

This short text belongs to the dhāraṇī literature of the Kangyur, presenting a s

Toh 780 · Derge Kangyur

This short text belongs to the dhāraṇī literature of the Kangyur, presenting a series of protective and beneficial incantations invoked through homage to the Three Jewels, to Mañjuśrī, and to the wrathful yakṣa general Vajrapāṇi. Rather than a single unified discourse, it comprises a collection of brief spells—such as one for warding off the harm of epidemic disease and another for securing abundance in cloth, wealth, or livestock through ritual recitation—each concluding with its own formula and stated purpose. No distinct Sanskrit or Tibetan title is preserved for the work as a whole beyond these embedded dhāraṇī names, reflecting its character as a practical compendium of protective and prosperity-generating formulas rather than a doctrinal or narrative sutra. This text is catalogued as Toh 780 in the Kangyur, situated among the dhāraṇī (gzungs) texts that make up a significant portion of that collection.

Harm from epidemic disease will not occur.

Oṃ namo mañjuśrīye, namaḥ suśrīye, nama uttamaśrīye svāhā.

This completes the dhāraṇī for paying homage.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

Homage to the great yakṣa general, Wrathful Vajrapāṇi.

Iri miri, dhadaṃme, bahu phalaṃ bhavatu svāhā.

Having recited this a thousand times over a single scrap of cloth, if one then gives it to a person of noble family, or to a teacher, or to any other single person, within half a month one will obtain a hundred scraps of cloth. Likewise, whether it be wealth, food, or livestock of any kind, the same result will follow.

This completes the dhāraṇī for obtaining a hundred garments.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra syllables are transliterated Sanskrit and left untranslated per convention, as their meaning is ritual/phonetic rather than semantic. "□□□□□□□□" (literally "those that go on legs") is rendered as "livestock," referring to domestic animals.
-

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.