Toh 787 · Derge Kangyur

This short text, Toh 787 in the Kangyur, belongs to the dhāraṇī and mantra literature of the Buddhist canon, transmitted in Tibetan translation with its mantras preserved in transliterated Sanskrit. It concludes one incantation, called in English Thoroughly Pacifying All Negative Deeds, a purificatory dhāraṇī invoking the Three Jewels for the cleansing of misdeeds, before introducing a further mantra practice meant to be recited while facing east, its power activated by touching the mantra-charged hand to one's own face so as to pacify anger and bring peace to those one encounters. As is typical of such ritual dhāraṇī texts, no formal Sanskrit or Tibetan title is given beyond the descriptive name of the spell itself, and the passage functions as part of a larger collection of protective and apotropaic incantations attributed to the Buddha's word. Its concern is thus practical and ritual rather than doctrinal, offering a spoken formula and accompanying gesture said to neutralize hostility and negative karma.

Phaṭ phaṭ. Samaya samaya. Amṛto t bhavo t bhava. Pāvaṃ me nāśaya svāhā.

Thus concludes the dhāraṇī called Thoroughly Pacifying All Negative Deeds.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

Oṃ vakavatse jambhani stambhani mohani sarva-roṣa-praśamani svāhā.

Sit facing toward the east and recite this mantra. Having rubbed it upon your own face seven times with your own hand, if you then go into an assembly, whoever is angry there will become pleased.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables are given here as close phonetic transliterations of the Tibetan transcription of Sanskrit; some passages (e.g., "amṛto t bhavo t bhava") appear to preserve a corrupted or abbreviated form of the underlying Sanskrit and have been rendered as written rather than emended. The text appears to be a compilation of two separate short dhāraṇī/mantra items, the first concluding with its own colophon ("Thus concludes the dhāraṇī called...") before a new mantra and its ritual instructions begin.

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.
