This text is the Dhāraṇī of Jñānolka, known in Sanskrit as the Āryajñānolkānāmadhāraṇīsarvagatipariśodhanī and in Tibetan as 'phags pa ye shes ta la la zhes bya ba'i gzungs 'gro ba thams cad yongs su sbyong ba, which may be rendered in English as "The Noble Dhāraṇī of the Torch of Wisdom, Which Purifies All Rebirth Destinies." It belongs to the genre of dhāraṇī literature, consisting of sacred formulas invoking the power of buddhas and bodhisattvas, here specifically aimed at purifying beings across all realms of rebirth and dispelling obstacles that bind them to suffering. The text opens with an homage to the Buddha as the all-knowing one, setting a devotional tone that frames the dhāraṇī's subsequent recitation as an act of veneration and spiritual protection. As Toh 848, this work is found in the Kangyur, the section of the Tibetan Buddhist canon containing the translated words of the Buddha, within the broader category of tantric and dhāraṇī texts that serve ritual, protective, and soteriological functions for practitioners.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
