

This section of the Kangyur preserves a pair of short dhāraṇī texts belonging to

Toh 800 · Derge Kangyur

This section of the Kangyur preserves a pair of short dhāraṇī texts belonging to the genre of protective and healing spells (Sanskrit dhāraṇī, Tibetan gzungs), grouped together as Toh 800. The first, concluding here, teaches a formula for pacifying the searing pain of burns, to be recited eleven times while applying saliva to the wound. The second, titled "The Mantra for Dispelling Bile Disorders" (likely corresponding to a Sanskrit title such as Pittaroganāśana or similar, though the exact Sanskrit is uncertain), opens with homage to the Three Jewels and a short mantra, "Namo hetu hege svāhā," which is to be recited while fanning the body, so as to cure bile disorders, jaundice, and skin ailments. Such texts exemplify the practical, ritual application of Buddhist mantra for physical healing, and they belong to the broad class of dhāraṇī literature found within the Kangyur, the section of the Tibetan Buddhist canon containing the words attributed to the Buddha.

Recite it eleven times, and if one applies saliva mixed with it, the searing pain of burns is pacified. This completes the dhāraṇī for thoroughly pacifying the searing pain of burns.

The mantra for dispelling bile disorders.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

Namo hetu hege svāhā.

If one fans the body with a cooling fan while reciting this, it dispels bile disorders, jaundice, and skin ailments.

This completes the dhāraṇī for dispelling bile disorders.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables ("Namo hetu hege svāhā") are transliterated as found, since their precise Sanskrit reconstruction is uncertain. "□□□□□□□□" (skin ailment/scurvy-like condition) is rendered generically as "skin ailments" given some ambiguity in the term's precise medical referent.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.