

The Dhāraṇī for Offering the Impurities of the Body as a Gift

Toh 804 · Derge Kangyur

ལུ་ཀྱི་ཐུག་པ་སྒྲིབ་པར་གཏང་བའི་གཞུང་སྒྲུབ།

This short dhāraṇī text, known in English as The Dhāraṇī for Offering the Impurities of the Body as a Gift, belongs to the class of ritual incantations found in the Kangyur, where it is catalogued as Toh 804. Following an opening homage to the Three Jewels, it presents a set of brief mantras—each paired with a specific bodily impurity such as saliva, spittle, mucus, filth, feces, or urine—to be recited while offering these substances as a gift, accompanied by a finger snap and a dedication of the resulting merit to the awakening of all beings. The text situates itself within a broader tantric ritual tradition, noting that its contents were drawn from sūtras and tantras by the guru of Vajrāsana and rendered into Tibetan by the translator Bari. As such, it exemplifies a minor but distinctive genre of dhāraṇī literature concerned with transforming even the most mundane or impure aspects of bodily existence into acts of generosity and spiritual merit.

The dhāraṇī that cannot be overpowered by living creatures is complete.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

The dhāraṇī for offering the impurities of the body as a gift:

For saliva: oṃ āḥ śleṣmā hare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For spittle: oṃ āḥ khreda āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For nasal mucus: oṃ āḥ siṃghāna āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For bodily filth: oṃ āḥ mala āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For feces: oṃ āḥ viṭa āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For urine: oṃ āḥ mūtra āhare bhyaḥ svāhā.

For each of these one should say, "May those who consume these attain them," and then snap the fingers.

Whatever merit is accumulated by giving these in this way should be dedicated to awakening for the sake of all sentient beings.

These were brought forth from the sūtras and tantras by the guru of Vajrāsana, and translated by the translator Bari.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables are transliterated Sanskrit as rendered phonetically in the Tibetan source; some terms (e.g., khreda for phlegm/spittle) are uncertain in precise Sanskrit reconstruction and are given as transliterated rather than fully resolved Sanskrit. The final svāhā for one mantra appears in the source as "svātā," likely a scribal variant of svāhā, rendered here uniformly as svāhā for consistency.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.