

Toh 772 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་པ་རྒྱལ་བ་མཆོད་ཀྱི་ཐུགས་ཀྱི་ཡི་གེ།, is a short dhāraṇī-class scripture belonging to the tantra section of the Kangyur, catalogued as Toh 772. It presents a litany of one hundred and eight names or epithets associated with the great yakṣa general Āṭavaka, invoked here together with protective mantric syllables, reflecting the broader genre of name-lists and mantra formulas used for veneration and ritual protection within the tantric corpus. Such texts typically function as devotional recitations meant to invoke the deity's power and blessings, and this one concludes with a closing mantra sealing the recitation of the sacred names. As part of the Kangyur's tantra collection, it stands among numerous similar works dedicated to yakṣas and other protective deities who safeguard practitioners and the

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.