sacred refuge, worthy of being a refuge.
The supreme enemy of great terrors.
The dispeller of all fears without exception.
With a topknot, with locks hanging loose.
With disheveled hair touching the head, crowned.
With five faces, endowed with five topknots.
The skull endowed with five side-locks.

With a round head, maintaining great ascetic discipline.
The brahmic conduct, the supreme discipline.
Perfected in austerity, greatly austere.
The supreme Gautama, immersed in ritual purity.
The brahmin, knowing Brahman, knowing what is divine.
Brahman who has attained nirvāṇa.
The liberated one — liberation itself, the body of complete freedom.
Completely freed, pacified, peace itself.
Nirvāṇa's peace, nirvāṇa.

Perfectly certain in renunciation, bringing things to their end.
The abode that brings pleasure and suffering to their end.
Free from attachment, exhausting all conceptual examination.
Incomparable — the unobstructed, the peerless.
Neither luminous nor appearing, unstained.
Partless, all-pervading, the pervader.
Subtle as a seed, without defilement.
Without dust, free from dust, without stain.
Having abandoned faults, free of blemish.
The thoroughly awakened, the completely awakened self.
The supreme who knows all through wisdom, omniscient.
Beyond the nature of reality that is consciousness.
Maintaining the mode of non-dual wisdom.
Without conceptual thought, spontaneously accomplished.
The agent of action of the buddhas of the three times.
A buddha without beginning and without end.
The primordial buddha, without partiality.
The single eye of wisdom, without stain.
The one with a body of wisdom — the Tathāgata.
Lord of speech, the great speaker.
The supreme being of speech, the king of speech.
The holy one of speech, the abode of the highest.
The lion of speech, the unobstructed.
Supremely delighting in universal seeing.
Beautiful to behold, adorned with a garland of splendor.
Blazing with excellent light, the glorious calf.
The light that makes appearances brilliantly clear.

The great physician, the chief, the foremost.
The unsurpassed one who draws out thorns.
The tree of all medicines without exception.
The great enemy of the illness of affliction.
The beloved one, the supreme of the three worlds.
Glorious, encircled by a retinue of constellations.
Raising the great victory banner of the Dharma.
The single vast canopy of all wandering beings.
Possessing a maṇḍala of loving-kindness and compassion.
The glorious lord of the lotus dance.
The great all-pervading lord, the precious parasol.
The great king of all buddhas.
The lord of all buddhas, holder of things as they are.
The great yogin of all buddhas.
The single teaching of all buddhas.
The glory of vajra and jewel empowerment.
Lord of all jewels, the sovereign.
The lord of the world, the master of all.
Holder of all vajras, the sovereign lord.
The great mind of all buddhas.
Abiding within the mind of all buddhas.
The great body of all buddhas.
Endowed with the ocean of all buddhas.
The vajra sun, the great luminosity.
The vajra moon, light without stain.
Free from attachment, primordially possessing great attachment.
Blazing light of manifold colors.
The vajra cross-legged posture — the complete buddha.
Holder of the Dharma that speaks of buddhas.
The glorious buddha, lotus-born.
Omniscient, holder of the treasury of wisdom.
The king who holds manifold illusions.
The great one, the buddha who holds vidyā.
The sharp vajra, the great sword.
The supreme, utterly pure and unchanging.
The Great Vehicle that cuts through suffering.
The great weapon — the vajra Dharma.

The profound vajra, Jinajik.
The vajra intellect, knowing things as they are.
Perfecting all the perfections.
Adorning all the grounds completely.
The utterly pure Dharma of selflessness.
The true wisdom — excellent as the light of the moon.
The great illusion net yogin.
The supreme lord of all tantras.
Without exception, the vajra cross-legged posture.
Holding without exception all the wisdom bodies.
Samantabhadra, the excellent mind.
Kṣitigarbha, holder of wandering beings.
The great essence of all buddhas.
Holder of the wheel of manifold emanations.
The supreme intrinsic nature of all things.
Holder of the intrinsic nature of all things.
Unborn phenomena — the meaning of multiplicity.
Holder of the essential nature of all phenomena.
In a single instant, the supreme wisdom.
Holding the penetrating understanding of all phenomena.
The directly realizing knower of all phenomena.
The sage, the supreme mind — the perfectly real limit.
Immovable, the thoroughly pure self.
Holding the awakening of the complete buddha.
The direct perception of all buddhas.
The flame of wisdom, brilliantly luminous.

This concludes the forty-two verses of the wisdom of individual examination.

Fulfilling the highest aim of desire.
Completely purifying all lower rebirths.
The protector, supreme among all sentient beings.
The one who completely liberates all sentient beings.
Alone courageous on the battlefield of affliction.
Crushing the pride of the enemy of ignorance.
The mind holding elegance, endowed with splendor.
The hero bearing a form beyond ugliness.
Setting a hundred hand-staffs in motion.

Dancing through the movement of the feet.
The glorious one in whom a hundred hands are full.
Dancing to pervade the expanse of space.
Pressing down with a single foot.
Dwelling at the heart-center of Kṣitigarbha.
Pressing the summit of the gate of Brahmā.
Dwelling upon the nail of the big toe.
The meaning of the Dharma, singular and non-dual.
That sacred meaning is indestructible.
The meaning that is the intrinsic nature of manifold cognitions.
Endowed with the stream of mind and consciousness.
Rejoicing in the meaning of all that exists.
The mind of attachment that delights in emptiness.
Transcending attachment to existence and the like.
Great joy in the three realms of existence.
Pure, white as a white cloud.
The light of the autumn moon, radiantly beautiful.
Beautiful as the disc of the rising sun.
The luminosity of the nail of great attachment.
The supreme top-knot, excellent and prominent.
Bearing the hair-knot of the great and prominent one.
The glory of great jewel-radiance and attachment.
Endowed with the ornaments of the buddhas' emanations.
Traversing all one hundred world-realms.
Possessed of the great power of miraculous legs.
Bearing the great mindfulness of that suchness.
The four applications of mindfulness, the king of samādhi.
Delighting in the blossoms of the branches of awakening.
The Tathāgata, an ocean of qualities.
Knowing the manner of the eightfold limbs of the path.
Knowing the path of the perfectly awakened buddha.
Attached with great affection to all sentient beings.
Yet unattached, like the sky.
Born from the mind of all sentient beings.
Swift as the mind of all sentient beings.
Knowing the meaning of the faculties of all sentient beings.
Captivating the minds of all sentient beings.

Knowing the suchness of the five aggregates.
Bearing the five pure aggregates.
Dwelling at the limit where all is determined to emerge.
Skilled in the certain emergence of all things.
Dwelling on the path of the certain emergence of all.
The teacher of the certain emergence of all.
Having uprooted the twelve-limbed root of existence.
Bearing the twelve aspects of purity.
Having the aspects of the manner of the Four Truths.
Bearing the realization of the eight cognitions.
Endowed with the twelve aspects of the meaning of truth.
Knowing the sixteen aspects of that suchness.
Awakened through twenty aspects.
Supreme in knowing all, the fully awakened.
The one who scatters ten million emanations of the immeasurable buddhas' bodies.
Completely and directly realizing all moments.
Knowing all meanings in the instants of mind.
Differentiated in purpose for the sake of beings through various vehicles and skillful methods.
The renunciation of the three vehicles abides as the fruit of the single vehicle.
The lord who purifies the constituents of affliction.
Exhausting the constituents of karma.
Crossing all rivers and oceans.
Emerged from the wilderness of striving.
All afflictions and secondary afflictions afflicting, yet having utterly abandoned them together with their habitual tendencies.
Great compassion, wisdom, and skillful means.
Meaningfully acting for the benefit of beings.
The meaning of having utterly abandoned all perceptions.
Bearing the cessation of the meaning of consciousness.
The object of the minds of all sentient beings.
The resting point of the minds of all sentient beings.
Dwelling within the minds of all sentient beings.
Demonstrating equality with their minds.
Satisfying the minds of all sentient beings.

The delight of the minds of all sentient beings.
Not possessing the errors of tenets.
Having utterly abandoned all errors.
The mind free of doubt regarding the three meanings.
The lord of the three qualities serving every purpose.
The meaning of the five aggregates in the three times.
Cultivating all aspects in every instant.
Completely awakened in a single instant.
Bearing the intrinsic nature of all buddhas.
The bodyless body, the supreme among bodies.
Scattering the body into ten million forms.
Displaying all forms without remainder.
The great jewel, the precious pinnacle.
This concludes the twenty-four verses of the wisdom of equality.

To be realized by all buddhas.
The unsurpassed awakening of the buddhas.
The secret mantra, unlettered in its birthplace.
The great secret mantra of the three families.
The secret mantra that generates all meanings.
The great bindu, without letters.
The great emptiness, with five letters.
The emptiness of the bindu, with six letters.
All aspects, yet without aspect.
Bearing the bindu that is half of half of sixteen.
Beyond the divisible and the indivisible.

Bearing the pinnacle of the fourth meditative concentration (dhyāna),
Knowing all the branches of meditative concentration,
Aware of absorption and aware of tantra,
The body of meditative absorption — the supreme among bodies.
The saṃbhogakāya, sovereign of all,
The nirmāṇakāya — the supreme among bodies.
Bearing the tantra of the buddha's emanations,
Spreading manifold emanations throughout the ten directions,
Acting for the benefit of beings just as it truly is.
Lord of the gods, god of gods,
Master and bestower among the demigods (asuras),

Guru of the gods, lord over death.
The utterly triumphant, utterly triumphant — sovereign.
Gone beyond the wilderness of cyclic existence,
The Teacher, sole guide of beings.
Supremely renowned throughout the ten directions of the world,
The great lord of the gift of Dharma,
Clad in the armor of loving-kindness (maitrī),
Adorned with the mail of compassion.
Bearing the sword and bow of wisdom,
Clearing the battlefield of affliction and ignorance.
The hero, who is the foe of māra and tames māra,
Who brings the terror of the four māras to its end,
Who vanquishes all the armies of māra.
The perfectly awakened buddha, guide of the world,
Worthy of offering, worthy of praise, a proper object of homage,
Always a worthy object of respectful service,
Worthy of veneration and of honor,
The supreme guru, worthy of reverential salutation.
Traversing the three worlds in a single stride,
Pervading limitlessly like space.
Pure in the three knowledges, utterly purified,
Endowed with the six higher knowledges (abhiññā), with six recollections.
A bodhisattva, a great being,
Of great miraculous power, transcending the world.
Reaching the far shore of the Perfection of Wisdom,
Attaining the suchness of wisdom.
Knowing oneself and knowing others completely,
The supreme person who benefits all.
Transcending all worldly analogies,
The supreme lord of knowing and of what is known.
The chief — lord of the gift of Dharma,
Teaching the meaning of the four mudrās,
The supreme object of the reverence of beings.
The pure and glorious supreme good
Of those who have traversed the three kinds of definite emergence,
The great good fortune of the three worlds,
Glorious — the maker of all prosperity.

Mañjuśrī, the supreme endowed with glory.

This concludes the fifteen verses of the wisdom of accomplishing activities.

I bow to you, supreme vajra, giver of the supreme.

I bow to you, who have come to the true end.

I bow to you, essence of emptiness.

I bow to you, essence of emptiness.

I bow to you, awakening of buddhas.

I bow to you, attachment of buddhas.

I bow and pay homage to the desire of buddhas.

I bow to you, delight of buddhas.

I bow and pay homage to the play of buddhas.

I bow to you, smile of buddhas.

I bow and pay homage to the radiance of buddhas.

I bow to you, speech of buddhas.

I bow and pay homage to the mind of buddhas.

I bow to you, arisen from the non-substantial.

I bow to you, arising of buddhas.

I bow to you, arisen from space.

I bow to you, arisen from gnosis.

I bow to you, net of magical display.

I bow to you, dance of buddhas performed with grace.

I bow to you — all, all.

I bow to you, body of gnosis.

This concludes the five verses of praise of the gnosis of the five Tathāgatas.

Vajrapāṇi, the vajra-bearer. This is the true recitation of the unmixed and perfectly pure names of the Blessed One's body of gnosis, of the body of gnosis of all Tathāgatas, and of Mañjuśrī the gnosis-being.

It is for the purpose of generating within you the unsurpassed joy, pure delight, and great contentment; for the complete purification of the secrets of body, speech, and mind; for the complete perfection and complete purification of grounds, perfections, and the accumulations of merit and gnosis that are as yet incomplete and impure; for the superior realization of the unsurpassed meaning that has not yet been superiorly realized; for the attainment of what has not yet been attained; and for as long as one holds fast to the true manner of the sacred Dharma of all Tathāgatas — this too I have taught.

— thoroughly and correctly explained, elucidated, analyzed, made perfectly clear, and blessed. Vajrapāṇi, Holder of the Vajra, this I have blessed within your mindstream with the blessing of the nature of all mantras (dharmatā of mantra). These are the eleven praises that follow upon the first turning of the wheel of Dharma.

Furthermore, Vajrapāṇi, Holder of the Vajra, this recitation of names is utterly and completely pure. It is the secret of the gnosis, body, speech, and mind of omniscience, fully purified and cleansed. It is the awakening of all Tathāgatas to buddhahood. It is the realization of the perfectly and completely awakened buddhas. It is the unsurpassed of all Tathāgatas. It is the realization of the dharmadhātu by all Sugatas. It is that which defeats all the powers of māra for the Victors. It is the power of the ten powers for all those endowed with the ten powers. It is the omniscience of all omniscient gnoses. It is the scriptural transmission of all phenomena. It is the perfect and complete awakening of all buddhas. It is the stainless and utterly pure complete perfection of the accumulations of merit and gnosis for all great bodhisattvas. It is the supreme birth for all śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas. It is the field of excellence for all gods and humans. It is the supreme abiding in the Great Vehicle. It is the source of bodhisattva conduct. It is the ultimate culmination of the noble path. It is the investigation of those who are liberated. It is the generation of the path of definite emergence. It is the unbroken continuation of the lineage of the Tathāgatas. It is the supreme increase of the lineage and family of the great bodhisattvas. It is the cutting off of all adversarial opponents. It is the utter vanquishing of all tīrthikas. It is the defeat of the powers, armies, and forces of the four māras. It is the perfect gathering of all sentient beings. It is the complete ripening of the noble path for all those who travel through definite emergence. It is the meditative absorption of those dwelling in the four divine abodes (Skt. brahmavihāra). It is the meditative concentration of those whose minds are one-pointed. It is the yoga of those who engage body, speech, and mind in manifest application. It is the freedom from all engagement for all who are perfectly engaged. It is the abandonment of all afflictions and secondary afflictions. It is the subsiding of all obscurations. It is the complete liberation from all bonds. It is the liberation from all that remains. It is the calming of all mental distraction. It is the source of all prosperity. It is the complete destruction of all ruin. It is the closing of all the doors to the lower destinies. It is the supreme path to the city of liberation. It is that which does not lead into the wheel of saṃsāra. It is the thorough turning of the wheel of Dharma. It is the raising aloft of the canopy, victory banner, and flag of the Tathāgatas' teaching. It is the supreme abiding in teaching the sacred Dharma. It is the swift accomplishment for those who practice the conduct of the bodhisattva's mantra door. It is the supreme realization in meditation for those who apply themselves to the Perfections of Wisdom. It is the individual realization of emptiness for those who apply themselves to meditating on the discernment that is free from duality. It is the generation of all perfections and accumulations. It is the complete perfection of all pure grounds and perfections. It is the individual realization of the four correct noble truths.

It is the individual realization of the oneness of all phenomena belonging to the four foundations of mindfulness.

This recitation of the name in its entirety extends as far as the complete perfection of all qualities of a buddha. These are the fifty-two praises following the second wheel.

Furthermore, Vajrapāṇi, holder of the vajra, this recitation of the name perfectly pacifies without remainder all the misdeeds committed through the body, speech, and mind of all sentient beings. It fully purifies all the lower realms of all sentient beings. It turns back all descent into the lower realms. It utterly severs all karmic obscurations. It prevents the arising of any birth in the eight states of no-leisure. It brings perfect peace from the eight great fears. It definitively dispels all bad dreams. It entirely removes all inauspicious signs. It brings perfect peace from all ill omens and obstructors. It makes all the deeds of the enemy Māra utterly remote. It causes all roots of virtue and all merit to grow and increase. It prevents the arising of any attention that is contrary to proper discernment. It definitively vanquishes all conceit, arrogance, pride, and self-grasping. It prevents the arising of all suffering and mental anguish. It is the very essence of all Tathāgatas. It is the secret of all bodhisattvas. It is the great secret of all śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas. It is the totality of all mudrās and mantras. It fully generates the mindfulness and vigilance of those who declare all phenomena to be ineffable. It renders the mind thoroughly settled in supreme wisdom. It brings about the full abundance of freedom from illness, strength, and mastery. It causes auspiciousness, virtue, peace, and excellence to abundantly increase. It makes renown, good repute, verse, and praise brilliantly manifest. It brings perfect peace from all illness and great fears. It is the supreme purity among the utterly pure. It is the supreme cleanliness among the utterly clean. It is the supreme wealth among the greatly wealthy. It is the supreme auspiciousness among the greatly auspicious. It is the refuge for those who seek refuge. It is the dwelling for those who have no abode. It is the protector for those who seek protection. It is the ally for those who have no ally. It is the island for those who seek an island. It is the supreme support for those who have no support. It is the vessel for those who would cross to the far shore of the ocean of existence. It has become the great king of physicians who utterly vanquishes all illness. It is wisdom itself, for the sake of distinguishing what is to be adopted and what is to be abandoned. It is the light of gnosis, for the sake of dispelling all the thick darkness of wrong views. It is the wish-fulfilling jewel, for the sake of completely fulfilling just as they are the aspirations and wishes of all sentient beings. It is the gnosis of omniscience, for the sake of perfectly attaining the gnosis body of Mañjuśrī. It is the perfectly pure vision of gnosis, for the sake of perfectly attaining the five eyes. It is the complete perfection of the six perfections through giving material things, fearlessness, and the gift of Dharma. It is the perfect attainment of the ten grounds through the complete perfection of the accumulations of merit and gnosis and of meditative absorption. And because it is free from the phenomena of duality, it is the nature of reality that is beyond duality.

Because it is utterly free from superimposition, it is the nature of suchness and the nature of reality that is none other than that. Because it is the very nature of the perfectly pure gnosis body of all the Tathāgatas, it is the nature of the ultimate limit. Because it definitively dispels without remainder the entire thicket of wrong views, it is the nature of the great emptiness of all aspects.

This true recitation of names, by so clearly manifesting the grasping of the name and meaning of the non-dual nature of reality, renders all phenomena inexpressible. This is the fifty-second praise following the third wheel.

Furthermore, Vajrapāṇi, O Vajradhara, whatever son or daughter of good family practises through the gate of mantra: for that person this text, called the Crown Jewel — the true recitation of names, the ultimate meaning of the non-dual gnosis body of the Blessed One Mañjuśrī, the gnosis body of the bodhisattva of wisdom, the non-dual gnosis body of all the Tathāgatas — complete in its entirety, lacking nothing, undivided, through its very verses, words, and syllables — day by day, through the three times, holds it, recites it, masters it completely, takes it properly to heart, and illuminates it for others in full, exactly as it is, in accordance with the time — and who, taking each individual meaning of the names one by one, having made manifest the gnosis body of Mañjuśrī, cultivates it with one-pointed mind, with fervent aspiration, and with genuine taking-to-heart, abiding in thorough entrance through the gateway: for that person, all phenomena are individually understood, supreme, unobstructed, fully penetrated by wisdom, and correctly traversed by faith.

For such a one, without any set time, throughout the three times, all buddhas and bodhisattvas will truly assemble, will truly come and arrive, and will reveal the gateways to all phenomena. They will reveal the very cultivation of selfhood. Through the blessing of all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, the stream of body, speech, and mind will be truly consecrated. Through the care of all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, one will be truly sustained. The fearless confidence regarding all phenomena will be brought to full accomplishment. All arhats, śrāvakas, and pratyekabuddhas, too, through their intent intent on the noble Dharma as something dear, will reveal their own persons. Those who tame the hard-to-tame — the great wrathful kings, the great Vajradharas and the like, the emanation bodies of diverse form who arise as perfect protectors of beings, who are not to be overwhelmed by splendor, power, and majesty — will reveal mantras, mudrās, abhijñās, and maṇḍalas. All mantras and vidyā-kings (Skt. vidyārāja) without exception, and all great ones invincible by others — obstructors, misleading spirits, māras, hostile adversaries — in each and every moment, night and day alike, throughout all activities and on all paths, will guard, protect, and shelter.

Brahmā, Indra (Śakra), Upendra, Rudra, Nārāyaṇa, the ever-youthful Kumāra, the great Maheśvara, the son of the Pleiades (Skanda), the great Mahākāla, Nandīśvara, Yama, the god of waters (Varuṇa), Pūtanā, Hāritī, and all the guardians of the world in the ten directions — all of these, constantly and continuously, by night and by day, while one is moving, standing, lying down, sitting, falling asleep, waking, and in meditative equipoise — while not in meditative equipoise, while dwelling alone, while entering among great crowds of people; wherever one abides in a village, a town, a borough, a province, a district, or a royal palace; at a gateway pillar, a gatehouse, a street, a lane, a crossroads of four roads, a crossroads of three roads, in the midst of a city, or inside a market — wherever one dwells; wherever one approaches an empty building, a mountain, a hermitage, a river, a charnel ground, or the interior of a dense forest; whether sober or drunk, slightly intoxicated or deeply intoxicated — always, in every moment, in every manner, they will supremely guard, protect, and shelter. By night and by day they will bring supreme well-being.

Furthermore, all gods (devas), nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, great serpents (mahoragas), humans, and non-humans; and all planets, aśerial spirits (nakṣatras), mother-spirits (mātṛkās), and lords of hosts; and the seven mother-spirits; and yakṣiṇīs, rākṣasīs, and flesh-eating demonesses — all of these together, in harmony, with their retinues and assemblies, will supremely guard, protect, and shelter throughout all activities and on all paths. Moreover, they will impart radiance and strength to that person's body. They will accomplish freedom from illness, vigor, and the lengthening of life.

This concludes the nineteenth praise that follows upon the fourth wheel.

Furthermore, Vajrapāṇi — he who holds the vajra — this text called the Jewel-Crest of Perfect Names, when it is received each day without interruption, worn at the throat, recited three times aloud, read from a written volume, and proclaimed; and when one meditates with the mind directed toward the form of the Blessed One Mañjuśrī, the bodhisattva of primordial wisdom, thinking upon that form in sustained reflection and cultivating meditative concentration upon that form — then Mañjuśrī himself, before long, taking up the power of those to be tamed, will appear in an emanation body (nirmāṇakāya). One will also see all the buddhas and bodhisattvas, dwelling together in the expanse of the sky, each in their various emanation bodies.

No matter what birth that great bodhisattva takes, there will arise no danger of falling into the lower states or into bad destinies. One will not be born into a base lineage. One will not be born as a person of the borderlands. One's faculties will not be dull. One's faculties will not be incomplete. One will not be born into a lineage of wrong views. One will not be born in buddha-fields where no buddha is present. One will not encounter the arising of a buddha and then the rejection or concealment of the Dharma taught by that buddha. One will not be born among the long-lived gods. One will not be born in aeons of famine, pestilence, or the sword. One will not be born in the times of the five degenerations. There will arise no danger from kings, thieves, or enemies. There will arise no danger whatsoever from ruin or poverty. There will arise no danger of being disparaged, slandered, abused, spoken ill of, or ill-reputed. One will attain a good birth and excellent lineage and family. One will be beautified in every way, endowed with fine form and complexion. One will be dear and pleasing to worldly beings, supremely agreeable in company, joyful to behold. One will be graced with beauty and good fortune in the eyes of the world, and one's words will be worth heeding.

Wherever one is born, one will remember one's birth in each of those places. One will have great wealth and a large retinue, and one's wealth and retinue will be inexhaustible. One will be perfectly endowed with the aspirations and wisdom that are supreme among all sentient beings. By one's very nature one will be perfectly endowed with the qualities of the six perfections. One will abide in the four divine abodes (brahmavihāra). One will be perfectly endowed with mindfulness, vigilance, skillful means, power, aspiration, and wisdom. One will be fearless in all treatises and will become skilled in speech. One's words will be clear, not foolish, and one's intelligence will be bright. One will be learned and free of laziness, content, purposeful, and without craving. One will become the foremost object of trust for all sentient beings, worthy of being regarded as a teacher and a lama. Even arts, calculations, sciences, and all treatises never before heard will be perfectly and clearly understood in their meaning and according to their texts. One will be endowed with the most perfectly pure moral discipline, livelihood, and conduct. One will properly go forth and properly receive full ordination. One will not forget omniscience and the awakening mind. One will never come to abide in the determination or the path of śrāvakas, arhats, or pratyekabuddhas. This is the fifty-first praise following the fifth wheel.

Vajrapāṇi, Vajradhara — thus one will be perfectly endowed with immeasurable qualities. One will be perfectly endowed with other immeasurable qualities of that same kind. Vajrapāṇi, Vajradhara — whatever person or individual correctly holds this text that perfectly expresses the ultimate meaning will, without long delay, well accumulate the stores of merit and wisdom, and, having perfectly accomplished the qualities of a buddha with great swiftness, will fully and perfectly awaken to unsurpassed and perfect awakening. For many aeons, through the Dharma of not passing into final nirvāṇa, one will become the unsurpassed teacher of Dharma for all sentient beings, and the sovereign of Dharma whose great Dharma drum resounds supremely in all ten directions. This is the immeasurable praise following the sixth wheel.

Oṃ sarvadharmā bhāva svabhāva viśuddha vajracakṣuḥ a āḥ aṃ aḥ prakṛti pariśuddhaḥ sarvadharmā yad uta sarvatathāgatajñānakāya Mañjuśrī pariśuddhitā mupādāyati a āḥ sarvatathāgatahṛdaya hara hara auṃ hūṃ hrīḥ bhagavān jñānamūrti vāgīśvara mahāpāca sarvadharmā gaganāmala supariśuddha dharmadhātujñānagarbha āḥ.

This is the mantra to be recited.

Then glorious Vajradhara, filled with joy and delight, joined his palms together and, having paid homage to the protector, the Blessed One, the Tathāgata, the perfectly enlightened buddha, together with the manifold other protectors and the lord of secrets Vajrapāṇi and the kings of wrathful ones, having offered the secret praise, he spoke these words:

O protector, we rejoice in your presence —
"Excellent! Excellent! Excellently spoken!"
You have wrought the great purpose of our attaining perfect and complete awakening.

For beings without a protector,
for those who seek the fruit of complete liberation, this perfectly pure and excellent path shown in the manner of the web of illusion — profound and vast and wide, accomplishing the great purpose, the welfare of beings,
this domain of the buddhas —

All fully awakened buddhas have proclaimed it.

These are the five verses that serve as the close conclusion of the rejoicing.

Extracted from the chapter on the net of meditative absorption in the noble tantra of the Great Yoga, the Māyājāla in Sixteen Thousand Verses: The True Proclamation of the Ultimate Names of the Blessed One Mañjuśrī, the bodhisattva of primordial wisdom. This completes what was spoken by the Blessed One, the Tathāgata Śākyamuni.

Nurtured by the grace of the great sovereign holy teacher, the mighty one who holds mastery over all scriptures, both common and uncommon, the translator monk Lodrö Tenpa rendered this text excellently and made it pure at the solitary retreat of Samten Ling.

Those great translators of former times translated this tantra, and it became renowned throughout the world.
Yet in word and meaning, in accord with authentic scholarship, this tantra has now been excellently translated by the second Lodrö Tenpa.

For those of profound and vast aspiration within the vajra vehicle, those beings who seek the definitive meaning and primordial wisdom — do not rely merely on words and letters, and do not follow after persons and syllables alone.

Translator's Notes

- The title in Sanskrit is rendered as transliterated in the Tibetan dbu can script: "Mañjuśrī-jñānasattvasya paramārthanāmasaṃgīti," which is the standard Sanskrit title of the Nāmasaṃgīti, a foundational tantric praise text. The Tibetan rendering of the title is translated faithfully as "The True Names of Mañjuśrī, the Wisdom Being, in Their Ultimate Sense."

The phrase rendered "the net of magical display" translates "sgyu 'phrul dra ba," which corresponds to Sanskrit mājāla, an important tantra cycle connected with Mañjuśrī in which the perfection of awakening is described as accomplished through magical net-like display — a technical reference to the Mājālatānta.

The phrase "gtsug tor chen po'i tshig gi bdag" is rendered "sovereign of the words of the great uṣṇīṣa," referring to Mañjuśrī as identified with the uṣṇīṣa (the cranial protuberance, a mark of a great being), a standard epithet in the Nāmasaṃgīti tradition.

The closing lines of the passage are incomplete as the text breaks off mid-sentence; no translation of a complete thought was possible beyond what is given.

- The mantra passage preserves the Sanskrit dhāraṇī syllables and the root mantra of Mañjuśrī in their original Sanskrit/Sanskrit-derived form, as is standard in canonical translation practice; they are not rendered into English.

The phrase rendered "the great offering of intense desire" and the parallel constructions that follow reflect a tantric exegetical convention in which the five poisons (desire, aversion, delusion, wrath, attachment) are recast as "great offerings" whose very intensity becomes the path; this is a standard Vajrayāna doctrinal point and is preserved literally here.

The term rendered "ushnīṣa" (ཡུ་སྒྲི་ཤ་, Skt. uṣṇīṣa) refers to the cranial protuberance, one of the major marks of a great being, here used as a family designation in a tantric classificatory scheme of six families rather than the more common three or five.

- The passage contains two distinct sections: a concluding portion of a eulogy in the dharmadhātu wisdom register, then a new section beginning with Vajrabhairava epithets. The colophon-like line "These are the twenty-five deficient-foot verses of the wisdom of the dharmadhātu, entirely pure" marks the end of the first section; the number twenty-five refers to a traditional syllable-count category used in Tibetan poetics.

The term rendered "non-returner" and "once-returner" translates the Tibetan རྒྱུ་མཐོན་པོ་ and རྒྱུ་མཐོན་པོ་, the standard Tibetan equivalents for the anāgāmin and sakṛdāgāmin respectively, the third and second of the four noble fruits of the śrāvaka path.

The phrase rendered "rhinoceros-like solitary traveler" renders རྒྱུ་མཐོན་པོ་ལྟ་བུ་ལྟ་བུ་, a stock image for the pratyekabuddha (solitary buddha) who, like a rhinoceros, walks alone — an image derived from the Khaggaviṣāṇasutta.

- The phrase "mgo skyes rdo rje 'bar ba" rendered as "hair-born blazing vajra" refers to Vajra born from the head or crown, a standard iconographic epithet, though some editions read this as referring to a being born or arising from the crown of the head in a tantric context.

The phrase "yig ge drug pa rdo rje'i sgra" rendered as "The syllable of six, the sound of vajra" refers to the six-syllable mantra Om Mani Padme Hūṃ, which is here identified with vajra-sound, though in context it may also indicate a six-syllabled seed-syllable specific to the deity addressed.

The phrase "gsum mtha' mtha' yas grol gsum pa" is syntactically compressed. It has been rendered as "liberated at the infinite extremes of the three — the third liberation," but the referent of "the three" is ambiguous; it may indicate the three realms, the three vehicles, or the three natures.

The passage ends with a section colophon indicating these ten verses belong to the mirror-like wisdom section, after which a new section begins. The structure of the larger text appears to organize verses according to the five wisdoms; this colophon marks the close of the first such group.

- The epithet "glorious calf" rendered from "dpal gyi be'u" is an unusual image; in context it likely conveys the sense of a young radiant source of nourishment and brilliance, possibly echoing solar iconography. The exact import of "be'u" as calf or young animal in this liturgical context may warrant further commentary consultation.

The name "Jinajik" for "rdo rje zab mo dzin dzik" is a transliteration of what appears to be a Sanskrit name preserved in Tibetan phonetics, possibly Gajajit or a similar epithet; it is retained as a proper name pending identification of the Sanskrit original.

The phrase rendered "primordially possessing great attachment" from "chags bral dang po chags pa che" is doctrinally striking — the juxtaposition of freedom from attachment with great attachment likely reflects tantric non-dual language where ultimate non-attachment paradoxically encompasses all experience; this is a recognized rhetorical device in vajrayāna eulogy literature.

- The passage belongs to a praise-text or enumeration of qualities, likely from a Vajrayāna context cataloguing the attributes of an enlightened being or a buddha. Several epithets are densely technical and semi-formulaic.

The phrase rendered "pressing the summit of the gate of Brahmā" refers to the brahmarandhra, the crown aperture, a well-attested tantric anatomical term; the Tibetan རྩམ་པ་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་ is a standard rendering of this.

The lines concerning the bindu, letters, and the "half of half of sixteen" are technical Vajrayāna numerical-syllabic formulas. "Half of half of sixteen" yields four, likely referring to the four-dot bindu or a specific syllabic count in tantric esotericism. The precise referent is context-dependent and may vary by lineage.

"The great secret mantra of the three families" refers to the three buddha-families of body, speech, and mind, or alternatively the families of buddha, vajra, and padma, standard in Vajrayāna classification.

"The three meanings" in "the mind free of doubt regarding the three meanings" most likely refers to the three objects of definite knowledge standard in Madhyamaka and Abhidharma contexts, though the precise referent depends on the broader textual tradition.

- The line rendered "attachment of buddhas" and "desire of buddhas" translates the Tibetan terms རྒྱལ་བཤམ་ and རྒྱལ་བཤམ་ respectively. In this tantric praise context, these are technical positive epithets signifying the buddha's blissful compassionate engagement and the wish-fulfilling quality of awakening rather than ordinary afflictive desire or attachment. The doctrinal point is intentional and belongs to the Vajrayāna register of this text.

The "three kinds of definite emergence" renders རྩམ་པ་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་ལྷོ་, likely referring to the three vehicles and their respective paths of liberation.

The closing prose section shifts from verse into a formal statement by Vajrapāṇi, introducing the purpose of reciting these names. The syntactically open-ended final clause — "this too I have taught" — appears to be an incomplete sentence whose continuation follows in the next passage.

- The phrase rendered "closing of all the doors to the lower destinies" translates a compound meaning literally "covering all the doors/gates of the lower rebirths," referring to the blocking of rebirth in hell, the animal realm, and the realm of hungry ghosts. This is a standard technical usage and no ambiguity is involved.

The phrase "freedom from all engagement for all who are perfectly engaged" renders a deliberate paradox in the original: those who are perfectly engaged in practice attain freedom from all compulsive engagement or grasping-attachment. This is doctrinally intentional and not a textual error.

- The phrase rendered "perfectly attaining the gnosis body of Mañjuśrī" reflects a standard late-tantric formulation in which the recitation of Mañjuśrī's name confers his jñānakāya; no emendation is needed, but the phrasing is dense and the connection to the five eyes in the following clause follows a standard sequential listing rather than strict logical subordination.
- The passage contains a long enumeration of divine beings. "Upendra" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, a common epithet for Viṣṇu as "lesser Indra." "Nārāyaṇa" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, literally "son of the uncreated," a standard Tibetan rendering of Nārāyaṇa. "Kumāra" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, the ever-youthful dispenser, associated with Kumāra or Skanda. "Skanda" then renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, literally "son of the Pleiades," a transparent epithet of Skanda-Kārttikeya. "Nandīśvara" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, "the lord who gives joy." "Pūtanā" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་, and "Hāritī" renders རྒྱུ་འཕྲུལ་པ་; the identification of these two is conventional in the Tibetan tradition for this list, though other identifications are possible. The passage ends mid-sentence in the source, indicating the list of activities continues in the next section.
- The phrase rendered "the seventh mother-spirits" refers to the seven mātṛkās, a well-attested group of seven female spirit-beings in the Indian tradition; the enumeration here distinguishes them from the general category of mātṛkās mentioned just before.

The phrase "wearing it at the throat" reflects a common dhāraṇī practice of wearing a written text or amulet at the throat; this is a physical ritual instruction, not metaphorical.

The expression "the power of those to be tamed" translates a technical Mahāyāna term for beings whom a buddha or bodhisattva has the capacity to benefit through their spiritual connection; it indicates that Mañjuśrī will appear in response to the ripeness of the practitioner.

- The sixth wheel's "immeasurable praise" designation differs from the preceding wheels' numbered praise format; this appears to be a structural marker in the text indicating a different kind of encomium, likely signifying an open-ended or uncountable list rather than a fixed enumeration.

The Sanskrit mantra passage is reproduced in transliteration as found in the Tibetan; it is a dhāraṇī associated with Mañjuśrī and the dharmadhātu, and its precise recension shows some syllables that may vary across witnesses.

The final verse section breaks off mid-sentence in the supplied passage; the translation renders what is present and does not complete the verse beyond the Tibetan given.

- The colophon names the translator as "the monk Lodrö Tenpa" and describes him as a lotsāwa working at Samten Ling hermitage under the authority of a "holy teacher, mighty sovereign of Dharma." The phrase "second Lodrö Tenpa" in the verse colophon may indicate the translator's lineage designation or a title, distinguishing him from an earlier figure of that name; the precise identity is a matter of historical record rather than doctrinal uncertainty.

The closing verse is a standard admonition found in Vajrayāna colophons urging readers to rely on the meaning rather than the mere letter, and on valid teaching rather than the authority of a person's name or verbal formulation alone.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.