

This text, found as Toh 802 in the Kangyur, belongs to a class of short dhāraṇī

Toh 802 · Derge Kangyur

This text, found as Toh 802 in the Kangyur, belongs to a class of short dhāraṇī and mantra texts devoted to healing specific physical ailments through ritual recitation. Following a preceding dhāraṇī for eliminating phlegm disorders, this section opens with homage to the Three Jewels and presents a mantra—"Namo hetu heke svāhā"—specifically intended for curing kṣaya, or the wasting disease of consumption. The text prescribes a simple ritual: water is sprinkled with a cooling fan while the mantra is recited sixty-one times, after which the fan is used to direct the empowered air onto the afflicted person's body to effect a cure. As with many texts of this genre, no Sanskrit or Tibetan title is separately provided beyond the descriptive designation "the dhāraṇī for eliminating the disease of consumption," reflecting its practical, formulaic character within the broader collection of medicinal dhāraṇīs preserved in the Kangyur.

It thoroughly eliminates the vomiting of blood and the piercing pain of phlegm disorders.

The dhāraṇī for eliminating phlegm disorders is complete.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

The mantra for eliminating the disease of consumption (kṣaya):

Namo hetu heke svāhā.

If a disease has arisen in the body, if one has been struck by the wasting illness, sprinkle water with a cooling fan, recite the mantra sixty-one times, and then fan it onto that person's body — the disease will be cured.

The dhāraṇī for eliminating the disease of consumption is complete.

Translator's Notes

• The term "kṣaya" (Skt. for "wasting" or "consumption") is kept in transliterated form as in the source text, glossed on first use. The mantra syllables are left transliterated rather than translated, per convention for mantra. The phrase "nad khong skems" (rendered "wasting illness") refers to an internal wasting or consumptive condition, likely corresponding to what is elsewhere called kṣaya-roga; the exact clinical referent is uncertain but the general sense of a debilitating, drying internal disease is clear from context.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.