

This short work, known in English as The Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Anger and preserv

Toh 788 · Derge Kangyur

This short work, known in English as The Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Anger and preserved in Sanskrit as a form close to Kroddhaśamani-dhāraṇī with a Tibetan title corresponding to 'phags pa khros pa zhi bar byed pa'i gzungs, belongs to the genre of dhāraṇī literature — brief incantations or protective formulas recited for a specific practical aim. Here the stated purpose is to pacify anger and hostility, and the text opens with an invocation of homage to a great glorious goddess before giving the mantra itself, kaṭe vikaṭe roṣapraśamani svāhā, which is presented as the operative core of the practice. Such texts were typically used ritually, recited or retained as a protective and pacifying formula rather than studied as philosophical treatises. This particular dhāraṇī is catalogued as Toh 788 in the Kangyur, situating it among the collection of canonical dhāraṇī and tantric ritual texts translated into Tibetan.

---

...ro. The dhāraṇī for pacifying anger is complete.

The Noble Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Anger.

Homage to the great glorious goddess.

Kaṭe vikaṭe, roṣapraśamani svāhā.

Whoever...

Translator's Notes

• The passage is a fragment: it opens mid-sentence with the closing syllable of a preceding dhāraṇī and colophon ("...ro. The dhāraṇī for pacifying anger is complete"), then gives the title and opening lines of a new, related dhāraṇī text, breaking off after "gang" ("whoever"), which begins the next clause not included here. The mantra syllables (kaṭe vikaṭe, roṣapraśamani svāhā) are transliterated rather than translated, per standard practice for mantra. The epithet "great glorious goddess" (dpal chen mo) is left generic, as the specific identity of the deity invoked is not indicated in this fragment.

---

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.